as agree to their increase from 2,700 to 3,000, that is, to say that one of the new shares shall be offered to the holder of every original share, who pays up the increase on or before the 30th June, 1837. After that date, any shares not taken up as above, to be offered to public competition and the premium placed to account of profits.

Proposition 5th.—That on the additional 100 Co.'s Rs- being paid by the holder of each supplementary share, the holder of such shares to be entitled to vote, and be considered in all respects, as if he were the holder of one of the new shares of 1,000 Rs-.

Proposition 6th.—That the following be the scale for voting in future, considering each share of 1,000 Rs., as conferring a single vote; 3 new shares or 3,000 Rs- stock 2 votes; 6 ditto or 6,000 Rs- stock 3 votes; 10 ditto or 10,000 Rs- stock 4 votes; 15 ditto or 15,000 Rs- stock 5 votes; 20 ditto or 20,000 Rs- stock 6 votes; 25 ditto or 25,000 Rs- stock 7 votes; 30 ditto or 30,000 Rs- stock 8 votes; 40 ditto or 40,000 Rs- stock 9 votes; 50 ditto or 50,000 Rs- stock 10 votes and upwards.

Proposition 7th.—That the greatest number of shares to be held by any Proprietor, which is now fixed at 50 of the old 2,700 Co.'s Rs- stock or equal to Co.'s Rs- 1,35,000, be hereafter fixed at 150 of the new 1,000 Co.'s Rs- stock or Co.'s Rs- 1,50,000.

Proposition 8th.—That the period within which absentee Proprietors must pay up their additional stock, be for those in Europe, the 30th June 1838, and for those at the Cape, China, &c., the 31st December 1837. But any absentee Proprietor returning to India before those dates, shall be required to pay up within one month after his arrival.

After some desultory conversation on the character of the recommendations, it was moved by Mr. H. M. Parker, seconded by Mr. W. R. Young, and carried:—

Resolution.—That the propositions for increasing the Capital Stock of the Bank, as recommended by the Directors, are hereby approved by this meeting, and that they be laid before a second Special Meeting of Proprietors in due course, for final confirmation and adoption.

But it appearing that some gentlemen who had voted for it, had applied the resolution strictly to the expediency of increasing the capital of the Bank, without reference to the particular mode suggested by the Directors, it was again put from the chair and adopted.

At this stage of the proceedings, however, and on more close attention to the bearings of the propositions on the interests of the supplementary share-holders, as pointed out by several gentlemen present, a disposition was evinced to modify Mr. Parker's resolution, so as to place both classes of Proprietors on the same footing.

With this view, an amendment was moved by Mr. Udney and seconded by Mr. Cragg, which on a show of hands was lost. As far as we were enabled to understand this amendment, and as it was generally understood by others at the time, its tendency was calculated to place the supplementary share-holders in a better position than the original Proprietors; but there was so much confusion and "buzzing" of voices [a custom at our public meetings, we respectfully submit, which would be more honoured in the breach than in the observance] and consequent difficulty, in following Mr. Udney's explanation, that we scarcely are competent to define its real object.

A suggestion was subsequently made and embodied in a resolution, moved by Mr. Dick, seconded by Mr. McKilligan:—

"That the Capital be still further increased 2 lakhs, i. e. from 30 to 32 lakhs, and every holder of 3 supplementary shares be also entitled, after paying up his difference in all his stock, to the offer of a fresh 1,000 Rs. share, and that proposition 4th, be modified accordingly, by excluding that part of it which refers to supplementary share-holders.

This went to meet the views of those who considered the interests of the supplementary share-holders in some measures injuriously affected by the propositions of the Directors.

This Resolution was carried, and a corresponding alteration made in the original offer.

The effect of the proceedings is an increase to the Capital of the Union Bank "of upwards of ten lakhs of rupees, or about 33 per cent. on its present amount."

Proposed by Captain Spence, seconded by Mr. Dickens.

Resolution.—That the Directors' nomination, pending the confirmation of the Proprietors, of Mr. William Frederick Fergusson to act as a Director in the absence at Sea of Mr. James Fergusson, is hereby confirmed.

The thanks of the meeting being unanimously voted to the chairman, the meeting broke up, apparently well satisfied in having occupied some portion of the ground for Banking operations, alleged by the Projectors of the Bank of India, to be so extensively vacant. — Hurkaru, April 5.

Carried nem. con.

Resolution 5th.—Proposed by Mr. Stowel, and seconded by Lieut. Innes, — that a special general meeting of the Proprietors be called for the 1st of June next at 11 A. M., to take the foregoing Resolutions into consideration, for confirmation or otherwise. Carried nem. con.

THE INFANT SCHOOL AND SOCIETY.

On Thursday last, a meeting of the Infant School Society took place at the Town Hall. The Lord Bishop of Calcutta was in the chair. Sir Edward and Lady Ryan, Sir Benjamin Malkin, Archdeacon Dealtry, the Reverend Mr. Mill, and many other friends of education, of both sexes, were present on the occasion. The report of the transactions of the society being read, certain resolutions were passed. The thanks of the meeting were voted to the Lord Bishop, for his praiseworthy conduct in the chair. At the conclusion of the proceedings of the meeting, Baboo Goumohun Addy, the proprietor of the Oriental Seminary, being pointed out as the gentleman who allowed the free use of an apartment of his premises for the accommodation of the native infant school, and who otherwise took great interest in the welfare of the Institution, His Lordship drew the notice of the meeting to the Baboo, in a handsome manner, adding that he was entitled to the thanks of both the European and native gentlemen present, for his benevolent conduct and zeal in the cause of native education. His Lordship expressed a hope that the Baboo's countrymen would follow the example set by him.

The boys of the native infant school were then ushered in. They were about a hundred in number, and almost every one dressed in a different style: they were under six years of age, and some scarcely above three or four. They were seated on tiers of benches, about half a dozen together, raised consecutively one over the other, and their position had a very pleasant effect. The examination commenced about half past 10 o'clock. The postures the boys put themselves into, at the command of their master, were very pretty and amusing. They sung several amusing English infantile songs, to which they kept clapping time with their tiny hands, in very good order. They astonished the audience by the expertness with which they answered questions put to them, connected with what they had learnt, such as the table of currency of the country, numeration and addition of numbers, &c. &c. All this was done in English, by Hindoo children, who had acquired this knowledge within the short period of four months! the institution being founded about the latter end of the last year. The audience seemed to be much gratified at the progress the children had made. The Lord Bishop took particular notice of the correctness of the pronunciation of the boys, which he highly eulogised. — Hurkaru, April 15.

REVENUE AND ZEMINDARY MATTERS.

In another part we have given insertion to a very important and interesting document as regards the landed interests of the permanently settled provinces. It is the answer of Mr. Secretary Holt Mackenzie to certain zemindars, who, on the re-establishment of the Canaugues, and reform of the office of Putwaries, presented a petition under the alarm which was created by these Government officers demanding the accounts and papers, between ryots and their zemindars. The character of Mr. H. Mackenzie, being that of the best Secretary Government ever had for the defence, and promotion of its interests in territorial and Revenue matters, adds to the weight of this document, addressed as it is to the parties directly. Under these circumstances it is gratifying to find in this document a tone of liberality and justice, and a confirmation of the pledge given by Government in the permanent settlement, which cannot but be regarded by the land proprietors of the country as of the highest importance to their interests.

In the first paragraph of Mr. Mackenzie's reply, the reader will observe a readiness on the part of Government to attend to the complaints of the zemindars, which ought to inspire in the members of that class, a confident reliance on the good will of Government towards them. Mr. Mackenzie then proceeds to explain the object of Government in having required the information in question, which is to prevent litigation, and facilitate Butwara, and thus improve, and render certain, the value of the various estates. These measures, it is asserted, will prevent the breach of "good faith" on the part of zemindars towards their under tenants, and an assurance is given in the 10th paragraph that "notwithstanding any errors or abuses that may now be discovered to have been practised, and although the profits of any one from his estate should be many lakhs and his jumma only a few rupees, the Government will on no pretence break its engagement." The only lands which are excluded from this pledge of interference on the part of Government, are noted in the quotation made in the 10th paragraph, viz. "lands expressly excluded from the operation of the settlement, such as lakheraj and Thandary lands. But what above all confirms, and clearly lays down the pledge of Government not to interfere with the settled zemindaries, is the case of the Rajah of Bubbhoom, quoted in the 12th paragraph, as an instance of the conduct of Government. Here it is stated that all lands, which had been considered by the Revenue officers as Towfees, and proposed to be settled afresh, were given up to the Rajah rent-free, and the Government officers forbidden to interfere, because it appeared that the engagements into which the Rajah had entered at the decennial settlement, were a composition for the whole of the Government dues upon every description of land at that time composing his Raj." It is then asserted that the same principle universally influences the determination of Government."

The natural conclusion to which the above remarks, based on the reply of Mr. Mackenzie, leads, is that there cannot now be any interference with such permanently settled estates, as that of the Rajah of Bubbhoom. Now although at present Bengal is divided into many hundreds of estates, at the time of the permanent settlement such was not the case; for the settlement was then concluded with the Rajahs of Bubbhoom, Burdwan, Kishnagur, Jessore, Rajeshahy, Dinagapore, Purneah, and a few others. If the holders of these large estates, as it is clear from the document before us, received the most unequivocal pledge of non-interference from the Government, what becomes of the resumption operations that have been carried on since 1819; but more vigorously since 1818? What ground can the pamphlet we lately reviewed point out for the doctrines it lays down for the adoption of the Deputy Collectors? If these officers had no right to interfere with any land in the Bubbhoom and other estates which then existed, what right can they now assert to interfere with such lands in the estates which now exist and which had formed part and parcels of those great estates? Surely the accidental divisions subsequently made in consequence of public sales for arrears of revenue and under the pledge that the purchaser had the rights of the seller transferred to him, cannot alter the principles of the settlement, nor can such accidents change any land from unresumable to resumable. The attempt on the part of Government officers to resume lands in Bengal and Behar, which have been permanently settled by such solemn and clear declarations on the part of the Government is, to say the least of it, a breach of pledge unworthy of that high character for justice and good faith which the British nation enjoys.

The Marquess of Cornwallis, who made the permanent settlement and must therefore be supposed to know more of its principles than any other statesman, thus lays down, in his minute written on that settlement, dated the 18th September, 1789, the law regarding the rights of interference with possessions which have long been held undisturbed :—

“As to the question of right, I cannot conceive that any Government in their senses would ever have delegated an authorized right to any of their subjects, to impose arbitrary taxes on the internal commerce of the country. It certainly has been an abuse that has crept in, either through the negligence of the Mogul governors, who were careless and ignorant of all matters of trade; or, what is more probable, connivance of the Mussulman Amul, who tolerated the extortion of the zemindar, that he might again plunder him in his turn.

But be that as it may, the right has been too long established or tolerated, to allow a just government to take it away, without indemnifying the proprietor from any loss; and I never heard that, in the most free state, if an individual possessed a right that was incompatible with the public welfare, the legislature made any scruple of taking it from him, provided they gave him a fair equivalent. The case of the late Duke of Athol, who, a few years ago, parted very unwillingly with the sovereignty of the Isle of Man, appears to me to be exactly in point.”

The Isle of Man had long been the resort of smugglers and profitable to the Duke; and therefore injurious to Commerce. Government, however, could not enforce any laws there, but was obliged to purchase the Island, and thus compensate the Duke of Athol for his loss. - This case being similar to that of the zemindars and land holders in Bengal, the latter ought to be dealt with in the same manner.

We shall make but one more quotation from the minute just adverted to :—

“The court of directors have given us a general idea of the amount of the land revenue from Bengal and Behar, with which they will be satisfied; if we honestly and faithfully make a settlement equal, and even beyond their expectations in point of revenue, and at the same time calculated in its outlines to promote the prosperity, happiness, and wealth of their subjects, what reason can we have to apprehend that they will not declare its permanency?”

The inutility of disturbing the settled districts is here clearly pointed out; and it is declared that the Court of Directors will be satisfied with the revenue derived from the permanent settlement. The work of resumption is, therefore, quite supererogatory. The Government having at once settled the whole of Bengal, after a full conviction that all that was to have been derived from it had been secured, and the Court of Directors having been satisfied with the settlement and confirmed it, we really cannot discover with what justice these provinces can now be disturbed by the Government Officers. If there is any land which does not belong to one zemindar it must to his neighbour, with whom he may settle the matter; but Government can surely have no just right to take possession of the disputed spot, and declare it to be theirs, setting aside both the disputing parties.—Reformer, April 23.

REVENUE AND ZEMINDARY.

TO RAJA RAJKISHEN AND OTHER ZEMINDARS.

Territorial Department—Revenue.—The petition which was presented on your behalf by Prawkishen Biswa and Ishurchunder Paul Chowdry, has been read by the Governor-General in Council, and its contents duly considered. His Lordship in Council, is always well pleased to receive from the subjects of this government an explanation of their notions on any points affecting their individual interests, because it is especially the principle of the English Government to leave all persons in the free enjoyment of their estates with no further restrictions than are necessary for the general good; and still more, anxiously to maintain all engagements into which it has entered.

2nd.—In the present case it would appear that you had been led to indulge very unfounded apprehensions from an entire misconception of the intentions of Government in passing the late regulations for the re-establishment of canoongoes, and for the reform of the office of Patwaries, and as many others may probably have fallen into a similar mistake, the Governor-General in Council has commanded me to explain the matter, so that your fears and those of all other persons concerned may be removed, and that fully comprehending the real object of Government in enacting the said regulations, you may not be misled by the statements of persons who either misunderstand, or wilfully misrepresent their intent and meaning.

3rd.—It is well known to all Zemindars, that the suits relating to land and rents are very numerous and important, and it is plain, therefore, that the interests both of Zemindars and ryots will be promoted by any measure that shall afford the means of quick and just decision and the instant execution of decrees when passed. Nor is it less an object of importance to the proprietors of land, that putwarahs should be made without delay or difficulty. In fact, unless these affairs can easily be settled, land can never have its just value, because the proprietors of it can neither manage nor dispose of it without much trouble and annoyance, nor at any time be sure that they will draw from it their due profit.

4th.—It is chiefly with the view of affording to the Adawlut the means of ascertaining all matters connected with land, that the seristah of the canoongoes has been re-established, and that the new rules regarding the office of Patwarry have been passed. By these means it may be hoped that all local custom and the rights and privileges of all classes connected with the land being recorded before any disputes arise, there may be no difficulty in getting at the truth when differences occur, and that all suits regarding rent, property or possession of land may easily and speedily be settled. In many respects, therefore, the regulation will be of great advantage to the Zemindars. If, indeed, there be any Zemindars who are desirous of acting wrongfully to their neighbours, of oppressing their ryots and under tenants, of exacting from them more than is just, or of depriving them of their hereditary prescriptive rights, such persons may naturally be grieved at the appointment of canoongoes, and the alteration which is to be made in the office of Patwarry; such persons, however, do not understand their own interests, which are always best consulted by an adherence to the maxims of good faith, and they can on no account receive any consideration or favor from Government.

5th.—At the period, indeed, of establishing the permanent settlement, it was distinctly declared by Lord Cornwallis, (whom you justly consider a very wise and good man) that it being the duty of the ruling power to protect all classes of people, and particularly those who, from their situation, are most helpless, Government would, however it might deem it proper, enact such regulations as it might think necessary for the protection and welfare of the dependant Talookdars, ryots and other cultivators of the soil.

6th.—The same Governor-General prescribed various rules in regulation VIII. 1793 for the appointment of Patwaris in each village, and plainly intended that those persons should be maintained as in old times for the purpose of keeping and preserving the accounts of the ryots, not as the private servants of the Zemindars for the mere purpose of making their collections.

7th.—The new rules, therefore, are in fact designed only to secure that which the rules for the permanent settlement were intended to accomplish, and the Governor-General in Council expects that the Zemindars, grateful for the advantages which that settlement has given them, will readily acknowledge the justice of the laws enacted for the protection of the inferior tenantry.

8th. It is, indeed, intended that the canoongoes should assist the officers of Government, in asserting its rights to the Revenue of lands which may be held free of assessment under invalid tenures or which may not have been included within the limits of estates for which a permanent settlement was concluded.

9th.—But it is the firm determination of Government to maintain inviolate the rights and privileges bestowed on the Zemindars by that settlement, notwithstanding any errors or abuses that may now be discovered to have been practised, and although the profits of any one from his estates should be many lacs and his jumma only a few rupees, yet Government will on no pretence break its engagement.

10th.—This you may hold certain, and for your further satisfaction, I shall here refer you to the declaration contained in regulation II of the present year, which is in the following terms.

XXXI. "First, nothing in the present regulation shall be considered to affect the right of the proprietors of estates, for which a permanent settlement has been concluded, to the full benefit of all waste lands, included within the ascertained boundaries of such estates respectively at the period of decennial settlement, and which have since been or may hereafter be reduced to cultivation. The exclusive advantages resulting from the improvement of all such lands were guaranteed to the Proprietors by the conditions of that settlement, and it being left to the courts of judicature to decide on all contested cases, whether lands assessed under the provisions of this regulation were included at the period of the decennial settlement within the limits of estates for which a settlement has been concluded in perpetuity, and to reverse the decision of the revenue authorities in any case in which it shall appear, that lands which actually formed at the period in question a component part of such an estate, to have been unjustly subjected to assessment under the provisions of this regulation, the Zemindars and other proprietors of lands will be enabled, by an application to the courts, to obtain immediate redress in any case in which the revenue authorities shall violate or encroach on the rights secured to them by the permanent settlement."

Second. "It is further hereby declared and enacted, that all claims by the revenue authorities on behalf of Government to additional revenue from lands, which were at the period of the decennial settlement included within the limits of estates for which a permanent settlement has been concluded, whether on the plea of error or fraud or any pretext whatever, saving of course the case of lands expressly excluded from the operation of the settlement such as Lachheraj and Thanadary lands shall be and be considered wholly illegal and invalid.

12th.—Thus, in the case of the Rajah of Beerbhoom, although the jumma of Government was allotted wholly upon certain villages, and there were severally sold after being so assessed in liquidation of arrears on the entire estate, leaving to all appearance the remainder of the uncultivated lands without any assessment of the public dues, nevertheless when it was proposed to Government to resume and make a fresh settlement of these last mentioned lands after much of these had been brought under cultivation upon the plea of their being towfee land, not included in the perpetual settlement, the revenue authorities were specially forbidden by Government to interfere because it appeared that the engagements into which the Rajah had entered at the decennial settlement were a composition for the whole of the Government dues upon every description of land at that time composing his Raj. In this manner Government preferred to leave the Rajah in the rent free enjoyment of Malgozarea lands, rather than infringe in the smallest degree the engagements it had made with him at the perpetual settlement. The same principles will be found to have universally influenced the determination of Government whenever similar claims have been brought forward by the revenue officers.

13th.—With respect to what you have represented in regard to the conduct of the canoongoes, those particulars should have been stated in the petition addressed to the Board of Revenue, who would have duly inquired and considered the subject, and who being authorized by clause 5th Section 4th Regulation I. of the present year, to make such alteration in the duties to be performed by the canoongoes, as local circumstances shall suggest, will doubtless arrange matters as may be best for all parties, and though on their first appointment some of the Canoongoes may perhaps from ignorance have acted improperly, yet Government do not the less indulge a confident expectation of great advantage to the country from the re-establishment of the office.

14th.—I annex a translation of this paper for your better information and that of all other persons whom it may concern.

TO THE MANAGERS OF THE CIVIL FUND.

FINANCIAL } GENTLEMEN—I am directed by the DEPARTMENT } Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal, to transmit to you for consideration and report the accompanying copy of a dispatch from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors to the address of the Governor-General of India in Council, in the Financial Department, dated the 28th September last, with copy of its enclosure from Mr. C. B. Elliott, late of the Bengal Civil Service, regarding his claim on the Civil Fund.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient Servant,

(Signed) H. T. PRINSEP,

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Fort William, the 15th Feb. 1837.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

No. 12 of 1836.

Our Governor-General of India in Council.

PARA. 1. We have received from Mr. C. Boileau Elliott, late of the Bengal Civil Service, a letter dated the 1st September 1836, submitting to our notice, and requesting the expression of our opinion upon a statement of facts connected with the contingent claim of his family upon the Civil Fund of that Presidency.

2. From Mr. Elliott's representation it would appear that his claim, having been substantiated by the required payment on his part, recognized by the constituted Agents of the Fund in London, ratified by the Managers in Calcutta, and thereupon declared to Mr. Elliott by the Agents in London to be valid, has been lately impugned, and after an interval of nearly three years, entirely annulled.

3. We forward herewith a copy of Mr. Elliott's letter, which we desire may be brought to the notice of the Managers and Trustees of the Civil Fund at Calcutta, with a view to the reconsideration of the case. We shall only remark that, from the statement before us, Mr. Elliott would seem to have been subjected to an unlooked for disappointment in the reversal, after a considerable interval, of a decision deliberately pronounced and officially communicated.

4. You will require the Managers to communicate to you the result of such proceedings as may be adopted on this occasion with which result you will make us acquainted.

We are, &c.

(Signed) J. R. Carnac, John Loch, John Morris, H. Lushington, J. Petty Muspratt, J. Warden, J. D. Alexander, John Shepheril, H. Alexander, John Cotton, George Lyall, and C. Mills.

London, the 28th September, 1836.

To J. C. MELVILL, Esq.,

Secretary to the Honorable Court of Directors of the East India Company.

SIR,—I beg the favor of you to lay before the Honorable Court of Directors the accompanying statement of facts connected with my contingent claim on the Bengal Civil Fund, and to solicit on my behalf the expression of their opinion on the subject to the Bengal Government. The merits of the case are so clear that I am inclined to believe the statement of them needs only to be read to carry to every mind a conviction that the Members of the Civil Service who voted in January 1836, for my dismissal from the Fund, were acting on an uncontradicted misrepresentation of facts, and I venture to hope that the expression of the opinion of the Honorable Court will lead to an immediate correction of an error, which if once permitted to pass unnoticed, involves principles as injurious to the interests of the Service as they are opposed to equity and to the whole tenor of the Regulations of the Civil Fund.

2. I left India in December 1827, on sick leave, intending to return to the country within the allotted term of five years. From the date of my arriving in, to that of quitting India, I had subscribed to the Civil Fund; anxiously awaiting an improved state of health, I was unwilling to give up the hope of returning till the expiration of that latest period allowed, and consequently, I remained a member of the Bengal Civil Service till 17th December, 1832. Some considerable time previous to this month, I enquired of Messrs. Cockerell and Co., the authorized Agents of the Civil Fund residing in London, whether in the event of my desiring to pay up the balances between my Indian subscriptions and the sum of 5,000 rupees, required by Article XXXV. to entitle my family to the benefits of the Fund, they were authorized to receive the same; acting upon their assurance that they were so, and still indulging a hope that my health might improve, I considered it unnecessary to remit the balance in question to India in the month of August, so as to ensure its arrival in Calcutta in December 1832; but in November of the same year, while I was yet a Member of the Bengal Civil Service, I paid into the hands of Messrs. Cockerell and Co. in London the sum of £480, which they carried to the credit of the Fund and communicated with the Managers in India, whose instructions they received and complied with, to inform me of the due admission, according to the rules of the Fund, of my family to its contingent benefits. The account between myself and the Fund was finally adjusted in 1833 by Messrs. Cockrell and Co. restoring to me the sum of £98 placed in their hands by me over and above what was necessary to make up the sum of 5,000 rupees, the fixed payment required from every Civilian who retires from the Service.

3. In October 1835, that is three years subsequent to my last payment to the Fund, and two and a half years subsequent to the decision of the Committee of Managers placing my family on the list of its contingent Claimants, ("the rules of the Fund," to use their own expression, "deciding the question clearly of their admission,") some Gentlemen at Allahabad, acting doubtless on a misapprehension of the facts, addressed a letter to the Secretary of the Civil Fund, which, being circulated, through the Service unaccompanied by any counter statement, led to a decision in January 1836, that the act of the Managers in 1833 should be annulled, and thus a family admitted to the benefits of the Fund by the fulfilment of its conditions in 1832, was in 1836 declared ineligible. In other words, an ex post facto law was made on an ex parte statement. Had there been any person on the spot to state the case simply and fairly, is it hardly possible that the sophistry which issued from Allahabad should have proved successful; nor it is probable, even under existing circumstances, that it would have been so, had not the case been mixed up with one to which it bore neither affinity nor resemblance; viz. that of a gentleman who, having been ten or more years out of the Service, wished for permission to make up his payments and place his family contingently on the Fund.

4. The arguments by which a majority of the Subscribers to the Civil Fund have been misled into a decision contrary to that of their Committee of Managers, with the simple answers to them, are as follows:

The writers from Allahabad state on the 20th April 1833, ("five years and a half after he had quitted India") the Managers in Fort William received an application from Elliott to be allowed to pay up the difference between the sum subscribed by him and 5,000 rupees, which application the Managers, after some debate, complied with, stating their compliance to be unavoidable under Act XXXV of the Rules."

The fact is, not that the Managers received that application for permission, as alleged, six months after the expiration of Mr. Elliott's prescribed term of absence and consequent retirement from the Service, but that four months after that limit they received information, dated five months previously, from their accredited Agents in London, that Mr. Elliott had, one month previous to that limit, and while he was yet in the Service, in conformity with the regulations, paid the balance due, which payment entitled his family, ipso facto, to the benefits of the Fund in the event of his demise. The Managers therefore justly felt "their compliance to be unavoidable under Article XXXV. of the Rules," and at this decision they arrived, it appears, not hastily and unadvisedly, but in the exercise of their dispassionate judgements, after mature deliberation and "some debate."

5. In order to make out a case which the facts do not warrant, the writers from Allahabad descent almost to ridicule, advancing an hypothetical case which they would identify with the totally different one under consideration. Article XXXV. "then," they continue, "ought to have run thus: That a gentleman, after however a short period of service, having been five years absent from India, after having ceased to subscribe and thereby abandoned his connection with the Fund, and after having resolved to pursue his fortune in a totally different line of life, may at any time, by a payment of the amount by which his Subscription shall have fallen short of 5,000 rupees, obtain the full advantage of the mutual assurance of the Service.

6. The period of service has, by the rules of the Fund, no connection whatever with the assistance afforded to its Members, but any one reading this hypothetical case might suppose that I had been only a few months in the service. I belonged to it more than eleven years, of which more than six were actually passed in India in the laborious discharge of duties: duties whose weight undermined my health, while the assiduity displayed in their fulfilment was such as to call forth a remark from the Sudder Dewannee Adawlut that in the year 1823, the second of my service, I have decided more causes, as Register of Chuprah, than any other judicial Officer under their authority, nor was this the only instance by many, in which I was honored with the approbation of Government.

7. The second clause implies that I had voluntarily "ceased" to subscribe, and thereby abandoned my connection with the the Fund. The 34 Art. of the Regulations of the Fund declares that the contribution of every Subscriber shall cease upon his leaving India to return to Europe. "He does not there abandon his connection with the Fund," for if so, every Civilian returning to England on furlough or sick leave abandons his connection with the Fund; whereas, on the contrary, the same article provides that if he "die during his temporary absence from India, his family shall be entitled to the benefits of the Fund." How then is it possible that his connection with the Fund should be regarded as abandoned.

8. The words "at any time" in the last clause of the hypothetical paragraph of the writers from Allahabad, imply what is more distinctly stated in their preceding paragraph, and has already been satisfactorily contradicted; namely that the balance of my subscription to the Fund was not paid during the time that I was, bona fide, a Member of the Civil Service. The balance was paid to their authorized Agents in London within the period of five years from my leaving India, and as such acknowledged by the Managers of the Fund in Calcutta.

9th. In the 6th and 8th paragraphs the writers from Allahabad say—"It seems to us that the two expressions in Article XXXV., viz. retiring from the service to "return to Europe, and on his quitting the service are "tautologous. We judge that the intent of the rule "was that a person who had not paid to the amount of "5,000 rupees, but should, to secure himself against "the vicissitudes of human affairs, pay up the difference "previous to quitting India to retire, should possess the "same advantage" as one whose regular subscriptions paid monthly in the ordinary course had amounted to 5,000 rupees. "If Mr. Elliott on quitting India intended to retire, he should in our opinion, have paid up "his quota before he left; and if not, and he desired to "continue a Member of the Mutual Assurance Fund of "the Service, he should have returned." In other words, unless a Civilian pay 5,000 rupees whilst actually in India, he is to be considered as having abandoned the Fund.

10. Whatever the writers from Allahabad may urge, or whatever rules they may wish to make for the future regulation of the Fund, this is not the rule as it now stands. The words are "If a subscriber on quitting the "service shall pay to the Fund what may be wanting "to complete his contribution to that amount (viz. 5,000 "Rs.) such contribution shall entitle the family of Subscriber, on his demise, to the benefits of the institution." With these conditions, I strictly complied, having paid to the accredited Agents and Bankers of the Fund what was wanting to complete my contribution of 5,000 rupees. This I might have deferred according to the letter of the regulations till the very day of my quitting the service, or the expiration of five years from the date of my leaving India, for the expression is "on quitting the service:" but I had paid it one month before, and thus assuredly fulfilled the very letter of the Article.

11. Again, that it was not the intention of the framers of the Regulations to place on the words the construction wrung from them by the writers from Allahabad, is evident from the following sentence of the same Article—"the family of any Subscriber who may die during his temporary absence from India, for the recovery of his health, shall also be considered entitled to the benefits of the Fund under the existing rules of it, whether such Subscriber may have contributed more or less than 5,000 Rs." If then I had died the day that I paid the balance of my subscription to the Agents of the Fund in England, without paying that balance, my family would have been entitled to all its benefits, since my case would have been that expressly provided for of a "subscriber dying during his temporary absence from India for the recovery of his health." Is it possible that the fact of paying up a balance of £381 should disentitle a man to that to which he would have been entitled if dying without such payment made, or that contrary to the case of many Civilian, especially from Madras, who being in holy orders are still on the Fund, a change of profession, in my case alone, subsequent to quitting the service, should affect interests established and secured to by me in perpetuity while I remained in the service; or lastly, is it possible that one clause of the Regulations should provide for a Subscriber dying during his temporary absence from India without having paid up the full amount of 5,000 rupees, and that another clause of the very same article should admit the construction placed on it by the writer from Allahabad, which would compel a subscriber to pay up the full sum before quitting India, unless he would resign all claim to the benefits of the Fund. To this misconstruction of the Article I particularly solicit attention, as on it turns the merits of the case.

12. The writers from Allahabad state—"The case of Mr. Elliot appear entirely unprovided for by the existing rules of the Fund. Two clauses of cases only would seem to be provided for, viz. the case of those who quit to retire, and the case of those who quit to return. Mr. Elliot's case is neither that one nor the other.

No reasoning can be more erroneous than this; and no inferences more contrary to the whole spirit of the Regulations of the Fund, or more injurious to the interests of the service, than those to which the admission of this statement necessarily leads. I quitted India, as every invalid does, who has not resolved to resign the service, with the full intention of returning, and accordingly left my property behind, my subscription to the Fund continued to the last day of residence in the country, ceased only in conformity with the Regulations of the Fund, to be renewed on my return. Providence interdicted that return by continued illness, but within the prescribed period, while I was yet a Member of the Civil Service, and had not been absent from India five years, (which even according to the interpretation of the writers from Allahabad, is essential to "a virtual resignation of the service") I paid to the authorized Agents of the Fund the balance due from me according to the regulations. Is it possible that such a case should remain unprovided for by a Fund expressly intended to meet the cases of invalids, or if unprovided for, am I, who have done every thing suggested by the regulations, to suffer for an omission over which I had no control?

13. If the interpretation urged by the objectors to my claim be admitted, the following consequences ensue:

1st. No Civilian dying while absent on sick leave, without having paid 5,000 rupees can henceforth receive the benefits of the Fund in the persons of his widow and children, as expressly ordered in Article XXXV.; for it is desired to exclude me though I have actually paid the amount whilst in the service; a fortiori, had I tried the day on which payment was made, and whilst yet in the service, but without making that payment, I must, according to the construction of the objectors, have been excluded; therefore, henceforth, for the consistency's sake, every other Civilian dying while absent on temporary leave, who has not paid 5,000 rupees must be excluded, notwithstanding that such exclusion is contrary to the letter of the article expressly providing for such a case. 2dly.—Every Civilian who quits India, either on furlough or sick leave, will henceforth be obliged (however resolved he be to return to India if life be spared) to pay up the amount of 5,000 rupees, borrowing probably from his Agents at a high rate of interest at a moment when his allowance are ceasing and many expenses pressing heavily upon him; or in failure of such payment he will forfeit all claim on the Fund. 3dly. The Fund must pledge itself to act henceforth in a manner unprecedented in the transactions of Honorable individuals or Corporations; namely, to deny for the future the acts of its accredited Agents, such denial begun in this case, and which, for consistency's sake, must be acted upon, is the sole ground on which my exclusion from the Fund can rest, for no one denies that my money was paid into the hands of Messrs. Cockerell and Co., while I was actually a member of the service, that is, within the period of 5 years from my departure from India. To say that what was paid to them, and by them carried to the credit of the Fund, was not paid to the Fund, is to urge that money placed to the account of an individual in his Banker's hands, is not bona fide paid to him, a position which it is presumed the objectors themselves will not maintain; or which, if maintained, must annul the office of accredited Agents.

14. Before this question be finally settled, the Members of the Civil Service will do well to consider the three necessary consequences involved in the decision of my exclusion unwarily wrung from them. If these inferences seem monstrous and contrary to the whole tenor of the regulations, and the objects of the Fund, they will not fail to perceive the fallacy of the sophistry which has led them to a decision involving in itself such monstrous, but necessary consequences.

15. Whatever their decision may be as to the future, I would submit that it is not just to act on an ex post facto law, and that, according to the plain interpretation of the existing regulations, I am entitled to the benefits of the Fund, having paid to their authorized Agent the balance of 5,000 rupees while I was yet in the service having received the assurance of the Managers that I had fulfilled all necessary conditions and was to consider myself as fully accepted by them, and having actually remained with that assurance for three whole years; and here I would repeat that, even admitting the unfounded allegation contained in the second paragraph of the writers from Allahabad, viz. that my case appear "entirely unprovided for by the existing rules;" justice forbids that I should without any crime, be dismissed from a Fund owing to an alleged omission in the very rules under which I was three years before admitted by the Managers, who stated, "their complacence" with my request for admission "to be unavoidable under Article XXXV. It is not a case of exclusion of a candidate, but a case of dismissal of an unoffending member in direct opposition to the regulations.

16. I am not aware of the precise extent of the authority which the Court of Directors exercises over the Civil Fund, nor would I now solicit at their hands a positive command reversing on order of its member; but I feel assured that nothing more is required than a strong expression of their opinion, to ensure a revision of the unjust sentence of dismissal pronounced against me in consequence of an unfounded misrepresentation of the circumstances of the case, which owing to the absence of myself and friends, remained uncontradicted till the vote was passed.

I have the honor, to be, &c.

UNION ASSEMBLY'S CONCERT.

The UNION ASSEMBLY'S CONCERT at the TOWN HALL on Wednesday evening, was well attended and "came off," as "our friend" would say, most brilliantly. It was certainly the best arranged and best conducted Concert we remember. It does great credit to Messrs. Hamerton and Delmar, and to the ladies and gentlemen who assisted.

The selection of pieces was excellent and calculated to suit every taste. Many of the compositions were quite new to a Calcutta audience. The Overture to Guillaume Tell was admirably performed. The air from the opera of Chalet was a good composition of rather an original style—in which Welter's fine voice had full scope. Stevenson's animated Glee and Chorus Welcome Sons of Harmony was very effectively sung by Mesdames Atkinson, Chester, and a strong band of amateurs, who acquitted themselves admirably. Fleury sung well, but in his upper notes appeared rather weak. Lemery had a cold but sung brilliantly. Mrs. Atkinson sung Non Pareuter, a rather florid song, but which displays the compass and power of her fine soprano. Mrs. Chester's Hours of Rapture, an air in the bravura style, affording two very pleasing movements, was delightfully sung. Mademoiselle Lemery and Messrs. Welter and Fleury gave a scena from La Gazza Ladra, in good style, but the wind instruments would, we think, have been all the better for another rehearsal.

In the second part, after the Overture to Anacreon, which was well performed, Mrs. Atkinson sung an Echo song, with a flute accompaniment by Mr. P. Delmar—an air better adapted to her beautiful voice, we think, than Non Pareuter. Mons. Delmar's flute added to Mrs. Atkinson's voice appeared to delight the audience. Purcel's fine air and chorus, from the Opera of King Arthur, Come if you dare, was very good, but we think it a mistake to suppose, that the audience are gratified by the use of excessive nobilishment or the ability to sing extremely high notes. We fancied, that in these respects there was some slight appearance of rivalry between the two ladies who took the lead on this occasion. We are sorry to see this. They have both of them delightful voices, though of different qualities—both are sweet-singers, and great favorites with the public: but those who love and respect Purcel do not like to see, even ladies, taking liberties with his compositions. There was some difficulty about Tulou's Fantasia for the flute, which we understand was caused by the piano-forte being so much below the pitch of Mr. Delmar's flute, that the brilliancy of the latter instrument was much diminished. Considering this circumstance, and that Mr. Delmar had, during a long and sultry evening, performed all the arduous duties of leader of the Orchestra, we are somewhat surprised that even his good nature was equal to the exertion of affording the audience a treat, which many professors would have declined under similar circumstances. Then followed Unavoca poco fa in its English dress of Tyrant soon I'll burst thy chain, admirably sung by Mrs. Chester. The concluding piece was the splendid finale to the 1st. Act of Don Giovanni, Venite pur avanti. This is generally considered the best piece of the best Opera of Mozart, and was well performed and well received, but not so well as it deserved.

The arrangements for the evening did great credit to the Stewards of the Union Assemblies. The weather was warm, but the punkahs were well manned—and Mr. Spence's ices and other refreshments, in the verandah, abated this evil as much as possible. There was positively no delay between the different pieces and very little between the two parts of the Concert, which consisted of fourteen pieces, but was over before $\frac{1}{2}$ past 11 o'clock! We think this the best got up and most successful Concert of the season. No expense was spared, and almost all the available talent at the presidency, vocal and instrumental—amateur and professional, was engaged. No patronage was solicited, for the funds granted by the Union Assembly subscribers, together with the proceeds of tickets sold to those who asked for them—were ample, as it was expected they would be. There were some of the elite of Calcutta amongst the audience, but the Concert was gotten up principally by and for the middle or trading class of society. We are happy to see them employing their leisure time, and spare funds, in patronizing the musical profession.—Hurkaru, April 28.

SECOND SESSION. — APRIL 12, 1837.

Before a full Bench.

NAMES OF THE GRAND JURYMEN.

FOREMAN—W. R. YOUNG, ESQ.

Messrs. J. P. McKilligah,	Messrs. A. Frazer,
R. W. G. Frith,	J. Hunter,
E. W. Brightman,	E. White,
J. Allan,	D. Ross,
W. T. Fraser,	J. Portman,

A. Beattie,	Baboo Aushood Day,
J. B. Bis,	Proschokumar Tagore and
J. Gilmore,	Radakissee Mitter,

The presiding Judge, Sir J. P. Grant, in his address to the Grand Jury, informed them, that he was happy to say the calendar of this session was very light, and most of the cases with the exception of one of homicide were of burglary, &c. In this case of homicide, it appears that 2 persons entered a house, and one of them struck the other with a stick on the head, of which blow the assailed party died. The Judge then dwelt on the different points of law, which constituted the distinction between murder and manslaughter. He said that if any person entered an house either private or public, with malice aforethought, and there assaulted another, and caused his death, the crime would be murder; but if they entered the house with intentions to rescue any party in the house, without any intention to kill, and a scuffle ensued in which life was lost, it would only constitute the crime of manslaughter; he indeed, by saying, that if the Jury, from the evidence before them, considered the prisoner guilty of manslaughter, then they could throw out the present bills and order one of manslaughter to be preferred against one prisoner; but if they had any doubt as to the nature of the bills, they should return them: they had better find a bill of murder; and if the evidence showed the crime amounted to only manslaughter, the Court would, in that case, on his acquittal of the capital charge, have a fresh indictment preferred against him for manslaughter. After these remarks he dismissed the Jury.

Whilst the Jury retired, Mr. Leith, in behalf of Eahrukha Komar Swamy, in the case of the said Swamy v. Putta Oberam, who was found guilty during the last session for the crime of embezzlement, moved for restitution. The Judge said that the counsel must first file the record of conviction, and then the Judge would give his order.—Hurkaru, April 13.

APRIL 12, 1837.

Sir J. P. Grant on the Bench.

THE KING v. RAMJAIN INDICTED FOR LARCENY.

The particulars of this case are that about twelve months since, the prisoner and Fyzoo, the prosecutor, being on terms of great intimacy, the former called on and invited the latter and his family to his house. The invitation to the prosecutor and his wife was for a future day with proposition that in the mean time their child, called Suckens, a girl nine years of age, be permitted to go to the prisoner's house to play with his, the prisoner's children. On this occasion, the prisoner brought with him some mangoes and sweatmeats, as a present for the prosecutor, and his family, of which they partook, and became instantly speechless, but retained their vision and senses. The prisoner then took the child by the hand, brought her to Calcutta, and on the Fort plain, took away her jewels, without using any violence. He then left the girl in a Bazar, and absconded.

The girl was subsequently taken charge of by the police authorities, and her parents were traced, to whom she was restored at Howrah, but nothing could be heard of the prisoner until now. These facts being proved, the prisoner was found guilty, and sentenced to 7 years transportation.—Hurkaru, April 18.

APRIL 13, 1837.

Bhyroo, a peon in the employ of the Secretary to the Military Board, was tried on two distinct charges laid against him by two indictments of theft—the property lost having been found in his house. The charges not having at all been proved against him, and he having brought forward witnesses to speak to his character, all of whom spoke well of him, particularly the gentleman under whom he is more immediately employed, Mr Patrick Sutherland, the Registrar of the Military Board, the prisoner was discharged on both the indictments, after being cautioned by the Bench as to his future conduct and the company he kept. — Courier, April 13.

APRIL 15, 1837.

THE KING versus CHARLES DAWSON.

Charge.—That on the 9th of March the prisoner struck one Edward Thomas, since deceased, on the head, with a bamboo, which caused his death. The indictment was for manslaughter, and the prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Charles Hanon sworn, saith, that on the 9th of March last, witness, being called by Charles Heathe, went to a house in Cairo Metter's Lane, together with the deceased, Hy. Johnson, and others. There they saw James Mason lying intoxicated on the ground. Witness lifted him up, washed his face, after which Mason counted out his money, and put it in his pocket, which, he on being asked, admitted to be correct, except that he had lost a few coppers. In this interval the prisoner came in, followed by 3 or 4 others, armed with sticks, and witness observed a cross his shoulder, a blow inflicted on the deceased, who fell on the ground; but he cannot say who struck the blow, yet verily believes the prisoner to have done it, from the positions in which the prisoner and the deceased stood at that time; witness also received a blow from an unknown hand which broke his left arm. After this, witness left the place. The witness being cross-examined by Mr Osborne, Counsel for the prisoner, it appeared that he had been turned out of the ship in which he came out from Liverpool, for being concerned in a mutiny on board of her, and he admitted that the evening in question he and

3 others had been drinking a bottle of gin, adding, "what is a bottle of gin amongst four of us?"

In the course of further cross-examination, as to the identity of the prisoner, and as to the witness having been partially intoxicated at the time when he went to the house alluded to, the following replies were made by this witness. "I am not an admirer of drunkenness. I may know a person by sight but not personally; that is when I have seen a person in the streets, with my eyes, whom I do not speak to, I call that knowing a person by sight." He concluded by stating that his party were not armed, and that there was light enough in the house to discern what occurred in it.

John Jeffreys, proved that he saw the prisoner strike the deceased a blow on the head with a bamboo, on receiving which the deceased fell on the ground: and that witness saw the deceased subsequently at the General Hospital, where he died.

The cross-examination of this witness went to shew, that the prisoner had been the means of witness being turned out of a punch-house, and the prisoner's counsel argued, that an ill feeling existed between them, wherefore, his evidence ought to be received with great doubt.

Henry Johnson was next called, whose evidence tended chiefly to corroborate Hanson's statement, with some trifling discrepancies, and in reply to a question regarding his means of livelihood, he said, "I follow the seas?"

The discrepancies were, that when he, together with the deceased and others, arrived at the house where this affray occurred, he saw Mason and Featherstone: he observed Featherstone run out of the house on seeing them, and that Mason was not lying on the ground when they entered the house, but that he rolled out of a bed subsequently; shortly after which the prisoner entered the house with some armed men who attacked the deceased and his party.

Charles Henthe said, that previous to his having called the deceased and his party, he was at the house where the deceased was struck, where Mason charged one of its inmates with having stolen his pocket handkerchief; this she denied, and he gave her a slap on the face: seeing this, the mistress of the house asked witness to get her some aid, to quell the disturbance; this request induced witness to call the deceased, and others, from the punch-house. The rest of this witness's deposition, is the same as that of Hanson and Johnson, with a very slight difference.

Dr. Raleigh proved the death of Edward Thomas at the General Hospital on the 27th of March last, where he had been admitted after 4 days previous treatment at the Native Hospital. In the Doctor's opinion the deceased came by his death from a blow on his head, inflicted seemingly by some rounded weapon. Death generally is not the result of similar wounds, yet often, even under the best treatment, such injuries have terminated fatally.

The prisoner attempted, ineffectually, in cross-examining the Doctor, to shew, that death was hastened in consequence of the deceased having received a previous injury with a tobacco-pipe on the part where the blow was struck.

W. C. Blacquiere, Esq., put in the desposition taken by him of the deceased on oath, in the presence of the prisoner, who had cross-examined him.

Mr. Osborne, Counsel for the defendant, quoted some authorities, and objected to the deposition being taken in evidence, upon the ground, that only in cases of murder, declaration of dying men are admitted as evidence.

Sir J. P. Grant overruled this objection, upon the authority of Phillipps's Law on evidence; observing that his Lordship thought very little difference existed between a case of murder, and that of manslaughter; the former evincing malice aforethought, and the latter being an act of the moment, the result of both being homicide. Mr. Osborne then raised the question as to the deposition not having been taken in the presence of two Magistrates. His Lordship replied that that was not necessary in this country.

The depositions were read. Their purport was the same as the witnesses for the prosecution had sworn to, with the addition that the deceased positively charged the prisoner with having struck the blow.

The prisoner, on being called on for his defence, said that Mason, Featherstone and others, who were his friends and fellow lodgers, after taking a few glasses of gin with him, went out. Shortly afterwards, Featherstone returned, saying, that he had been maltreated in a house in Calcutta Metter's lane, where Mason was being murdered. Hearing this, the prisoner and some friends who were in the house at the time, went to Mason's assistance: on entering the house, prisoner perceived some person rifling Mason's pocket. Mason, on being asked by the prisoner, replied, he could not say who particularly had maltreated him, but that he had been ill-treated generally; after which Featherstone struck one of the men who had previously ill-treated him, and an affray ensued. The prisoner said he could prove that Featherstone, who is now gone to England, and not he, struck the deceased the blow on the head.

James Mason, and 3 or 4 witnesses who were examined for the defence, all clearly proved the defendant's statement.

Featherstone and Mainsbury, 2 witnesses for the defence, being absent, Mr. Osborne offered in evidence their depositions, which had been taken before the Magistrate. To this his Lordship objected, unless it could be proved, that these witnesses were out of the reach of the process of this Court; and it being proved that they were beyond the seas on a voyage to Europe, their depositions were read, and they corroborated the defence, and the evidence for the defence.

Sir John Grant then addressed the Jury, detailing the evidence and commenting on the same, together with the law on the case: he left the jury to form their decision on it.

The Jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner was released.—HURKARU, April 19.

MONDAY, APRIL 17.

THE LIBEL CASE.

A motion was, this morning, made by the Advocate-General on behalf of Mr. Thomas Ferguson against whom the Grand Jury have found a true bill for Libel, that he (Mr. Ferguson) be granted leave to come in and enter his plea of Not Guilty, and that the case be traversed to the next Sessions, on his own recognisance to the extent of 1,000 Rs., when he will appear and defend the action—consent having been obtained from the opposite party.

The motion was granted, and the case has therefore been put off till the July Sessions.

There are not more than four or five cases now remaining to be disposed of, amongst which the interesting ones are those of the assault said to have been committed by one C. F. Lopes and one F. Porroux, and the Porroux laid to the charge of one Bykant.—Calcutta Courier, April 17.

TERM.—APRIL 3, 1837.

The Court gave judgment in AMELIA DENT v. Deffenza and others; that is they ordered the cause to stand over for want of Mr. Henry Alexander, and Josiah Dupre Alexander, surviving executors of the will of John Blythe, deceased, being parties to the suit before the Court. The Court stated they could make no decree until these gentlemen either appeared or gave powers of attorney to some one to appear for them. The probability is, therefore, that there will never be any decree in this cause, which has now lasted about 12 years, and it is a beautiful thing to see with what care justice is administered in this world.

Grignat v. Brillard.

The Court ordered a reference to the master.
—Hurkaru, April 4.

Roots v. Cockerell.

The court gave their decision in the motion and cross-motion in this cause, agreeing in all but one point, on which Mr. Justice Malkin differed. His lordship was clearly of opinion, that the agreement between Mr. Roots and Cockerell and Co. gave the former possession for one year, and that defendants could not remove him for mismanagement; an intermediate construction, however, might be put on the agreement, viz. that though Cockerell and Co. could not remove plaintiff for mismanagement, they were not, by the agreement, precluded from removing him for misconduct. The learned judge did not say that the misapplication of indigo seed was misconduct, but it was for Roots to show the contrary, and, under the circumstances, he was of opinion that a new trial ought to be granted. The motion for a new trial on the ground of the mortgage being satisfied could not be sustained; and, as to the second ground of the motion, the value of the indigo, Cockerell and Co. may be compelled to set it off in account, the decision in the present proceedings not being prejudicial to the plaintiff's claim to the value of the indigo.

The Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Grant agreed with Mr. Justice Malkin on all but the one point above mentioned. Their lordships thought that the agreement gave Roots possession against all the world for one year, and that misconduct would not put an end to the contract. As to the other motion, their lordships were quite clear that it could not be sustained; the question was not whether the mortgage was satisfied, but whether the debt was extinguished; and it was beyond a doubt that plaintiff remained indebted to Cockerell and Co. The indigo, by the agreement, was to go to Cockerell and Co. and plaintiff by the decision of the court, was not precluded from bringing his action to recover back its value.—Both rules discharged, each party to pay their own costs.—Englishman, April 4.

The Supreme Court were engaged yesterday in the argument in Pollock v. Robertson, but the arrival of European news prevented our reporter attending in time to hear the commencement of the proceedings. We understand the case is of much interest, and we will endeavor to give the particulars in a day or two.

IN CHAMBERS.

George Pollock v. Thomas Robertson and Jane Butler.

On the 11th of the present month, this cause was argued by Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Cookrane for the complainant, and by Mr. Laish and Mr. Grant for the defendant, the Reverend Mr. Robertson. The bill was taken pro confesso against Mrs. Butler.

The court took time to consider, and to-day delivered judgment in chambers.

The Chief Justice stated that this was a suit brought by one executor, who had under another decree at the suit of infant legatees been obliged to pay the whole amount of their legacies lost in the failure of Messrs. Alexander and Co., for contribution against his co-executors, and to compel them to pay to the complainant their shares of the amount so paid by him. As to the executrix and defendant Mrs. Butler, the court were clearly of opinion that she was liable to contribution as she had given an express direction and consent as to the disposal of the trust funds. But as to Mr. Robertson, the case differed, the principle which decided cases of this nature was laid down expressly in the case of Lingard v. Bromley. 1 Vesey and Beames's R. p. 117, which was cited in the argument by the counsel on both sides; that principle is that persons may be all liable severally as well as jointly to indemnify a third party; and yet ought not in equity to bear the burthen equally among themselves.

In the first suit we thought Robertson clearly, jointly with his co-executors, Pollock and Mrs. Butler, liable to the third parties therein the cestui qui trusts, the infant legatees; and this chiefly upon Robertson's letters of 8th November, 1820, and 11th January 1821, addressed to Alexander and Co. By those it appeared he gave his consent to appointing Alexander and Co. as agents to act for the executors, and to get in the monies of the estate; this he had a right legally to do during the first years of the executorship. There were two other letters written by him to Mrs. Butler in 1826, from which we thought that he must have previously obtained information as to the state of investment of the trust funds, and that as to third parties he was bound to act in securing those funds. It is, however, quite clear from the whole of the evidence in this case, which the court has most carefully perused, that Pollock was the acting and managing party in the affairs of this estate, and that too from the beginning to the end. He took upon himself, the sole and entire disposal of the property, and Robertson took no charge, was never referred to, and gave no directions.

When the first year of the executorship was about to expire, Pollock wrote a letter to Alexander and Co., which is most important. In that letter, which is dated July 1821, he gives Alexander and Co. full power of authority to invest the trust funds in whatever way they might think proper. They place it in the hands of the firm as a permanent cash balance, and in August of the same year they render Pollock an account current shewing that it was so invested. Then in August 1826, he wrote another letter giving them full power to act in all matters relating to the estate in such manner as they thought best "without reference." Nothing is said in any of his correspondence of his co-executor, but every thing done by him as if he had none, was solely acting and disposing of the money, and directing the affairs of the estate. When Robertson was applied to in 1826, by Mr. Bracken as to the disposal of the commission, his answer expressly states that he never had acted in the concern, and was ignorant of all that had been done, and every thing shews that he in fact never did act after his leaving India in 1821, but that Pollock did every thing, corresponded with Alexander and Co., gave directions, received alone the accounts current, and was treated by Alexander and Co., as the sole executor; even down to within a few days of the failure we find Pollock acting as if he were sole executor, in a letter written to Moran, one of the infant legatees, seeking from him and the other legatees indemnity against him (Pollock's) own responsibility in placing the money in the hands of Alexander and Co., he never once refers to his co-executor Robertson or to his sharing his responsibility.

Pollock must in this suit stand upon his own equities. Is it equitable that such an executor, who has assumed sole power and control, who has managed and disposed of the estate as he thought proper, and acted independently of, and never even consulted with his co-executor, that he should recover against that co-executor who has never acted, the monies which he has lost by his own imprudent acts? We think not, and that Robertson is not liable to contribution. But under the peculiar circumstances of the case we will not give Robertson his costs of this suit. The complainant's bill must be dismissed as against Robertson without costs, but Mrs. Butler must contribute her share of the loss, and pay costs.

Mr. Justice Grant and Mr. Justice Malkin, fully concurred in the present decision, and in the propriety of the former decision, stating their reasons at considerable length, which we unfortunately have not room to report.—Englishman, April 27.

INSOLVENT COURT.

APRIL 8, 1837.

The Insolvent Court was crowded on Saturday in consequence of it being understood that Mr. Justice Malkin would give his decision on the application of the retired partners of the late firm of Cruttenden and Co. Sir Benjamin, however, shortly after entering the court, intimated to counsel, that the pressure of business in the court above had prevented him giving the case that consideration which is necessary in order to arrive at a right conclusion. He would not now go into the main question or express any opinion thereon, but as to the preliminary objections urged by Mr. Leith, his lordship intimated that all would be over ruled save one, viz., that the parties making this application are not properly before the court. He thought there was a deficiency as to the powers alleged to be held by Mr. Davidson [as we understood] attorney for Mr. Learmouth to whom Mr. G. Mackillop has assigned his claim. But still, Sir Benjamin Malkin thought this deficiency was not fatal to the application, it might be supplied, and he would give them an opportunity of supplying it accordingly.—Oriental Observer, April 8.

APRIL 22, 1837.

In the Insolvent Court on Saturday Mr. Justice Malkin delivered his judgment on the application of the retired partners of the late firm of Cruttenden and Co. for an order that the assignee do pay them the dividend on their claims admitted on the schedule. The learned judge entered at great length into the nature of the application and the principle of law applying to it. As to the former our readers are already well acquainted with the particular circumstances under which the retired partners claim, and as to the latter the learned judge's decision was too elaborate to be more than touched upon in a brief report. His Lordship put aside the question of the solvency or insolvency of the firm at the particular periods when the applicants respectively retired from the partnership, and treated the question on the authority of the decision in ex parte Peak, 1 Maddock, in which it was held that one partner may agree with a retiring partner to give him a sum for the concern, though they knew the partnership to be insolvent, provided no fraud was intended. The whole question turned on this;—did there exist fraud in fact? It were difficult to say whether the firm was solvent or not solvent at the date of the retirement of James Mackillop, it might be less difficult to ascertain the state of the firm at the time when George Mackillop retired; but from the evidence before him, as to absence of fraud and as to the sincerity of the outgoing partners' belief in the solvency of the firm, Sir Benjamin Malkin said, he could not entertain a doubt. He noticed various parts of the evidence which led him to this conclusion: first, the retiring partners left large sums in the hands of the firm which sums were not withdrawn at the date of failure; secondly, Mr. Woulf, the former book-keeper, a relation of George Mackillop, and a confidential clerk in the concern, left in the house at the time of his return to England, not only the whole of his own funds, but large funds for which he was trustee; thirdly, and the fact was still stronger, at the time of the retirement of Bryce, the valuation showed the firm in a solvent state. Now Bryce was not present when the valuation was made, and it was not the interest of the parties who made the valuation to make the assets appear of more than was their real value, and thus give Bryce a larger amount than that to which he was fairly entitled. It is true, said the learned judge, there are grounds for suspicion, and those grounds are stronger with regard to the retirements which occur at dates subsequent to the retirements of James and George Mackillop. But the evidence of good faith and sincerity is too strong for these suspicions, and it seems to me that the whole of the claims of the retired partners must be allowed, with exception to a part of that of James Mackillop, an error in the calculation, which I will allow him to amend.—Ibid, April 22.

IN THE MATTER OF CULLEN AND BROWNE.

JUDGMENT.

In considering the case, which is undoubtedly one of great extent and complication, though not really perhaps of very great difficulty, I propose first to state the general nature of the transactions out of which the claims arise, and then to enquire, what are the principles of law applicable to such transactions, before entering into the minuter details of each particular transaction many of which will become immaterial, if the opinion I entertain on the general aspect of the case, both in law, and fact, be correct. This is the order of investigation which I found most convenient to follow in considering the case; and it will be the most convenient also in expressing the conclusions to which I have come; and the grounds on which I think that all these applications, with a certain variation from the precise application made in the case of Mr. James Mackillop, must be granted.

The agency house out of whose failure these applications have arisen, is one of very old standing, conducted at different times under various firms, and by a succession of partners. In the beginning of the year 1822, the partners were George Cruttenden, James Mackillop, and George Mackillop; the latter gentleman, however, at that time, although responsible as a partner to the world, was not then really so interested, as were the partners themselves, but received a fixed annual sum, and the whole effects, profit and loss of the partnership were at that time equally divided between George Cruttenden and James Mackillop. Mr. James Mackillop's health had made it necessary for him to go to England in 1820, and although he returned to Calcutta, he was again obliged to quit this country, and determined to retire from the partnership. Mr. George Cruttenden was also ill, and absent from Calcutta, and the period of his return and his continuance in the firm when he returned, were uncertain; he had, however, left with his other partners full powers to act for him in the establishment of any new partnership. Under these circumstances the Deed of the 5th March, 1822, was executed; by which Mr. James Mackillop retired from the partnership, and Mr. Cullen and Mr. Bryce were admitted into it.

As far as the dissolution goes, the provisions of that deed are very simple: it is an absolute dissolution of the partnership, with an assignment by Mr. James Mackillop of his moiety of all the effects, stock in trade, &c., of the partnership, and also of a sum 36,75,448 Rs. being the amount of the nominal capital of the partnership which was in the words of the Deed, "the ascertained and estimated amount or allowance agreed upon, for the losses accrued, and which may hereafter accrue on the outstanding balances, debts, effects, transactions, dealings and concerns of the co-partnership." The Deed of course contains the usual provisions for the new firm taking on itself the outstanding transactions and liabilities, and the usual releases between the parties, except for such portion of the balance due to J. Mackillop, as he might from time to time leave in the hands of the continuing firm. These are the whole of the provisions with respect to the dissolution of the partnership, and all with which James Mackillop is in any way connected, except by a general approbation and concurrence in the admission of the new partners, and the terms of the new partnership: a degree of interference which he might reasonably exercise, as he continued liable for the old partnership debts, till discharged by the conduct of the creditors, and was therefore very materially interested, that the new partners, and the management of the new partnership, which was to secure him against those debts, should be such, as he had confidence in. But the dissolution, was complete and final, and was in every respect, (unless tainted by fraud, or otherwise invalid in law) a binding and conclusive transaction between the parties. There is therefore no foundation for Mr. Leith's argument that the nature of the arrangement was merely a winding up of the accounts, and the transfer of an estimated balance, which might afterwards be corrected without any actual new consideration at the time; there was a complete buying out of James Mackillop by the remaining and incoming partners, for a stipulated sum, the amount he was to withdraw from the partnership; and a complete transfer as between the partners, of all the other claims due to, and of the liabilities of the partnership. The case cited by Mr. Leith of Belcher v. Sykes, 6 B. and Co. 234, has no bearing on the question; it was argued on two grounds on only one of which the decision proceeded, and that not the ground for which it was cited. But even the argument, did not proceed on the real nature and effect of the transaction, but merely on a question, whether it was strictly and technically a sale, and a sale of property, within a statute imposing certain duties. The court decided that the subject matter was not strictly property within the statute; they expressed no opinion on the point argued, that the transaction was not a sale: but neither the court nor the counsel raised any question as to its being a real and substantial and binding transaction, except on account of the fiscal objection, which they considered in the strict construction of the words of the statute to be invalid.

Up to this time George Mackillop has no real interest in the partnership property, the whole nominal amount of the partnership funds was credited in equal moieties to James Mackillop and George Cruttenden, and the amount assigned by James Mackillop as his moiety of the ascertained allowances, &c., has stood in his name, and to his credit, and to be deducted from or debited to his account; and the remaining balance only of 5,08,484, 9-7 was the sum for which he became a creditor of the firm; and for this sum, increased and diminished by subsequent deposits and withdrawals, his present claim is made. The same principle was applied to the other share, that of George Cruttenden, which was also debited with his moiety; these two moieties were put to an account called the Reserved Fund, about which a great deal has been said, in the course of the argument: and the new partnership was instituted in a manner which it is necessary to state, for the Reserved Fund, whether then first constituted, as would rather seem from the deed, or whether it before existed, as I should collect from Mr. Cullen's affidavit, was made from this time, at least in appearance, to play a very important part in the adjustment of the affairs of the firm.

It is to be observed that neither of the continuing partners, after this deduction was made from the nominal sum standing to George Cruttenden's credit, nor the new partners, had any considerable sum in the house, some of them appear to have been indebted to it. This is a circumstance not unworthy of attention, and may perhaps account for some of the provisions of the new partnership; but it does not bear out the observations founded on it, that the transaction must almost necessarily have been fraudulent, for it would rather seem, that some of them at least, were men of some substance, although their funds were not actually invested in the house, and they brought into it at least their responsibility and their labour, if no great amount of disposable capital, such as they were, they formed a new partnership, in terms and on a system of management entirely different from what appears to have before existed.

By the first clause of their agreement, the shares of the partners were determined 3-16th to George Cruttenden, 3-16th to George Mackillop, 2-16th to Cullen, 2-16th to Bryce, and the remaining 6-16th were to be carried to the reserved fund in which, however, the parties are to be interested in the proportions of their respective interests.

By the eighth and ninth clauses annual accounts were to be taken and to be binding on the parties, except in certain cases of manifest error which might be rectified within six months.

22d Clause That in case any or either of the said parties shall happen to depart this life, before the expiration of the said term of five years hereby created, his executors and administrators shall not be allowed to inspect or examine the books of the said co-partnership, otherwise than the private account of such party so dying, nor in any manner to interfere in the concerns of the said co-partnership, and the estate of the party so dying shall be entitled to the sum of Sa. Rs. 20,000, and no more, as, and for, and in hire of his share of the profits of the said co-partnership for the current year, in which he shall happen to die, whether such event shall happen, at an early or late period of such year, and whether the actual share of the party so dying, of and in the profit of such year, would have been greater, or less, than the said sum of Sa. Rs. 20,000, and the executors, and administrators, of such party so dying, shall be entitled to receive the balance of the private account, or the separate funds of the party so dying, at the time, and in the manner, following, and not sooner, or otherwise, (unless the surviving members shall think fit to allow the same to be sooner withdrawn), that is to say, by four equal annual instalments, one-fourth part of the amount thereof at the expiration of each, and every succeeding year, the first payment to be made at the expiration of one year, from the first day of May next, preceeding the day of the death of such party.

23d Clause.—That in case it shall happen, that any or either of the said parties shall at any time, during the continuance of this co-partnership, be, or become, in any manner incapacitated for the transaction of business, or unable personally to attend to the same, such incapacity or unfitness, to be judged of, or decided by the other partners in the said concern, the interest of such party, or parties, so becoming incapacitated, and unable to attend to business as aforesaid, in the said co-partnership, shall immediately, upon the decision of such his co-partners or co-partner, cease and determine, and he shall be entitled to the sum of Sa. Rs. 20,000 and no more, as, and for, and in lieu of his share of the profits of the said co-partnership, for the then current year, and as provided for, in and by the 22d article of this indenture, in the event of the death of any co-partner during the said co-partnership term.

By the 24th, provision was made for the event considered as probable of George Mackillop's retirement.

And by the 26th, the shares of the remaining partners in that case are adjusted, i. e. 5-12th to George Mackillop, $3\frac{1}{2}$ to Cullen, and $3\frac{1}{2}$ to Bryce, there being no reference in this case to the reserved fund.

These are all the provisions of the deed to which it is necessary to refer, and on this footing the partnership continued till 1827, the date of the next transaction, except indeed that it appears from the arrangements then made that George Mackillop, as had been anticipated, had in the interim ceased to be a partner, and that the remaining partners held their respective interests under the 26th clause.

Before proceeding to state the points on which the arrangements made and George Mackillop's retirement in 1827, differed for those made in 1822, it will only be necessary to advert to the points of difference, it may be convenient here to consider the real nature and effect of this reserved fund. And when examined it seems of much less importance than has been attributed to it, and to resolve itself into little more than a contrivance, and I should have thought a clumsy and inconvenient contrivance, for keeping the account of the partnership, and distinguishing in some degree between nominal or speculative and real capital. The transfer of the original sum of 36,75,448 Rs. was obviously and merely of this nature, and the annual appropriation of the 6-16 on the apparent profits, can only have been a rough approximation of the same kind, to enable the reserved fund to represent, with more or less accuracy, the actual amount from time to time of the necessary allowance for commission without the trouble of unnecessarily making a tedious and elaborate valuation. Besides this general object, there appears also from Mr. Cullen's affidavit, to have been an incidental convenience on the establishment of this reserved fund, in facilitating the valuation of the profits of the firm, when such valuation became necessary. According to his statement, no actual valuation was made except of debts which had become doubtful or precarious, since the last valuation; all which had previously been so remaining on the reserved fund, as a matter of course, unless probably, where there had been any sums actually realized, or any debts written off as absolutely desperate. But these charges, if they were made, would not effect the reserved fund, except perhaps on some questions of the computation of interests, from correctly representing the state of those Claims, which had been considered doubtful at the period of the former settlement, and still remained so. There may, however, be some doubt, whether Mr. Cullen, who does not appear to have been in any case very actively concerned in the valuation, is correct in his notion of the manner in which they were made, for the valuation made in 1827, and the retirement of George Mackillop, appears on the face of the schedule, to have been a valuation; of the whole amount of losses, not only of those since the last valuation; and Rusomoy Dutt, who with Mr. Browne, made the valuation on Hutton's retirement, expressly states, that all the accounts were examined, and that each debt was examined in detail. But whichever of these representations be correct, the character of the reserved fund is the same. At the time of the retirement of each partner, there was an accurate valuation made (as far as so conjectural a proceeding can be treated as accurate) for the purpose of determining the amount, with which he ought to retire; but the reserved fund, as carried forward for each valuation, with the appropriation of profits made to it, was a mere rough approximation or estimate, and did not, with one occasional exception, in any way vary or affect the interests of the continuing partners. That one exception arose out of the claim already stated, respecting the death or removal of partners, in which case, as the amount standing to their credit in each annual account, was affected by the sum carried to the reserved fund, and as on such termination of their interest they were to receive that amount with a certain compensation for the current year, their actual interest was substantially affected by the existence of the reserved fund. It was only in this case, that any real effect was produced, for though the annual accounts were in all cases affected, yet they were all affected in the same proportion; and, consequently, on any real valuation or the retirement of a partner, if the reserved fund proved to be either above or below its proper amount, any sum thus introduced would be corrected by the transfer of the excess or deficiency to or from the private accounts of the partners.

I have thought it necessary to enter thus fully into the nature of the reserved fund, because much importance has been attached to the manner, in which it has uniformly, at each successive valuation, required increase, and an inference has been drawn from this, that the valuations were inaccurately, if not fraudulently made, an inference which cannot, I think, be supported, when the distinction is observed between the careful valuation in which the fund is in each instance constituted and the loose and rough estimate by which it is annually increased, and when attention is paid to the very small real importance of this annual variation. How little value was attached to it in fact, appears from the next Deed of dissolution which I now proceed to state, and in which no notice is taken of the former reserved fund, but a new one is constituted on the new valuation, and in which the shares of the partners are stated on the footing of the 26th clause of the former Deed as they stand after George Cruttenden's retirement, and in which, as I have already mentioned, no reference is made to the reserved fund.

The Deed now in consideration, that of February 7, 1837, consists like the preceding one of two parts: the dissolution of the old partnership by the retirement of George Mackillop, and the constitution of the new one by the accession of Messrs. Hutton and Browne. A new valuation appears to have been had, and the amount of the reserved fund was increased to 49,16,000, the sum being composed partly of the actual amount then standing to the account of the reserved fund, partly by a transfer of certain other accounts and additions to it, which had not previously been included in it, and partly by a transfer of 1,80,483-5-6 from the separate accounts of George Mackillop, Cullen, and Bryce, which accounts were accordingly debited with the several sums of 100,000, 40,241-10-9 and 40,241-10-9 respectively, sums not nearly corresponding to the proportion of their interests to each other. On this footing George Mackillop retired, receiving also 100,000 beyond the amount then standing to his credit, as a consideration for his retirement, setting this sum against the amount debited to him as his proportions of the necessary increase of the reserved fund, really retiring with the exact sum then standing to his credit in the books. This retirement therefore is distinguished from the former, by appearing, although a valuation was made as before, to have been adjusted with less accuracy and more on a footing of loose and general compromise or adjustment; for it is hardly possible to treat the exact correspondence of the Jack agreed to be given for his retirement on one side and taken for his share of the addition to the reserved fund, on the other, or any thing but a rough and summary way of striking a balance, especially when we find that the sum so debited to him for the reserved fund, considerably exceeded his proper proportion 5-12 of the whole amount required. In the former settlement the partners had been debited accurately with the moiety due from each of them, subject however to this observation, the dissolution of partnership on George Mackillop's retirement, was similar to that on J. Mackillop, and need not be more particularly stated.

Nor is there any occasion to state in detail the provisions of the new partnership, of which the first clause provided for the continuance of the reserved fund, on the old footing, and the division of interests between Cullen, Bryce, Hutton, and Browne, in the proportions of 5, 4, 3 and 3 respectively; except by stating that they generally were very similar to those of the former deed. There was, however, one very material alteration in the case of the death, incapacity or absence of any of the partners.

22d Clause.—That in case any or either of the said parties shall happen to depart this life before the expiration of the said Term of five years hereby created, his Executors or administrators shall not be allowed to inspect or examine the Books of the said copartnership otherwise than the private account of that party so dying, nor in any manner to interfere in the concerns of the said copartnership and the Estate of the party so dying shall be entitled to his share of the profits of the said copartnership up to the day in the current year in which he shall happen to die, when his interest in the said copartnership shall cease and determine, and that such share of profits shall be ascertained and determined by or surviving partners, without interference in any way whatever, by the representatives of such deceased Partner and the executors or administrators of such party so dying shall be entitled to receive the balance of the private account or the separate Funds of the party so dying (subject to such modification as shall have been agreed upon the last estimate signed by the said James Cullen, David Bryce, Thomas Hutton and Robert Browne, or the survivors of them of the losses of the said concern) at the time and in manner following, and not sooner or otherwise, (unless the surviving members shall think fit to allow the same to be sooner withdrawn) that is to say by four equal annual instalments, one fourth part of the amount thereof at the expiration of each and every succeeding year, the first payment to be made at the expiration of one year from the first day of May next preceding the day of the death of such party.

23d Clause.—That in case it shall happen that any or either of the said parties shall at any time during the continuance of this copartnership be or become in any way incapacitated for the transaction of business or unable personally to attend to the same (such incapacity and unfitness to be judged of and decided by the other partners in the said concern) the interest of such party so becoming incapacitated and unable to attend to business as aforesaid in the said copartnership, shall immediately (upon the decision of such his copartners or copartner,) cease and determine, and he shall be entitled to his share, of profits of the said copartnership up to the day on which such incapacity and unfitness shall be so decided on and no more, and that such shall be ascertained and determined in the same way and manner as provided for in and by the preceding twenty-second articles of this indenture in the event of the death of any copartner during the said copartnership Term.

24th Clause.—That in case any of the said Partners shall be compelled, either by ill health or any other cause, to proceed to Europe, the Cape of Good Hope, or any foreign settlement with the prospect of being absent from office more than four months, it shall be optional with the remaining partners either to close his account, and determine and put an end to his interest in the said concern on the date of his departure, or (as they may think fit) to continue his interest in the said concern and appropriate the profits that would have accrued to him during such his absence to themselves, allowing him until his return, which shall not exceed two years, a half from the day of his departure, at and after the rate of one thousand pounds sterling per annum. Provided always that in each of such cases the election and determination of the remaining Partners shall be communicated to the party so taking his departure prior to such departure, if requested, in writing by him.

It will be observed that the 24th clause provided for a contingency not contemplated in the former deed, except in the case of George Cruttenden; and that all the clauses contain this very material variation, that instead of giving the dying, incapable or absent partner a stipulated sum, in addition to his last annual balance, he was only to have his actual share of the profits of the partnership, up to the day on which his interest ceased, and this amount was to be determined by his copartners, without allowing his representative to interfere in the settlement. By these provisions the only substantial effect of the reserved fund, such as I have represented it, was almost entirely done away with. But if they are material on this account, they are much more so with reference to subsequent transactions; for all the transactions which remain to be stated, arose out of this 24th clause. In the beginning of 1828, Bryce was obliged to go to England, and the other partners used the power given to them by that clause, determined the partnership as far as he was concerned, and proceeded to assess the value of his share in the property. It is material to observe, that this was done on his departure, not on his death, and the Cullen therefore, as far as he was at all concerned in the arrangement, was concerned as a partner only, and not as executor of Bryce, the arrangement made was undoubtedly at first right, an extraordinary one though it may perhaps admit of explanation, for the continuing partners, who by the terms of their deed, had the power entirely in their own hands, made indeed a regular valuation as before, and as usual, thought it necessary to increase the amount of the reserved fund, but they did not as before, increase it out of the shares of all the partners either accurately, as in the case of James McKillop's retirement, or loosely as on George McKillop's, but they took the whole necessary increase out of Bryce's share. It does not indeed distinctly appear, whether the sum so transferred was the whole increase judged necessary, for the reserved fund, or only Bryce's proportion of such increase, but the fact is undoubted, that from Bryce's account only, was any transfer made, and that if the continuing partners were considered liable, as on former occasions, to contribute, their accounts, at all events, were not debited as before with the necessary contributions.

There remains the retirement of Hutton. On this occasion also, valuation was made, and a sum transferred to the reserved fund; and on this as on the last occasion the retiring partner only was debited with the transfer. The case, however, calls for less discussion than the former, because Hutton as a consenting party retained the power of remaining here, in the business, if dissatisfied with the terms proposed by the other partners, who had the power of valuing given them. It is to be observed, that in this case, as on the retirement of George McKillop, though an actual valuation was made, the terms agreed on seem to have been matter of conjecture or compromise, for Hutton retired with an even sum of two lacs, which could hardly be the exact amount due to him on an accurate valuation.

These are the several transactions out of which the present claims arise. Nothing further need be stated before we proceed to enquire into the law applicable to such transactions, except the situation of the parties, actively opposing the claim of the retired partners, and also of those who, without taking any part in the opposition, could benefit by it, if successful. They are all persons, who have come in under the commission issued against Cullen and Browne, claiming as against them, the whole amount of the debts due to them, and having the whole amount of their assets at the time of their failure applicable, and applied to the discharge of their claims. It is said, indeed, that they or some of them, were creditors even at the time of James McKillop's retirement, and ever since; but no distinction is made between the debts then due, and the amount at the time of the failure. It is difficult, I think, to conceive a much stronger case of consent from time to time to treat the continuing partnership, as their debtor than is furnished by this complete blending of the accounts, and in the case of Jas. McKillop, the inference is yet stronger, from the circumstance that he was never a partner at all, with either Cullen or Browne, nor even ostensibly so with Browne, who did not join the firm till long after Jas. McKillop had been advertised out; they could never, therefore, have been in any way responsible for the same debts. Geo. McKillop also was never really a partner with Browne, though the observation is of less importance, in his case, since they may have been for a time from want of notice of Geo. McKillop's retirement, jointly responsible. The importance of these observations will at once appear from some of the expressions of the Master of the Rolls in ex parte Peake.

Since Anderson v. Maltby there is a long string of cases, ex parte Ruffin 6 ves. 191, ex parte Taylor 14 ves. 446, ex parte Fell 10 ves. 347, ex parte Williams 11 ves. 3, ex parte Slow, C. K. B. L. 539 and ex parte Rowlandson 1 Rose 416, in which it is established, that joint creditors have no equity as against the joint effects, but what they claim through the medium of the partners themselves—that a joint creditor, if he does not take the remedy that the law gives him by action, and by proceeding to seize upon the joint effects, has no lien upon them: his equity to have the joint effects applied to the joint debts, is through the medium of the partner, and for the sake of the partner, except in those cases where a Bankruptcy or a death takes place, in which case the equity operates through the medium of the deceased partner, or the partner who has become a Bankrupt. Then you arrange for the payment of the debts by the joint effects and they become divisible in that way; but if joint creditors do not interpose, the two partners, if they make a fair contract inter se.—if they do actually dissolve the partnership, if they fully effect a dissolution with a contract for division of the property,—if they make an actual assignment by Deed,—if possession is delivered upon that, and enjoyment makes it perfect,—if all these circumstances take place, and there is nothing of fraud impeaching the transaction, then, of consequence, as is determined in all these cases, the joint property becomes separate property by virtue of that contract, and the joint property is throughout to be treated as separate property, and the joint creditors cannot follow it afterwards, but it becomes the separate estate of the partner remaining, and the retiring partner has lost all his benefit from it and the joint creditors although they may undoubtedly proceed against the two partners, (for their agreement to dissolve does not deprive the joint creditors of their right of applying for payment to those who are responsible to them) but with respect to the effects, they become from that moment the separate property of the party who has brought them just as much as if he had acquired them in market overt of any stranger. These principles are all wrong if this contract is not good. How can the separate creditors in June 1815, go back to the transaction in October 1814, and say that the contract then entered into was not good? They must claim and operate their equity through.

Lightoller to invalidate it, and I have shown he had no equity to impeach it. Upon what ground do these Assignees impeach it? They are the Assignees of the separate estate. What right have the Assignees to this as separate estate? If the contract is good for nothing it is joint estate, all this freehold property and all the utensils and every thing else ought to be considered as joint property if this deed is good for nothing. How can that possibly be? They receive it and so did Lightoller, he obtained credit upon it as his separate property. It is impossible to undo it, after an interval from October to the June following, when he was held out as the sole owner, when he acted as the sole owner, when there was a conveyance which put him in possession as sole owner, they cannot be made joint effects but they must be the separate property of Lightoller. Then you must apply that principle throughout. How do they become so? By virtue of this contract. Then is not this contract good? Can you in one breath say, I take it as separate estate, and yet say the contract is good for nothing, and I will not pay for the separate estate I have thus acquired? But if they are willing to say, we abandon it, and take it as joint property, they cannot do that,—it has become separate property and if it has once become separate property it must be treated so throughout. Then if it has become separate property what is the simple result? Why that you must pay for it according to the ordinary case, you have bought an estate and have not paid for it. It has become yours, it is yours absolutely, it is to go as your separate property, but subject to the equity always attaching on property bought to answer for the purchase money if it has not been paid. In that view of it, it appears to me a very simple case, and that supposing the circumstances of the state of the account at the time, and the manner in which it was brought, and the dissolution to be as stated, those facts make no difference, provided there be no circumstances of fraud which are put out of question on this case. They separate creditors of Lightoller are bound to consider this (as they do consider it) as separate property, and their debts have been contracted on the footing and faith of this becoming separate property. To that extent they have a clear right to hold it as separate property against the joint creditors, but upon the same principle that I secure to them all this property as becoming the separate property of Lightoller from the moment of this contract, of necessity they must pay for the estate upon the principle that the estate must pay for that contract by virtue of which it has become separate property.

It is not very easy to say that on these grounds the mere fact of the manner in which all the parties claiming under this insolvency are interested, does not prevent them from objecting to the applications now made in law, unless on the ground of distinct and absolute fraud. But if this be a probable result from the new relation of the parties it is one which follows much more conclusively from other principles established by the same case of ex parte Peake, which has been referred on both sides as containing, and which undoubtedly does contain the fullest and most complete exposition of the law in this subject. It will not therefore be necessary to refer to all the cases reviewed in it, but taking that case itself as our guide it appears to be fully established, that the mere fact of the insolvency of a partnership at the time of a dissolution does not invalidate the claims of the retiring partners, arising out of that dissolution if it were made ability between the parties themselves and that cases may exist (for the dissolution between Peak and Lightoller was treated as such a case) where even the knowledge of the partners that the firm was insolvent, would not prevent the dissolution from being a bonafide transaction, now if this can be law and its being so, is not even called in question it follows, that the whole question turns on the existence, or non-existence of actual fraud, that there can be no fraud in law, arising out of the situation of the parties, of which they were or ought to have been cognisant, but that there must have been fraud in fact. The principles on which the question is to be decided, cannot be more distinctly stated than they are by the Master of the Rolls in p. 357. The ground on which the Assignees have endeavoured to defeat the contract, is upon an idea that they have a right to go back to the transaction in October 1814, and that finding the partnership involved at that period, and the affairs not then wound up, they have a right to take the account against Peake, and to make him responsible for part of the joint debts afterwards paid by Lightoller, these debts being so paid by the sale of goods, furnished to Lightoller, by the new creditors; those creditors having, it is contended, with respect to such joint property, an Equity which the Bankrupt himself had not. I admit, that if two co-partners enter into a contract, for the purpose of defrauding their joint creditors, the one agreeing to permit the other to withdraw money out of the reach of the joint creditors, such a contract is fraudulent, and invalid. That I take to be the principle upon which Anderson vs. Maltby was decided. It has been said, that case has been shaken by the Lord Chancellor. However that may be, and whatever may be its authority, it does not appear to me to affect the present case. In that case there was strong ground to believe a fraud was intended, and it does not warrant me in declaring generally that the mere circumstance of the partnership being at that time in such a state that their joint effects were not sufficient to pay their joint debts, will, perse, be sufficient to invalidate a dissolution of partnership made fairly between the partners themselves; no fraud was intended by Lightoller; he paid the joint creditors, there was, therefore, no contrivance with Peake to put the joint effects into a state to benefit Peake. Anderson vs. Maltby therefore does not apply.

It is perfectly consistent with these views to say, as I should undoubtedly be disposed to say myself, and as I understand other judges to have said here on similar occasions, to whom a reference was made on the argument, that in the conduct of a business of the extent and nature of that now under question, it would be hardly possible to conceive a case in which a partner, retiring with the knowledge, or rather in the belief that his firm was insolvent, and drawing out a considerable sum of money from, or establishing a personal claim against such insolvent firm, ought not to be considered as attempting fraudulently to withdraw himself from his responsibilities; and to obtain a payment, or credit, to which he was not entitled. But the decision in ex parte Peake establishes this, that it is only as evidence of actual fraud, that even knowledge of the insolvency is material, and that the mere fact of insolvency itself, is of no importance whatever except as evidence, from which that knowledge may be inferred, for the purpose of using it as evidence, and as evidence only, of the fraudulent design. In other words, however foolish or sanguine the views of the partners may have been, if they were sincere, the arrangements founded on them will be binding.

But if this be the real question for decision, the case seems to me to have come to an end. With respect to the earlier adjustments, those on the retirement of the two Messrs. MacKillops, it would be very difficult, I think, at this time, to come to any satisfactory conclusion, whether the house was then really solvent or insolvent.

With respect to the later adjustments, it is almost impossible not to suppose, that they were made on an erroneous view of the prosperity, and stability of the house. I shall have occasion to advert again to these circumstances, and will not dwell upon them now. But with respect to the sincerity of the transactions, and the manner in which all parties ought to arrive at the truth, and believe they had reached it, it seems to me difficult even to entertain a suspicion, unless the mere fact that a conclusion if erroneous is to be treated as decisive evidence that it is dishonest, a rule which will hardly be adopted by any one who remembers how much individual character influences opinion, and with what certainty, especially in cases of deep personal interest, a sanguine man overrates, and a desponding man undervalues, his actual situation, and his probabilities of success.

My reasons for thinking these bonafide transactions, may be very shortly stated. I pass over, not as thinking them immaterial, but attaching more importance to other parts of the case, the affidavits of Mr. Cullen and Mr. Leighton, as to their opinion of the stability of the firm, and the reasons of its failure notwithstanding. I pass over also the opinion of the Meeting of creditors of 1833, to which, especially with Rossmoyne Dutt's declaration, as to the manner, in which the deductions were then estimated, I attach no value whatever: those gentlemen, however competent to form an opinion on ascertained facts, had no facts before them, on which real dependance could be placed. But I find those facts undisputed. All the retiring partners left large sums in the firm this is of course a very strong evidence that they considered it a very beneficial investment. The absence of evidence to this effect was much relied on by the Court in holding retiring partners liable in David v. Ellier, 5 B. and C. 196, a case in which the law was enforced as strongly, as in almost any which can be cited against the retiring partner, but in which the only claim made, unlike those under the present insolvency, was against all the old partners, and only for the debt due from the old partnership. But still stronger evidence of what a person intimately acquainted with the transactions of the firm might believe, is furnished by the conduct of Mr. Wolfe, the former book keeper, and the person of all men, best acquainted with affairs of the house, and who himself left his own funds to a large extent, and according to the practice so unfortunately general here, large funds also, of which he was a trustee, in the hands of the house when he quitted it. The retiring partners might have had some notion of acting illiberally, or dishonorably, if they withdrew their balances; but Wolfe could hardly, especially after the retirement of Mr. G. Crutenden, to whom he is said to have been related, have so acted except from his notion of his own interest.

A still more material circumstance is the manner in which the valuations were made! The absence of valuation was one of the circumstances most relied on by Lord Loughborough, when he treated the dissolution in Anderson v. Maltby as fraudulent. "It is a transaction as upon a supposed settlement of account, without any examination of the books, discussion of the vouchers, estimate of stock made up; a way in which no partners ever settled their accounts." Upon a dissolution 2 v. 9250. But the evidence of good faith, is peculiarly strong in this case, when we consider the enormous labour and tediousness of the valuation; a valuation not made by any rough assessment, but by minute consideration of an estimate of each particular debt, and being the employment, as I think it was stated, though I cannot find it upon my notes, of several weeks or some months: a period, indeed, to which, considering the extent of the transactions of the firm, a valuation so made must almost necessarily have extended. All this is intelligible and consistent, if the object of the parties were to ascertain the real condition of the firm: but surely, if it were a mere blind to conceal a fraudulent transaction, it is the most laborious and inconvenient mode of endeavouring to throw dust in the eyes which was ever resorted to.

But the strongest argument yet remains to be stated. In the case of Bryce, there was only one party to the valuation, the continuing partners; but their interest, were intirely adverse to his; and it is impossible to suppose they allowed him more than they were satisfied he was entitled to. In all the other cases the valuations were made between parties having adverse interests. The Counsel in opposition to those claims, felt the importance of this fact, and attempted to obviate its effect, by referring to the circumstance, that Cullen and Bryce, brought no capital into the firm, and might therefore be glad to get into the firm upon almost any terms. The argument, such as it is, does not apply to Browne and Hutton; nor is it in any case to think of much value. Whatever were their own situations it could not be their interest to give more, than a fair value for the business they were to be admitted into, or to allow James Mackillop to withdraw more than his fair share of the assets of the partnership; and even if it were established that he had driven rather a hard bargain with them, the fact of their having consented to unfavorable terms, would furnish strong evidence, of the real value they attached to the possession of a share in the business. It was said also that the incoming partners were ignorant of the business, and therefore easily liable to imposition; but this observation does not apply to Cullen who had for some years been employed in, and familiar with the transactions of the house, nor in any case to the continuing partners, whose interests were necessarily identical with those of the incoming, and adverse to those of the retiring partners.

The inference of good faith and sincerity to be derived from these circumstances, is in my mind much too strong to be rebutted by mere evidence, that the opinions formed were even grossly and absurdly wrong. And it is not pretended that the evidence furnished by the examination of the accounts goes further. It may therefore seem unnecessary to proceed even briefly, to discuss the case made in opposition to these claims. But these cases are of so much importance, and it is so desirable that the parties should not incur additional expense, unless they have some reasonable prospect of benefit from it, that I will advert generally to the principal heads of evidence adduced, for the purpose of shewing, that many of them do not, if I am right as to the general principles, involved in the decision of these cases, really bear out the conclusions, sought to be drawn from them; and that in some instances also, at least to very considerable portion of the claims, there exist other and independant answers to the opposition made to them.

For this purpose it will be most convenient to begin with the earliest case, that of James Mackillop. Any observations made on it, which apply to the others, need not of course be repeated.

Now it is in the first place to be observed, that the valuation made, was of the assets of the firm of 1822, the date of Mr. James Mackillop's retirement, as between himself and his partners. Captain Wardlaw's affidavit refers entirely to the state of the accounts of 1825, when James Mackillop was advertized out, and therefore bears very indirectly on the question of the good faith of the prior valuation. And the same observation applies to the affidavit with reference to George Mackillop's case, which is made as to the state of affairs in 1831, whereas this valuation was of their state in 1827. If the solvency of the firm at the time of the effectual retirement of the partners were the question, these affidavits would be very material. But with reference to the good faith of the valuations and dissolution, they seem rather to support them to invalidate it; for we find, looking to the items, and embracing them also with Russomoy Dett's evidence, that in each case every debt was dealt with according to its particular circumstances; the whole, or a part of the debt being off, as the recovery was considered more or less desperate. [Here the learned Judge read from the schedule of Captain Wardlaw's affidavit several items of debts and commented on them.]

These observations apply to the schedule B and E, the schedule C. which comprizes debts treated as bad or doubtful; the schedule of the insolvents twelve years after the valuation does not require any particular notice. Another objection, however, is made to a particular portion of James Mackillop's claim, which is derived from the transfer of a large sum from Bryce's account to his, contrary as it is said, to the terms of partnership by which no partner was to draw out more than a given sum in the year. There is however, no reason for supposing that this was not done with the privity and consent of all the persons interested, who must have been cognizant of it, and might waive a stipulation introduced only for their benefit and security; nor if this were otherwise, is the objection one which the parties making this opposition, or the general body of the creditors, can be interested in making. As between James Mackillop and Bryce's representatives, neither of whom impeach the transaction, it must be taken to be correct; and as to the creditors, if deducted from James Mackillop's claim, it would have to be added to Bryce's balance, and they therefore could derive no benefit from the transfer, unless contrary to their agreement, and in any opinion James Mackillop's claim can be enforced but Bryce's cannot.

There is however, another objection to the claim of Mr. James Mackillop affecting its account only; for certainly the sums stated in the Schedule A. of Captain Wardlaw's affidavit cannot, without further information, be exactly reconciled with those deposed to by Mr. Cullen. I do not in this speak of the clerical errors of 1822 or 1825, as explained by Mr. Swinhoe's affidavit: for in this respect, when that error is corrected, there is no inconsistency, but there is an apparent discrepancy in the sums previously drawn out, which will very likely be removed by inspection of the Books. The Assignee is not a party, to the present litigation, beyond requiring the order of the Court, before he proceeds to make the payment: but the creditors have a right to his vigilance, and I shall not therefore order in this case the payment of the sum claimed, but of the sum, which on inspecting the account of James Mackillop with the firm, shall appear to be due. In all probability, when the Books are before him, he will find the amount claimed to be correct: but I will not, on the extract furnished to me, take upon myself to state in a case when it is disputed, whether it is or is not so.

Before quitting the case of James Mackillop, there is one observation which may materially affect the expediency of instituting any further proceedings concerning his claim; though it is not the ground on which I have framed my opinion. Whether the amount of his claim is correct or not, it is clear on both statements, that he has, since the dissolution of the partnership, drawn from the firm a sum more than sufficient, had there been no transactions on the other side of the account, to exhaust the whole balance due to him on the dissolution. It is a question very fit for the consideration of the counsel opposing his claim, whether he could not have a right to apply these payments to him, to the satisfaction of his original claim, which would then be extinguished; and whether then any balance due to him, which would then necessarily result from subsequent deposits, would not be a sum free from all partnership considerations, and entitled to payment exactly on the same footing as the balance due to any other depositor. It does not appear, whether the same question could arise on any of the other claims, if it does, it is of course equally fit for consideration then.

The questions arising on George Mackillop's retirement, are nearly the same, and need not be again discussed. The lapse of time before the insolvency, indeed, is not so great, and the schedule C, therefore, is entitled to somewhat more attention in this case, than in the other; but not enough to require any detailed discussion. There is an interval of seven years, even in this case. There is, however, a new schedule introduced, which calls for some observations, or rather perhaps, which leads to the consideration of a class of cases which seems to have been estimated on very fallacious principles. I mean the debts secured by property or insurances and which were treated as good assets to the whole amount of the constantly increasing debt. Whether they were rightly so treated, must depend on the circumstances of each particular case; while the debt continued within the value of the property, or the security they were so: when it exceeded that value, they ceased to be so. But we find from Russomoy Dutt's evidence, that in cases where there was no hope of payment in any other way, the sums treated as recoverables were from time to time diminished to any amount, which it was supposed might be obtained: and it is difficult to conceive this done at all, unless it were done bona fide with a view of really correcting the estimates. These are perhaps the most questionable points of the valuation, certainly those, on which it seems to me most difficult to suppose that the valuations were made correct on a safe principle: but there does not appear to me to be enough, when viewed in conjunction with the evidence already stated on the other side, to establish a case, or to raise any material suspicion, that the valuations were not fairly and sincerely made.

There is only one particular objection arising out of George Mackillop's retirement. It appears that after his retirements a large sum of 90,000 Rs. was transferred from his account to Hutton's; and another I believe of the same amount to Browne's. This appears to have been in correction of some real or supposed error in the previous settlement, and it is consequently relied on not as affecting the correctness of the balance claimed by George Mackillop, which it reduced, but as showing the invalidity or suspicious nature of the valuations. I confess it has not that effect on my mind. The nature and history of the transaction is not very well explained, though the allowance is said to be one which George Mackillop was not compellable to make; but it is clear that it took place exclusively between him and the incoming partners, Hutton and Browne; (both of whom brought money into the firm) that Cullen and Bryce had no share in it, neither contributing to the amount received by those gentlemen nor receiving any corresponding sum from George Mackillop, and that the settlement therefore, whatever it was, proceeded on grounds not affecting the general valuation, in which all the parties would have been alike interested.

The next case is that of Mr. Cullen as executor of Bryce. It differs in its circumstances very materially from any other, and for sometime I inclined to think that the result must differ also. The character of a regular transaction and contract between the parties, seems to be wanting the partnership not having been determined by the will of Bryce, but, as it was at first stated, by his death, or, as it afterwards turned out, by his partners in consequence of his absence. The assignment of a certain sum, to him, therefore, seemed to be a mere estimate, and liable to be corrected, even if the others were not so. But in reference to the deed of partnership, the clauses already fully stated provide for this case, and make the settlement so effected completely a matter of contract and stipulation between the parties; and it is consequently as binding upon them as any other contract, except that being carried into effect by only one party, it is more liable to suspicion of fraud. These suspicions, however, could not be suspicions of fraud in favor of Bryce, and I have already pointed out that the arrangement actually made, if it requires explanation at all, requires it from some appearances of his being hardly dealt with. I see, therefore, no reason for refusing the claim made in his behalf. To a large proportion of it, at all events, no objection could apply, for the sum allowed to Bryce on his removal was only 55,027 : 10 : 9 : and the remainder of the sum claimed is constituted to a small extent, of accumulations of interest but mainly of two sums of 16,000 and 17,993 : 4 received after Bryce's death from an insurance on his life, and of a sum of 40,000 transferred from James Mackillop's account as a fund for the benefit of Bryce's family. These sums altogether exceed the balance now claimed, some payments having apparently been made; and to these, at all events, no objection can possibly attach. It is a sufficient hardship on the estate that the whole of this property should have been placed in the hands of the firm by the executor, when none of it ought to have been there; for the four years stipulated by the partnership deed for the withdrawal of partnership funds had expired sometime before the failure; and this in a case where objections to deal otherwise with the assets, did not even arise merely out of the general duty of an executor, but he was expressly directed by the will to invest all property "upon Government or other good securities."

The only remaining case, that of Mr. Hutton, is undoubtedly much the most suspicious of the whole. It is said, that he was never advertised out of the firm at all; but there is some evidence that his retirement was communicated to the constituents, and though this is not very distinctly proved there is no contradiction of it. The principal circumstances of suspicion, besides those already noticed, in stating the dissolution, are the comparative nearness to the time of failure, the degree to which, by the lapse of time, some of the accounts, especially those of debts due from factories, or secured by insurances, had accumulated, and the very singular evidence of the writing off very large debts at the close of April, and beginning of May 1833, almost immediately after the estimates submitted to the meeting of creditors. It is difficult not to conclude from this that the concerns of the house were in a state which, when proper attention was given to them, would require considerable modification of the estimates previously made, and if this was the case within three years of Mr. Hutton's retirement, it is at least enough to raise suspicion that the estimate then made, was not made on very sound principles. But I have already said that the question is not the correctness but the good faith of the estimate. Now it is in evidence that the estimate was almost entirely made by Russomoy Dutt, none of the partners except Mr. Browne, at all interfering and he very little. Russomoy Dutt's says he was left almost entirely to himself. He had no interest to favor any of the partners: certainly not as a continuing inmate of the house, to favor the retiring partner. On his estimate, a certain sum is added to the removed fund, and the whole of this, not by his advice, nor for any reason within his knowledge, is debited to Mr. Hutton. Considering how this valuation was made, I see no reason to impeach its fairness, and certainly considering the way in which its results were dealt with no reason to think Mr. Hutton would suppose he was retiring with more than he was fully entitled to.—Hurkaru, April 24.

COURT OF THE SESSION JUDGE OF THE 24-PERGUNNAHS.

SUDDER NIZAMUT ADAWLUT.

JAN. 27, 1837.—Present R. H. Rattray and W. Braddon, Esqrs., Judges, and D. C. Smyth, Esq., Temporary Judge.

The following circular orders were directed to be issued to the several Session Judges and Commissioners of Circuit in the lower Provinces.

No. 399.

Sir,—The court having had before them a case in which a Session Judge has passed a sentence of 7 years imprisonment with labour, commutable to a fine, under the provisions of Section 3 Regulation II. of 1834, have directed me to inform you that a sentence of this nature is not warranted by the regulation in question: whenever you may consider the offence of which a prisoner is convicted to demand a sentence of imprisonment for 5 years and upwards, you are not authorized to commute the labor to a fine.

No. 443.

To the Magistrates and Session Judges, Lower Provinces. Sec. XVI. Reg. IX. 1879. Sir,—I am directed by VII. Reg. IV. 1797. the courts to call your im-Cir. Order 28th Dec. 1796. modiate attention to the Do. do. 12th Dec. 1809. regulations and circular orders noted in the margin.

The Court direct that every witness, or prisoner examined by a Session Judge, be examined exclusively and entirely in the presence of that officer, and that the same rule be considered applicable to the principal Sudder Ameens, Sudder Ameens, or other native judicial officers, entrusted with criminal jurisdiction.

I am directed by the court to state that very serious notice will be taken of any wilful inattention to this rule, which may be brought to their notice, and you are particularly enjoined to enforce the due observance of this order, on the part of your subordinate officers.

4. The court are aware that a pressure of public business may occasionally oblige the civil judges, the magistrates, joint magistrates, and their assistants to empower their native officers to record the disposition of parties in cases coming before them, but the court direct that such proceedings be confined entirely to matters of minor importance, and that in all instances the depositions be taken in the presence of the European Officer presiding.

5. The circular order of the 28th December, 1796. does not appear on all occasions to be regularly attended to. The court, therefore, direct that the principal Sudder Ameens and Sudder Ameens be directed at the end of each deposition or examination to certify in the Taken before me and Persian language, in the mode indicated in the margin, that presence, this — day of the same has been taken in their presence.

A. B. Sudder Ameen.

6. The same rule will also be considered applicable to magistrates and other European officers, but in cases of a heinous nature, and in all cases wherein a commitment may be made to the sessions court, the court desire that the deposition or examination may be certified in the English language and in the mode noted in the margin.

C. D. Magistrate.

7. I am further directed to inform you that under the express order of Government, you will consider yourself strictly prohibited in future from taking down the examination of parties or witnesses in any other language than that in which it is delivered; Persian translations will be as heretofore annexed to the original proceedings in the event of the trial being referred to, or called for by this court. The above prohibition will of course be considered to extend to all the courts and tribunals over which you may exercise any jurisdiction.

I am, &c.

BEFORE D. C. SMYTH, ESQ., JUDGE.

Governments prosecutor, versus, Maro Surnamuttee, Ropdur Burdolooye, Moolon Pator, Bhotuk Laloong, Gopung Laloong, Kola Chakoree, Achanda Dwaree, Roolye Bareeka, Byung Majee Beedun Goon Barra, Dughur, Beedun Soongut, Phooling Lalung, Geng Lalung Kootel, Byung, Ona, Kooting, Turjun, Sae, Jeebun Singbur, Meeso, and Mohun Sing.

Charge—Murder of a woman named Botkurree, and her daughter named Satee for practising witchcraft. Captain Jenkins, the Commissioner of Assam, detailed the particulars of this case in the accompanying letter to the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut.

The particulars of the melancholy transactions before the Court are fully detailed in the letters of the officiating magistrate:—Two unfortunate women have been put to death by a sort of Judicial procedure, held by the headman and inhabitants of one of the villages lately acquired by us from the Jynteah Rajah, under the full persuasion and belief that exists amongst all the rude tribes bordering on Assam, that they had been guilty of witchcraft, and had by their conjurations, put many people to death. This belief in witchcraft is quite common, as the records of the Court will show amongst our garrow subjects; but by frequent proclamations issued by the late Mr. Scott, the murders which were so frequent in consequence, have in a great measure been prevented; although, the Commissioner believes, this belief in the existence of witchcraft, is as rife as ever. On first hearing of the case now in question, the Commissioner directed the Magistrate to issue a similar proclamation amongst the Lalungs and other hill-tribes, to forbid them from punishing reputed witches themselves, but to order the delivery to the Magistrate of all such persons as are accused of witchcraft, that they may be dealt with as he may deem proper. The people in question are Lalungs, a remarkably inoffensive, industrious race, and so seldom guilty of any crimes, that the murders now committed are entirely to be imputed to their ignorance, and full persuasion in the existence of witchcraft.

The whole of the prisoners have acknowledged most freely and fully to the shares each had in the transaction, and they have all been found guilty of committing, and conspiring together to commit, the murder of the two women, by the punctions and the magistrate.

Of their guilt respectively there seems no manner of doubt, and the Commissioner has to request the orders of the Court as to their punishment; and in doing this he begs to call the Court's attention to the 12th, 13th and 14th paragraphs of the Magistrate's first letter, and to submit his own concurrence in the opinions there urged.

by him. He considers that a very lenient punishment will in this first instance, be sufficient to prevent its occurrence in future; and believing, therefore, that it will be unnecessary to have recourse to severe punishment on the present prisoners, he recommends that the prisoners Marosurnamuttee, Roopdur, Burdolye, and Mooloo Patar, be confined for one year from the date of their apprehension, and give security not to commit again the like offence of 100 rupees each, or to be confined for six months more; and that the prisoners Bhotuk, Gopsing Kola, be each confined two years from the above date with labor in irons;—and all the rest he begs to recommend may be released.

The presiding Judge of the Sudder Nizamut Adawlut having perused the proceedings in this case, ordered that before the Court proceeds on the trial, it direct, that the Commissioner of circuit, Captain Jenkins, be requested to state whether at the time the assembly was formed for the purpose of trying the deceased for witchcraft and at the time the woman was put to death, the Jynteah Territory was an independent state governed by its own laws or was annexed to the British territories; and in the event of its being at the time the act was committed, an independent territory, governed by its own laws, whether the prisoners would have been authorized by the laws and usages of the Jynteah state, in calling this assembly, in trying the woman, and in case of conviction, in putting her to death, or if otherwise then to what punishment they would have been subjected by the Jynteah Rajah for this alleged act. The Commissioner is also requested to forward a copy of the orders of government annexing Jynteah to the British Government, and to certify on what date those orders are promulgated.—Hurkaru, March 15.

JAN. 27, 1837.

Present W. Money and D. C. Smyth, Esqrs., Temporary Judges.

Government v. John Sheb alias John DeCourcy, Pran Rai, and Madhub Rai, the former, charged with taking the law in his own hands by causing to be apprehended, and afterwards torturing by heating a chillum in the fire, and applying the same while hot on the bodies of Ramdhun Ghose, Kunnye Ghose, Hulodhur Ghose, and Gopaul Ghose, whereby they have been scorched; and with cutting off the prepuce of the said Ramdhun Ghose; and the two latter, with being accessories before and after the act, or with holding the above mentioned persons before, and while the said application was being made, and with keeping them in confinement in several places for 16 days afterwards, with a view to suppress the crime. Case referred by C. G. Udney, Esq., officiating session judge of Zillah Nuddea, of which the following are the particulars:—

From the evidence for the prosecution, it would appear, that four persons named Hulodhur Ghose, Kunnye Ghose, Gopaul Ghose, and Ramdhun Ghose, in consequence of having allowed their cattle to stray into the indigo grounds, belonging to the Beerpoor factory, of which the prisoners John DeCourcy had the management, were in the month of Pous (December) last, carried from the village of Mahesnugur to the bungalow occupied by the latter at Beerpoor, and there tortured; that a chillum and pice were heated in the fire, and then applied to the persons of Hulodhur and Gopaul Ghose by the prisoner John DeCourcy, and to that of Kunnye Ghose by Lahur Adhekaree, the dewan of the factory; that a heated chillum was also applied to the body of Ramdhun Ghose, and the operation of circumcision performed on him by DeCourcy with a razor; that the above four persons were held down by the prisoners, Pran Rai, Madhub Rai, and others, while these cruelties were inflicted; that they were afterwards chained and confined in the factory godown for several days, when on intimation being received of an intended visit of the police to the factory, they were removed some distance into the jungle for the purpose of concealment, and after sometime taken thence to the Chunderghaut factory, from which they were again, in three or four days, carried back to Mahesnugur (a promise of secrecy having been previously exacted) and delivered over by Pran Rai and Madhub Rai, and other servants of the factory, to the village chowkeydar and others. The exact date on which these acts of cruelty were carried into execution is not very precisely ascertained. One of the parties, however, (Kunnye Ghose) states that they were carried to the factory on Sunday, two nights after Christmas, and if this be the case, the date of occurrence will be the 27th December 1835, or 13th Pous 1842, B. S., as specified in the indictment.

“On the thighs, posteriors, and other parts of the bodies of Ramdhun Ghose, and his three companions, large circular marks of burns about two inches in diameter were visible; smaller marks of a similar description $\frac{3}{4}$ ths of an inch in diameter are also apparent on the persons of Hulodhur, Kunnye, and Gopaul Ghose. The two native doctors belonging to the Station Hospital, after examining Ramdhun Ghose, also deposed to the fact of his having been circumcised.”

The prisoner John DeCourcy, in his defence, calls three witnesses who depose, that on the whole of the 27th and 28th of December last, they were at the Beerpoor factory on a visit to the prisoner, and that during that time no persons were brought to the factory, or ill-treated; and that no proceedings of the nature alleged to have taken place could have occurred there without their knowledge. If these witnesses really state the truth, it is difficult to conceive why the prisoner should have omitted to call or name them before the magistrate, when their evidence would have enabled him so easily to refute the charges preferred against him. The circumstance also of the prisoner leaving the district, after the complaint was preferred, has an unfavorable appearance; and the explanation attempted to be given by him on this point can scarcely be deemed satisfactory.

Both the other prisoners call witnesses to prove an alibi, but fail in substantiating their plea. The evidence, however, adduced by Madhub Rai, tends to shew that on the 27th of December last, he was not in service at the Beerpoor factory.

The Futwa convicted all the prisoners of the charge preferred against them, and declared them liable to discretionary punishment by “Aroobut.” The officiating session judge not being satisfied with the nature of the evidence of the trial, considered the guilt of the prisoners not fully and duly proved. Mr. U. was therefore compelled to dissent from the finding of the law officer, and refer the cases to superior courts.

The evidence against the prisoners consists (says the session judge) of the statements of the injured parties themselves and the testimony of a witness named Ramcoomar Ghose. The deposition of the latter on the trial as an eye witness to the criminal acts of prisoners is directly opposed to his deposition on oath in the Fouzdarry, in which he positively denies all knowledge of the transaction;—no credit can therefore be attached to his assertions. The evidence of the other witnesses also before the magistrate, and on the trial, involve such essential variations and contradictions as to render it, in my opinion, unsafe to found upon it a penal sentence against the prisoners; unsupported as it is by other testimony of a consistent and unquestionable character.”

It is also necessary to state that on the trial of Domun Singh; another prisoner indicted as an accomplice in this case (No. 5 of the magistrate's calendar for July,) the proceedings on which were referred for final orders to the Nizamut Adawlut on the 18th August, these witnesses retract and deny many parts of their evidence on the present trial given only a few days before, and appear generally to depose with so much vagueness and uncertainty as to afford an additional reason for the exercise of extreme caution in attaching credit to their asseverations.

"The evidence of Doolub Rai chared as a accomplice in this case, but admitted as an approver by the magistrate, was declared inadmissible by the superior court."

Further proceedings were held on the trial in question, at the station of Kishnaghn on the 26th November last.

A free pardon having been granted by government to Doolubh Sheikh, the accomplice in the case, the evidence of that person was taken in conformity with the orders of the superior court under date the 15th October last.

"Considering (says the officiating session judge) the degree of proof wanting to establish the charge against the prisoner John DeCourcy to be supplied by the testimony of Doolub Sheikh, which corroborates the statement of the injured parties in the case, I have, in concurrence with the law officer, convicted and sentenced him to 7 years' imprisonment without labor and irons."

"As however the deposition of this witness does not criminate the other prisoners, I am still of opinion that they ought to be acquitted, and therefore dissenting from the Futwa in regard to them, refer the case for the final orders of the Nizamut Adawlut."

The prisoner John DeCourcy not being able to furnish the bail directed to be required from him by the superior court, was placed in confinement by the magistrate until the final disposal of his case by the Nizamut Adawlut.

The Sudder Court having duly considered the proceedings held on the trial in question, saw no reason for revising the proceedings as regards John DeCourcy, or for interfering with the sentence of seven years' imprisonment without labor in irons passed upon him by the officiating session judge; and deeming the prisoners Rani Rai and Maithub Rai convicted of having been present, aiding and abetting the aforesaid John DeCourcy in his proceedings, sentence them to be imprisoned for the term of three years without irons from the present date, and to pay each a fine of 100 Rs. within one month from the date on which the sentence may be communicated to them, or in default of payment to labor until the fine be paid, or the term of their respective sentences expire.—Englishman, April 7.

SUDDER BOARD OF REVENUE.

The Commissioner of Cuttack has laid before the Board a petition from the zumeendars of Midnapore, praying for relief on account of the failure of the crops in their district from the protracted and unusual drought, the commissioner states that the affairs of these zumeendars had been previously embarrassed in consequence of the bad seasons of 1831-32, and 33 but then he does not consider this present failure of crop in the district to be such as in itself to call for a general suspension or remission of a portion of the revenue and departure from the principles of the perpetual settlement. He however goes on to say that in consequence of government having in several instances formally declared that in estates settled in perpetuity indulgences on account of unfavorable seasons cannot be granted, he has refrained from holding out any hopes of relief to the petitioners, but then he fears an adherence to that doctrine will be found impracticable without causing the entire ruin of a large portion of the existing landholders. The Board have returned the petition for a circumstantial report on its allegations requesting such suggestions from the commissioners as he may deem calculated to relieve the exigencies otherwise irremediable.—Englishman, April 1.

SUNDERBUN GRANTS.

The Board ordered enquiries some time since respecting the Sunderbun grants, numbered 70 and 71, made to Mohischunder and Gureeschunder Dutt, who were reported to have failed in fulfilling the condition of their grant, which requires one-fourth of the extent to be cleared within five years. In reply to this enquiry, the Commissioner of Jessore reports that the officiating Commissioner of the Soondurbuns had personally examined the grants and is of opinion that as they have totally failed in complying with this condition of the grant they have forfeited all title to their lands. It appears that cultivation never was the object of these grantees, but that they intended to profit by the jhulka, or fisheries on the numerous kals, which intersect the jungle lands, and which yielded an annual amount estimated at 600 rupees. There are several applicants for the grant on their reverting to Government. The Board, however, have deferred deciding on the claims of any one of them, directing that the Commissioner of the Soondurbuns should be directed to hold proceedings, requiring the grantees to show cause why their grants should not be resumed, and then to record his judgment of the forfeiture or other wise of the leases, submitting his proceedings to the superior authorities, and when these formalities shall be completed, the Board will reconsider the subject of otherwise disposing of the grants.

In consequence of the necessity of deciding the defined boundaries of some of the Soondurbun grants bordering on the lands of zumeendars of the perpetual settlement, and more particularly having reference to the grants, numbered 79 and 80, in Captain Hodges' map, and belonging to Messrs. McDougal and McPherson, the Commissioner of Jessore has requested the instructions of the Board on the following points:

First,—The mode to be pursued in maintaining the Soondurbun grantees in possession of their several lots and of settling the boundary disputes between them and the zumeendars of the adjoining permanently settled estates; and secondly, whether a grantee is entitled to receive any thing more than the land actually covered with jungle at the time he may be put in possession, or whether amounts specified in the survey is to be made over to him.

With respect to the first point Mr. Pigou observes, that the whole of the lands in all the allotments of Soondurbun forest, made over to the different grantees, have been decreed to be the property of Government; have been surveyed by a Government officer (Capt. Prinsep); and their respective boundaries have been laid down, agreeably to which pottals have been and continue to be granted by Government, whence that gentleman argues that it is the duty of the Commissioner of the Soondurbuns to put the grantee in the first instance in possession, agreeably to the survey above referred to. And with reference to c. I. sec. 13, of regulation 111, of

All parties to whom such grants shall or may be made, shall be entitled to hold, or to take possession of any tract of Soonderbun jungle so granted without question or opposition, and all public officers shall aid and assist in the same. 1828 after the grantee has obtained possession it becomes the duty of the magistrate on application of the grantee to maintain that possession, when it is at the option of the other party to have recourse to a civil suit; but that it would not be expedient for the Commissioner of the Soonderbuns to interfere further in the matter.

With regard to the second point, Mr. Commissioner Pigou expresses his opinion that, if Government grant to an individual a specified lot, with certain boundaries, to such lot, whether it be jungle or cultivated, that individual is entitled to it.

The Board have instructed Mr. Pigou to issue such orders with regard to the first point of his reference, as he may consider suitable, leaving dissatisfied parties to prefer their appeals, the subject of the second point having already been considered by them, and the principle laid down by the Commissioner admitted.—Englishman, April 3.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

SIGNORE PIZZONI.—A letter from Agra intimates, that Signor Pizzoni had given a concert at that station for his benefit, under the patronage of His Honor Sir Charles Metcalfe, who, with his usual liberality on such occasions, had subscribed for no less than twenty ladies' and twenty gentlemen's tickets. The entertainment is described as having gone off very well, aided by the excellent band of the European Regiment.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—The Commander-in-Chief on the 6th ultimo reached Umritser, and met with a very hospitable reception from Runjeet Singh. He attended at the nuptials of Nowneal Singh, which were celebrated with great pomp and grandeur.

LORD AUCKLAND'S SCHOOL.—A private English school has been established at Barrackpore, the expenses of which are to be defrayed entirely by Lord Auckland. A suitable building, which has cost his Lordship about 3,500 rupees, has been erected for this purpose in the Barrackpore park. Baboo Russicklohl Sen, who was for sometime a teacher in an English school at Midnapore, has been entrusted with the management of this seminary. It was opened with 300 boys on the 6th of March and 20 more were admitted on the 27th of that month.

THE MILITARY ORPHAN INSTITUTION.—The disputes respecting the conduct of the Secretary of this institution still continue. Miss Polhill has published an answer to the statement of the Manager.

THE CENTRAL HOSPITAL.—A subscription having been opened, pursuant to a resolution passed at a meeting called by Dr. Brett, the founder of the institution, the sums subscribed have amounted to 3,000 Rs.

HOOGHLY NATIVE HOSPITAL.—A native hospital has lately been established in Hooghly through the exertions of Dr. Wise, whose endeavours to promote the welfare of the people of Hooghly are well known. The expenses are defrayed from the Emambarrah estate, and the patients are lodged in a comfortable, airy house hired for the purpose, where separate apartments are assigned to Moosulmans and Hindoos respectively.

TRANSLATION OF HOMER'S ILIAD.—Baboo Greeschunder Bose, has translated the first book of Homer's Iliad into Bengally, in a very creditable manner.

NATIVE INFANT SCHOOL.—The infant pupils of this seminary were examined at the Town Hall on the 13th instant, and gave great satisfaction to the individuals present.

ACCIDENTS.—A woman's brains were blown out on the 11th instant, by the accidental explosion of a gun, which a servant was conveying to his master's residence.

Two fatal accidents occurred on board of the Herefordshire, at Kedgeree. On the 1st instant a coolie fell over board from the main-chains, and was instantly seized by a shark, which disappeared with him. On the following morning, a boy named Philpotts, whilst drawing water from the mizen-chains, tumbled into the river. The quarter-boat was immediately lowered and sent to his assistance; but just as it came up to him and one of the crew had got hold of the unfortunate boy by the hair, a shark seized him, tore him from the man's grasp, and bore him away.

THE SIR HERBERT TAYLOR.—The bark Sir Herbert Taylor, laden with rice for the Mauritius, got aground on the morning of the 20th instant upon the Sumatra Sand, and was in some danger of capsizing; but measures were taken as quickly as possible, to lighten her, and she floated upon the return of the tide.

INDIAN NAVY.—A letter from Captain Barber, dated London 1st of February, says, he had just heard that a Committee had been appointed by the Court of Directors by a majority of one to consider the principle of making the Indian navy a steam flotilla, and that it was carried in the affirmative. A Committee had been appointed to consider the details, and the best mode of effecting the conveyance of letters to Bombay.

ATALANTA AND HUGH LINDSAY.—The Atalanta, one of the Company's new English steamers, is said to have sailed from England for Bombay on the 26th of December. A letter of February, from a quarter likely to be well informed on the subject, mentions that the Atalanta and Hugh Lindsay are to be employed in trips to the Red Sea, to carry the mails to and from Bombay, until arrangements shall be made for a regular packet communication.

DHARJELIAN SANATORIUM.—Let ters have been received from Dharjellen, dated the 3d instant. The writer of one of them says: "A severe hail-storm occurred yesterday, with rain and snow, and awful thunder and lightning. The hail has not yet melted, and it is bitterly cold. Eleven A. M. thermometer 55°! I can hardly hold the pen." When it is recollected that this place is within three hundred miles of Calcutta, and that a steam boat can get within about fifty miles of it, at all seasons, it is to be hoped that the projected sanatorium will not be given up.

RAVAGES BY TIGERS.—The tigers have been committing great ravages lately in Saugor island. The Molunghees employed in making salt at Gunga Saugor, have had eight of their number carried off within a short period.

MR. TURTON.—Letters from Malta, to the 28th of February, have been received from Mr. Turton. That gentleman was then in health, and detained at the Lazaretto.

MR. WAGHORN.—Letters received from Mr. Waghorn intimate, that he was to leave Egypt, by the March steamer, for England; his presence being required there respecting Steam Navigation via the Red Sea to India. He expected to return within two months.

BUMBAD MOODHA-SINDHOO.—We are happy to notice that a weekly paper under the above name, has been established by Baboo Colly Sunker Dutt of Burtullah, since the 2d of Bysakh instant, and is supplied to subscribers at the monthly charge of eight annas.

MR. HURRY.—Mr. Wm Cobb Hurry has been appointed Secretary to the Calcutta Municipal Committee, in the place of Mr. G. J. Gordon, gone to Agra.

SPORTING.—The Dum-Dum steeple chase, was won by Mr. Leslie, on his chesnut horse Priam.

THE CALCUTTA CANAL TOLLS.—The Calcutta Canal Tolls produced about 18,500 rupees last month.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—A letter from Tirhoot, dated 30th ultimo, says that the planters are sadly in want of rain. The plant is dying off in every direction, causing great loss and further expenditure of seed.

Sad complaints of want of rain are coming in from the indigo districts. A letter from Dacca of the 4th instant, says, that since the 10th of last month there had been nothing but strong westerly breezes without a drop of rain, the churs all parched up and the weather become intolerably hot. The planters in that district are reported not to have sown half their lands, and their hopes of a crop are at present very indifferent.

A letter from Jessore of the 10th instant states, that there were slight showers on the 26th ultimo and 1st instant; but they had not enabled the planters in the Jessore and Pubna districts to complete half their sowings, and the drought had since been so severe that the plant was suffering and much of it dead.

CAPTURE OF ROBBERS.—Mr. Patton, the active and indefatigable magistrate of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, has, through his ingenuity and perseverance, succeeded in capturing a gang of robbers, who had conspired to rob the mails of Company's paper, which they had long succeeded in doing with impunity. These men have been convicted of forgery as well as robbing the mails.

ROBBERIES.—Four Europeans recently, in broad day light, committed several petty robberies and burglaries at Cossipore, and made their escape with impunity.

On the 1st instant, two persons named Amba Dutt and Bhooput Sing, durwans in the employ of a respectable native banking firm, went to the shop, of one Gungaram, stating that Auhrang Baboo, the gomasta of the concern, wanted him; and while he was preparing to go with them, Amba Dutt took hold of a purse containing Rs. 124, and made his escape, while his companion seized Gungaram, beat him in a violent manner, and prevented him from pursuing Amba Dutt.

The family dwelling house of Ramdhun Banerjee, of Coota, within the thana of Bansbaria, was stormed by a gang of dacoits, on the night of the 3d of April. The ruffians were about thirty in number. The master of the house was dreadfully tortured; his body, almost from head to feet, being burnt with a torch, and his head incised with a cutting weapon, and all his movables carried off. On the day following, the Magistrate called at the house of the poor man, and caused medical assistance to be administered to him, and he has given strict injunctions to the Police of the zillah to trace the offenders.

A gang robbery was, about a fortnight ago, committed at the dwelling house of a Brahmin residing in the village of Khamarpara, within the thanah of Bansbariah. The ruffians, all armed with offensive weapons, entered the house, yelling in a truly terrifying manner, and carried away every thing that they could remove. The noise they made, attracted a great number of men to the scene of spoliation, but none could screw up their courage sufficiently to confront them in their retreat. They wounded some of the inmates, burnt the master of the house dreadfully, and put the chokedar of the ward to death.

Another dacoity was committed at the residence of a man living at Manaul, a few days ago. It is stated that dacoities have of late become very common in and about the village.

MURDERS.—A barber was murdered on the 8th ultimo, by a Bramin, who kept a gambling shop at Hooghly, and the body was made away with through the connivance of two chowkedars. The two latter delinquents were tried, but for want of proof to substantiate the charge of their having colluded to conceal the murder, they were only convicted of having connived at gambling, and sentenced to labor in chains for six months.

On the 16th of March, a man named Issur, murdered a man named Gummohun Bose, because the latter was unable to repay a debt of five hundred rupees which he had contracted to the former. The murderer has decamped.

FIRES.—A great fire happened at Mirzapore on the afternoon of the 18th instant, which destroyed no less than THREE HUNDRED AND FIVE houses, tiled and straw. It broke out about three o'clock and lasted for a considerable time.

Another fire occurred the same day at Machua Bazar, which was nearly as great as the one at Mirzapore. The number of houses destroyed was TWO HUNDRED AND EIGHTY.

A fire broke out in the house of one Premchand, a resident at Toltulluh, about one o'clock on the afternoon of the 16th instant, which destroyed forty-nine tiled and straw houses.

About 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the 10th instant, the house of one Ramzaun Khan at Cullinga caught fire, which soon spread far and wide, and the number of houses consumed was ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE thatched ones and one pukka godown. The accident caused the loss of three human lives; namely of two women, mother and daughter, and a man. They had all quitted their houses at first, but being induced to save something which they had forgotten to remove, they went back, and fell sacrifices to their imprudence. Scarcely had the poor women entered their house, than the ignited thatch gave way and they were completely buried in the flames, and in consequence perished. The man was dreadfully burnt; he was, however, helped out of the flames before life was extinct, and carried to hospital for medical assistance, but survived only till ten o'clock at night.

Between nine and ten o'clock on the morning of the same day, a fire broke out in the house of Cossee Caumar, at Kidderpore; and it is stated that no less than ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE houses were destroyed.

A fire also occurred at Maindeh Buggan, on the 21st instant, and taking a northwardly direction, consumed a considerable quantity of property and spread over a large tract of land.

It appears that the frequency of these conflagrations, arises not solely from accident, but through the agency of incendiaries, who, for a small present from the charcoal merchants and thatchers, will fearlessly approach one of a clump of huts in the middle of the day, and apply a lighted coal to it. The leniency of the Magistrates in punishing these villains, whenever actually detected in the perpetration of this crime, tends to embolden them. An old offender, who had just been liberated from the house of correction, whither he had been committed for attempting incendiarism, was recently caught in the act of setting fire to a hut. He was tried, and the magistrate committed him to—where? To the great gaol, to be tried for his life at the sessions! No; once more to the house of correction for six months! While writing on the subject of the fires, we cannot resist mentioning the gallant conduct on one occasion of Captain F. W. Birch, the Superintendent of police, by which he saved the life of a poor decrepit woman, who was confined in a house which was in flames. The gallant Superintendent first threw himself into a tank, with a blanket, and then run into the hut and a few moments after was observed, coming out with the old woman under his arm. He then threw himself a second time into the tank and landed safe with his burden.

HAIL-SHOWER.—On the morning of the 2nd instant, about half past two o'clock, after a north-wester, which commenced at about ten o'clock the night preceding, a second shower of hail was experienced, which was nearly as plentiful as the one of the 22nd ultimo, and the crystals of ice much larger,—several being about an inch in length and about one third as thick.

LIGHTNING.—On the night of the first instant, during the hailstorm, the house of Oboychnurn Daw, of Kansarparah Simlah, was struck by lightning. The electric fluid pierced through a beam of the terrace, and an arch of the poojah-hall, but did no further mischief.

A GREAT STORM.—A great storm occurred in the neighbourhood of the village of Khoolna, in Zillah Jessore, on the 29th of March last. It passed over a space of about six biggahs in breadth and six kos in length, throwing down in its progress, not only huts but also brick built houses. It has caused the loss of a great many lives.

THE DROUGHT.—Accounts have poured in from almost all quarters, of the severity of the drought. The crops are almost all burnt up, and the ryots are quite hopeless of realizing even a sufficient sum from the sale of their produce to pay the annual jumma.

FAMINE IN CUTTACK.—A great dearth of rice prevails in Orissa, in consequence of a long drought. The natives are literally crying for rain. In the town of Cuttack rice sells at twelve or thirteen seers for the rupee, but in the interior there is none to be purchased; it is easy, therefore, to conceive the extent of distress the people must necessarily be suffering. Many are dying from sheer starvation.

THE TREASURY ADVANCES.—Government have yielded to the solicitation of the Chamber of Commerce, and have determined to re-open the treasury for advances against consignments to England. The advances will be made immediately to those who may apply for them, and the sum fixed for issue in this way is seventy lakhs in Bengal, twenty lakhs in Bombay, ten lakhs in Madras, and fifty lakhs in China, provided no orders come out from England inconsistent with this arrangement. The Indian exchange is fixed at 2s. 2d. per Company's rupee.

THE PICE PLAGUE.—The pice plague rages with greater fury at present in Calcutta, than the Palee plague in any part of the country. For the last week every individual in the city and its environs, has been afflicted by it to the extent of six pice; and yet the Government, the only physician who can administer to the unfortunate sufferers, view their suffering with the greatest apathy, and tanalize them by the administration of unpalatable nostrums, in the shape of totally defaced pice, worth about the ninetieth part of a rupee.

This dreadful distemper rages not only with unabated fury throughout the arena encircled by the Mharatta ditch, but, we believe, further extends its ravages over a considerable tract of the surrounding country. It would appear, that Government, respecting this calamity, instead of affording relief, as they might, would callously advise the populace in the words of Seneca, quod male fers, assuesce; feres bene. To reconcile themselves to their sufferings would be the wisest course for the poor to adopt, as it appears that the Government will not only not aid them, but do actually conduce to their sufferings by passing upon them at full value, coin which they themselves, a short time since, declared not to be a legal tender, and bought up at an enormous discount. In fact, what are tendered for pice in the Government shops, are nothing better than old pieces of copper, totally denuded of all impressions and generally covered with a coating of verdigrise.

The exorbitant discount of five pice for exchanging a rupee, is charged by the shroffs; and the government, with whom the power to relieve the suffering poor, by a plentiful supply of the desiderated coin, appears quite apathetic to their sufferings: indeed, they have opened shops for the supply of pice, at which a higher discount is virtually charged, than at the stand of the worst Jew money-changer in the country. The Government pretend to adopt measures for the relief of the poor, whilst they actually distress them, and derive a profit of an anna in the rupee, by now trading with the old coin, which they recently (on the plea of withdrawing them from circulation) bought up at sixty-eight for the rupee, by issuing them at sixty-four; and they will, very likely, derive a further profit soon, by again calling in the old pice now sold at sixty-four, at sixty-eight or seventy for the rupee.

CHURRUCK POOJAH.—The brutal rites of the Chur-ruck Poojah were again enacted on the 12th instant. At about 5½ P.M. near south road Entally, in the first lane on the west of it, a tree, or churruck, was erected on a piece of ground belonging to one Radacant Moon-shee. The lane was crowded with spectators of all nations, viewing a native of rather good figure swinging round the tree amid the acclamations of the populace, and the retainers of the Moonshree; the scene, however, soon changed into one of murder and confusion, as the ropes by which the Suneessee was suspended, snapped, and the deluded victim of superstition, was flung away to the distance of nearly a hundred feet; and when he was picked up, was literally dashed to pieces. His face was completely smashed, and his body was not perfect in any part. On the south-west of north road Entally, very near the convict guard on that road, a Suneessee was first swung by hooks pierced through his back, in the ordinary way, but after him a man in a state of intoxication presented himself, with a pair of harpoons bored into his thighs, immediately above the knee joints. The man was swung round for nearly three quarters of an hour, and when let down, he was quite sober, and complaining of having had but a short swing.

AUDE-SIKKUA.—A small volume under this title, has been prepared and published by Baboo Hurrekisto Addy, at the instance of Baboo Gourmohun Addy of Simla. A copy of it has been handed to us, and we are happy in being able to say that it would prove a valuable work in the hands of young learners.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—At the Annual Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce on the 4th instant, John Jackson, Esq., was elected President, and James Cul- len, Esq., Vice President, for the ensuing year; and the rotation vacancies in the Committee were filled up with the following names:—Messrs. On the 27th ultimo, agreeably to annual custom, a meeting of the inhabitants occupying seats in St. John's Cathedral, was held in the Vestry room, for the election of the Vestrymen for the year. The Archdeacon being requested to take the chair, it was proposed and also unanimously carried, that Messrs. Judge, Molloy and Sim, be re-elected; it was then proposed and also unanimously carried, that Alexander Colvin, Esq., be elected in the room of Mr. Turton gone to Europe. Thanks being voted to the Chairman the meeting separated.

MARBLE BUST OF THE LATE MR. PALMER.—The Committee appointed by the subscribers for a marble bust of the late Mr. Palmer, met in the Town Hall on the 4th instant, for the purpose of considering what steps should be taken to accelerate the accomplishment of the object in consequence of the entire want of information from the two gentlemen, Messrs. Edmondstone and Deans Campbell, who were requested to communicate with Sir Francis Chantrey in England upon the subject. As Lieut. Colonel W. S. Beatson, the Chairman of this Committee, was proceeding to England in the Robarts, it was resolved to request his aid in co-operation with the above gentlemen, and to authorize him, in the event of finding Chantrey too much engaged to undertake the bust, to make the best selection he could among other artists in England or on the Continent; and that no delay may take place for want of funds, it was determined to remit £450 to London forthwith, which it is conceived, will be more than enough to defray all expenses, supposing the work to be executed by Chantrey himself.

ORPHAN MANAGEMENT QUESTION.—The following is the result of the voting at Barrackpore on the Orphan Management question—or rather, on the proposition from Kurnaul regarding Mr. McQueen, the formation of a Committee, &c.

First Proposition.....	For 23	against 54
Second ditto.....	For 18	do. 59

MR. MAGNIAC.—It is reported that the despatches from the Court of Directors contain some severe comments upon the proceedings in Mr. Magniac's case, and order his restoration to the full emoluments he enjoyed before his removal from office on the plea of imbecility of mind.

RACE COURSE BARRIER.—The Governor-General has so far acceded to the prayer of the petition of certain inhabitants of Alipore as to direct that the road across the course leading to the Alipore bridge, shall be thrown open to light vehicles, horsemen, and pedestrians from the termination of the races till the 1st July, after which it is to be open to foot passengers only until a day previous to the commencement of the races, when it will be closed entirely until after the termination of the sport.

CHANGES IN PUBLIC OFFICES.—Among the on dits of the day regarding moves in the Presidency Public Offices, is one that Mr. Reid, Registrar of the Sudder Dewannee, is advanced, pro tempore, to the Bench, as an Officiating Judge, and is to be succeeded as Acting Registrar by Mr. Richard Macan, at present a Judge at Burdwan. Mr. Trevelyan is to officiate as ordinary Secretary to the Sudder Board of Revenue, the regular Secretary, Mr. Halliday, being specially employed on the accumulation of new settlement cases. Mr. H. Torrens proceeds on special deputation to Rungpore, and Mr. Erskine is named as about to officiate for Mr. Trevelyan as under Secretary in the Political Department.

SHIPPING MANIFESTS.—An order has issued from the Governor of Bengal, relieving the inward bound shipping from the necessity of stopping to deliver manifests at Kedgerie during the South-West Monsoon, which was occasionally the cause of much practical inconvenience. During that season, in future, the manifests are to be delivered at Diamond Harbour instead of Kedgerie.

HINDOO ASSOCIATION.—Certain wealthy and intelligent Hindus, have determined upon forming themselves into an association with the view of co-operating in their efforts to reform those abuses that, by corrupting the manners and institutions of India, have for ages so grossly degraded the generosity of the nation, as scarcely to leave among them any trace of the high and benevolent wisdom, which blessed them with faculties to enjoy equally with the rest of their fellow creatures, the comforts and happiness of social life.

MUNICIPAL DONATIONS.—Maha Raja Chuttoderry Sahee, Bahadoor, of Patna, has lately given the magnificent donation of fifty thousand rupees to be added to the Education fund. Baboo Unoonath Dutt has also contributed a pair of 20-inch globes (of 1834) elegantly and completely mounted.

MOFUSSIL.

DELHI.—The progress of the Palsee plague has created some alarm, and measures have been adopted to prevent the contagion spreading to the British provinces.

A Mr. Elliot has been appointed Kotwal of this city by Mr. Lindsay, the magistrate. This is a proper disregard of the foolish custom of entrusting to natives alone the important duties of this office, and deserves to be more generally followed.

A meeting of the respectable native merchants of Delhi, importing goods from Bombay through Palsee, has been convened by the Magistrate, in order to adopt precautionary measures against the plague visiting that city.

The following resolution has been circulated at Delhi, and signed by nearly thirty officers.

"We the undersigned, fully acquit the Reverend Mr. McQueen of falsehood, and see no necessity for his removal from the office " of Secretary to the Orphan Institution."

It is said positively that Maharajah Runjeet Singh has consented to our establishing a Cantonment at Ferozepore; and that Sir Henry Fane has proceeded to that place to fix upon the site.

Government, it is said, have it in contemplation to appoint young military men as Collectors and Magistrates in Oude, and that a requisition, for no less than sixty officers, is to be immediately made. It is rumoured that Commanding Officers have been called upon to mention the individuals in the regiments under their command who are qualified for the required duties, especially those who have passed the prescribed examination in the native languages.

AGRA.—A meeting of the Medical officers of the station took place on the subject of the Plague now raging to the Westward. The following resolutions were adopted.

1. That this meeting; consisting of all the medical officers at Agra, be constituted a "Provisional Association for the conservancy of public health."

2. That its meetings take place on the last Thursday of every month, or as often as circumstances may render necessary; and that at all future meetings the senior medical officer present shall preside.

3. That the object of the association be, to consider what professional measures may be necessary for the prevention or treatment of the disease which seems now to be approaching our frontier, and which is believed by those medical men who have had the best opportunities of judging, to be the real plague of the Levant.

4. That in furtherance of this object, the Secretary be directed to communicate with the Medical Officers in that part of the country where the pestilence is said to exist—and that they be requested to favour the Association with all the information in their power relative to its progress, nature and treatment.

5. That in the meantime, the Association recommend that immediate measures be adopted to procure an extra supply of such medicines, &c. as have been found to be most useful in the prevention and treatment of the disease, in other countries; and that the Commissariat Officer be likewise requested to have in readiness an abundant stock of hospital stores, suited to the probable emergency such as wine, sage, brandy, vinegar, &c.

6. That a deputation of the members of the Association, with permission, wait upon the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor, to acquaint him with its first proceedings, and respectfully to solicit from him that information and support which is necessary to ensure its greater utility, requesting at the same time his further permission to address him hereafter, if necessary, through the usual channel, on the subject of these resolutions.

7. That the President and Secretary wait upon the Brigadier Commanding, to request his sanction to these proceedings and his co-operation in furtherance of their object.

NATIVE STATES.

THE RULER OF CHUJJUR.—Rumour says that between Feiz Ali Khan, the Ruler of Chujjur, and Husen Ali Khan, his uncle, a dispute prevails; but it was hoped that some distinguished chief would step forward and put an end to it.

BHURTPORE.—A magazine containing upwards of 10,000 pounds of powder recently exploded in this city and caused a fearful loss of life. Thirty persons were killed on the spot and as many wounded, some severely. The accident proceeded, it is supposed, from a lamp which by long custom had been kept lighted in the same building with the magazine. The building, which was of stone, was shattered into a thousand fragments, and the neighbouring houses received much injury.

RAMPOOR.—The Nuwab is strongly apprehensive of his approaching death, in accordance to the prophecy of a faqueer, who foretold accurately his own dissolution. An incurable wound received by the Nuwab in a fall from an elephant, increases his apprehension and the probability of the faqueer's prediction becoming verified. Three months have been fixed for its accomplishment.

PESHAWUR. Hurree Singh has just been defeated in an attempt to push the Sikh frontier beyond the limits of this district. He had taken up a position on which to erect a fort and had proceeded to some extent with the work, when a son of Dost Moohumud, made a rapid advance from Jullalubail, and coming on the Sikhs by surprise, drove them back and destroyed the incipient fortalice.

LUDAKE.—The merchants who trade with Yarkand and Thibet for wool, have been forced to abandon their usual route, by Jurawur Singh, the deputy of Goolab Singh, who has prescribed to them another road, by which they will have to run through a long gauntlet of Custom Houses. The merchants have opposed this with the only power that can be exerted against eastern despotism—passive resistance—and the consequence has been a considerable decline in the wool trade.

JEEND.—The settlement of this country, which cuts an important figure in the political transactions of the Agra Government, has at length taken place, in its session to Surroop Singh, a cousin of the late Rajah. Its original proportions were however somewhat curtailed, part of it being held by the Company.

DREBUND.—Futteh Khan, the chief of Pungetaur, being routed by the troops of Sirdar Hurry Sing Nelwa, had taken refuge on the frontiers of Durbund, when Payend Khan, the ruler of that place, collecting some thousands of mountaineers, his subjects, proceeded to the assistance of the chiefs of Khybur, and rumour say that his intention is to commence hostilities in conjunction with them, against the chief of Peshawur.

HYDERABAD IN SCINDE.—Mahomed, son of Meer Kurim Ally, and Meer Soohedar, son of Moraud Ally, owing to their youth, were imprudent enough to send Col. Pottinger, on his arrival in Scinde, a message, that if the Colonel wished to build a house there adapted to mercantile business, having no more than ten or twelve individuals stationed in it, no body would be opposed to it; but should he be engaged in getting troops together, the Aumeers of Taulpore were prepared to meet him with an army consisting of fifty thousand cavalry and a hundred thousand infantry. On this the Colonel, with two other gentlemen, removed towards Catch-bhoje, the possession of Rajah Narain Sing, who is under the protection of the British. Meer Noor Mahomed and Meer Nusseer, the principal chiefs of Scinde, on hearing this intelligence, felt very much annoyed, and were inclined to put the youngsters in chains, and, apologizing for what had happened, to request the gentlemen to return.

CAUBOOL.—One of the servants in the employ of the ruler of Caubool has written to his family to the following effect: "I intended to accompany the Hindoos on the occasion of their proceeding to bathe in the Gunga, but a host of Aumeers having come forward and represented to his Highness that such of the Hindoos as had left the empire last year, on a similar occasion, never returned having settled at Peshawur, and that the probability was very great, therefore, that those who would be allowed to go this year would follow the footsteps of their brethren, it was ordered to be proclaimed by beat of tom-tom, that people going by themselves were quite safe, but if they took their wives and children with them, their property, would be plundered and their homesteads demolished. The Hindoos were thus prevented from going upon the pilgrimage."

MADRAS.

LORD ELPHINSTONE AND THE NUWABS.—Lord Elphinstone paid his first visit of ceremony, on the 9th instant, to the Nuwab at Chepauk Palace under the usual salutes; and on the 13th, their Highness the Nuwab and the Naib-i-Mookhtar returned his Lordship's visit. Lord Elphinstone has accepted the office of Patron of the Madras Agricultural and Horticultural Society, and had expressed his anxiety for the welfare of the institution in very strong terms.

ESCAPE FROM A TIGER.—Lieut. F. Hughes, of the 7th Light Cavalry, had a narrow escape from a tiger on the 23d of March, between the stations of Jubbulpore and Kamptee. He was in the act of stooping to get a flower from the jungle, about two hundred yards from the road-side, when he heard a rustling noise behind him. He immediately turned his head to see what it was, and beheld a huge tiger within a few yards of him. In the fright and hurry of the moment, when endeavouring to rise, he trod on the skirts of his dressing gown and fell backwards. He was at the same moment seized by the brute, which caught him over the waist band of his trousers in its mouth. In this position the beast was dragging him, when he got his hand into his pocket and drew a small double-barrelled pistol, which he placed as direct for the animal's mouth as the position in which he lay would admit, fired, and in an instant he was free, for the tiger made a tremendous spring forward carrying with it the clothes which it grasped. Lieut. Hughes was raised from off the ground before the cloth gave away.

APPOINTMENT OF ADJUTANT-GENERAL.—It is currently reported that the appointment of Adjutant-General has been referred to the Supreme Government.

RED HILLS RAIL-ROADS.—The temporary Red Hills Rail-road has been already complete though for a time rendered useless in consequence of a portion of the embankment of the Canal having given way immediately where the railroad joins on it, requiring in consequence the former to be carried on somewhat further. The temporary railroad itself has cost Government 50,000 rupees. It only extends from the Red Hills to the Canal, a distance of about 3 miles and a half, and is qualified only to bear a weight of a ton and a half. To be made a permanent structure that is by exchanging the wooden for iron-stone or laterite supports, it will cost some fourteen or fifteen lakhs of rupees more.

INSURRECTION IN THE NEGAPATAM JAIL.—A serious insurrection took place recently in the Negapatam jail. Prompt measures were taken by the principal Assistant Collector, Mr. Forbes, for the suppression of the tumult, which was only effected after four of the prisoners had been killed and several wounded. The poons behaved very steadily on the occasion.

THE PUMBUM PASS.—The most favorable reports have been received from Colonel Montieth, respecting his operations in the Pumbum passage. He appears to have deepened it in some parts to the extent of three feet, but to what length or breadth the work has extended is not stated.

CAPT. LANGLEY.—Captain Langley of the 31st Regiment L. C. has, by sentence of a court-martial, been dismissed the Service. The charges preferred against this officer spring out of some money matters concerning the mess of his corps.

OFFICE FOR THE RECEIPT OF BULLION.—The Bengal Government have at length intimated their intention of establishing at Madras an office for the receipt of bullion instead of restoring the Mint. The only coinage that will hereafter be carried on at Madras, will be the manufacture of copper pieces. Mr. Bannister, the late talented Assay Master, is to resume his office.

DISASTERS TO SHIPPING.—In consequence of a strong current and a heavy swell in Madras roads the Mermaid ran foul of the Samuel Browne and both vessels received considerable injury by the concussion in coming in contact. The Bolton and the Mermaid were subsequently nearly driven ashore, and but for timely aid from the master attendant's office, would infallibly have been lost.

SCHOONER RUN AWAY WITH.—On the night of the 12th April the schooner Susan parted from her anchor and cruised about the roads till another was put on board. During the forenoon the parted anchor was found by the Master Attendant's people and delivered to the schooner; meantime a dispute arose between the owner of the vessel, Mr. Gabriel, and the Master, which ended in the Master being discharged by the owner. During the night the Master got the vessel under weigh and was out of sight before daylight. He has carried off a considerable amount of property belonging to his owner, besides the cargo, and sailed without a port clearance.

CAPTURE OF THIEVES.—A gang of thieves, which had for a long time been carrying on its depredations in the cantonments, has been apprehended, through the exertions of Captains Osborne and Wheeler.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—On the 4th instant an attack was made upon the palankeen of a traveller. Mr. Laver, between the seven Pagodas and Vanien's Choultry, about 23 miles from Madras. No very great violence appears to have been used on this occasion, but the robbers were not scared from their object by Mr. Laver's discharge of a pistol for the purpose, and on his quitting the palankeen they effectually rifled it.

MURDER OF A SHERISTADAR.—The head Sheristadar of the Collectorate of Vizagapatam was lately barbarously murdered near a village about fourteen or fifteen miles from that place. The deed was perpetrated at 9 o'clock at night, when the unfortunate man was travelling in his palankeen on duty with the Collector. No trace of the assassins has been found.

INVASION IN CANARA.—On the 5th of April the town of Mangalore, in Canara, was invested by two large bodies of Coorgs; the whole force in the town amounted to only 200 sepoys. A vessel, the Eamont, fortunately, was passing at the time, to which signals of distress were made, and Mr. Bird, the judge, and Mr. Dumergue, the only civil Englishmen in the place, together with their families, went on board. The town was soon after attacked and Major Dowker, having so small a force at his disposal, was unable to prevent many houses from being burnt and the prisoners in the jail being released. Major Dowker at length ordered an attack, and the Coorgs were finally repulsed and driven to their boats with considerable loss, one of their chiefs being taken prisoner who subsequently died. A reinforcement from Cannanore was anxiously expected. The treasure had been saved. The lost sustained by Major Dowker's force, in killed and missing, was 33 and 9 wounded.

The Coorgs, since their defeat in the attack on Mangalore, have not dared to make any head against us; and troops are being rapidly sent to the site of hostilities, whose arrival will, it is believed, wholly subdue the rebels.

HAIL STORM.—On the 30th of March, Secundrabad was visited by a severe hail storm, which entirely destroyed many of the gardens. The crystals of hail were of a very large size, some being six inches in circumference.

MEDICAL SCHOOL BUILDING.—The new building which is being erected near the General Hospital for the purposes of a Medical School, is proceeding very rapidly, and bids fair to be very ornamental as well as useful to Madras. The situation is excellent, being seen to great advantage from every part. The Lecture Room, which faces the East, is to be covered with a skylight, having a dome top which will serve to distinguish the building at any distance.

PORTO NOVO IRON.—It is said, that the Porto Novo Iron Company have received from England most satisfactory assurances of the qualities of their iron, which appear now to be so generally known and approved, that there seems every probability of the manufacturers scrambling for it as it comes into the market.

CEYLON.

THE SMALL POX.—This horrible distemper still continues to rage with unabated violence in the neighbourhood of Colombo.

BOMBAY.

TRIAL OF MR. GOLDSMID.—Mr. Goldsmid, a Civil Servant and Assistant to the Principal Collector and Magistrate of Poona, was charged with having committed an assault upon a Kulkurnee, employed in the collection and adjustment of the revenue with the cultivators, in the course of which duty a squabble, accompanied with blows, having taken place between the Kulkurnee and cultivators, both parties ran into the Court where Mr. Goldsmid was sitting, each charging the other with assault; but the Kulkurnee, from having been in a sort of Irish minority, was so severely beaten as to be unable to speak any more. Mr. Goldsmid imagined, that the state of insensibility in which the Kulkurnee appeared to be, was counterfeited to avoid any interrogation which might lead to his detection, and accordingly to rouse him, after in vain endeavouring to get an answer from him, struck him two or three blows upon the face with a bridle, when he fell down. Mr. Goldsmid immediately placed him in a palkie, sent him off to his house and reported the circumstances to Mr. Mill's, the Principal Collector and Magistrate, who sent a European surgeon to attend the man. In a few days afterwards he died, and Mr. Miles having reported the circumstances most fully to Government, a bill was presented against Mr. Goldsmid for manslaughter which the Grand Jury ignored upon, but found one for assault. Upon the case being called on the 15th ultimo, and the evidence heard, the defendant was discharged on paying a fine of ten rupees.

ROBBERY.—Two jewellers of Ahmednuggur, who were going to Toka with pearls worth 2,000 rupees, were severely wounded and deprived of their property, by robbers in the Ellora forest.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—The Commander-in-Chief and Staff, returned to Bombay on the 18th of March, and landed from the Hon'ble Company's ship Typtes under the usual salute from the fort. His Excellency visited the whole of the Northern territory under the rule of the Bombay Government, viz. Kattywar, Cutch and Guzerat, with all the Military Stations and Troops in those Provinces, and finally embarked at Surat for the Presidency.

The charge made by Mr. Murphy, of the Commander-in-Chief having induced his arrest, is incorrect.

THE GUICOWAR.—It is said that an imperative call has been made upon the Guicowar by our Government, requiring him to pay the arrears and restore the annual allowance of the sons of the late Gungadhar Shastree Patwardhum to the guaranteed sum of 60,000 rupees, which was retrenched to 48,000 rupees at the time of the late septennial arrangements, and was totally withheld for the last three or four years, since the public avowal by the British Government of the justice of their claim and of its intention to put them in possession of their rights. The balance due to the family of the Shastree, amounting to several lakhs of rupees, is to be paid from the Guicowar's share of the Kattawar and Maheekanta tribute, should the Durbar of Baroda not discharge it within fifteen days.

NEW TONNAGE SCALE.—The new tonnage scale came into operation on the 1st of April.

TRAVANCORE FREE SCHOOL.—The Rajah of Travancore, acting under the advice of Colonel Fraser, the enlightened and talented Resident, has established a free school in Trevandrum for all who are disposed to learn English. He has also erected an observatory, and appointed Mr. Caldecott, formerly of Bombay and late Commercial Agent at Allepey, Astronomer. A class for chemistry is about to be opened by Dr. Dalmshoy, the medical gentleman attached to the Raja. A valuable library of books is being collected.

MALPRACTICES IN COURTS OF JUSTICE.—Mr. Sutherland, the ex-member of Council, and a present judge at Surat, has lately forwarded a report to the adawlut at Bombay, of various malpractices which had for a series of years been carried on in the Court over which he presides, and of the means adopted by him to clear the Augean stable of its filth.

BURMAH.

DEATH OF THE KING.—Letters received from Rangoon, communicate the intelligence of the death of his golden-footed Majesty, the King of Ava. The event is said to have been followed by civil commotions, and the country is represented to be in a most disturbed state. Trade was stopped, and all communications between the capital and Rangoon were entirely suspended. The British and foreign merchants were seized with consternation and dismay at the imminent danger which threatened an immediate alienation of their property. Were it not for the powerful influence of the British Resident, they would have been deprived of all that they earned during many years of toil and trouble. Colonel Burney's name is a sufficient passport for protection both of life and property in these eventful days of anarchy and confusion. Timber, it is feared, will not be allowed to be exported for a time, in consequence of the existing disturbances.

The following is an extract of a letter dated Rangoon, 1st April, 1837.

"The prevailing reports here as to the proceedings at Ava, are very contradictory; we have had no letter from Ava since the 4th ultimo. It is the opinion that the Prince of Tharawaddie will succeed, but what his object is, or what may be the ultimate result, we can form no correct opinion. If the existing state of things lasts much longer, I foresee that the wealthy inhabitants will wish to have a stronger and a better Government than can be formed out of the elements at Ava."

SUMATRA.

PADANG.—Letters from Padang, up to the 17th of February, mention, that the Dutch had defeated the Padress at Boonjal and sacked that town. The Boonjalites had divided into two factions, one had succumbed to the Dutch, the other, led by the Hadjee Etums had devastated the surrounding country and taken to the mountains, where they still continued to defy the Dutch power to subjugate them. All remained quite on the whole of the west coast of Sumatra, but it was expected that this tranquility would not be of long duration, as the people detested and abhorred the Dutch yoke, and cursed "not loud but deep" against Mynheer, were muttered on all sides.

SINGAPORE.

Singapore papers to the 25th of March, mention, that the pirates had not been deterred from the prosecution of their evil courses. A native of the island of Seantan, deposed at the Police office of Singapore, that the crews of fourteen Illanoon pirate boats, had recently made descent upon the district of Battu Etam, where he and his family resided, and after capturing them and committing some depredations at Pulo Jamajah, had proceeded to Pulo Tinghy and captivated several other persons. The informant escaped from the marauders, after being about two months a prisoner. The Wolfe had been actively engaged in the search after the corsairs in the Straits, and had captured and sent twenty-two trading vessels to Singapore, on account of their being found at sea without passes. This vigilance on the part of His Majesty's ships, and the arrival of the steamer Diana at Singapore, cannot fail greatly to intimidate the pirates from the pursuit of their career of crime; but the Singapore Free Press states, that piracy in the Straits seems likely to be brought to a close by other means, as the Tummongong lately waited on the local authorities at Singapore, and intimated, that the remnant of the piratical community at Gallang, being fully persuaded that the English were determined to terminate their predatory pursuits, were desirous of establishing themselves under the British protection at Singapore, and there pursue an honest livelihood for the remainder of their lives. The decision of the local authorities respecting these men, had not transpired.

The notorious Achinese piratical state-bark Baggiana, which had recently been committing serious aggressions against the British flag, under the directions of the Rajah Mouda of Achien, has been captured by the Dutch men-of-war, which had been sent to Achien to demand the restitution of the guarda-costa schooner Dolphin, and the surrender of her crew (by whom she had been cut off from Padang roads, with treasure on board, and taken into Achien,) and taken away, in retaliation of the conduct of the Rajah in harbouring the crew of the Dolphin and refusing to restore the vessel. The gunner of the Baggiana was dismissed by the Dutch, and having made his way to Penang, related the circumstance of the capture of the craft.

CHINA.

By the Rob Roy, Canton papers to the 11th of March have been received. From the state of affairs in China at the date of the last advices, anticipations of receiving intelligence of importance from that country were entertained; but they have been disappointed, as the papers received are principally filled with European extracts long since published here, and furnish nothing in addition to what we were previously in possession of, with the exception of the intimation that the viceroy had issued another edict, prohibiting vessels from anchoring at Cumsing-moon, and directing the Chinese naval commanders to fortify the different stations with artillery, and fire upon the foreigners who, being cognizant of the prohibition, should still contumaciously persist in anchoring in the interdicted harbour. We suspect that the "outside barbarians" are now too well accustomed to the fulminations of His Highness to pay much regard to them, and that, therefore, the last issued edict will be treated with the same degree of respect that which its predecessors experienced. The hopes entertained of the opium trade being ultimately legalized, seem now to be almost entirely abandoned. The report of an edict having been issued by the Emperor, for the legalization of the trade for one year, which was brought here by the Antonio Pereira, on the eve of the last opium sale, proves to be entirely false. Two more hong merchants had been imprisoned, on a supposition of having been concerned in the smuggling of a Sycee silver, to prevent the issue of which from the country, the Chinese authorities had become more than usually vigilant. The quotations of opium were, Patna per chest, old Sp. drs. 840 a 850: new 780 a 790. Benares old 750; new 710 a 720. Malwa old 650; new 650. Turkey 580.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From the Bengal Hurkaru Price Current, April 29.)

RICE.—Accounts from all quarters are still most discouraging; the unusual drought and heat which now prevail, have completely burnt up a large portion of the sowings, and no rain having fallen since our last, another week has of course been deducted from the period which remains for sowings and maturing that large proportion of the crop, which has still to be put in the ground before the setting in of the periodical rains, and the usual rising of the rivers.

RAW SILK.—The demand for this article under unfavorable accounts from home, is still languid, and prices consequently continue to look down.

SILK-PRICE GOODS.—The market for these, also continues exceedingly dull, and prices are giving way.

COTTON.—Importations are extensive from the Upper Provinces; but operations are restrained by the unfavorable accounts from England and China, and prices continue to give way.

SALTPETRE.—There has been a slight improvement in the demand of this article for the English and American markets, and the prices of some of the assortments have slightly advanced.

SUGAR.—The purchases in this produce are confined to a few transactions of secondary quality for shipment to Bombay, and our quotations remain as in our last.

LAC.—A few transactions in Shell have been reported since our last for the American market.

The market continues dull, and prices have given way.

GRAIN.—The demand for Rice and other grain, has been somewhat limited, and prices continue without alteration.

OPIMUM.—Transactions in the bazar are limited, a few chests Patna at 1615 per chest, being the only reports since our last. A re-sale of uncleared lots to the extent of 200 chests of March sale, was commenced with on Monday last, at the Exchange, but it was discontinued after two lots had been sold at 1485 rupees, in consequence of the first purchasers having come forward to clear their purchases.

The Red Rover, Cowajee Family and Ruby are daily expected from China, and should they bring any favorable accounts, the prices here will immediately have a start, from the accommodations granted by the Government in postponing the last sale of the season, conditionally to the 9th June next.

BLOCK TIN.—Without sale, and prices remain as last quoted. We notice an importation of 1,003 slabs per the Fanny from Penang.

PEPPER.—Has been in limited request. We quote the price of Malabar a shade higher than in our last.

MACR AND NUTMEGS.—Without transactions. The former is quoted at an advance on previous rate.

TURKEY RED AND ORANGE YARNS.—Without sales, and remain without any change in prices.

CHINTZES.—The market continues inactive, and the prices remain without alteration.

WHITE COTTONS.—The market as regards demand and prices, may be reported as in our last.

WOOLLENS.—Nothing doing in these, and prices remain unchanged.

COPPER.—There has been a slight enquiry during the week, for Sheathing Bolt and Nails, the prices of which have advanced a trifle. We have no change to report on the rest of the assortments.

IRON.—The prices of several of the assortments of the metal are quoted at a further slight advance on last week's rates. Some sales are reported with the occurrences of the week.

MEMORIAL OF THE 4TH REGIMENT NATIVE INFANTRY.

The Memorial of the 4th Regiment Native Infantry, to the Honorable the Chairman, Deputy Chairman, and Court of Directors, of the East India Company.

Berhampoor, 30th March, 1837.

HONORABLE SIRS.—Your memorialists beg, on behalf of their brother Officers and themselves, to express their grateful acknowledgments for the consideration evinced by the Honorable Court in the increased scale of retiring pensions lately promulgated to the Armies of India, but they would respectfully remark that, as the benefits of the same necessarily presuppose an actual service of 35 years and an age, ranging from 52 to 60 for the highest annuity, your memorialists are anxious to be permitted to aid in establishing a Fund which shall ensure a competent provision before so advanced a period of life.

Your memorialists readily acknowledge, that the military Service of India, holds forth many advantages; but to the great majority the attainment of situations of emolument must always depend upon rise to the higher ranks, which the present system of keeping the senior grade of the army always stationary, without increase or absorption, except by natural demise, renders very slow and precarious.

3. Your memorialists are humbly of opinion, that the Fund proposed by Mr. Curnin, is the only feasible mode of amending these defects, without encroaching on the revenues of the country.

4. The consideration shewn to the Civil and Medical branches of the service, induces your memorialists to hope, that your Honorable Court will not be disposed to shew less indulgence towards their military servants, most of whom, serving abroad for many more years on far smaller pay, are incapacitated from acquiring a sufficiency to render their retirement to their native country on a competency possible; not to mention a provision for their families, for whom India offers few openings; while it is not assuming too much to suppose, that many of those available in Europe, are pre-occupied in favor of men whose lives have been spent, and whose connections have been strengthened in their native land itself.

5. It may not be irrelevant, in order to shew that we, your memorialists, are not actuated by inadequate motives in our present appeal, to state, that within little more than two years after this memorial shall be laid before your Honorable Court, every Lieutenant of the 4th Regiment Native Infantry will have attained the brevet rank of Captain for 15 years' service, and that consequently but few of those, who may survive to enjoy the benefits of the retiring regulations, can hope ever to attain the rank of field officer regimentally; and while we trust that our own energies may long preserve us from falling into that apathy, which a want of a due infusion of promotion, so far as it can be given without burthen to the state, has an acknowledged tendency to produce in all military bodies, we cannot but feel that shut out alike, as is but too probable, from the honors as from the emoluments of our profession, a time may come when the prospect of retirement upon some such fund as we now solicit, may be more suited to the views and capabilities of some of our body than the duties and responsibility of a tardy promotion.

6. In conclusion, your memorialists respectfully yet ardently solicit, that your Honorable Court will no longer defer some explicit declaration of its sentiments on this, to us, so important point, which has caused and still continues to keep up great excitement in all ranks; and should your Honorable Court deem fit to restrict its approbation to but a modification of the principles laid down by Mr. Curnin, or even still further to limit its sanction to a retiring fund for its military servants, that it will be pleased to make known its final sentiments and decision, and relieve your memorialists from the prolonged anxiety and expectation on this subject, which have, we conceive, not only operated to produce individual excitement, but also, from vague ideas of forthcoming advantages, have been highly instrumental in retarding the interests of the army at large, and the promotion fairly to be expected from sources already in operation.

Signed by every Officer present with the Regiment.

The officers 4th N. I. have forwarded to Mr. Curnin their contributions at 4 per cent. on their pay, &c. and all allowances as unanimously voted by all now present with the corps, who approved of that gentleman's plan in 1836, at the meeting, when the above memorial was drawn up as a mark of their high sense of his zeal and services.—Hurkaru, May 10.

THEATRICALS.

LE ROSSIGNOL.—ROBERT LE DIABLE.

We scarcely know how to commence our observations on this magnificent music and scenic treat. Our head is stuffed with a mass of recollections, the intense vividness of each reminiscence trenching so upon the impression made by her sister who preceded her into the recesses of our cellular sensorium, (we hope the doctors will not laugh :) that we can for this once say that our pia mater is impregnated with a chaos of beauties such have never found their way there on any previous occasions. Vive Mademoiselle Léméry, and may the shadow of the demoniacal Welter never be less. All praise and honor be the meed of the indefatigable Thonon; and hallowed be the flute of Philip Delmar. Bright be their apotheosis when they shall shuffle off this mortal coil, and may they dance from earth to Elysium in a Mazurka, and wander during an eternity of bliss through the shady groves and yellow meads of Asphodel of Elysium, with a chorus of Nightingales to greet their arrival, and a diurnal banquet of dear Mrs. Grange's best and freshest strawberry water, to cool them after their exertions. Quite unequal are we to the task of giving a critique of Robert le Diable. We must see it again, and again, ere we make the attempt. But such of the flowers as we may succeed in culching from out the fertile field of our recollections, we will endeavour to give, for the benefit of those whose hard fate led them to stay at home on Saturday last. Taking, however, the liberty of observing primarily to such Pendez-vous mes braves, nous avons Combattus, et vous n'y étiez pas; by which we mean to say, annihilate yourself, oh! ye musical Dilettanti, ye have missed Léméry's scenes in the Rossignol, and Delmar's flute obligato accompaniment, with about fifty other delicious things; all of which ye might have enjoyed, had ye been so minded! So to despair and die is all that is left for ye. And now to our reminiscences. Mademoiselle Léméry was absolutely great: her execution was neat, clear, sharp and distinct; her tones argentines, her chromatic slips and slides, as smooth and polished as the surface of a mirror. In the Rossignol her acting was almost equal to her singing, and in Robert her singing gave one no time to think of her acting. She put us in mind of Sontag and Cinti. Her Chief duo with the flute, was the absolute perfection of instrumentalizing the voice, the converse of vocalizing an instrument; which is, believe, thought to be the great perfection of playing. It was an admirable performance and we thought, if it be possible, P. Delmar's achievement still more wonderful than hers. Never do we remember to have heard a more complete piece of fluting—round, liquid, pure, in perfect and irreproachable tutti. The artist was in consequence duly rewarded at the conclusion of this piece, with a most vehement and separate round of applause. Fluery and Welter were excellent, as Maturin and le Bailli; and Lubin, albeit the music was too high for him, in this as well as in the part of Rambaud in Robert, was in his acting, excellent and energetic as he ever is. Fluery was, we thought, occasionally unhappy, in the every high passages of Robert le Diable's music; but his acting was admirable, and we certainly never saw any thing better dressed, in perfect taste, and splendid indeed. One might have supposed a picture of Duke Rollo, starting from the canvass, and stalking forth on the stage. The music of this part in the hands of Fluery, was upon the whole very successfully given. He sang throughout the carousing and gambling scene, with excellent effect. We have mentioned the scene and flute accompaniment in the Rossignol, we must not forget to mention Isabel-la's (Léméry's) grand display in Robert, where she gives a series of tour de force, running up consecutive arpeggii as it were chords of octaves and tenths. This piece of execution was perfect of its kind. Welter, who bears on his Atlantean shoulders the whole burden of the 3d and 4th acts, was very great indeed; and his acting, even where he had nothing to do, but to look and attitudinize, was most demoniacally and diabolically excellent. We cannot stay at present, to particularize, but his invocation was splendidly given. The Cloister Scene was truly beautiful, and picturesque. The concluding scene with the Ghosts of Nuns in shrouds, (exchanged for petticoats, of truly Ballet dimension) and of holy Friars, all giving themselves up to dance and "Libations," was shortened, we imagine, as both actors and audience were fatigued by the extreme length of the performance, and warned by the clock presented to the Theatre by Manuk, the munificent, that Saturday night had merged into Sunday morning.

The whole thing was much too long. It began nearly an hour too late. The Rossignol came first, (of necessity we suppose because of scenery and machinery) but it would have been better to omit it altogether, even at the sacrifice of the finest fluting and singing of the Evening. The orchestras, both before and behind the scenes, were very, we might almost say infernally good; and the wonder is how even Thonon's marvellous tact, talent, and activity, could have drilled them into a tolerable performance of such difficult instrumentalizations—what a pity that so much labour should be thrown away, on a single performance! A piece of this sort, as we had need to say of the Italian Opera two years ago, should be played half a dozen times to approach any thing like perfection.

We learn from the Englishman, that this is the last appearance of Mademoiselle Léméry—we cannot however suppose the information to be correct. In the event of her departure what becomes of the representation of the whole of Robert the devil, announced for the benefit of Monsieur Welter? We do not wish to enter into Green-Room discussions; but good faith, and plighted promises, however often broken in love, at least ought to be kept in music, and without Léméry there can be no more Robert the Devil. The Opera would bear repetition, even in Calcutta, at least half a dozen times. The house was not very well attended, which we are sorry for.—Hurkaru, May 8.

ROB ROY.

Absence from town, entirely prevented our giving in Saturday's paper an account of the meritorious exertions of the men of the Camerouians in behalf of the European Female Orphan Asylum. The performance, however, possessed too many favorable features to be passed over in silence even at this distant date. The Balie Nicol Jurvie, by a Mr. Glasgow, was as good a bit of acting as the Indian stage has produced. The words came as glibly and naturally from him as if he had been the son of the deacon, "young Nick" himself! His action was quiet and characteristic, and he possessed that invaluable key to the risibility of an audience, —an utter unconsciousness of his own drollery. We hope he will often be engaged to perform. The character next in order of merit was Major Gubraith by Mr. Hay. His drunkenness was perfect. The very point of his sword and the very tip of his feather shared in the general disguise. The Dougal, by a real McGregor, and the pipes, and the chorus singers, and Jean MacAlpine, and the hostess of the inn who served out "the stirrup cup," were all exceedingly good in their way,—worthy of a much better audience than was collected to greet their labors. In the afterpiece, which we could not stay to see, the representative of Rob Roy, Mr. Cousins, made, as we are told, an admirable Teague. His acting in the first piece, was rather tame and ineffective, but it is said, that he more than atoned for this by the spirit which he threw into the Irishman. The quaker ladies and Obidah are reported to have been excellent.—Englishman, May 8.

MADE DE LIGNY'S ENTERTAINMENT.

On Thursday evening Made de Ligny's entertainment took place for the benefit of this engaging artiste. The house was not very well attended, but we believe a great many of the most distinguished members of the great world (of Calcutta) patronised although they did not attend, so that we may, we hope, congratulate the fair Beneficiaire upon the result of her exertions. Of the performance of Le Chalet we have on former occasions spoken—it lost nothing by repetition; this is in good sooth a very elegant production. This pleasing composition, was followed by a thing called Killing no Murder. We shall merely say of it that it lasted from about 10 to nearly 12 o'clock, and that the killing and murdering (of the audience) was perpetrated with a degree of remorseless perseverance and unflinching barbarity, such as the records of Chowringhee have not heretofore chronicled. We hope the charity of the audience will induce them to forgive, and we trust they may forget, this abomination. The recollection of it would be sufficient to keep people away from the Theatre for the next twelve months. Alas! for our poor Drury! The piece is of the Bartholomew Fair order, and the dialogue, as given on Thursday, replete with vulgarity, and what is worse, with vile, vulgar English double-entendres of the most unequivocal impropriety; and then there was such howling and grunting, barren buffoonery, and gratuitous absurdity, as never yet was presented to mortal ken, at least by any one but the great departed Richardson of Greenwich and Bartlemy Fair celebrity. And all this too, under the very nose and apparently in defiance of those in whom the controlling power in these matters is said to reside, the managers.

We really do think that after this specimen, it is high time that something like a Censorship should be established; some one manager ought to inspect the pieces it is in contemplation to perform, and inasmuch as the good taste of the Amateurs (at least as exhibited in Killing no Murder) cannot be depended upon, the introduction of such objectionable passages, as were of frequent occurrence on Thursday evening, should be deprecated, and the text submitted for inspection previously to the performance, in order that it may in future be ascertained upon whose shoulder the blame ought to rest, whether upon those of the author or of the Amateurs. If on the author, the good taste of the censor would at once enable him to see that the coarse double entendre and low ribaldry which may suit the galleries of a London Theatre is not calculated to gratify or improve a Calcutta audience, and the pen and scissors would be duly put in requisition; and if upon those of any particular Amateur, upon the fact being brought to his notice it is to be hoped that the party thus offending would in future abstain.

It appeared to us, that in Killing no Murder, one it not two of the amateurs, presuming upon their popularity, were pleased to introduce what is termed "Gog," i. e. they substituted their own "faciões," to use a very gentle term, in lieu of what was written for their respective parts; for we cannot suppose that any dramatic author would deliberately pen the things uttered on Thursday evening, and it we are mistaken, and the équivoques and coarseness in question are really part of the text, we can only say, that it would have been in much better taste had they been omitted. By the time "Killing no Murder" was over, two-thirds of the audience, tired or disgusted, or both, retired, and Le Chansons de Béranger were presented to a very small auditory; those who did stay, however, appeared much amused. Madam de Ligny, appeared first as a wet-nurse, the most élégante of the whole tribe, and then suddenly, in accordance with the dialogue, she changes with a hey, presto, into a fairy! but such a fairy! never since the days of the Danish shepherd before the assembled Goddesses on Mount Ida, has there been a more perfect representation of that beauteous and learned Phrygian. Helen might have been mistaken; and Venus herself, his boar spear and buskins considered, might have mistaken him for her own Adonis in the most succinct of his Tuniques de Chasse: the fairy then becomes the goddess Fortune, in another and if possible as pretty a costume as that of the boy-fairy. In all these parts the vivacity, grace, and cleverness of Madam de Ligny were as usual very agreeably manifested. Fradin, as Paillass, Le Roi D'Grelot, and Le Juge de Charenton, was most facetious; his activity and grace as Paillass, his naive imbecility as the King of Grelot, and his volubility as the French lawyer, were positively astonishing. It was one of the cleverest things we have seen him do, and speaks volumes for his versatility. Much of the wit, satire and point of the dialogue, were, we suppose, necessarily lost to the audience; it consisting in all sorts of political allusions and references to the songs of Béranger, which, all witty as they are, must still of necessity retain about them a sort of interest local and Parisian, and, scarcely therefore calculated for the meridian of Calcutta. However, the personation of the various characters assumed by the two accomplished artistes we have named, appeared to afford great amusement and the curtain dropped at about 10 minutes to one amidst the din of as much applause as the remaining elegant extract of the original audience were capable of creating. The Theatre was positively quite cool, and so long as this the present breeze now blowing continues, ladies and gentlemen need fear nothing from the heat, and can gratify, without the slightest inconvenience, their taste for dramatic amusement.—Hurkaru, May 20.

J. M. Hill, Esq.,

The following gentlemen were proposed, viz:—

Sir B. Malkin, proposed by Sir E. Ryan, and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Francis Robinson, Esq., C. S., proposed by M. A. Bignell, Esq., and seconded by Dr. Wallich.

Samuel Oram, Esq., of Hanskallee, proposed by William Storm, Esq., and seconded by John Bell, Esq.

A. Oram, Esq., of Nuddeah, proposed by W. Hickey, Esq., and seconded by J. Allan, Esq.

Edward S. Hodges, Esq., and Henry Graham, Esq., of Khalbolya Kuehaugur, proposed by William Storm, Esq., and seconded by John Bell, Esq.

W. A. Shaw, Esq., of Bhauglepore, proposed by John Allan, Esq., and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

N. B. E. Baillie, Esq., proposed by William Storm, Esq., and seconded by J. Allan, Esq.

The Secretary read the report of a sub-committee, on the question of awarding medals "to the producers of the best samples of the staple products of British India." After some slight alterations suggested by the Chairman, on the motion of John Allan, Esq., seconded by Dr. Strong.

Resolved.—That the report be approved and adopted, and that the conditions be publicly announced.

The gold medal is to be awarded for the best samples of Raw Sugar, Cotton from foreign seed, Silk and Tobacco from foreign seed.

The silver medal is to be awarded for the second best samples of these products.

A report was brought up from the Agricultural Committee, in reference to the suggestions offered by them at the last General Meeting, on Mr. Storm's motion, to improve the breed of Cattle and Sheep in India generally, and particularly in Bengal.

The report, which was read at last Meeting, was ordered to lay on the Table, and although on a subject of vital importance to the Agricultural and Commercial interests of India, it had not been called for by a single Member.

Mr. A. Grant proposed, that it should be ordered to have a further respite of two months, as objections were taken to the site proposed, on the grounds of inconvenience and dampness, which by a Members present was thought an insuperable objection to the successful development of a superior breed. This objection was met by Mr. N. Alexander, who stated that the best horses in India had been bred in Bengal.

The Committee having left the computation of expense, as an after-consideration, their present view being to attract the attention of the Society to the utility of the measure, the President proposed, the reports be re-submitted for further consideration, and that the following gentlemen be requested to join the original Committee, viz. Messrs. Walters, N. Alexander, Robison and Dr. Huffsagle, with liberty to add to their number.

Sir E. Ryan stated, that he had received a letter from Sir H. Fane, in reference to an application made to Mr. C. Paulett Thompson, based on a resolution of the 10th February, 1836, to insure a regular supply of Cotton seed from America. The importance of the subject is duly recognized by the lively interest, which Mr. Thompson has infused among the influential merchants and others in England, who have cordially co-operated with the Horticultural authorities, and the Society is led to expect shortly the first despatch of seed, via England, thence by the overland couriers, and another direct from Boston or New York.

Dr. Strong proposed, and was warmly seconded by all present, that the special thanks of the Society be offered to Mr. Thompson for the great interest, and trouble he has taken in the matter.

Mr. W. C. Crane, submitted some very fine specimens of cotton grown at Singapore, from upland Georgia seed, which he had received from this Society in October last, and from seed received from Manila. A pod of the latter was without exception the most perfect, beautiful, and largest, ever grown or seen in India. Mr. Crane terms it "Manilla Cotton."

Another beautiful specimen of cotton was exhibited by Mr. G. Prinsep, grown in the Sunderbuns, without care, from seed (Peruvian) presented to this Society by Mr. Jas. Crooke on the 8th June last. The fibre of this cotton is long, fine and strong, and easily detached from its black seed. Mr. Prinsep had only a single plant, but is husbanding the seed, with a view to its further propagation; and there can be little doubt that the Peruvian cotton, will prove a valuable addition to our Foreign acclimated cotton.

Mr. E. Stirling, exhibited some cotton in the pod, grown at Fernando Po, by a Gentleman who had sent a quantity of the crop to England. This appears to be a superior kind, easily detached from the seed.

Memo.—Dr. Wallich expressed a wish to multiply this seed, by planting the few pods presented, in the Society's Nursery, and received it from the Secretary for that purpose. It is probably fresh, as Mr. Stirling received it on visiting the Island in February 1837.

The same gentleman presented some strange seeds from the Island of St. Jago, one of the Cape De Verd Islands. The fruit is described as particularly fine, and reckoned to possess greater perfection than those of the Azores.

Mr. Robison proposed, and it was resolved, to forward the seeds to Mr. Ingles at Sylhet, who takes great interest in Horticultural pursuits. Dr. Wallich took also a few seeds for trial at the Botanical Garden.

Very fair specimens of cotton were presented, the produce of the Society's Nursery, viz. "Upland Georgia" from seed sown on the 4th October 1836, came up on the 8th idem, and gathered in May. "New Orleans," from seed sown on the same day, sprung up on the 8th idem, and gathered yesterday.

The Secretary read a letter from Mr. A. Millet, to his address, dated 18th April, presenting six musk melons reared in Entally, which he had distributed to several members, whose opinions were all in favor of the superior flavor of this melon, compared with any heretofore produced in Bengal. Mr. Millet had also sent specimens to other Gentlemen, who reported favorable of their quality.

The Secretary had personally inspected Mr. Millet's bed of melons, which occupied about a beegah of ground, and appeared to have been very carefully cultivated; even to the necessity, of purchasing water for the purpose of irrigation.

A second letter, which had been drawn up by desire of the Secretary, was read, detailing the mode of culture adopted, but wanting (as Mr. Alexander noticed, who had devoted much attention to melons) in the most essential point—manure.

The meeting was unanimous, in its desire to encourage such experiments, and on the motion of the President.

Resolved, that a silver medal, and two hundred rupees, be awarded Mr. Millet, for his exertions, and with reference to the expense be had incurred in making the experiment.

A few copies of the first part of vol. 4. Society's Transactions, were received by the Secretary, during the business of the Meeting, composed of Dr. McClelland's report on the Geology, &c. of Assam, but the superscription on the envelope and title page being incorrect, the pamphlet was ordered to be kept back until another envelope be printed.

Read a letter from Mr. Secretary W. H. Macnaghten, dated 18th April, forwarding, by desire of the Right Honorable the Governor-General of India in Council, copy of further notes by Dr. Campbell on the Agriculture of Nipal proper, together with a memo. by that officer on the state of arts in Nipal.

MEMO.—THIS PAPER IS NOW IN THE PRESS.

Read a letter from Dr. Wallich, dated the 2d instant, annexing extract of a letter from Professor Royle, dated London 8th December, 1836, on the subject of caoutchouc or Indian rubber, which has become an article of immense consumption in England, with a letter from the Secretary to the "London Caoutchouc Company," and several copies of a prospectus issued by the said Company, also a bottle of Caoutchouc, made by the natives of Para, and a wooden model of the form in which the substance is required to be made, giving instructions regarding the preparation of the India rubber, and stating that the Company have offered a reward of £50 to any person who will send them a cwt. of the article collected in our East India possessions.

Memo.—A large export of the article has already commenced at Calcutta, which clearly demonstrates, that the powerful incentive to all human action, self-interest, will do more for the advancement of commerce, than the most costly medals that can be devised.

From James Prinsep, Esq., dated 4th May, forwarding, by desire of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, a copy of the Caoutchouc Company's prospectus, with a duplicate of the block already adverted to.

Proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Storm, and resolved: That a copy of this prospectus be forwarded to all branch Societies throughout India, and that the Editors of Journals be solicited to transfer the prospectus to their columns, in order that the utmost publicity be given to parties anxious to embark in the speculation.

From Capt. H. Macfarquhar, of Tavoy, dated 10th March, forwarding a specimen of Hemp, grown in his garden from a few shoots received from Col. Barney, of Ava, and desiring an opinion on its quality, &c.

From Capt. J. D. Syers, dated Cuttack, April 9th, intimating the establishment of a branch Society at that station, of which he is Secretary.

From T. Campbell, Esq., dated Midnapore, 8th May, communicating the formation of a branch Society at that station, under the joint management of Dr. O'Dwyer and Mr. Campbell.

From Mr. J. W. Masters, forwarding a paper, formerly written by him on the treatment of peach trees, with additions from subsequent experience.

From M. P. Edgeworth, Esq., dated Loodianah, 24th April, furnishing a description of a sugar mill termed "Kulare," used in that part of the country,—speaks favorably of the Otaheite cane and the successful vegetation of Upland Georgia Cotton seed.

From Major J. A. Moore, of Hyderabad, to Sir E. Ryan, dated 7th May, forwarding a box containing three non-pareil apples, grown in his garden, which were in great perfection, as fresh as when pulled, and of flavor highly approved by the Meeting.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 6th May, presenting in the name of Dr. Wight of Madras, a circular drawn up and printed by that gentleman, with preparation and introduction on a more extended scale in India, of the same plant.

From the same, dated 9th May, enclosing a note to his address, from Capt. Jenkins of Gowhatti, forwarding a sample of "Creole Rice" from seed presented to this Society by Mr. Piddington, and of sugar manufactured at that place by Mr. Grange. The sugar is of very good quality.

From H. Walters, Esq., dated 8th May, forwarding a series of replies, drawn up by the Revd. Mr. Williamson, (with reference to the Beerbhoom District) to the queries lately circulated by the Agricultural Society of India.

From W. Liddell, Esq., Secretary to the Madras Society, advising the despatch of a plough, which was exhibited at the Meeting, incomplete. Several members thought the sum (100 Rs.) paid for it exorbitant.

From Capt. Jenkins, dated Gowhatti, 7th April, to the Secretary, acknowledging the receipt of seeds, and offering some interesting remarks on grasses. Capt. Jenkins argues satisfactorily, that poverty is the chief cause of bad pasturage in India, and the effect is equally carried through every branch of Agriculture.

From W. Munro, Esq., Secretary to the Bangalore Society, dated 9th April, acknowledging the receipt of seeds, &c.

From W. Blundell, Esq., dated Moulmein, 2d April, forwarding samples of cotton, reared from Perambuda seed, of very good quality; but Mr. Blundell thinks not sufficient in quantity to tempt cultivation on a large scale.

From Rajah Kalikrishna, presenting a sample of arhur dhal, grown in Zillah Tipperah. The Rajah is solicited to procure some of the seed.

From J. J. Diawell, Esq., dated Boston 15th December, 1836, stating that the second dispatch of maize, which he hoped to have forwarded by this conveyance, had not yet been received.

From His Highness Nawaub Tohewerjung, dated 28th April, presenting a specimen of cotton grown in his garden, from seed received from the Society.

From Mr. Laitin, of Shahabad, dated 19th April, undertaking to supply seed, so as to reach the Presidency in September.

From Mr. Waghorn, dated Cairo 27th January, acknowledging the receipt of his election as an Honorary Member of this Society.

Promises to speak to the Pasha, on the subject of being permitted to send more Cotton seed.

From Dr. Campbell, of Nipal, dated April 19th, forwarding the 8 original specimens of soil alluded to in his notes on the Agriculture of Nipal.

Resolved that Mr. J. W. Masters be requested to furnish the Society with an analysis.

Mr. Masters took away the sorts for this purpose.

Specimens of "sycepodium," from California, were presented by Mr. Bignell, which Dr. Wallich promised further to report upon.

A pod of Cocoa, presented by Nawaub Tohewerjung.

The thanks of the Society were ordered to be offered for all these contributions.

JOHN BELL, Secretary.

Town Hall, Calcutta May 10, 1837.

[Harkar, May 12.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

Wednesday Evening, 3d May, 1837.

The Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, President, in the chair.

Colonel D. Macleod, Engrs., M. A. Bignell, Esq., Capt. S. F. Hannay, and Dr. W. Griffith, were elected Members of the Society.

Dr. J. Swiney and Lieut. M. Kittoe, 6th N. I., were proposed by the Secretary, seconded by Capt. Cunningham.

Professor O'Shaughnessy, proposed by Dr. Corby, seconded by Sir E. Ryan.

G. W. Bacon, Esq., C. S., proposed by Dr. Falconer, seconded by Mr. Macnaghten.

Francis Robinson, Esq., C. S., Futtahgurh, proposed by Captain Forbes, seconded by Mr. Macnaghten.

The Bishop of Cochinchina returned thanks for his election.

Read extract of a letter from Major Troyer, the Society's Agent at Paris, proposing that honorary membership should be conferred on Baron Schilling of Gressstadt, the Mongolian and Tibetan scholar.

Major Troyer mentions that M. Guizot, Minister of Public Instruction, is about to sanction a yearly grant of about 2,000 francs, for procuring copies of Sanskrit manuscripts from Calcutta. The study of the Oriental languages is increasing fast on the continent, and a fresh supply of our publications intended for on London has been immediately disposed of. Captain Troyer's French translation of the Raja Tarangini would not issue from the press under a year, on account of the difficulties of printing the Sanskrit text.

Read a letter from the Secretary to Government, General Department, directing the packages of Oriental books to be sent to the Export Ware-house-keeper, and passing the bill for their package, rupees 17.

The Secretary reported the death of Behadur, the pensioned farash of the Museum, who had been on the establishment since Sir William Jones's time. He was with his wife burnt to death in one of the late dreadful conflagrations.

Antiquities.

Read the following letter from Lieut. Markham Kittoe, 6th N. I., dated 2d April, announcing that in compliance with the Society's desire he had visited Khandgiri, or order to re-examine the inscription published by the late Mr. Stirling.

(We have not room for this letter.—Ed. C. C.)

Read a letter from Lieutenant Sale, Engineers, dated Atahabad, in April, forwarding a fac simile taken on cloth and paper of an inscription at Kalinjer, situated at the entrance of a temple of Mahadeva.

The Secretary exhibited Mr. Vincent Tregate's splendid collection of the Gutta gold coins, which had been intrusted to him for the purpose by the proprietor, whose zeal in this line of research had been attended with remarkable success.

Physical.

The Secretary noticed that the bill drawn from Malacca on account of a Tapir, had been presented and accepted for rupees 226 12—but the animal had not yet made his appearance.

M. Chevalier, mineralogist of the corvette La Bonite, requested the Society's acceptance of a series of Geological specimens from Cornica.

Lieutenant Kittoe presented specimens of the rocks in Cuttack:—also a snake (Coluber Mycterizans?) in spirit.

Lieut. Kittoe in another note, mentions the discovery of extensive coal beds in Ungool and Hindoos, near the Kursoos and Byturnee rivers.

The existence of the mineral at these places had before been made known to the Europeans, and specimens had been produced. Lieut. Kittoe was anxious to visit and survey the locality, that he might report in further detail, as, if conveniently situated for water carriage down the Mahanaddi, the coal might be made available for steamers touching at Poores. The coal and iron mines are together:

Letter from Professor Royle inclosing Prospectus of the London Caoutchouc Company, and inviting the Society's attention to this new commercial product, which might be cultivated to any extent on the Silhet frontier and in lower Assam.

The present supply, from Para chiefly, is many thousand tons less than the demand for home consumption. The mode of gathering the juice for export followed at Para is approved of, but the Company of Patentees recommend in lieu of the clay balls, that wooden cylinders about the size of a quart bottle should be used. First dipped into clay water, they are immersed in the crude juice and hung up to dry; the dipping is thus repeated until a layer of Caoutchouc $\frac{3}{4}$ an inch thick covers the cylinder about 6 inches high—this exp (shaped like a tumbler) is then drawn off and the cylinder used again.

The preference given to the solid clean rubber, is doubtless consequent on the discovery of a very cheap solvent of Caoutchouc in the volatile coal-oil, which is collected in large quantities at the gas-works. When rectified it resemble in lightness and extreme volatility the distilled mineral naphtha, with which it is probably identical. The Caoutchouc dissolved in this menstruum, and spread in a coat between two folds of silk or cloth, regains its solid and elastic form without injury. Might not the naphtha springs of Assam be thus turned to account to introduce the manufacture at once there, with the durable silks of the valley as a basis? Professor Royle remarks, that all the trees on which the silkworm feeds are found to contain the Caoutchouc principle, which is supposed to be essential to the production of the cocoon.

The splendid fossils from Dr. Spilbury of Jabalpur, had arrived and were exhibited.

They consisted of the humerus and cubitus of an elephant, upwards of 15 feet in height; also a portion of the pelvis of the same animal; a very perfect elephant's head, ferruginized, of a smaller size, and the head and horns of a buffalo of large size. Dr. Spilbury pointed out no less than five new sites of fossils in the Nerbudda valley, two of them due to the zealous search of Major Ouseley.

A paper on a new general of Raptore, one on a new species of Scolopariæ, and one on a new genus of the Plantigrades with a drawing, were received from B. H. Hodgson, Esq.

A second fossil bone was exhibited and presented by Major Taylor, brought up from the Fort boring at a depth of 362 feet below the surface.

A drawing of this fragment is given in Plate XXII: it appears to be a fragment of the scutellum or shell of turtle—much resembling some of the fragments found so plentifully among the Junna, the Siwalik and the Ava fossils. It is mineralized just to the same extent as the bone exhibited at last meeting; sp. gr. 2.5, loss by heating red 10 per cent. A recent fragment found at the Sand-heads by Dr. Cantor, which had lost all its inflammable animal matter, had a sp. gr. 1.66.

The following specimens of natural history were presented.

A collection of shells, and two snakes preserved in spirits; by Mr. Fell, Indian Navy.

A collection of shells, by Lieutenant Montriou, I. N.

A specimen of Squilla Mautis, by Lieutenant Montriou, I. N.

A specimen of the Indian Sucking-fish (Echenies Indica), and a foetus of a species of ovi-viviparous shark preserved in spirits, by the Hon'ble Colonel Morison, in the name of Mr. W. Ewin, Branch Pilot.

Mr. J. T. Pearson exhibited to the Meeting specimens of the larvæ, pupa and imago of the Lamia Rubus. Fab. and a log of the horse-radish tree, from which he extracted them.

The second experimental year of the Curatorship having expired, Dr. Pearson read the subjoined report on the operations of the Museum for the past year.

Report on the Museum of the Asiatic Society, by the Curator,—May 1837.

At the conclusion of the term of my charge of the Museum last year, I stated the improvements that had been made; and how much it was to be desired that it should not be allowed to fall back into the state in which

I found it twelve months before. I am now again called upon to report progress, and to request your attention to form some arrangement by which the evils I then deprecated may be averted, and an improved method adopted, if you wish to alter that which has been followed for the past two years.

The present state of your Museum may be mentioned in a few words. The arrangements of last year have been followed out, by improving the appearance of the apartments and by matting the floor; while by free ventilation the dampness, from which so much inconvenience was formerly experienced, has altogether disappeared. No enemy now remains, indeed, but the dust, which does much mischief by settling upon the specimens, and giving a dingy appearance to them; as well as by frequent cleaning being required, and the inevitable injury to which they are in consequence exposed.

Improvements have also been made in the cabinets. They have been all glazed and made ready for the reception of specimens, save one, which is nearly completed. The subscription now on foot for this part of the Museum will render it all that can be wished.

A great number of specimens have been presented during the year; but owing to the insufficient means taken by their presenters to preserve them, only a portion could be made available to the purposes of the science. I may here state that, preparations, whether of skins or of insects, which have not been preserved by arsenical soap, or by some preparation of arsenic, are not proof against the attacks of insects in this country; even the so much vaunted solution of corrosive sublimate in spirits of wine is, as I have found after a fair trial, to be almost useless. But of the specimens presented, there have been mounted two hundred and thirty birds, ten of which are of large size; twenty eight mammalia, and sixteen reptiles; eight skeletons have been prepared and articulated in the Museum; viz. those of the Orang-outang, the cow, the ass, hog, adjutant, two terrapins and a turtle. These are complete, with the exception of the first; and those who know by experience the labour of preparing and afterwards of joining together, or articulating at it is technically termed, the bones of a skeleton especially in this country, will be able to appreciate the labours of Mr. Bouchez, to whom the praise of executing the manual part of them belongs. The bones of the Orang-outang were presented by Mr. Frith, but the hands and feet having been unfortunately lost, they were restored in wood from those of the Sumatran gigantic ape in the Museum.

Besides the articulated skeletons, there have been presented twenty-two other osteological specimens; consisting of the skulls of mammalia and birds, the jaw of a whale and the legs of the Emeu.

The other specimens consist of a few reptiles and fishes, and a considerable number of insects and shells.

Independent of the above, Mr. Hogson of Nipal sent a series of upward of eighty well preserved skins of birds, with the intention of their being placed in the Museum, as the originals from which some of the plates of his forthcoming great work have been taken; but circumstances having rendered it desirable to send them for the examination of a naturalist of eminence in England, they were on his promising speedily to replace them, delivered over, by directions from the Secretary, for transmission there.

With regard to the financial arrangements, the Secretary did not think himself empowered to advance for contingencies any sum beyond that voted by the Society. But that sum being nearly absorbed by the salaries of Mr. Bouchez and his nephew, who is employed to assist him, I have paid the remainder of the charges myself; and in this manner expended Co's Rs. 136-15-6, more than I have received.

A few words may be expected from me as to the future management of the Museum? Much has been urged against expending the funds of the society for this purpose; and a strong protest on the same side, signed by five Members, has also been given in. So far as my own feelings are in question, I shall be happy to yield to this or any other view of the subject taken by the majority. Although I do not agree with those who think money ill expended, which is expended upon an object that contributes to further the pursuits of any considerable portion of the Society. And my respect for the protest would not have been less had it been signed by the older Members of the Society, instead of by those who had been elected only two or three months before the proceedings took place, against which they thought proper to protest; who mistook the mere lodgment of money in public securities for a vested fund; and who had not, I believe, any one of them, ever seen the Museum previous to, or since the new arrangements were made! Under these circumstances I am not inclined to allow much weight to the protest, nor to sacrifice our Museum in accordance with the views of the protestors. It is true, a substitute for a Curator has been proposed in a committee, each member of which should undertake a particular department; and as a body assisting with their advice, and superintending the operations of the Curator, such a committee would be of great service; but as an executive engine, a committee is always worse than useless, and I anticipate nothing but failure in the scheme. If your Curator is not a paid and responsible officer, you will, in effect, have no Curator at all; and if you have no Curator, you will have no Museum; while I am sure a Museum is, in the present direction of men's minds towards natural history, essential to the well-being, if not even to the existence of the Society. If our own funds cannot support our Museum as it should be supported, we ought to apply to the Government to assist us; when, judging from the liberal views of science taken by the present Governor-General and the anxiety he has evinced to encourage that of natural history in particular; coupled with the fact that the Court of Directors have ever been the patrons of zoological pursuits; there is little fear of our making the application in vain. I think the advantages of adopting this plan would be great and manifold; our Museum would be placed on a vigorous and permanent footing; and be the means of enhancing the prosperity of our institution and of conferring no light benefit upon the public: while we should soon be able to wipe off the reproach so repeatedly and justly thrown upon the name of Englishmen in the East, — of leaving to distant nations the task and the honor of gleaming in our own field the treasures of natural history, which we ourselves are indifferent and too ignorant to reap.

J. T. PEARSON.

Resolved, that the Report be referred to the Committee of Papers for the purpose of drafting such arrangements as the Society's funds may permit for the maintenance of the Museum of natural history on the most efficient footing. — Courier, May 19.

MEETING OF THE MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, on the 6th May, 1837.

Letters from the following Gentlemen were read.

From G. Angus, Esq., Surgeon, 41st Regt. N. I.; J. Row, Esq. 73d Regt. N. I.; and T. Russell, Esq. Asst. Surgeon, 1st Light Cavalry, requesting that their names might be withdrawn from the list of Members.

From J. Bowron, Esq., Civil Surgeon Jessore, stating that certain circumstances induced him to withdraw from the present from the Society.

A Letter from Mr. Mackinnon of Tirhoot, containing an account of a case of Lithotomy performed by him. The case was interesting, because in first sounding the patient the stone lay in the neck of the vesica, and was partly impacted in the urethra so as to impede the passage of the sound into the bladder. In performing the operation, no urine followed the cut along the groove of the staff until the bladder was divided by another incision in the direction of the external wound, no water was discharged nor could the stone be extracted.

A second Letter from the same Gentleman stated, that since he wrote the above communication, he had performed another Lithotomy operation, in which there was so great a prolapsus of the anus, that it was impossible to make an incision of sufficient magnitude, in consequence of which there was considerable difficulty in extracting the stone.

C. Hufnagle, Esq., M. D., of Calcutta, was proposed as a Member of the Society by Dr. Goodeve, seconded by Dr. O'Shaughnessy.

M. Le Chevalier Fortune Egdoux, of Toulon, was proposed as a corresponding Member by Dr. Goodeve, seconded by Dr. O'Shaughnessy.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy proposed M. Oersted as an Honorary Member, seconded by Dr. Cantor.

Dr. Swiney was elected President of the Society in the room of Dr. Langstaff, who vacated the office by proceeding to the Cape.

The following Communications were then presented.

1.—A case of Phlegmasia Doleus, by J. Taylor, Esq., Dacca.

2.—A supplement to the account of Scurvy, published in the last volume of the Society's Transactions, by Dr. Macnab.

3.—A case of Lithotomy, by A. K. Lindsay, Esq.

4.—Account of the Remittent Fever now epidemic at Bareilly, by H. Guthrie, Esq., presented by the Medical Board.

5.—Proceedings of the Medical Society of Bombay.

Dr. Goodeve communicated an account of the removal of an enormous tumor weighing 60 pounds from the Scrotum of a native, the operation terminating unsuccessfully.

Dr. Mackinnon's cases of Lithotomy presented at a former Meeting, were then read and discussed.

The first case has been already published in the India Journal of Science.

The second was a man of 45, of Luco phlegmatic habit, upon whom attempts to perform Lithotomy had been previously made by Dr. Davis, of Patna, but it had been found impossible to succeed on account of the irritability of the bladder. The Lithotomy operation was performed in less than 3 minutes. The rectum was wounded which Dr. Mackinnon attributes to the staff having been grooved on the back rather than at the side. This causing the knife to slip readily from the canal. In accordance with Desault's advice, the whole was afterwards made into one wound by a stroke of the bistoury. The patient left ere the perineal wound had quite healed up, so that it was impossible to state whether the incision in the rectum will heal entirely.

The 3d case was a man of 40. Attempts to perform Lithotomy were likewise made upon this individual, by Dr. Mackinnon, but the irritation and pain produced by the trial, induced Dr. M. to resort at once to Lithotomy; the operation was readily performed, and the man did well.

The 4th case was a boy of 5. During the operation, prolapsus of the bowel occurred, but it produced no unpleasant consequences. The wound in this case shewed such a disposition to heal, by the first intention, that it was necessary to tear the edges open with a probe. Dr. Mackinnon much prefers the common scalpel to any other species of cutting instrument for this operation. He deprecates the employment of the blunt gorget as useless.

ORIENTAL LIFE INSURANCE.

A half-yearly Meeting of the Oriental Life Insurance Company was held to-day, when, by the report of the Secretaries, it appeared—

That the policies granted since the 31st October last up to 30th ultimo amounted to.....Rs. 4,63,740
That policies had been discontinued during the same period to amount of.....Rs. 3,96,840
That the policies granted in lieu of those renewable amounted to.....Rs. 2,87,600
That the risks out-standing on the 30th ult. were upon 441 lives and amounted to Rs. 60,95,376
The average on each life being.....Rs. 13,822

That the amount of policies lapsed during the preceding six months was.....Rs. 1,07,946
That, besides a cash balance of Rs. 1,003, the Society possessed Company's paper to amount of.....Rs. 4,79,386 and was consequently in a condition to appropriate Rs. 66,666 to a dividend, still retaining above four lakhs, the average amount of 18 months losses, according to the terms of its constitution.

Resolutions were then passed to the following effect:

" That the accounts are satisfactory and be passed."

That a dividend of 66,666-10-8 be made—50,000 among the 500 shareholders and 16,666-10-8 on return of premium.

That the Agra Bank be permitted to hold the unappropriated 50 shares in the Society on the terms proposed by them.

That the Arracan clause be continued in all policies.

That the rate of insurance on the lives of Members of the Civil Service, be reduced one-sixth, to bring it on a par with other institutions; and that the premium on the lives of Commercial men and others not exposed to the hazard of Military and Naval life, be regulated according to the situation and circumstances of the parties, at the discretion of the Directors.

That Mr. A. Muller and Mr. J. Colquhoun be appointed Members of the Committee in the room of Mr. G. J. Gordon, and Mr. B. Harding resigned."

The high state of prosperity this institution now exhibits is in remarkable contrast with its position two years ago, when its capital in hand was reduced to about a lakh by an extraordinary run of lapses. Since then a surplus income has been steadily accumulating in a rapid ratio, the present annual amount of premiums being Rs. 3,44,923,—the number of risks on the increase, notwithstanding the competition of the Universal,—and a better average obtained by reduction of the risks of large amount.—Hurkaru, May 8.

UNION BANK MEETING.

At a meeting of Proprietors held at the Bank on Saturday the 6th May, Captain Vint in the Chair—Captain Bruce, the Chairman of the Directors, addressed the meeting to the following effect:—

Gentlemen,—The present general meeting is called specially, under our 68th rule, which requires that no fundamental alterations shall take place in the conditions of our deed, except they be first carried by two-thirds of the votes present at a general meeting, specially called with previous notice of the alterations proposed, and subsequently confirmed by a like majority at a second general meeting, specially and publicly convoked for the purpose.

The object of the meeting this-day, is, accordingly, to confirm the unanimous Resolutions passed at our late special general meeting of the 4th April for increasing our capital stock. These Resolutions will now be read by the Secretary, and if they are confirmed by you, I shall have to recommend, by desire of your Directors, one or two subsidiary Resolutions, for carrying into effect the proposed increase of stock.

The Secretary then read the following resolutions and propositions of the 4th April, 1837.

Proposition 1st.—That the present six hundred full shares of Company's rupees 2,700 be increased to 3,000 each, and that the present six hundred supplementary shares be increased from 900 to 1,000 Company's rupees each.

Proposition 2d.—That upon these subscriptions being paid up, the old full shares shall be divided into three shares of 1,000 each; making the whole number of these 1,800; which together with the 600 supplementary shares, will make in all 2,400 shares, of 1,000 rupees each or 24 lakhs of rupees.

Proposition 3d.—That to the above 1,800 shall be added 600 new shares of 1,000 Company's rupees each, or 6 lakhs; making a grand total of 3,000 shares of 1,000 each or Company's rupees thirty lakhs.

Proposition 4th.—That the 600 additional shares of 1,000 now to be created shall in the first instance be offered at par to such Proprietors of the old full shares, as agree to their increase from 2,700 to 3,000; that is to say, that one of the new shares shall be offered to the holder of every original share, who pays up the increase on or before the 30th June, 1837. After that date, any shares not taken up as above, shall be offered to public competition and the premium placed to account of profits.

Proposition 5th.—That on the additional 100 Co.'s Rs. being paid up by the holder of each supplementary share, the holder of such shares to be entitled to vote, and be considered in all respects, as if he were the holder of one of the new shares of 1,000 Rs.

Proposition 6th.—That the following be the scale for voting in future, considering each share of 1,000 Rs. as conferring a single vote; 3 new shares or 3,000 Rs. stock 2 votes; 6 ditto or 6,000 Rs. 3 votes; 10 ditto or 10,000 Rs. 4 votes; 15 ditto or 15,000 Rs. stock 5 votes; 20 ditto or 20,000 Rs. 6 votes; 25 ditto or 25,000 Rs. 7 votes; 30 ditto or 30,000 Rs. 8 votes; 40 ditto or 40,000 Rs. 9 votes; 50 ditto or 50,000 Rs. stock and upwards 10 votes.

Proposition 7th.—That the greatest number of shares to be held by any Proprietor, which is now fixed at 50 of the old 2,700 Co.'s Rs., stock or equal to Co.'s Rs. 1,35,000, be hereafter fixed at 100 of the new 1,000 Co.'s Rs. stock or Co.'s Rs. 1,50,000.

Proposition 8th.—That the period within which absentee Proprietors must pay up their additional stock, be for those in Europe, the 30th June, 1838 and for those at the Cape, China, &c. the 31st December, 1837. But any absentee Proprietor returning to India before those dates, shall be required to pay up within one month after his arrival.

Resolution.—Moved by Mr. Dick, seconded by Mr. McKilligan:—

"That the Capital be still further increased 2 lakhs, i. e. from 30 to 32 lakhs, and that every holder of 3 supplementary shares be also entitled, (after paying up his difference in all his stock,) to the offer of a fresh 1,000 Rs. share; and that proposition 4th be modified accordingly."

Resolution.—Moved by Mr. H. M. Parker, seconded by Mr. W. R. Young:—

"That the propositions, (modified by Mr. Dick's amendment) for increasing the Capital Stock of the Bank, as recommended by the Directors, are hereby approved by this meeting; and that they be laid before a Second Special Meeting of Proprietors in due course, for final confirmation and adoption."

I now beg to move as the first Resolution of this-day.

Resolved 1st.—That the Resolutions passed at the special general meeting of proprietors on the 4th April, 1837, be and hereby are confirmed.

Captain Bruce continues :

I am instructed from the Directors to state to you, that they have received communications from certain considerable Proprietors in the Mofussil; (and indeed also in Calcutta), intimating their expectations that some indulgence as to prompt payment may be shewn to the large holders of stock, in carrying into effect the increase of our capital.

Your Directors are desirous of meeting the wishes and convenience of the Proprietors to any reasonable extent. We do not think that any delay ought to be allowed in the matter of squaring up the old, uneven shares of 2,700 and 900, to the proposed even sums of 3,000 and 1,000 rupees, because by the Resolutions, the act of having actually paid up those differences, constitutes the qualification without which no proprietors entitled to the privilege of new Stock at par. We therefore think that on or before the 30th June, every proprietor in India wishing for new Stock must positively pay up his differences, less the amount of dividend actually due on that day, though not declared, but which may be taken roughly at 10 per cent., to be adjusted, when declared at the half yearly Meeting, and any small differences debited or credited to parties.

With regard to the new Stock, your Directors are disposed to go further, and by their desire, I propose the following Resolution :—

Resolved 2d.—That Proprietors who shall have settled for the differences on their old Stock on or before the 30th June, and who shall at the same time demand their privilege of new Stock, may pay for the same either in cash or in three equal promissory notes, at two, four and six months date, bearing interest at 9 per Cent., so that the whole new capital may be paid up on or before the 31st December 1837.

I am finally to recommend to you, on the part of your Directors, the following Resolution affecting parties who may desire to anticipate their payments.

Resolution 3d.—That proprietors who wish to pay up their new Stock or the differences on their old Stock before 30th June, shall receive 6 per Cent. on their deposits,

W. BAUER, Chairman.

The above Resolutions were carried unanimously.

It was then proposed by Mr. Dickens, seconded by Mr. Baillie, and carried unanimously.

Resolved 4th.—That in consequence of the diminution, in the amount of each share now carried, the qualification of a Director of the Bank for the future be the possession of 5 shares of 1,000 rupees.

The usual thanks were then voted to the Chairman, and the Meeting broke up.—Hurkaru, May 8.

REPORT OF THE MADRAS STEAM COMMITTEE.

Since the General Meeting of the inhabitants of Madras, held on the 23d January 1837, the Committee then appointed have received several letters from Captain Grindlay, reporting the substance of his communications with Lord Glenelg, Sir J. C. Hobhouse and Mr. Crawford, and forwarding the proceedings of the Committee at home, nominated in Bengal and acting also for Madras, by which it appears that Lord William Bentinck, Mr. Crawford (as the Members of the House of Commons who are to present the petitions,) and Captain Grindlay (as the Agent for Bengal and Madras, who were associated with that Committee, on the 10th and 17th of January last,) had most satisfactory interviews with the Chairman of the Court of Directors, and the President of the Board of Control.

The Committee have received many letters and papers from Captain Grindlay, of which the following is a brief summary. His letter of the 1st November 1836, encloses copies of letters to Lord Glenelg, Sir J. Hobhouse and Mr. Crawford, with the latter gentleman's answer. Captain Grindlay was favorably received by Lord Glenelg and Sir J. Hobhouse, who both consented to support the immediate establishment of Steam Communication with India.

On the 24th December 1836, he announced to us his intention to print and circulate a Pamphlet on the Steam Question, and to procure the publication of several articles to appear simultaneously in the leading Periodicals. "One thousand copies of the Pamphlet," he says, "will be immediately in brisk and extensive circulation throughout the kingdom, every Club, and Library table throughout London and the Provinces shall be strewed with the condensed sheet which I have published, and it will call attention to the Pamphlet, and that cannot fail to interest as well as inform."

On the 2d January 1837 he also states, that it was proposed to hold a Public Meeting in London, to be followed if successful by Meetings in all the great towns: here, he adds, "I feel the want of funds, but I will do what I can, be assured, and I see already symptoms of Change in some of the original opponents."

On the 27th January 1837, he transmits the copy of a letter from Lord Glenelg, of which the following is a transcript:

"Sir,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter with the petition from the inhabitants of Madras for the establishment of Steam Communication between England and India, which I shall have much pleasure in presenting to the House of Lords.

(Signed) GLENELG."

The Committee have also received from Capt. Grindlay, copy of a letter on Steam Communication with India, addressed to the Asiatic Journal, in which the question is ably supported, and the following passage must prove gratifying to the Public of Madras:—"The advocates of the Euphrates plan confine their views to the single station of Bombay, regardless of how large a portion of British residents in India, and of British connection would be compromised by such an arrangement, independent of Madras, Calcutta and Ceylon, being excluded from a participation in the benefit of the communication. The incalculable advantage of Steam Communication with Point de Galle, and thence with other parts of the Eastern world, would be altogether lost." The Committee consider it proper to give publicity to the whole of Captain Grindlay's last letter dated 1st of February 1837.

Daniel Elliott, Esq. }
Peter Cator, Esq. } Steam Committee, Madras.
Capt. Dalrymple. }

"I avail myself of the opportunity afforded me by the first of the month to report our progress since my last communication. The pamphlet, some copies of which I transmitted at that period, has attained very general circulation and secured a far greater degree of attention, than could have been anticipated. The public journals all over the country have been forward in bestowing notice upon it, and this fact seems to shew, that an exaggerated estimate is generally formed of the degree of apathy prevailing in England, on Indian subjects. A people so laboriously occupied as for the most part the English are, have not time to look after matters remote from their usual pursuits: such subjects must be pressed upon them. It is idle to expect spontaneous interest to arise, but with regard to India, I am persuaded that it is only necessary to bring her wants and her capabilities before the people here with energy and tact, in order to ensure to them the attention which they deserve. I forwarded extracts from the various notices, many of the papers being provincial ones, I have been able to obtain only a single copy, which or course it is desirable that I should retain. You will see also that the Asiatic Journal for February has given us a long article in which our cause is pleaded with warmth and earnestness. I have now to advert to proceedings of a more official character. On the arrival in Town of Lord Wm. Bentinck I waited upon his Lordship, who expressed a strong interest in the success of your Petition, and offered to join our Committee, a proposal to which we of course gladly assented, and we thought it desirable to add Mr. Crawford the City Member, as he is to present the Madras Petition. You are aware that it was determined to request interviews with the Chairs and President of the Board. These interviews have taken place—that with the Chairs, on the 10th ultimo—our reception was extremely favorable the Chairman and Deputy expressing themselves perfectly ready to acquiesce in the recommendation of the Parliamentary Committee that a communication should be established by the Red Sea at the joint charge of the Company and His Majesty's Government, and to recommend it to the Court; and on their being asked whether any objection existed in their minds to the calling of a Public Meeting in the City of London in aid of the plan, they answered, that they had no objection, either to that, or any other means of forwarding the object. The conference with Sir John Hobhouse was on the 17th January. Sir John referred to the proposal of the proposed Steam Communication Company in London, complained of delay in the transmission of their tender, and alleged that the Admiralty had declared it would be attended with greater expense than the existing system. He also mentioned the proposal for converting the Indian Navy into a Steam Fleet, now under consideration by the Court of Directors, but added that he believed His Majesty's Government would be willing to complete the communication to Cossier, if the Company would undertake it from thence: some little discussion then took place between Sir John and myself on the practicability of the Euphrates and the probable amount of the impediment afforded by the south-west Monsoon. Mr. Crawford expatiated at some length on the universal feeling prevailing in India, and on the Commercial benefits of the communication, and also entered into some details shewing that it could be carried into effect without loss to His Majesty's Government. The President then said, that he would take the earliest opportunity of effecting an arrangement on the subject both with the Chairs and the Court of Directors, but on the intimation that a Public Meeting was contemplated he seemed somewhat hurt, and expressed a hope, that he was not thought to require such stimulus. You will naturally be desirous to know, whether any thing has followed these fair prospects, and I have the pleasure of informing you, that the Court of Directors met yesterday on the subject, and agreed on a letter to the Board, in answer to one referring to their consideration the proposal of the projected Company. This proposal the Court have met with a decided negative, but they propose to treat with His Majesty's Government for the establishment of the Communication on the basis of the recommendation of the Parliamentary Committee. According to their view, the expense to be divided between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company, will be that between Alexandria and India, the Government carrying the Mail to and from Alexandria, and receiving in consideration thereof, the whole India Postage. It is of course impossible to predict the precise result of a negotiation which is only commencing, but the subject is now fairly before the Authorities and there is something specific to proceed upon. The present state of the question is calculated to afford some degree of satisfaction, not unmixed with doubt and alarm. I should have been better pleased, and more confident, had Public Meetings been resorted to as a means of assisting the impetus which the question has received, and I regret that they have been abandoned as you will see in No. 27, copy of my letter to the Home Committee. It appears to me absolutely necessary to take a high and commanding position, and nothing can confer this, but the influence of public opinion. We undoubtedly shew at present better than we might have expected, and I attribute this in a great degree to the interest which the agitation of the subject has excited through the country. That this interest is not trifling is attested by the tone of the public prints, and thus far at least, we may rejoice at our success. I am bringing out a second edition of the pamphlet. I have a short letter in preparation especially addressed to Members of Parliament, and some other papers will be put in circulation to keep up the interest which we have succeeded in securing. Lord William Bentinck has left Town again, being attacked by the prevailing Influenza: immediately on his return, we shall make arrangements for presenting the Petition. You will believe that neither partial success nor partial disappointment will produce any relaxation in my exertions, which under all circumstances will continue to be employed under the influence of the same zeal by which I have been and continue to be actuated."

I have the honor to be, Sirs, your most obtl. servant

(Signed) R. M. GRINDLAY.

London, 1st February, 1837.

The Committee have also received several letters from Major Head detailing the progress made in the formation of a private Company in London, to which they do not think it necessary to make any further allusion, as all the material points touched upon by Major Head have appeared in the public prints, and as it appears by the foregoing letter of Captain Grindlay's, that the Court of Directors have rejected the offer made by the London Company.

The Committee have received an interesting letter from Mr. Waghorn dated 29th of December, advocating the Calcutta and Madras comprehensive scheme, and containing some valuable observation with reference Coal Depôts for this line. Mr. Waghorn is of opinion, that the obstruction offered by the South West Monsoon is by no means insurmountable. "As there is no month that the very deeply loaded Merchant Ships do not face it, I am quite aware much might be said and written in favor of the Bombay line to Suez, but considering the increased difficulties of navigating Steamers from thence in the South West Monsoon, I am led to think, it is not the spot. From Point de Galle, Bombay will have equal facilities with Calcutta and Madras; no interest is studied but that of the many, not forgetting Captain His Majesty's Fleet, China, Mauritius, and not excepting hereafter our increased interests in China and Australia."

The Committee have received from Captain Grindlay about thirty English provincial newspapers, and several periodicals containing the most unqualified approbation of that gentleman's Pamphlet, and proving in the most incontrovertible manner, that it has obtained a notoriety and awakened a spirit of enquiry and discussion on the subject of Steam Communication between England and India, which cannot fail to lead to its successful termination. The Committee feel certain that the Inhabitants of Madras, will not be insensible to the eminent services of Captain Grindlay, they beg to state, that part of the small sum placed at his disposal remains yet to be realized at Madras, and there can be little doubt, that the whole of the sum remitted to him, must have been entirely exhausted. The Committee are of opinion, that the unwearied zeal which has been exhibited by him, and the successful manner in which he has filled the columns of the London and Provincial Press with the clearest views of this great national question just on the opening of the Parliamentary Session, merit something more (in his character as an Agent) than the mere expression of thanks, however warmly conveyed, and they venture to solicit public attention to the following 5th Resolution, passed at the Steam Meeting held on the 23d of January 1837.

V. "Resolved that a subscription be entered into for the purpose of enabling the standing Committee to defray incidental expences in furtherance of "Steam Communication with England, by the Red Sea."

When the General Meeting was held on the 26th March 1836, it was expected that a large part of the Steam Fund already raised would be appropriated by the Subscribers towards the accomplishment of the object of the Meeting, and it was thought necessary only to pass the following resolution:

XI. "That a Subscription be opened for the purpose of enabling those Members of the Community who have not already subscribed to the Steam Fund to contribute means towards furthering the objects of this Meeting, and that Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. be requested to receive donations.

Subsequently, however, it was determined, that the balance of the fund should be returned to the Subscribers, and the Committee appointed by the General Meeting, have had no funds at their disposal, but the small sum of rupees 2,844 8 raised by the subscriptions of the following gentlemen:

Sir Robert Comyn.....	250	Messrs. Line and Co.....	250
Hon'ble John Sullivan, Esq.....	200	Messrs. Barrow & Co.....	250
Lieut. Col. Monteith.....	150	Mr. P. Copley.....	40-12
A. D. Campbell, Esq.....	100	Captain Hine.....	50
Messrs. Parry, Dare & Co.....	200	A. Maclean, Esq.....	81-8
"Arbuthnot & Co.....	250	W. Ashton, Esq.....	100
Major Walpole.....	25	Capt. C. Dalrymple.....	50
Captain J. Maitland.....	25	Daniel Elliott, Esq.....	100
Messrs. Binny and Co.....	250	P. Cator, Esq.....	100
N. B. Acworth, Esq.....	100	W. Liddell, Esq.....	50
Jas. Ouchterlony, Esq.....	50	R. D. Parker, Esq.....	40-12
		C. Guichard, Esq.....	81-8

Previous to the realization of this sum, Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co most handsomely furnished a Bill on England, amounting to £300, which was forwarded by the Committee to Captain Grindlay, and the receipt of it has been acknowledged.

As no farther sum has been subscribed the inhabitants of Madras are indebted to Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co as under:

The Bill for £300 cost.....	Rupees 3,001
Amount realized.....	2,844 8

Balance due to Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co.. 156 8

The standing Committee appointed at the last Meeting of the 23d January 1837, deem it consequently necessary at the present time to solicit subscriptions agreeably to the resolution above quoted, and under the present cheer-in aspect of affairs, they confidently rely on the unabated zeal of the Madras Community, to come forward anew in support of this great national object.

Steam Committee—Madras Spectator, April 26.

THE NEW BENGAL STEAM FUND REPORT.

Report of the Committee to the Subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund and the Petition to the House of Commons, and Memorials to the Board of Control and Court of Directors.

The Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund deem it their duty to make known to the subscribers to the Fund, and the petition, the further progress of events at home.

Since the last report, rendered to the public meeting held on the 18th February, 1837, they have received regular monthly communications from Capt. Grindlay, via Egypt, with exception to that of the beginning of January, which it is feared has been lost with the Barque Skimmer on her way to Bombay.

In the report above mentioned the committee referred to the directions which they had given for the application of an appeal to the people of Great Britain, and for the agitation of the question by all legitimate means. These directions have been followed by Captain Grindlay with great energy so far as directing public attention to the general question is concerned; but the committee regret to say that they have reason to be much dissatisfied with the tenor of his advocacy, so much so indeed, that they consider it to be most inexpedient that the interests of their constituents should any longer be placed in his hands. Copy of their resolution and of their letter, to the Home Committee on this occasion will be found at the conclusion of this report.

It appears that on his arrival in Town, in January Lord William Bentinck voluntarily offered to join the Home Committee, an Act at once demonstrative of his zeal in the cause, and calculated greatly to advance it. Previously to this the committee had associated with themselves Mr. Crawford, the city member, to whom was entrusted the presentation of the Madras Petition. Thus there was constituted at Home a Committee representing jointly the Calcutta and Madras Committees, an Union which cannot fail to be productive of advantage.

Prior however to Lord William Bentinck's joining the committee, they had had interviews with the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the Court of Directors and with the President of the Board of Control.

The former took place on the 10th January, the Chairman and Deputy frankly avowed their perfect readiness to acquiesce in the recommendation of the Parliamentary Committee, that a communication should be established by the Red Sea at the joint charge of the Company and His Majesty's Government. They further declared that no objection existed on their part to a public meeting being held in the city of London or to any other means of forwarding the object.

The conference with the President of the Board of Control does not appear to have elicited any decisive expression of concurrence in the recommendation of the Parliamentary Committee from Sir John Hobhouse; but from his having deprecated the idea of his being supposed to require the stimulus of a public Meeting, this Committee infer that he was fully prepared, on the part of his Majesty's Government, to concur in the establishment of the communication.

Finally, it is stated, that the Court of Directors have proposed distinctly to His Majesty's Government to treat with them on the basis of the commendation of the Parliamentary Committee, their view being that the expense to be divided between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company, should be that from Alexandria to India.

It remains to be seen what will be the course pursued by His Majesty's Government. It will be remembered that at the interview which the Committee of which Major Head was Chairman, had with Sir John Hobhouse, he declared that it was but an act of justice to the Court of Directors to state that on every occasion of the subject being mentioned, they had expressed their readiness to treat on the above basis, when ever His Majesty's Government were disposed to meet them. It is hence clear that the delay in following up the Resolutions of the Committee of the House of Commons, is not attributable to the Court of Directors.

The Committee have received also continued communications from Major Head, with a Prospectus, which they have been requested to circulate. As it has however been already published in the Hurkaru of the 12th ultimo, and it having been stated that the Hon'ble Court have decidedly negatived the proposition of the association of which Major Head is the chairman, it does not appear necessary now to do more than publish his last letter for general information:—

No. 6, CROSBY SQUARE,

SIR,—The letter I had the honor to address to you from this Committee on the 2d ultimo, will have shewn that a communication from His Majesty's Government in reference to the report sent to the India Board on the 1st December 1836 was anxiously sought for. To you who are aware of the many difficulties and disappointments that have been put in the way of a final adjustment of this question, and to those in England who have watched it through the many years it has been discussed, this delay will not appear extraordinary. To others who have only recently given attention to it, and who now see its several bearings, and its many claims on public attention, any hesitation to act on the reasonable and defined plan offered by this association, appears unnecessary and unjust. Doubtless, opponents to the measure are manoeuvring to damp the exertion of those who have enlisted in the cause, no such result is produced, and this Committee hope through the exertion of their friends in parliament, shortly to obtain decided information, and also, if necessary, to urge an adjustment of the measure. A matter involving as this does public and private interests to a vast extent, will not be passed over without a reasonable ground for rejection, and as we know of none, since the plea of expense has been removed, by the offer of this association; it is but reasonable to expect something decided will be done. Yesterday I had the honor of discussing the present position of the plan fully with Lord William Bentinck, whose support and assistance we are assured of. His Lordship has not seen Sir John Hobhouse since the latter received the report of this association (his having done so on the deputation on this question, as appeared in the newspapers, was not correct) he was therefore not able to speak as to the present position of the question, with His Majesty's Government, and it was his Lordship's intention to see Mr. Crawford last evening to fix a day for presenting the Calcutta and Madras Petitions. The number of signatures attached to the former is a source of much satisfaction to his lordship. In my last I alluded to various articles in the periodicals in reference to this question, and it will be seen their tendency is to urge the East India House to carry out the measure, and to do this many arguments are used to shew that the cost will be trifling "a fraction more than £10,000 a year." At the India House they are perfect masters of the real expense that would attend the establishment of Steam with India, therefore it ought not to be expected, such statements will influence parties there; they may however do mischief and have already hampered this Committee whose great claims to favourable attention was the justness and reasonableness of their demand on the India Company. Had the parties at the India House shown any disposition to meet the desire of the public on this question, and to lessen the enormous estimate of expense heretofore advanced, it would have been some earnest of a favourable desire to establish communication with India, as that has not been the case, it is to be feared that if the project is left in their hands, without a declaration on their part it will be partially done, and certainly not, on the comprehensive and useful plan desired by India.

This Association think the cause would have been best served by their liberal offer being supported by every friend to Steam Navigation with India, thereby forcing on the India House at least an equally useful measure. In which case, had the East India House become honest competitors, there would have been no question as to who should have the preference.

I hope the next communication may convey some more favourable and explicit intelligence.

I have honor to be, Sir, your very obedt. Servt.

CHARLES S. HEAD, Chairman Provincial Committee.

To the Secretary of the Steam Committee Calcutta.

On the whole the Committee trust that the subscribers will feel that they did not over calculate the effect which would be produced at home by the Circular Appeal and the other means they directed to be adopted to arouse the public feeling throughout the country in favor of the communication.

The subscribers will understand that these measures are still in progress, and the committee can only repeat their pledge to continue to use every endeavour to obtain the most efficient communication.

Nothing decisive appears as to the present purpose of the Court of Directors in respect to the ports of India to which the communication shall, in the first instance, be carried; but the committee trust that their "combined plan" will have received fair and just consideration. They hope and trust that its eminently important advantages over the mere contact at Bombay will influence the court to establish the full communication at once, that is as soon as the vessels can be prepared to embrace all the principal Ports of India. Should, however, such not be the course pursued, the Committee will not fail to make such appeal to the subscribers and the public at large as the circumstances of the case, when known, may appear to render necessary.

The following is Mr. Waghorn's reply to the Committee's letter communicating to him the grant of Co.'s rupees 4,000, on the 16th December last.

C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.

Hon. Secy. New Bengal Steam Fund.

Sir,—I have had the honor of receiving your letter of the 16th of December, communicating to me the flattering intelligence, that at a general meeting of the subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund, held in the Town Hall of Calcutta, on the date of your letter, a resolution was unanimously adopted to pay me the sum of 4,000 rupees for services connected with his Majesty's packet for the month of July.

I already owe so large a debt of gratitude to the Steam subscribers of India for favours in years past, that I almost want language to express to you how sensibly I feel this act of kindness on the part of my friends in Calcutta, and how much I owe to them for the flattering terms of their resolution; and I beg of you to assure them, that if they have had cause to think well of me for services in times past, this renewed act of liberality on their part, will be an incentive to my best exertions for the future. I go to England by this steamer (March) on urgent matters connected with this object. I shall again be found at my post in June next, meanwhile my agents at Cairo and Alexandria will do the needful in my absence.

With regard to the disposal of the above money, let me beg of you to send bills on London for the same, in favor of the house of Messrs. Joyce, Shurburn and Co. of this place, who have my instructions upon the subject.

I remain, Sir, your very faithful and obdt.

THOS. WAGHORN.

Alexandria, Feb. 23, 1837.

By Order of the Committee.

C. B. GREENLAW,

*Secretary to the Committee of the new Bengal Steam Fund.
Town Hall, Calcutta, the 1st May, 1837.*

To the Right Honorable Lord William Cavendish Bentinck, Jas. McKillop, Esq., Edward Fletcher, Esq., T. E. M. Turton, Esq., and William Crawford, Esq.

My Lord and Gentlemen,—We have been much gratified by a communication from Captain Grindlay, informing us, that Lord William Bentinck and Mr. Crawford had joined your Committee, the latter gentleman with reference to his having been entrusted with the presentation of the Madras petition. We have already caused you to be apprized that our late colleague Mr. Turton had been requested by us to associate himself with you on his arrival in England, and that he had assented thereto; we have now the honour to further apprise you, that we have written to Colonel Craigie, who has lately left Calcutta, and requested him also to join you; and knowing his zeal in the cause and his thorough knowledge of it in all its bearings, we believe and hope he will readily agree.

We are much pleased that your Committee should thus represent the two presidencies of Bengal and Madras, and it would not be otherwise than satisfactory to us if other gentlemen from the latter presidency should be added.

Nor should we be otherwise than pleased to see gentlemen from Bombay joined with you; on the understanding that the principle of operation shall be the attainment of the establishment of a Steam Communication between England and all the principal ports of India.

We are sorry to observe that Captain Grindlay has not made that principle his guide; and we have, after ample consideration of his pamphlet, and its tendency, unanimously came to the resolution, copy of which accompanies this, and we shall feel greatly obliged by your closing accounts with Captain Grindlay.

We regret that we have not been favoured with any communication from you; but, we trust you may be induced, under the embarrassing circumstances in which we are placed, to select your own agent; and, we would suggest, that whosoever you may select may be designated your secretary, and in that capacity obtain your concurrence to all his public acts. We leave it to you, as in the case of Captain Grindlay, to arrange what remuneration he shall receive.

From the communications received from Capt. Grindlay and Major Head, we are unable to obtain any satisfactory information as to the course likely to be adopted by His Majesty's Government and the Hon'ble the Court of Directors; we have reason to believe that a monthly steam communication will certainly be established between Bombay and Suez, but we fear, especially from the course pursued by Captain Grindlay, that the extension to the other ports of India will not have had that fair consideration to which it was entitled under the recommendation of the select Committee of the House of Commons. Should it have had that fair consideration, and the determination should have been to establish the communication to Bombay alone, whether permanently or with the intention of eventually extending it, then we would request that, on our part, every legitimate means may be used to obtain the extension at the earliest possible period. On hearing that such a determination has been come to, we shall lose no time in endeavouring to strengthen your hands by obtaining still further expressions of the public desire in India, and we shall continue our utmost exertions until our endeavours are crowned with success or are rendered utterly hopeless.

On the other hand, if no consideration should have at all been given by His Majesty's Government and the Hon'ble the Court of Directors to the Question of the extension of the communication to all the Indian ports, we think that the most energetic endeavours should be made here and at home, by reiterated petitions and systematic measures of agitation, to induce the House of Commons to take up the Resolutions for their Committee, and either enforce their adoption or at once set them aside.

The funds in hand amount now to 51,000 rupees, and we herewith hand you a letter of credit on the House of Sir Charles Cockerell and Co. for £1,000, which we shall readily enlarge on your requisition; only requesting that it may be strictly applied to endeavours to obtain, for all India, that extended Steam Communication with England, from which alone can those advantages be derived, which it has been aptly declared would be "cheaply bought at any price."

In conclusion, we urgently solicit the favor of your active co-operation towards the attainment of the object in view; we have here spared no exertion, but here little can be done effectually. It is at home alone that the matter can be successfully brought to issue, and if we fail in securing your active and energetic co-operation, we shall be at a loss in what way to follow up at home the views, wishes, and interests of the large portion of the people of India whom we represent.

We have, &c.

Signed by the Members of the New Bengal Steam Committee,

Town Hall, Calcutta, the 1st May, 1837.

RESOLUTION.

Resolved unanimously;—That as Captain Grindlay has not advocated the plain of extending Steam Communication to all the Ports of India, as prayed for in the petition and memorials of the Inhabitants of Bengal, entrusted to him for the special purpose of promoting that object, the Committee cannot but feel dissatisfied with his agency, and request therefore that he will bring his accounts with the House Committee to a close, as soon as practicable.

Proceedings of a Special Meeting of the Native Committee of the District Charitable Society, at the Town Hall, on Thursday the 4th May, 1837.

PRESENT.

The Hon'ble Sir B. H. Malkin, Kt., in the Chair.

Captain R. J. H. Birch; Mr. W. Balston; Mr. DeLozario; Mr. John Phipps; Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore; Baboo Rustumjee Cowasjee; Baboo Gopaul Laul Tagore; Baboo Kasiprasad Ghose; Baboo Rumsomoy Dutt; Baboo Luckinarian Mookerjee; and Baboo Callachand Bose.

After much discussion as to the most feasible means of affording relief to the most needy of the native sufferers by the late fires—

Resolved.—1. That this meeting are of opinion, that it would not be proper to apply to the District Charitable Society for the appropriation of any portion of their funds to any but the ordinary purposes of the Society.

2. That the native Committee of the District Charitable Society offer their services to enquire and administer relief out of any funds which may be entrusted to them for the relief of the present distress arising out of the fires; especially with a view to the rebuilding of the houses which have been destroyed.

3. That they recommend to the District Charitable Society, that the Members of any other of the Committees be requested to act with the Native Committee on this subject, and that the Committee or contributors, should have power to associate, for this purpose, other persons not generally subscribers to the District Charitable Society, but who may contribute on this occasion.

4. That the thanks of this meeting be given to Rustumjee Cowasjee, Esquire, for his very important communication, which, however, referring to matters of general and permanent regulation, appears rather to belong to the consideration of the Fever Hospital and Municipal Committee, to which, therefore, this meeting would very strongly recommend it for immediate consideration.

5. That the Secretary be requested immediately to call a Meeting of the General Committee of the District Charitable Society, for the purpose of considering the above resolution,

By order of the Committee,

J. PHIPPS, Secy. Nat. Com.

Proposed by the Hon. H. Shakespear, Esq., seconded by Dr. A. R. Jackson, and unanimously resolved—

1. That the Resolutions of the Native Committee now submitted be confirmed and adopted.

2. That these Resolutions be published for general information, in the daily English Newspapers and in the Chundrika and Samachur Durpan;—and that Subscriptions in aid of the sufferers by the late fires be received at the Bank of Bengal and the Union Bank, and by the Secretary to the District Charitable Society.

3. That the papers submitted to this meeting from Rustumjee Cowasjee, Esquire, through the Native Committee, and the Memorandum presented by several Native Gentlemen, whose names it bears, be likewise published.

Proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by the Hon. Sir B. H. Malkin, and resolved—

4. That the general plan, to be followed in the distribution of the funds which may be placed at the disposal of the Committee now to be formed, be left to be determined upon by that Committee, who will, however, be guided, as far as possible, by the following recommendations: viz.

That it be a recommendation to the Committee to give the requisite assistance in all practicable cases, in the form of a loan, with or without moderate interest, according to circumstances, rather than as a gift.

That in administering relief, a preference be given to persons who are willing to build tiled huts with mud or plastered walls, instead of huts with thatched roofs and mats, and to comply with any other conditions which shall from time to time be judged expedient for the general security of the town.

That ~~the same~~ which may remain in the hands of the Committee, or may be realized by them on the repayment of loans, be applied by the Committee for the general benefit of the town, especially with reference to its security from fire.

Proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by R. D. Mangles, Esq., and resolved—

5. That the best thanks of this meeting be given to Rustomjee Cowasjee, Esquire, for his very liberal offer to excavate tanks once part of the line of the Upper Circular Road, and that this meeting express a hope that other Native Gentlemen may be induced to come forward in imitation of his example.

Proposed by the Venerable the Archdeacon, seconded by the Hon'ble Sir. B. H. Malkin and resolved—

6. That the President be requested to wait upon the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, to request that Sermons be preached in the several Churches in aid of the sufferers by fire; and that a similar request be made to the Most Reverend Dr. St. Leger, Vicar Apostolic, and to the Rev. James Charles.

The following gentlemen were then requested to associate themselves with the Native Committee, for the purpose of forming a Committee for the relief of the sufferers by the late fires.

D. McFarlan, Esq., Chief Magistrate; Capt. F. W. Birch, Superintendent of Police; Capt. Vint; A. Dobbs, Esq.; H. Walters, Esq.; A. R. Jackson, Esq.; J. W. Alexander, Esq.; Mr. Balston; Mr. Lindstedt; Mr. Madge; Mr. Perkins—with power to add to their number.

Proposed by the Venerable the Archdeacon, seconded by R. D. Mangles, Esq., and unanimously resolved.—

That the thanks of this Meeting be given to the Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, for his conduct in the chair.

R. J. H. BIRCH,

Secy. District Charitable Society,

Calcutta, 4th May, 1837.

Having been present at several of the late fires that have devastated the City, I beg to lay before the Meeting a statement of facts that came under my personal observation. During the great fire that extended all along the Upper Circular Road, I particularly noticed the scarcity of water in that direction. I observed some fire engines on the spot, but they were rendered perfectly useless for want of water, there being few, if any tanks in the vicinity of the fire—the consequence was that there was nothing to check the fury of the flames, which went on consuming every hut and building in the way with fearful rapidity.

I think the Committee ought to bring this to the notice of the Government and that, too, without delay; as a more favorable opportunity for purchasing ground and digging tanks could not present itself than the present. I would recommend, that a line of deep, large tanks should be immediately dug, at convenient distances all along the Upper Circular Road, where water is more scarce than in any other part of the town. The ground might now be purchased at moderate prices, before the Proprietors have time to erect new huts on the site of those burnt down.

I think the Government ought to bear the expense; but as an inducement for them to come forward, I will undertake, if Government will buy the ground, to excavate at my own expense four large tanks between the Bhattachanah, Mirzapore and Manicktollah; and I am confident many rich land holders will readily do as much in other parts of the town.

I take this opportunity also to bring to the notice of the Meeting the great distress that prevails among the poor people, who have been burnt out of their houses. Many of these poor creatures, having lost all they possessed, have no means of renewing their habitations, and are actually starving for want of food! I have no doubt but that Government will (if it has not already) contribute liberally to their relief, but the Public should aid them in this charitable work. I know many who are ready to contribute handsomely, provided they can be assured that their contributions will be properly applied. I would suggest that a committee be appointed to enquire into the truth of the representations that may be brought before them, with full powers to aid such of the poor as actually stand in need of it. The Committee to consist of persons well acquainted with the localities of the City and the suburbs. The Superintendent of Police should be on the Committee.

It should be urged upon Government by the Committee that hereafter it be imperative on the natives to build their huts with tiled roofs—it is a mistake to suppose that the expence thereof will be much greater than thatch—especially at present, when, in consequence of the number of fires that have occurred within the last month, straw, suitable for thatching, has greatly risen in price. On an average I am persuaded that the difference between a thatched and a tiled roof will not exceed one rupee eight annas for each hut, or at the utmost two rupees. It is argued that the heat under a tiled roof will be much greater than under a thatch, and that sickness will be engendered in consequence; but how is it at Bombay and at Madras also, where the native huts are roofed entirely with tiles? You seldom hear of fires there, and I doubt if sickness be more prevalent than it would be were thatched houses used.

These are mere suggestions for the consideration of the meeting, but whether adopted or not, I am sure you will all agree with me that something should be immediately done to relieve the distressed poor.

RUSTOMJEE COWASJEE.

We the undersigned Native Members of the District Charitable Society, beg to submit our opinions that that class of Natives, who are in the habit of living in huts, having thatched roofs and walls, do not prefer them to khuprell or tiled huts, but are necessitated to build them of the former description being less expensive and coming within their scanty means, that the latter would retain heat and be in any way injurious to health is really no objection with them. If therefore means be afforded them they would certainly give the preference to tiled huts with mud walls. Those among the particular class referred to who have the means, it is known generally build khuprell or tiled huts for their domiciles.

Dwarkanauth Tagore,

The fires of Calcutta have at length subsided, from the combined operation of the rains and the want of fuel.

The Hurkaru has published an estimate, which we copy, from which it appears that upwards of 8,000 houses have been burnt down in Calcutta and the suburbs since the commencement of the present year, that within the same period and from the same cause 3 lives have been lost and property destroyed to the amount of upwards of five lakhs of rupees. This presents a dreadful state of things that calls aloud for remedy. We have not, however, learnt that any effective remedial measures are in the course of preparation or execution. The Chief Magistrate, indeed, seems to consider that any interference with the native pool in respect of the mode in which they construct their dwellings, would be harsh and oppressive, and we are so far inclined to agree with him, that, looking at the destitute resources of the majority of the population who have been rendered homeless by the late conflagrations, the Government ought not to use compulsion in a matter which will put the native to additional expense, unless at the same time they contribute assistance. The very moment when the native is rendered most destitute, is not the time to impose upon him additional burthens, add if he be compelled at such a time to incur additional expense, he ought to be aided by those who impose the duty, which might be taken back in the shape of a small rate or tax. This would occasion no ultimate loss to the Government; but what is the case with the poor man? he will be obliged to raise the money by applying to the money-lenders, for which advance he will probably have to pay 30 or 40 per cent. a month. Now, although we acknowledge it to be a sound principle, that the safety of the many is not to be endangered, to spare the pocket of one, yet we hold it to be equally true, that the one ought not to be exposed to the necessity of complying with grinding terms to himself, for the good of the many, if the many can relieve him from such necessity. The Government, who represent the many, by advancing to the poor native the means of rebuilding his dwelling, in a less combustible manner, would save him from the necessity of incurring a burthen, in the shape of ruinous interest, for the public good; and as no ultimate loss need arise to the Government, we think that if they interfere at all in the manner of reconstructing the habitation of the native, they must also accompany that interference with liberal assistance. —Bengal Herald, May 7.

Within these ten days the attention of the District Charitable Society has been incessantly engaged in collecting means for alleviating the distresses of the multitude, who have suffered by the late conflagrations. On the 6th instant a special meeting of the Society was held at the Town Hall, to consider certain suggestions of the Native Committee of the Society, for the purpose of taking measures for the relief of the sufferers by the late fires. The Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan was in the chair, and the meeting was attended by several highly respectable European, East Indian, and Native Gentlemen. The resolutions of the Native Committee and those of the meeting will be found in the Herald of last Sunday.

We regret our want of space prevents us from inserting at full length, the excellent paper of suggestions submitted by R. Cowasjee, Esq., to which reference is made in those resolutions; but the following extract containing some very useful hints, and his benevolent offer, we are certain, will be read with interest by all.

"I think the Committee ought to bring this to the notice of the Government and that, too, without delay; as a more favorable opportunity for purchasing ground and digging tanks could not present itself than the present. I would recommend that a line of deep, large tanks should immediately be dug, at convenient distances, all along the Upper Circular Road, where water is more scarce than in any other part of the town. The ground might now be purchased at moderate prices, before the Proprietors have time to erect new huts on the site of those burnt down.

"I think the Government ought to bear the expense, but as an inducement for them to come forward, I will undertake, if Government will buy the ground, to excavate at my own expense four large tanks between Baitoonah, Mirzapore and Manicktollah; and I am sure that many rich land holders will readily do as much or more, in other parts of the town."

The views developed in the above, perfectly agree with our own, as explained in the Reformer of the 30th ultimo, and we are glad to find that measures for adopting them are in progress. Last Friday evening, another meeting of the Society was held in the Town Hall. The resolutions of the Fever Hospital or Municipal Committee and the reports of three of the subcommittees were read. The facts which had been ascertained were the following; that in the late fires considerable private property had been injured by the proximity of straw huts; that the number of straw huts in the Town was about twice as many as tiled huts; that their aggregate number was about 50,000; that out of these upwards of 7,000 had been destroyed by fire during the present year; that the difference of expense between straw and tiled huts did not exceed fifty per cent.; that the Natives have no prejudice against tiled huts, and that if these were built on some regular plan, it would be conducive to the cleanliness of the town. The purport of the Resolutions was to bring to the notice of Government, the necessity of a change in the mode of building huts, and of having large and deep tanks dug in different parts of the Town.

By the report of the sub-committee of the first Division, which embraces Baug-bazar and Sham-bazar, it would appear that very few cases of distress exist. The second division sub-committee report, that in Durmahutta, Benistollah, Sham-bazar and Nimtollah, the reconstruction of huts was progressing rapidly, and that they were generally tiled. Those who were building of straw had created great dissatisfaction among the neighbours. This is certainly as it should be, and the fact furnishes a strong proof that the Government ought to consult the good of the mass of the people, and compel the few who choose to disregard it, to sacrifice private and individual views for the public good.

The report from the 4th division, in which is comprized Pol-tollah, Jaun-bazar, Puddopooker, and Gooriamah, was very full. It entered into much detail, and pointed out that no relief afforded could be of permanent benefit unless straw houses were altogether excluded from the various areas occupied by huts. The sub-committee had observed, in the course of their examinations, various spots which contained nuisances, owing to filth that had been allowed to accumulate, in consequence of the irregular manner in which the habitations were constructed, and they strongly urge the necessity of attempting a different and more systematic manner of building.

On this subject there cannot possibly be much difference of opinion, and if there be any it can regard only details and the different means of attaining the same end. All must agree that the calamity is owing chiefly to the manner in which the habitations of the people are constructed, and that the remedy lies in adopting a different, and a better mode. The necessity of compelling the people to adopt a different plan, is indicated by the loss of life and property occasioned by conflagrations every year, and the fact that unless all agree to leave off building with combustible materials, no general or permanent good can be effected.

The following are the resolutions adopted at the meeting of last Friday.

Resolved. That the thanks of the Committee be given to the Fever Hospital Committee for their communication of certain Resolutions to which that Committee has come.

Resolved. That the Committee will not give or lend money to persons whose houses are not already in process of reconstruction, except on condition of their building tiled huts, or else removing their residence to some built situation beyond the limits of Calcutta.

Resolved. Three only of the Sub-Committee having had time to make any detailed report, the meeting is adjourned till Monday evening at 5 p. m.

Sir Benjamin Malkin, was in the Chair, and the meeting consisted of about twenty-five gentlemen, among whom we observed Captain Birch, Mr. McMahon, Mr. Dobbs, Rustonjee Cowasjee, Dwarkanath Tagore, and many other respectable natives, who all seemed to take a very lively interest in the business of the evening. The south verandah of the Town Hall was filled with a large number of the poor sufferers by the late fires, who had collected there in the hope of procuring some relief. We believe this will be afforded to them to-morrow evening, when the Committee will meet again. The amount of subscriptions up to yesterday amounted to 9,294 rupees.

The exertions of the Committee on the present occasion reflect the highest credit on the gentlemen who compose it. It is indeed a great blessing to have in the city a society the object of which is to afford relief to the distressed in the most judicious and economical manner possible. In India where the proper ends of charity are so often mistaken, and alms bestowed in a manner calculated to frustrate the very objects for which they are destined. The existence of such an institution as the District Charitable Society, and the example it sets for the imitation of those who wish to relieve the sufferings of their fellow-creatures by the means which Providence has placed at their disposal, are calculated to benefit the population very materially. We sincerely wish success to all the laudable endeavours of this institution, and hope, that as education opens the eyes of our countrymen, they will extend their support to it, and thus enable it to widen the sphere of its operations.—Reformer, May 14.

At a Meeting of the General Committee held at the Town Hall on the 15th May, 1837.

Resolved.—That Captain Birch be requested to wait upon the Governor-General, to report the proceedings had hitherto, and to ascertain if possible what assistance may be looked for from Government.—Bengal Hurkaru, May 19.

At a Meeting of the General Committee held at the Town Hall on Tuesday, the 16th May, 1837.

With reference to the last resolution of yesterday's meeting, Captain Birch reports that he waited upon the Governor-General this forenoon, and that His Lordship expressed himself favorable disposed towards the objects of this Committee, and signified his desire for information on certain points, relative to the extent of injury occasioned by the fires, the pecuniary means required, the amount of private subscription probably obtainable, and the method of operation proposed.

Sir B. H. Malkin, Mr. Dobbs, and Captain Birch were requested to draw up a communication for Lord Auckland's information, of which the general heads were discussed and adopted by the Meeting.

The subjoined resolutions were then successively considered and agreed to.

Resolved.—1. That the sub-committees in the several divisions be empowered, to advance sums not exceeding one rupee to any individual, or three rupees to any family for the relief of immediate distress; and that these sums be given, where it is practicable, in new copper money;—but that the sub-committee be requested not to apply the funds in this way, except to cases of real and emergent distress, and to discourage expectation of this kind of relief as much as possible.

2. That the sub-committees be at liberty to advance, either by way of gift or loan, 15 rupees to any individual who will undertake to re-construct his habitation consistently with our previous resolutions.

3. That the sub-committees shall be at liberty to advance, in cases where they shall see any sufficient reason for exempting parties from the operation of the preceding rule, (which is, however, to be understood as the general principle on which they are to proceed) sums not exceeding ten rupees to each individual, for the re-construction of his habitation on the condition prescribed by the 1st resolution of the 12th instant.

4. That in all cases where the sub-committees shall think larger relief requisite, they shall report the same to the general committees.

5. That the sub-committees report from time to time the amount and particulars of relief administered by them under the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd resolutions.

6. That in cases where the sub-committees make loans to parties, they be referred in the 1st instance to Mr. Phipps, who is authorized to negotiate the terms of security and time of payment.

7. That in making any advance under the 2nd or 3rd Resolution, the attention of the sub-committees be particularly called to the necessity of taking every possible precaution to secure the application of the money solely to the purposes for which it is advanced, either by withholding the whole or any part of the advance till the building is in a certain state of forwardness, or by any other conditions which they may have the means of imposing.

8. That in cases where the sub-committees find that from local circumstances it would be possible to build a considerable number of huts in one vicinity and upon one plan, more cheaply and advantageously by contract for the whole, than by furnishing individuals, with the means of building, they are recommended to report the circumstances to the general committee and to suspend the grant of individual assistance for building. That, if possible, any entire bazars or large spaces of ground where great conflagration has occurred, be built in preference to extending partial sums on places where there must be tiled and thatched huts mixed together.

9. That the general committee from this date meet on Mondays and Thursdays at 5 p. m. The next meeting to take place on Monday the 23d instant.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITY FUND.

To H. T. PRINSEP, Esq.,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

FORT WILLIAM.

Sir,—We have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th February last, transmitting for consideration and report, a copy of a despatch from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors to the address of the Governor-General of India in Council, dated the 28th September, with its enclosure, regarding the claim of Mr. C. B. Elliott, late of the Civil Service, on the Civil Fund.

In compliance with the instructions of the Hon'ble Court, we have carefully reconsidered the case of Mr. Elliott, and we further submitted it to a General Meeting of the Subscribers held on the 24th instant. As it appears that the case was decided at a General Meeting of Subscribers held on the 25th January, 1836, and that the decision was confirmed at a subsequent General Meeting held on the 25th April, 1836, and also as it appears that under Article 30th of the Fund Resolutions thus passed "shall be final and conclusive in all cases whatever," it does not appear that any authority exists competent to alter the decision thus solemnly and regularly passed. As, however, the Hon'ble Court have expressed a wish to be informed of the grounds of the decision passed in the case, and as we are persuaded that every Subscriber to the Fund is solicitous to pay the most anxious attention to any wish expressed by the Hon'ble Court, we beg leave to submit a few remarks which we trust will sufficiently evince that Mr. Elliott has no sufficient reason to complain of the decision adverse to him passed by a very great majority of the Subscribers to the Fund. For this purpose it does not appear to us necessary to enter on the various allegations advanced by Mr. Elliott. It may be sufficient to advert to one material point.

We allude to a certain provision in Article 35 of the Rules of the Fund, on which Mr. Elliott rests his case. It provides that if a Subscriber to the Fund "on quitting the service" "shall pay to the Fund what may be wanting to complete his contribution" to the amount of rupees 5000, such contribution shall entitle his family to the benefits of the Fund.

Mr. Elliott appears to have quitted India soon after the 24th November 1827 (the precise day is unimportant) and on or about the 16th of November 1832, or within five years, he paid to the Agents of the Fund in London, the balance due to complete his contribution to rupees 5000; notice of such payment reached the Managers in India about the 30th of April 1833, or after the lapse of five years from his quitting India, and consequently about four months after he had quitted the service.

Hence it remained to be considered whether a payment to the Agents of the Fund in London was a payment "to the Fund" under the rule above cited.

Mr. Elliott in several parts of his letter, and especially in the 13th para, strongly supports the opinion that a payment to the Agents is bona fide payment to the Fund, and repudiates the contrary opinion in terms which his natural bias towards his own claim scarcely justifies. To us it appears that a very slight reference to one of the most simple and obvious principles which govern such transactions will sufficiently prove that the payment to the Agents did not preserve Mr. Elliott's right.

Of the transaction and alleged conversations between Mr. Elliott and the Agents we know nothing except from Mr. Elliott's own statement, but we do not think they can materially alter the complexion of the case.

We conceive that no provision can be more indisputable in Law and Equity or in reason, than that an Agent duly empowered to do a specific act for his principal is not thereby empowered to do other acts not specified in the powers entrusted to him.

To apply this principle to the present case, we observe that the Rulers of the Civil Fund strictly prescribe and limit the duty of the Agents in England, and the receipt of money from parties in England and their admission to the benefit of any provisions of the Fund forms no part of that duty. The Article (12th) is perfectly clear, and we are quite at a loss to understand why it should not be considered binding as well on the Fund as on Mr. Elliott and on the Agents. Put the case hypothetically. Had the Agents thus unauthorized to receive on the part of the Fund become insolvent, while in possession of Mr. Elliott's money, we presume there cannot be a shadow of doubt but that the loss must have fallen on Mr. Elliott and not on the Fund; and surely the same rule applies to all irregular receipts of money, which though stated to be made on behalf of the Fund, are not receipts until received by the Officers of the Fund in cash, or credited by them duly in account. The Fund says to Mr. Elliott, you are not authorized to pay your money to Agents in any part of the world, but your election must be made and the payment completed to the Fund itself at the place of its institution within the period prescribed. You may pay to Agents for remittance, but the risks and delay of the remittance are yours. If Mr. Elliott nevertheless pays his money elsewhere and to others it is at his own peril. For it is clear to us that a payment to the London Agents is not a payment to the Fund, and that Mr. Elliott's interest in the Fund lapsed when he ceased to belong to the service, before any payment had been made in India on his account.

But if Mr. Elliott's claim of strict right be thus disposed of, his admission to the benefit of the Rule was dependent on the claim he could establish to the special indulgence of the Subscribers, and considered in this point of view the body of the Subscribers have not felt disposed to regard it favorably. The Fund was established for the benefit of the Widows and Children of Members of the Bengal Civil Service, a body from which Mr. Elliott had early and voluntarily excluded himself. It appeared to be an attempt to take advantage of the letter of a rule enacted for a very different purpose to divert the funds of a charitable institution to an object foreign to its whole intent and purport. After a service of six years in India Mr. Elliott on embarking in another profession claims from his late brethren for the utterly inadequate consideration of a present payment of 500£, a reversion of an annuity for life of 300£ per annum to his widow, of 100£ per annum to each of his daughters, besides an allowance to his sons until the age of twenty-one. It appears to us that nothing short of the clearest and most undoubted right would have justified the Subscribers in confining such advantages on such pretensions.

These considerations are greatly strengthened on advert to the alarming fact that the present expenditure of the Fund exceeds its income. We are now endeavoring to ascertain how this deficiency is to be met, but it is obvious that we cannot afford to be generous, when we cannot even afford to be just.

In regard to the delay adverted to by the Court in coming to a final decision upon Mr. Elliott's case, we have reason to regret the delay which arose, but nothing took place which was not in strict conformity with the rules of the institution.

The decision in favor of Mr. Elliott was that of the Committee of Managers, whose acts under Article 16th are in all cases "liable to revision and controul by the resolutions of the Subscribers duly passed at a regular general meeting." From the date on which the Managers decided on admitting Mr. Elliott up to the date on which Mr. Elliott's case was brought under the consideration of the Subscribers at large at a special general meeting called for the purpose, the act of the Managers had never receive confirmation, or been brought under the consideration of a general meeting.

There are some other points which might be adverted to in considering the claim of Mr. Elliott, and particularly before admitting him we should have desired to know the precise date of his ordination, which we conceive must be considered as a relinquishment of the service if it fell within the period of five years from his quitting India. But as above noticed we do not consider that the Service is now competent to entertain Mr. Elliott's claim, and as we consider it to be barred, we do not therefore think it necessary to enter further upon the subject.

We have the honour to be, Sirs,

Your obedient Servants,

(Signed by the Managers.)

SUPREME COURT.

CHAMBERS,—TUESDAY, MAY 9, 1837.

Before Sir J. P. Grant, Knight.

A SHERIFF'S OFFICER REPRIMANDED.

In the case of the King, on the prosecution of Mr. Robert Felix Smith, versus Charles Peter Lopes and John Perroux, for an assault. Alfred Pratt, the sheriff's officer, received a severe reprimand from the Peace Justice, Sir John Peter Grant, Knt. The particulars of this case are as follow:

It appears that the bailiff called on the prosecutor at his house in Colingah, on Tuesday the 18th of April last, at about the hour of 8 o'clock P. M., and demanded 2 gold-mohurs as his fee to go with the prosecutor to the residence of the defendants at Entally, and endeavour to arrest them. The prosecutor declined giving the 2 gold-mohurs beforehand, but said to the bailiff, that if he would wait till the prosecutor had dressed himself, he would go with him, and on the bailiff arresting the defendants, he would give him 1 gold-mohur for his trouble. Hearing this the officer replied, that he sometimes did jobs within the town for 1 gold-mohur, but whenever he had any process to serve out of town, he never went without getting 2 gold-mohurs as his fee for the job; he then added that the Session would close to-day, so he must go to the Supreme Court; and advised the prosecutor to send a person to obtain information regarding the prisoner, who, he said, he had ascertained, by inquiries made at their houses, had absconded and secreted themselves to avoid the service of the writ against them; and he requested the prosecutor to send a person with 2 gold-mohurs to his residence in Emanbang Lane, in the evening, when he would go with the man so sent, taking with him, either J. P. Stone, the bailiff of the Court of Requests, who lived with him, or else F. Gwatin, the constable of the lower south division, who, he said, knew the parties. To this proposal the prosecutor replied, that he would send a servant to make enquiries regarding the prosecutor in the day time, and that that man would wait on him in the evening; but if the bailiff insisted on having the 2 gold-mohurs as his fee, previous to his executing the writ, Prosecutor referred him to his Attorney, Mr. Charles G. Strettell. After this the bailiff left Mr. Smith, who sent Jumun tailor during the day to endeavour to obtain some information regarding the defendant, and on his return sent him in the evening with a clut to the bailiff's house. Jumun, on his return at night, brought back a verbal message from the bailiff, stating, that Charles Peter Lopes had been arrested, and the bailiff desired the prosecutor to send him 1 gold-mohur for having arrested one of the defendants, on receipt of which sum he would endeavour to arrest John Perroux likewise, who has fled to Hoogly or Serampore to screen himself from the service of this writ against him. Next morning, when the prosecutor went to the police office, he was informed by Mr. Stevens, the constable, that Charles Peter Lopes had been the previous day brought up under arrest to the Supreme Court, just at the Sessions were concluding and requested to be put on his trial, when the names of prosecutor and his witnesses were called, and on their not appearing to prosecute, their recognizances had been created and the prisoner released. Hearing this information, the astonished prosecutor waited on his attorney, who told him that he likewise had heard some such intelligence yesterday evening; for the bailiff did not give him any notice of the arrest of the prisoner till 2 o'clock p. m., on hearing which Mr. Strettell went immediately to the Supreme Court, but on his arrival there, learnt that the prisoner had been discharged about an hour previously. The bailiff, in his defence, said, that immediately after his arrival in the Supreme Court with Charles Peter Lopes as his prisoner, (whom he had arrested at about 10 o'clock at a friend's house, on the day he called on the prosecutor at his residence) he was ordered off by the Sheriff to go to Allipore on a message to Mr. P. O'Hanlon the Magistrate, therefore he had no time to give any notice either to the prosecutor or his attorney, till his return from Allipore, when he waited on the prosecutor's attorney at his office in Waterloo Street.

The Judge said, there was great neglect and trifling with justice displayed by the sheriff's officer in this case: he himself admitted, that the prosecutor up to 8 o'clock of that day had been informed, that neither of the defendants were in custody; yet the bailiff, without either giving him or his attorney notice, or intimating to the officers of the Court to give such notice, had let the prisoner be brought up for trial and they had been released, for want of the prosecutor's appearance in Court, who was totally ignorant of their arrest.

The Judge said he would refer the case to the sheriff for his report on it to be laid before him next Friday, and as the prosecutor appeared to be blameless in this case, he granted the request of his petition to discharge him from the treatment of his recognizances.

MADRAS SUPREME COURT.

TRIAL FOR MANSLAUGHTER.

The Supreme Court was yesterday occupied with the trial of James Shell, an Apothecary in the General Dispensary, on a charge of manslaughter, for having caused the death of Mr. Lys, by supplying a wrong medicine. The circumstances of the mistake are somewhat different from those hitherto published, and are as follow.

Mr. Lys being troubled with a cutaneous eruption, called in the assistance of Dr. O'Neill, who prescribed, among other medicines, a decoction in the composition of which there entered about a drachm of Extract of Sarsaparilla.—The bottle which contained this medicine requiring to be replenished the day previous, was taken into the store-room by Apothecary Shell, and supplied by him with a quantity of Extract of Belladonna through mistake: the bottle, thus replaced in the Dispensary, was taken down from the shelf by a native assistant, the prescribed quantity weighed out, pounded, mixed with the decoction, and sent off to Mr. Lys; who, on its arrival took, as directed, a tumbler full or one-third of the whole.

An hour or two after the bottle had been sent off, another prescription was received for a different person, in which Extract of Sarsaparilla was also an ingredient: this was taken from the same bottle, but the compounder finding the Extract possessed a gumminess, that his experience told him did not belong to Sarsaparilla, remarked this peculiarity, which caused Mr. Shell to examine the bottle, whereby the mistake was discovered.

Mr. Shell then dispatched a memorandum to Mr. Lys, begging the bottle might be returned, as some of the ingredients had been omitted: and the reception of this memorandum convincing Mr. Lys, who was suffering under the natural effects of the Belladonna, that a fatal medicine had been administered, he immediately caused Dr. O'Neill to be sent for; but, as we have before stated, medical help was then of no avail.

When we first heard the intentions of the authorities to put Apothecary Shell on his trial, we felt a little surprised: but the lucid statement of the Advocate-General convinced us of the propriety, and even the necessity of adopting such a measure. The unfortunate substitution of Belladonna for Sarsaparilla was in the first place attended with a violation of the regulations of the Dispensary, which order, that a fresh package of medicine shall not be broke upon, while a quantity, of an old package is remaining:—now the Sarsaparilla jar of the measure of ten pounds was not empty, and consequently the supply for the dispensary bottle ought to have been taken from that—whereas the Belladonna bottle was of the measure of one pound only, and although there was in the stores a jar containing Sarsaparilla of the measure of one pound also, for which the Belladonna jar was mistaken—yet had the regulations been observed, the fatal error could not possibly have occurred.

The melancholy effects of this deviation from the rules of the Dispensary urgently required that Shell should be dismissed from his situation; not more as a punishment of his fault, than as a prevention to its recurrence in his person; and a warning to others similarly circumstanced, who dispense life and death to the European population of the Presidency: but Shell's conduct is blameable in the extreme, in that he did not inform Dr. O'Neill of his mistake, the instant it was brought to his knowledge, and use every possible means to prevent the dreadful consequences which he must have anticipated as probable, though then unknown to him.

This behaviour on his part is more than negligence, it amounts to crime: he knew that Mr. Lys' life had been placed in jeopardy by his own mistake, and it was his duty, his imperative duty, as a man and as a medical subordinate, instantly to have made his superior acquainted with danger to which he had exposed the unfortunate patient. His neglecting to do this, whether from the fear of consequences to himself, or whatever the cause might be, is utterly inexcusable, and justifies the prosecution for manslaughter of which offence he was found guilty.

We do not think it necessary to go into the detail of the Advocate General's address to the jury; but we cannot help noticing the illustration by which the learned gentleman, in winding it up, impressed upon their minds the construction of the law on such a point. He said, if we mistake not, that, if a traveller enquired the way to any place, and the person applied to, of two roads pointed out one to him which terminated in a precipice—and afterwards saw the traveller pursue that road, without warning him of his danger—he, the person applied to, would be guilty of manslaughter, should the traveller lose his life by falling over the precipice.

We do not mean to dispute the law thus laid down by

Mr. Norton; but we wish it could be officially applied to the parties who have laid down that infernal, break-neck, tenterhook, piece of penance, misnamed a road, leading from the Hospital Gate towards Prince's Dispensary: we have before had occasion to remark its effects in throwing down horses and breaking bandies, and if these accidents have not been attended with manslaughter, it is certainly more owing to Providence than these worthy macadamizers, who obstinately jeopardize life and property every day, by their silly and dangerous experiments of constructing roads of granite, as with the edges uppermost.

James Shell was convicted, and sentenced to one year's imprisonment, which is tantamount to dismissal from the service; as however he has a dependent family, it would be an act of charity in the Government to allow them some small pension, in case they are not entitled to the benefit of the Apothecaries Fund.—Madras Examiner, April 21.

COURT OF THE SESSION JUDGE OF THE 24-PERGUNNAHS.

A circular order, No. 1142, dated 7th April 1837, was issued on the 27th instant, to the commissioners of circuit, session judges, magistrates, and joint magistrates in the Lower Provinces, regarding the power to be exercised by session judges vested with the power of commissioner under Act VII. 1835, over the proceedings of magistrates in criminal trials. Opinion of the Sadler Nizamut Adawlut of the N. W. Provinces on the above subject.

The court observe, that although strictly speaking the term, 'sentence,' made use of by the judicial secretary to the Government of Bengal in his letter to the Registrar of the Sadler Court, Lower Provinces, under date the 3d May last, bears the construction, which has been put upon it by the Calcutta Court in the correspondence under consideration, the court, looking to its general purposes, do not understand it to have been intended, by the employment of that term, to prohibit the interference of the sessions judges in regular criminal trials, in the course of their investigation before the lower courts, or to exclude from their cognizance, appeals from interlocutory orders passed by those courts in such cases, not having reference to matters of Police.

The court are further of opinion, that the exercise of the powers in question constitutes an essential part of the administration of criminal justice, the whole of the duties connected with which, they observe, have been made over, under the orders of government, from the commissioners to the sessions judges of those districts to which the provisions of Act 7 of 1835, have been extended, and that it is absolutely necessary, that the latter officers should be invested with the authority above mentioned, to enable them, to maintain an efficient superintendence and control over the whole of the proceedings of the lower courts in regular criminal trials, and to furnish the reports on the state of the departments under consideration, which they are required to submit to the court at the close of each year.

In support of this opinion the court referred to the resolution adopted by both courts, under date the 4th May 1833, containing a construction of Section 8 Regulation IX. of 1831, and to paragraph 6 of the circular order issued by this court under date the 23d November 1834 to the commissioners of circuit in the Western Provinces. By the former, it was held that the cases of a miscellaneous nature referred to in the section of the regulation in question were not intended to include orders passed by inferior courts in the progress of criminal trials, and that such orders consequently remained open to revision and correction by the Nizamut Adawlut which principle the court are of opinion must be considered equally applicable to sessions judges, into whose districts the provisions of Act 7 of 1835 have been introduced, while in the circular order above quoted, the court remark that the administration of criminal justice might be said to include the whole progress of a case from the date of the criminal's apprehension to the date of his sentence.

The court further observe that the Government in their letter to the Registrar of the Calcutta Court, under date the 10th November 1834, paragraphs 5, 6 and 7, attach much importance to a careful revision by the controlling authorities of the Persian statement No. 9 of the new forms as enabling those officers not only to detect any illegal or improper sentence passed by the magistrates, but to check any delay on their part in disposing of the trials brought before them, and readily to ascertain the general state of criminal justice in their districts, and as in the zillahs, to which the provisions of Act 7 of 1835 have been extended, the statement in question is submitted direct by the magistrates to the sessions judges, those officers must be considered to be invested with precisely the same powers in regard to the cases entered therein, as were formerly possessed and exercised by the commissioners of circuit.

Under these circumstances, the court are of opinion, that the sessions judges, into whose districts the provisions of Act 7 of 1835 have been introduced, are competent and required to perform the whole of the duties prescribed in the 2d paragraphs of the letter of the

* Extract from a proposed letter from the Registrar of the Nizamut Adawlut, Lower Provinces, to the Secretary to the Government, of Bengal dated 12th August, 1836.

2.—The orders of Government, contained in your letter of the 3rd May last No. 192, respecting the power of session judges to try appeals from judicial sentences, passed by magistrates on persons charged with criminal offences, but the cognizance of several important matters, which may precede the final sentence, such as delay in the final decision of a case, refusal of a magistrate to admit to bail, demand of exorbitant bail, and other grievances, which should be promptly attended to, and can better be decided by the session judge, or the superintendent, than by the commissioner who may be far distant. The government told the court, in reply, they were at liberty to issue instructions to the several session judges in accordance with the tenor of the above paragraph. Opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North West Provinces, on the above subject

"The actual practice, according to the report of the Sudder Adawlut, appears to be, that the session judges exercise full control over the judicial proceedings of the magistrates in criminal trials, whether in receiving appeals from sentences and appeals from orders, or in interfering during investigations."

The Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that, although it is not desirable, that the judges should exercise much interference in the proceedings of the magistrate, otherwise than in receiving appeals from sentences, the power of interference in any of the judicial proceedings of the magistrate cannot be withheld from the judges without leaving the magistrate more uncontrolled than they ought to be.

The magistrates in criminal judicature were formerly subordinate to the Provincial Courts, subsequently to the commissioners of Circuit, and are now in the same relation to the session judges. Whatever powers were exercised by the Provincial Courts and the commissioners of Circuit over the judicial proceedings of magistrates must now be considered as vested in the session judges, and the exercise of these must deprive greatly or the discretion of the sever judges. The interference is likely to be more incessant and more vexatious to the magistrates than it was in the hands of the Provincial Courts and the Commissioners of Circuit, because the judges being, with few exceptions, at the same stations with the magistrates, appeals and complaints can be more readily and will, it is most probable, be more frequently made than they were either to the Provincial Courts, or to the commissioners of Circuit. It will not therefore be surprising to learn that the exercise of this interference had been attended with considerable inroads on the judge's time, and some impediment to the magistrate's efficiency. His honor is not, however, aware that practically these inconveniences have been experienced, and until they be felt, so as to require remedy, he would not advocate the discontinuance of the control, which the judges have over the magistrates, and which, as far as it is beneficial, ought from locality to be more efficiently exercised by them, than by former tribunals, placed in the majority of cases at a distance, lest that measure should in too great a degree, remove control from the magistrates, who may frequently require it.

On the whole, therefore, the Lieutenant-Governor would not, at present, recommend any change in the practice of the North West Provinces. He understands the control of the judges to be limited to judicial proceedings, the magistrates being in other respects subject to the control of the commissioners.

CIRCULAR No 990.

TO THE COMMISSIONERS OF CIRCUIT IN THE LOWER PROVINCES

Sir,—I am directed by the Court to forward the accompanying copy of a letter from the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, dated the 15th November last, No 3080, and its enclosures, and to request that you will report to the Court (after the necessary enquiries from the magistrates and civil surgeons) to what districts, in your opinion, it would be advisable to remove prisoners sentenced to banishment from the several magistracies and joint magistracies of your division. The Court are desirous of obtaining this information, in order that in selecting the districts to which banished prisoners are to be removed, they may avoid sending them to those, the climate of which may be likely to prove prejudicial to their general health.

The Court further direct me to request, that you will ascertain from the civil surgeons whether they consider the climate of the district or the Sudder Station to be uncongenial to the constitutions of any of the prisoners at present confined in their jails under sentence of banishment, and if so, that you will report from what district they have been banished

I am, &c.

(Signed) J. F. M REID, Registrar

First William, 3d March, 1837

The letter (from the Secretary to the Government of Bengal,) alluded to above, merely contains a request that the following extracts be laid before the Sudder Court.

Extract of a letter from the Honourable the Court of Directors, dated the 29th June last, No. 5.

"The sickness and mortality which prevailed among the prisoners in the Bancoolah jail, during the last months of 1832, and the first months of 1833, is greatly to be deplored. It is satisfactorily shown that the jail at that station was of a superior description, and that the failure in the health of the prisoners was not attributable to any part of the treatment they received. The skill and attention, and anxiety of Mr. Cheek, the medical officer, are deserving of much praise. "With respect to the probable exciting causes of this dreadful sickness," Mr. Superintending Surgeon Skipton observes, "we have little or nothing to direct our judgment except the sudden change in the habits and mode of living of men brought from a hilly and jungle country, and a state of savage liberty to a state of horror and suspense as to their probable fate in strict confinement." In concurrence with that opinion, Mr. Braddon, the commissioner of circuit, states "I would say that the disease is constitutional, and a large portion of the prisoners being inhabitants of the jungle parts of the district, and peculiarly susceptible from their previous habits and former mode of life of the injurious effects of imprisonment and other privations to which they must necessarily be subjected."

This instance serves strongly to show, that although a sentence of imprisonment to appearance is not a harsh mode of punishing offenders, yet in reality it is objectionable on account of its severity as well as on that of the demoralizing effects of a jail. We doubt not, but care is taken, as far as possible, not to keep prisoners in confinement where the climate of the particular district is liable to be particularly injurious to their health.—Englishman, May 30.

The statements noted in the margin, exhibit the number of persons that have been apprehended, acquitted, and convicted by the magistrate and his assistants in "heinous," as well as in "petty offences." The number of "petty offences" ascertained to have been committed, but in which no persons have been apprehended, or summoned, is very large.

One hundred and eight persons acquitted and discharged, in consequence of Razeenahs being filed, and 32 from the non-attendance of the prosecutor. On this subject the magistrate in statement No. 15, recorded the following remarks. "Razeenahs may fairly be considered as convictions at least in foroconscientie, if to be number punished then, be added that of prisoners so pleading, the total becomes 626+108=734 leave the number 32 neutral, and the convictions to the acquitted are in a ratio not far short of 3 to 1."

The court cannot, as suggested by Mr. Pringle, on side Razeenahs, or cases adjusted amicably by the parties, to be convictions, but the number of persons discharged by the filing of Razeenahs, may be fairly deducted from the number of persons acquitted on trial, and if so, the number of acquittals and convictions for this district would stand as noted in the margin, which, though not in a ratio of 3 to 1, is still satisfactory to the court and creditable to the exertions of the magistrate.

request, that immediate measures may be adopted by the magistrate to reduce this very heavy file; as the court apprehend that the delay, which must take place in the disposal of the criminal cases, encourages evil disposed persons to prefer huge and false complaints, in the expectation of annoying their adversaries by the process of the court. The number of Razeenahs filed in this district, confirms the court in this view of the subject.

SESSION JUDGE'S COURT.

At the close of the year 1835, there were three persons under trial in the sessions court, 82 persons were committed during the year 1836, making a grand total of 65, and they were disposed of in the mode noted in the margin.

No trial was called for at the English sittings, but one prisoner appearing to the court to have been illegally convicted, the sentence was annulled, and he was arraigned on a new charge.*

Only one appeal was preferred during the year from the order of the sessions judge, and that case is still pending in the court.

The Commissioner, Mr. E. M. Gordon, in submitting the statement for this district, has not informed the court how long criminal trials are usually pending before the magistrate or the sessions judge. In the jail delivery statement for the month of June last, the case of Hosen Ally, Jemadar of the thannah of Nussereabad, appears to have been delayed for a most unaccountable and creditable period, subjecting this individual, as will be observed from the following remarks recorded by Mr. Cheap, to much unnecessary hardship. "I never took up a case where there was more of a conspiracy apparent or one that I should have more cautiously subscribed to a verdict, not of simple acquittal, but of entire innocence. The prisoner was

* The prisoner was committed on a charge of "burglary and theft, with murder," and convicted by the Futwa of "knowingly receiving property," so obtained, and sentenced by the sessions judge to ten years' imprisonment, with reference to the precedent established by the case of "Government v. Lengoo and others" N. A. Rep vol 1 p 257, the judge observing "it would have been better if the magistrate had committed the prisoner on both counts, as directed in the court's circular orders, as then no doubt could have arisen." The Nizamut Adawlut, however, ruled that the precedent cited had been superseded by the rules laid down in their circular letter, dated 16th July 1830 and 22d February 1833, the latter of which expressly required the presiding judge to direct the magistrate to rectify the error into which he had fallen (of not committing the prisoner on the charge of burglary and theft and "knowingly receiving stolen property") The court therefore annulled the sentence passed on the prisoner by the sessions judge, and directed that he should be arraigned on the charge of receiving stolen property, knowing it to have been obtained in a burglary and theft, attended with murder."

a Yankee, living in the jungles, was persuaded to leave his retirement and take office by the late magistrate, borrowed a pair of shoes, and bought some clothes, on credit, to enable him to join his office, held employment for 4 months, (entitling him to Rs. as salary) when he was brought up on this charge on the 16th of July 1835, and was ultimately committed for trial on the 4th of April last, nine months after, though the original complaint and all the witnesses reside within a few miles of the station."

"A copy of the above remarks has been sent to the magistrate, and as the jury gave in a written verdict, a copy of which is appended to this statement, a warrant for the prisoner's release has been issued.

Act VII. 1835 having been introduced into this district, the court trust that the sessions judge will exercise a more efficient control over these matters than appears to have been done by the late commissioner, and that by a careful examination of statement No. 9, he will be able to prevent any person from being thus needlessly detained in custody or on bail, under examination in future.

GENERAL REMARKS.

It appears to the court, that considerable improvement might take place in this district, if the magistrate would endeavour to diminish the quantity of business now pending before the courts, and expedite the cases of persons under examination. The proportion of convictions to the acquittals is creditable to that officer, but with 804 criminal cases pending, the state of the district must be considered as unsatisfactory,

The trials submitted by the session judge to this court have been conducted with great regularity, and the court have had every reason to be satisfied with the manner in which the monthly and delivery statements have been prepared by that officer,—Englishman, May 24.

ILLAH 24-PERGUNNAHS TOURDAKRY.

HOWRAH, 24TH APRIL, 1837.

Ramchand, blacksmith, on the 20th of February last, filed a petition against Mr. Peter Foster, stating that he had been in the employ of Mr. Foster, and that after paying several workmen whom he had employed for Mr. Foster's yard, a balance appeared in the petitioner's favor of 175 rupees 9 annas and 3 pie. That the petitioner had from time to time applied to Mr. Foster for the amount, but had been as often put off with promises of payment. That on the 17th February last, he went to Mr. Foster's to demand the money,—it was about noon of that day, when Mr. Foster kicked, thumped and bumped the plaintiff into the street.

The witnesses of the plaintiff were summoned, but on examination failed to establish the pecuniary affair, but proved the assault and maltreatment, and a summons was issued for Mr. Foster's appearance. Mr. Foster received the summons but did not appear, and a warrant was issued for his apprehension, in which originated the following case of assault and resistance of the Magistrate's process.

The assault having been established in this case, Mr. Foster was fined in the sum of fifty rupees, which he paid.

HOWRAH,—24TH APRIL AND 1ST MAY, 1837

Before Robert Houstoun, Esq., Joint Magistrate.

GOVERNMENT, ON THE INFORMATION OF JOHN FLOYD, OFFICER, VERSUS PETER FOSTER, JOHN FOSTER AND OTHERS,—ASSAULT AND RESISTANCE OF A PROCESS.

John Floyd, constable, upon oath said, that he went from this Court on the 24th ultimo to Mr. Foster's house, and finding it open entered it with ten burkundas and the jumadar of police, he left the ten men in the verandah of the house, and entered the hall, where Mr. Foster was, who, while coming up to the deponent, was told by the deponent, that he, Peter Foster, was the deponent's prisoner, and should proceed to the Court with the deponent, as the deponent had a warrant for his apprehension. Foster said he would not go, and at last desired the deponent to tell the Magistrate, that he was sick, which the deponent objected to do, and told Foster he could not let him out of his, the deponent's, sight, as he was already a prisoner, and advised Foster against resisting the Magistrate's process. Mr. Foster's son was sitting near his father at the time, the deponent begged of him to advise his father to accompany the deponent. The son replied he could do nothing and went into another room from which the sound of music proceeded. Mr. Foster and the deponent were then left alone. After a few minutes Mr. Foster's daughter came and looked into the room but said nothing. The deponent begged of her also to advise her father to accompany the deponent, but without effect. The deponent then asked the defendant to accompany him, but the defendant replied he should have his dinner first. The dinner was then on the table. Some body called Mr. Foster at this time, and he was about proceeding to the person who called him, when this deponent prevented his escape by taking a position in front of the defendant, telling him that it was entirely out of the power of the deponent, so let the defendant out of his sight. The deponent then advised Mr. Foster to follow him, but Mr. Foster would not go, and gave the deponent a push, and the deponent finding all that means futile, was obliged to use the authority he was vested with, seized hold of Mr. Foster by the shoulder, and called to the guard to come up, more particularly as Mr. Foster was trying to make his escape. On seeing the defendant, the deponent received a blow from him under the left jaw, notwithstanding which, the deponent held on with both arms. Mr. Foster's dog then flew on the deponent, who seized the dog by the throat, holding it with one hand, and Mr. Foster with the other—the guard then came in, and the deponent threw the dog on one side, and the deponent and guard then laid hold on Mr. Foster, during which Mr. Foster and his son struck the deponent and guard several blows, and continued doing so even out of the house. Mrs. Foster also struck the deponent with the handle of a chowrie while they were in the house, using the foulest abuse to deponent and his family, and struck deponent several blows on his head with the handle of the chowrie—she also used her hands when the party were out of the house. The son also followed out side of the house, and shook his fist at the deponent, and Mr. Richard Humphreys said, "take what sum of money is required of Mr. Foster and let him go." The deponent explained to Mr. Humphreys and another gentleman that the deponent was under orders to arrest Mr. Foster and to produce him before the Magistrate. During the affray Mr. Foster's jacket was torn in consequence of his trying to pull it away from the guard, though none of them struck him after the affray an ayah, or some one like an Ayah said, "oh! which has lost his ring," and Mrs. Foster said, "The sergeant and his people have come to rob the place, the ring has been stolen" these words were repeated by another native women. The deponent produced a mark on his jacket, of the teeth or claws of the dog.

Humed Jamadar deposed.—That on the 24th ultimo the witness and other burkundazes, agreeably to the orders of court, accompanied sergeant Floyd to arrest Mr. Foster. The witness and guard proceeded to the defendant's house, and stood in the outer verandah. On the sergeant telling Foster that his presence was required in court, Mr. Foster sat himself down on a chair. The sergeant then showed the warrant to the defendant, who on seeing it was about leaving the room, when his son John Alexander Foster entered it, and set a large dog at the sergeant, and the sergeant laid hold of the defendant with one hand and the dog with the other. The guard was then called in by the sergeant, and witness and the other burkundazes saw the state of things there. The defendant, his son, and wife and others struck the sergeant and guard with the handle of a chowrie and their clenched fists the resistance becoming serious the sergeant ordered Mookem burkundaz to announce it at the guard house, and bring assistance from there. After the lapse of a few minutes Mookem returned with a reinforcement, with the help of which Mr. Foster was arrested and brought to Court. On the road, John Alexander Foster said that he would have the officer and guard punished if it cost a lakh of rupees. The witness, Mookem, Chet Sing, Tunno and Ashwar were struck by the assailants. The defendant not only assaulted but used abusive epithets and set his son to do the same.

Ashwar burkundaz and six others, fully bore out the testimony of the last witness, which closed the charge against the defendants, and one of them showed marks of a gash two he had received from Mr. Foster's dog, which it was proved was healed by medical aid.

Mr. Foster denied the charge, and said that when sergeant Floyd seized him, the dog flew at the sergeant without being set on by any one, the dog being loose at the time; that instead of Mr. Foster assaulting the sergeant, the sergeant and his burkundazes arrested him in the most shameful and brutal manner, tearing the coat from of his back, and thereby causing a wound in the defendant's shoulder under the left shoulder, besides being severely maltreated.

John Alexander Foster also denied the charge, adding, that he tried merely to coax the sergeant to release his father, and allow him to go on his way, which the sergeant allowed, but that he was not present when the dog flew at the sergeant.

Mr. Peter Foster filed the following certificate.

I Certify that I was called in professionally to visit Mr. Foster in consequence of severe pain which he felt in the shoulder.

On examination I found a large circumscribed patch of inflammation with several pustules filled with matter in the left Axilla, which I am of opinion was produced by the part having been powerfully grasped by some one.

Howrah, 1st May, 1837.

Richard Humphreys deposed.—I that the first he knew of this business, was, when he heard an altercation between sergeant Floyd and Mr. Foster. Mr. Foster wished to retire to the end of the room to wash himself as he generally does every day, he made a motion to go to the chillumchee, when sergeant Floyd prevented him, saying "he could not let him stir from his sight," upon which the sergeant seized Mr. Foster by the shoulder, and told him, "he, Foster, must go with him to the Magistrate." A favorite Newfoundland dog of Mr. Foster's seeing him caught in that manner, flew at the sergeant twice, upon which the sergeant caught the dog by the throat with one hand, and with the other held Mr. Foster. The sergeant then called in his burkundazes, upon which eight or ten men came in and seized Mr. Foster, every one of them seized Mr. Foster at the same time. Some of them seized him by the collar, some by the wrist, they seized him in different parts of the body, sergeant Floyd, at the same time, holding him round the waist, in which manner they wrestled and dragged Mr. Foster from the place where it first happened into the verandah. The natives were very violent in the manner in which they handled Mr. Foster, his jacket was nearly torn off his back, and is now in Court. Witness expostulated twice with sergeant Floyd to allow Mr. Foster to change his jacket, and to take off the men that had hold of him for a few minutes. It was with great difficulty that the sergeant would allow even that. Witness at last persuaded the sergeant to allow him to sit in the verandah, while Mr. Foster changed his jacket, and to obtain sufficient time for the garry to be brought up. Witness never saw any one so used by the natives as Mr. Foster was. The garry was got ready, and as it went along, the burkundazes abused Mr. Foster's coachman, saying "ashtee jao soor," and other abusive epithets, there was a dinner table in the room, where the altercation took place—dinner was partly on the table, and knives were on the table. Did not observe a large carving knife on the table. This witness went on to relate other circumstances tallying with the examination above given.

Henry Cornelius, deposed. That he was in a room opposite to the one in which the sergeant and Mr. Foster were, and saw the sergeant seize Mr. Foster. The dog then flew at the sergeant, on which the sergeant seized the dog with one hand and held Mr. Foster with the other, and called to his men to come into the room and side Mr. Foster, at which noise the witness ran up to see what was the matter, and before the witness arrived Mr. Foster was almost near the door leading to the post-office. Mr. Foster was with his jacket all in pieces, and appeared to have been most shamefully handled about by the peons on all sides. A little before this, Mr. John Foster was called into the room by his mother, and after a short time, when Mr. Foster was taken up by the sergeant, Mr. John Foster ran out to assist his father in the witness believed he asked the sergeant what was the matter. When witness came out, witness told sergeant Floyd to wait a while until the carriage was ready, and then Mr. Foster would go. The sergeant replied he could not wait, as he had orders to take Mr. Foster to the Court. Did not recollect sergeant Floyd's warning witness not to interfere with him. Saw Mr. Foster merely throwing out his hands to get rid of the peons. Did not see Mr. Foster strike any one. Heard Mr. John Alexander Foster ask the sergeant if he had a warrant against Mr. Foster. Is not aware of Mrs. Foster having struck any one. Did not see John Alexander Foster shake his fist at the sergeant's face. Sergeant Floyd asked witness to advise Mr. Foster to get his carriage and go along quietly with him.

The case was then summed up by the Magistrate, who told Mr. Foster that he was outwitted at his going in the way he had done. That the case was one which should properly be handed up to the Sessions, and that as an example to the other inhabitants of Howrah, the Magistrate would fine Mr. Foster and his sons each the sum of 200 rupees.

HOWRAH, — 4TH MAY, 1837.

Mr. Floyd this day swore the peace against William Peter Wood, for using violent language and threats towards him. Mr. Wood denied the charge, but was bound in the sum of two hundred company's rupees in his own personal recognizance. — Hurkara, May 25.

SUDDER BOARD OF REVENUE.

CONSULTATION, — TUESDAY, 18TH APRIL, 1837.

GRANT OF A TALOOKDAREE POTTAH FOR 99 YEARS.

Mr. Secretary Mangles, in reply to the Board's address of the 28th March last, informed them on the 4th ultimo, that the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal, has been pleased to sanction the grant of a Talookdaree Pottah for ninety-nine years to Mr. Elson, for a piece of ground in the town of Chittagong, measuring 1d. 15k. 9g. 3c. 2k. at 2J rupees per droon; and with reference to the injunctions of the Honorable Court, his Lordship could not grant the lands in perpetuity.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. E. E. H. NEPTON AS SPECIAL DEPUTY COLLECTOR OF SYLHET.

Mr. Secretary Mangles, on the 4th ultimo, forwarded to the Board for their information, copy of a letter addressed to the Commissioner of Cuttack by Government, on the subject of the appointment of Mr. E. E. H. Nepton, as Special Deputy Collector of Cuttack, for the investigation of titles to hold land free from the payment of Revenue throughout the Province of Cuttack.

In compliance with the Board's recommendation, Mr. Nepton has been authorized to continue to render to Mr. Mills, as Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector, all the assistance in his power compatible with attention to his duties. In a pecuniary point of view, of his new office, which cannot occupy his whole time in the first instance; but that it should be considered a special and strictly temporary arrangement, to continue for two months only. At the close of that period, should the Board consider its continuance advisable, the Board have been requested to report to that effect.

PETITION OF APPEAL — TALOOK ALUM REZA — SYLHET.

Mr. E. M. Gordon, Revenue Commissioner of Decan, forwarded to the Board, on the 18th March last, a petition of appeal from Nurat Reza, proprietor of Talook Alum Reza, and Mr. Gordon's replies to the allegations advanced in the Petition.

ALLEGATIONS.

1. The substance of the appellant's objection is as follows. The Judge had sent an order to the Collector to give credit to the appellant for the sum of 765 rupees, by deducting that amount from surplus in his (the Collector's) hands, belonging to Aman Reza, and Zuman Reza. The Collector wrote back to the Judge to enquire respecting interest, and also to state that he knew not the relative rights of Aman Reza and Zuman Reza to the surplus; that he could not therefore make the deduction in question. Before a rejoinder could reach the Collector from the Judge, the appellant's estate was sold.

2. On the day of sale, two of the appellant's estates were included in the statement of lands to be sold. The Collector asked the appellant's agents which estate he wished to be put up first. The agent's reply was, that the Talook Zillah Abidabad was the more valuable property. He left the Court, however, to consult his Principal, and in the meantime the Collector sold the estate.

3. As far as it can be understood, the appellant's objection is that the purchase was a benamie one.

REPLIES.

1. The Collector admits the fact of the Judge's order, and of his own answer. The date of his answer was the 2d April 1836. On the 1st of June following, however, an order was given by the Commissioner to deduct the balance due by Aman Reza and Zuman Reza, from the surplus belonging to these persons in the Collector's hands. The surplus amounted to 2,280 rupees. The balance due by them was 2,057 rupees. The Collector did so, and sent the balance 223 rupees to the Judge's Court. There being thus no surplus from which the appellants' balance could be realized, and which amounted on the 18th of July to 970 rupees, his estate was sold.

2. The Collector admits the conversation, and asserts that on due enquiry he put up for sale Talook Alum Reza, Zillah Nubhy gunge, as the less valuable estate of the two. The objection is obviously irrelevant.

3. This allegation, after enquiry, was found to be unsupported by proof.

The Board, however, in acknowledging the receipt of the above papers, have informed Mr. Gordon, that the sale of Talook Alum Raza has been cancelled, because the Board held that it was the duty of the Collector, on receipt of orders from the Commissioner's Court of the 1st June 1836, to have brought to notice that the surplus proceeds in deposit on the sale of Talook Koorban Raza, was under attachment by orders of the Civil Court, in which case the appellant would have got his money.

The Collector is to be requested to re-advertise the Mehal, and sell it by public auction, unless the arrears are immediately discharged.

The sale occurred on the 18th July last, was confirmed by Mr. Gordon on the 16th January following, and reported on the 13th of March last. The Board have expressed their wish to be informed whether the collections of the Mehal were discontinued during the interval, or, if not, what arrangements existed.

The Board have requested the several boobocaries of the Court, in this case, to be transmitted to their office for consideration, as to the propriety of bringing them to the notice of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

PETITION OF APPEAL.—TALOOK RAOUR RENMAH—SYLIET.

The following case was also forwarded by Mr. Commissioner E. M. Gordon on the 10th of April last.

ALLEGATIONS.

1. The appellant states, that his estate was sold before for a balance due for 1,242 B. S., and Mr. Vincent was purchaser. The sale was set aside by the Commissioner. Now, the same Mr. Vincent, as the purchaser, has prevailed on the appellant's Gomoshta to withhold the payment of the Government demand with which he had been entrusted.

2. The appellant asserts that an advertisement of sale was omitted; that his Talook was sold out of its turn according to the usual custom of the rotation of the sales of different Zillahs, that prevails there, and that the price was low, owing to the thinness of the attendance at the sale.

3. The appellant states that there was a surplus belonging to him in the Collector's Treasury of 57 rupees 9 gundas, arising from the sale of the Talooka Sentaram.

REPLIES.

1. The charge against Mr. Vincent is not established. Even the fact of the appellant's having given the money to his agent is not to be relied on; and if proved, it would not of itself be a sufficient ground for upsetting the sale.

2. The first allegation is false. With respect to the second also, it is false that a custom of fixed rotation prevails. The third allegation likewise, as respects the thinness of the attendance at the sale, is without foundation.

3. The Collector admits the fact of a surplus from the sale of the estate in question, but demurs as to the surplus being the appellant's; and, moreover, if it were, it was altogether insufficient to cover the balance due by him.

The Board have informed Mr. Gordon, that they see no reason for disturbing the proceedings of the local authorities, and that the petition of appeal has been accordingly rejected.

CONSULTATION, — TUESDAY, 25TH APRIL, 1837.

HOOGHLY COLLEGE AND EMAUMBARRAH PREMISES.

Mr. Secretary Mangles, on the 16th of April last, forwarded a copy of an extract from the proceedings of Government under date the 5th instant, in order for necessary instructions being issued to the Collector and local Agents of Hooghly, to give every assistance to Mr. Betts as directed therein.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General of India in Council, in the Department under date the 5th April 1837.

No. 162:

To H. T. PRINSEP, Esq.

Secretary to Government in the General Department.
Fort William.

SIR,—The General Committee of Public Instructions, directs me to request the favor of your submitting to the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General-in-Council, the enclosed report to it, addressed on the 24th ultimo, by a deputation of its body, which visited the Hooghly College, and inspected the Emaumbarrah premises on the 4th idem.

The General Committee has adopted the views of the deputation, and it will be seen that these contemplate the employment of M. Betts for two distinct duties.

One duty, the preparation of certain estimates regarding Perron's house is referred to in the 6th paragraph, and Mr. Wise, the Principal of the College, has been directed to commit the execution of the duty to Mr. Betts, proposing in the first instance, for approval, a reasonable remuneration for his trouble.

The General Committee is of opinion that the proposed College should afford accommodation for the instruction of six hundred students, and Mr. Wise has been advised accordingly. To the arrangement and opinion above-mentioned the sanction of His Lordship in Council is requested.

The other duties proposed to be committed to Mr. Betts, regard the Emaumbarrah premises and Lands, and are explained in the 14th paragraph. The General Committee directs me to suggest that His Lordship in Council will be pleased to cause orders to be issued to the Local Agents (of whom Mr. Wise is one) those instructions which will tend to ensure the early execution of the duties referred to by the Agency of Mr. Betts, whose remuneration should be first fixed.

It will also seem, that in the 9th paragraph the possibility of some of the military buildings being available for the purpose of the institution is suggested: should this from any cause be the case, the General Committee solicits the favor of a communication on the subject, in order that it may resume consideration of the suggestion mentioned, and if expedient, found thereon some proposition to the Supreme Government.

I have, &c.

(Signed) J. C. C. SUTHERLAND.

Secy. G. C. P. I.

Fort William, the 17th March 1837.

P. S. Please return inclosures when no longer required.

Extract from a Report by a deputation of certain members of the Committee which visited the Hooghly College, dated 24th February 1837.

6. Before, then, a large sum is laid out in the purchase of the house, we recommend that it be carefully surveyed, and that it be committed to a competent person to estimate and report the probable outlay required to adapt the premises for the purposes of the College.

It must of course be informed of those purposes, and the extent of the accommodation required, and the plan should include every detail, not omitting embellishment, dressing the river frontage and provision of gates. With reference to this subject, it will be necessary that you resume consideration of the Proceedings of your Sub-Committee dated the 26th April.

14th. The suggestions which we have to offer are these.

I. A minute survey of the entire property should be made on a large scale, so as to show the limits and the actual state of the lands and tenements.

II. The surveyor should be directed to enquire into and report on the character of each tenure, and the compensation which it would be reasonable to allow in case removal were directed.

III. The surveyor should make estimates of the probable expense of dressing and making uniform, the river frontage on the whole extent of the premises, and properly securing the same with buttresses, such expense to be defrayed in proportion from the funds under the control of the Local Agents, and the Committee; that is in case it is resolved to build a new College there.

IV. Though not subject to the Committee's supervision, the repair and embellishment of the Emaumbarrah building should be strongly recommended.

V. The Surveyor should also report the expense of dressing and smoothing (without injury to the tombs,) the cemetery and garden and the substitution of cast iron rails for the present walls.

VI. For the purposes of arrondissement and obtaining a large clear area, Messrs. Trevelyan and Sutherland, in September last (adopting the suggestions of Mr. Walters) recommended that the premises now used for the Collectory, should be bought and the present public road passing along and through the Wakf lands from the Jail to the Collectory, should be blocked up and carried back, being made to join the Chinsurah Road on the south. The Surveyor should be directed to estimate the probable expense of such an arrangement, which of course would include the purchase of properties not belonging to the trust compensation to existing Tenants of its land and charge of levelling and clearing.

Ordered, that a copy of the foregoing letter from the Secretary to the General Committee of Public Instruction, together with an Extract (Paragraphs 6 to 14) from the report therein mentioned, be sent to the Revenue Department, whence the necessary orders will be issued to the Board of Revenue of Calcutta to instruct the Collector and Local Agents to give every assistance to Mr. Betts for the promotion of the objects in the view of the Committee.

STATISTICAL RETURNS.—CIRCULAR.

TO THE SEVERAL COMMISSIONERS OF CIRCUIT.

Judicial Department. } SIR,—The Right Hon'ble the Governor-General in Council having determined upon the adoption of measures for ascertaining, in as far as present means will allow, the preparation of statistical reports throughout this Presidency, I am directed by his Lordship the Governor of Bengal, to request, that, in common with all other local authorities, you will give your best assistance to further the undertaking in question.

2.—The Officer charged with the duty of examining into the statistics of the country are the Medical Officers of Government, Civil and Military. You will be pleased to enjoin all the District authorities subordinate to you to render those gentlemen every assistance in the prosecution of their enquiries.

3.—It is not of course expected that Fiscal and Magisterial Officers will be able to devote any part of the time already fully occupied by their multifarious duties to giving personal aid for the above purpose. His Lordship does not anticipate that more will be necessary on their part, than the allowance of free access to records to the gentlemen seeking statistical information, the providing them with Perwannahs to ensure the co-operation of native officers, their good offices, if necessary, with influential Zemindars or other natives, and the communication to them of such remarks and suggestions as may tend to facilitate the process of enquiry. The Governor is well aware of the extreme difficulty in many parts of the Lower Provinces of collecting materials for a statistical report. He is however of opinion, that much may be learned of matter whereon to base investigation from intelligent Zemindars and experienced native officers of Government, the former of whom should be fully informed of the benevolent and useful objects of the enquiry, having for its primary end the diminution of sickness, lest suspicion of the intentions of Government should induce them to thwart rather than aid the investigation.

4.—Although on the present imperfect state of statistical knowledge in this country, the first steps of advance must necessarily be short and defective, his Lordship is

- 1.—Census of population.
- 2.—Cause and effect of plenty and scarcity.
- 3.—Condition of the poor, their subsistence, &c.
- 4.—Wages of labor.
- 5.—Physical causes of crime.
- 6.—Ratio of mortality.
- 7.—Ordinary proportion of births to marriages, in addition to the more obvious and easily attainable information as to area of Districts, comparative productiveness of lands, habits of people, proportion of Hindoos to Mussulmans, &c.

yet inclined to believe that a full and patient examination of Government records, and a reference to individual experience, to village accounts, to the register of bazar rates, chowkedaree assessments, &c., &c. will afford such general heads of information as may lead to the forming some conclusions noted in the margin.

5.—Any approach to correctness on these heads will be hopeless without the cordial co-operation of yourself and your subordinate officers. But you must feel that the interests of the people entrusted to your charge are likely to be so much benefited by the advance of statistical science that his Lordship entertains no doubt of your making it an imperative duty to further to the utmost possible extent the progress of so useful and highly important an enquiry.

I have, &c.

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Fort William, the 26th April, 1837.

[Col. Cour. May 12.]

The Collector of Sylhet applied for an establishment of 37 peons for the punctual realization of revenue from the Khas Mehalah of the district, which exceeded 300 in number. These Mehalah, he observed, were managed by the Putwarree in their respective zillahs, and there was no reason to alter that agency. The Mehalah, however, were so scattered over their jurisdiction, and so small in themselves, that the Putwarree and his Mohurries could not be expected to move to each for the collection of a few annas at a time; and as the Putwarrees are not provided with peons drawing fixed wages, whenever a peon is deputed his yomea or day's wages falls upon the ryots, which proves a burden they cannot long bear, and the Mehalahs deserted.

The Board called on the collector to state whether it was not to be apprehended that the peons, though receiving fixed wages, would still levy tulluhanah from the ryots. To this the collector replied that the exaction of money by native officers was always to be apprehended, but that it was not so likely to happen when there was no valid excuse for it. He added that care would be taken to guard as much as possible against any extortion of the kind by the issue of a proclamation.

The arrangement has been submitted to Government.

Pergunnah Lushkorpore had been pledged by its owner as security for the farmer of pergunnah Baharbund, which latter was under the management of the Court of Wards. The former could not make good the revenues of Baharbund in consequence of his having been deprived of the management of the estate by the orders of the late commissioner of the Bauleah division. Of the property pledged a three annas, ten gundas portion, with a smaller sum of 42,630 rupees was on the 27th August 1836 sold for only 28,200 rupees to make good the deficiency amounting with interest to upwards of rupees 85,000. The commissioner (the officer late in charge) confirmed the sale on the 7th December following. On the 8th ultimo, the commissioner now in charge of the division, reported that his predecessor had passed his order of confirmation at Bhagulpore, and with it sent an attested copy to be issued in the event of no appeal being preferred. Two appeals were preferred, but neither of them was received in the commissioner's office within the time allowed for appeal. The orders referred to were consequently issued to the collector, and Mr. Watson was put in possession about the middle of January last. When the late commissioner was in Calcutta, he received an appeal from Grismarin, the proprietors of pergunnah Lushkorpore, which he forwarded to Bauleah, and which was reported on by the gentleman who has temporary charge of his office, but without any reference to the fact of possession being given. On the 1st February Grismarin petitioned, but obviously too late to stay the order for giving possession. On the 28th of March the Board entered upon a review of the proceedings of the local authorities in regard to the form of pergunnah Baharbund, and finding that the former had been discontinued and prevented from making collections for a certain period, by the intervention and acts of a manager appointed, contrary to all law and justice, by the late commissioner, resolved to cancel the sale of pergunnah Lushkorpore. The ground on which this reversal was founded was that the sale was illegal, because the actual balance due from the former had not been ascertained.

On the receipt of the above-mentioned order in the commissioner's office, Mr. Watson presented a petition praying that his possession of the property might not be disturbed. Mr. Watson urged that he could not legally be dispossessed. The Commissioner directed that Mr. Watson refers to clause first, section XXI. Regulation XI. of 1823, which runs thus: "When the Board of Revenue or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, shall have confirmed a sale, and possession shall have been given to the purchaser, he shall not be liable to be disturbed on the plea of any illegality in the purchase, excepting by decree of a court of justice in a regular suit."

The Board in reply referred to their orders of the 28th March by which the sale had been annulled.—Englishman, May 13.

CONSULTATION, — APRIL 18, 1837.

ANNEXATION OF THE JYNTHERA TERRITORY TO SYLHET AUTHORIZED

Mr. Secretary Mangler, on the 21st of March last, informed the Board, that the Governor of Bengal, has been pleased, with the sanction of the Supreme Government, under Act No. XXI. of 1836, to authorize the general annexation of the Jynthera territory to Sylhet, and to extend to it the general laws and regulations current in the latter district.

CONSULTATION, — APRIL 25.

COMPENSATION TO COLLECTORS, PROMOTION OF MR. J. C. DICK.

Mr. Commissioner T. R. Davidson, of Patna, on the 18th of February last, forwarded to the Board copy of a letter from Mr. Collector Dick, also of Patna, with a bill for compensation allowance for performing the permanent settlement of Beethazaree Pergunnah for the month of December 1836,—the bill having been returned unaudited by the Civil Auditor. The reason assigned by the Civil Auditor was, that the allowance was made to Mr. Dick when he received the salary of Deputy Collector. Mr. Dick, however, urged his demand on the ground of the heavy expences attendant on a march to so great a distance from the Sudder station, and that the sanction of Government, conveyed in a letter from the Secretary to Government, dated the 16th January 1836, made no allusion to the amount of Mr. Dick's salary at the period that the allowance was granted. Mr. Dick concluded by observing, that if the Commissioner concurred in Mr. Dick's view of the case, that it should be submitted for the favourable consideration of Government.

To Mr. Davidson it appeared, that when the Government sanctioned a special compensation of rupees 10 per diem, it was intended that the indulgence should be continued to Mr. Dick whilst he might be actually employed in superintending the settlement of Pergunnah Beethazaree, without reference to his fixed salary; and therefore concluded that his promotion would not be thought by Government a sufficient reason for withdrawing the allowance. It, however, the Board agreed with the above opinion, Mr. Davidson also recommended Mr. Dick's demand being recommended for the favorable consideration of Government.

The Board, in their reference to Government, entirely concurred in the opinions above stated, and further observed, that the deputation of Mr. Dick on the duty above referred to, could reasonably be considered,—adverting to his seniority at the station,—to have deprived him of the appointment of acting Collector during the absence of the late Mr. Jennings, which, in all probability, would have devolved upon him if his services had not been required for the advantage of Government, on the special duty for which he was deputed to Beshthazaree. The Board also stated, that Mr. Dick's exertions were attended with the satisfactory result held out by him as to the probable extent of his collections; that the result must be held to be very creditable to Mr. Dick, and it indicated that the duties had been conducted with the zeal and diligence which were expected, and that he has upheld the character for those qualities, which led to his being entrusted with that responsible office.

On consideration of the circumstances under which the "special compensation allowance" of ten rupees per day was assigned to Mr. Dick, the Board were disposed to consider, that although a Collector,—and generally under the existing practice entitled to deputation allowance whilst employed in the interior of his district,—it was not the intention of Government that it should be reduced, or abrogated on Mr. Dick's promotion, in as much as it was granted for a distinct and special service of great responsibility, under special circumstances of extraordinary expense, which should be considered altogether a real loss, with reference to Mr. Dick's position at Patna, when his services were urgently called for in the other direction. The Board, therefore, solicited that the Governor-General would be pleased to take the subject into consideration; and hoped that the services rendered by Mr. Dick,—as a special case not to be cited as a precedent, would be rewarded, and that his compensation allowance should be continued throughout his deputation in Beshthazaree.

Mr. Secretary Mangles, on the 11th ultimo, stated that the strictness of the general rule which debars officers of the rank of Collectors from any claim to compensation allowance whilst employed in tents, on any duty, in any part of their respective districts, (on the just grounds that the salary of a Collector was intended to cover all such incidental expenses) prevented His Lordship from complying with the Board's recommendation in favor of Mr. J. C. Dick. Mr. Mangles was instructed to add, that the Governor considers it impossible to grant to an individual an indulgence of the nature solicited, without establishing a precedent,—whatever declaration may be made that it should not be so used.

His Lordship, however, was so well pleased at the testimony borne by the Board to Mr. Dick's meritorious services, which went to confirm all previous reports upon his official proceedings, that His Lordship had resolved upon raising that officer to the higher grade of Collector, on a salary of rupees 25,000 per annum, from the 1st of April. The Board were requested to inform Mr. Dick of his promotion, accordingly.

On the 15th January 1884, Government sent to the Board for report, a petition from Raja Gourbullub against the assessment of Mouzah Shashpore, &c., five villages in Beerbhoom, held rent free since the year 1763, or two years previous to the Company's accession to the dewanny. The case had been decided in favour of the raja by the collector, Mr. Taylor, and against him by the special commissioner.

The Board were divided in their opinions. The second member, Mr. W. W. Bird, held that the land having been possessed by the raja's ancestors prior to the Company's accession, the grant was valid under section 2, Regulation XIX. of 1793, that the land would not have been liable to assessment if the tenure had been registered as required by section 25 of that regulation; that the petitioner had shown sufficient cause for the non-registration; and that the power of remitting the penalty for non-registration, reserved to the Governor-General in Council by Section 26, should be exercised in his favour. The senior member saw no reason for complying with the request of Gourbullub that would not be valid in all similar cases, to the great detriment of the state. He quoted the opinion of many officers who concurred in considering Gourbullub's sunnud a spurious document, observing that it was not necessary to refer to the sentiments of Mr. Taylor (who as collector of Beerbhoom had admitted the document) since his decision had been set aside. He added that the plea of long possession would have been entitled to consideration, but for the production of a forged sunnud.

The Government on the 19th May required a report on the following points:

First, the legal period within which the tenure in question ought to have been registered, and the persons who were in possession during that period, i. e., whether a person who had usurped the rights of Gourbullub was in possession during the period in question, and the opinion of the Board how far the fact of that person's having been in possession should be admitted as a reason for remitting in favour of the petitioner the penalty attached to non-registration.

Secondly, the opinion of the second member as to the character of the sunnud, and the opinions of both members as to the propriety of making the petitioner responsible for the fabrication of that document, which is stated to have been filed by the usurper.

Thirdly, the proofs which establish the possession of the lands by the family anterior to the Company's accession.

On the 11th November the Board reported their opinions.

On the first point it was remarked that the period for registry in Beerbhoom expired in 1203 B. S. or 1796, during the life time of Rajah Rajbullub, the adoptive father of Gourbullub.

On the second point the second member gave it as his opinion that as the sunnud, a suspicious document, was put in by the usurper, Rajah Gourbullub was not responsible for it. He further remarked that the reason, founded on an alleged discrepancy between the dates, which was assigned by the special commissioner for rejecting the document, was not conclusive,—the discrepancy consisting entirely in that officer's having overlooked the fact of one date being expressed in the year of the Hegira and another according to the Bengali style.*

* On such small mistakes thousands of wretches are liable to be despoiled of their Property!—PANTER'S DAWN.

In regard to the third point it was stated that the proof of long possession consisted in oral and documentary evidence which the special commissioners had declared to be satisfactory.

The report concluded with stating that even if the grant had been registered, it was not of a denomination which under the rule contained in Section 12, Regulation III. of 1828, could be considered hereditary.

On the 25th ultimo, Mr. Secretary Mangles communicated to the Board copy of a letter, which had been addressed to Mr. E. Macnaghten, the assignee to the estate of Messrs. Colvin and Co., from which it appeared that that gentleman had requested a new trial, on the ground, that the five villages claimed as Lakhiraj had been registered in the Bazar Zamin Duffer prior to the enactment of Regulation XIX. of 1793, and that subsequent registration was thereby rendered unnecessary.

His lordship argued, in reply to that statement, that the previous registration could not satisfy the demands of the law of 1793; but he was pleased, in consideration of long possession of the land, to decide that Rajah Gourbullub should be admitted to engage for it on the favourable terms, laid down in clause 2, section 8, of the regulation above cited, namely, to pay only half the revenue at which the estates may be assessed.—Englishman May, 16.

CIRCULARS IN THE REVENUE DEPARTMENT.

To the Commissioner of the Revenue for the Division of

Mis. 2. Sir,—It is the desire of the Board that the object for which the Government has been pleased to declare that, in the appointment of Deputy Collectors under Regulation 9, 1833, a preference among Candidates in all other respects equally qualified, will be given to those who may be acquainted with the English language, should be kept distinctly in view by all Officers under their jurisdiction.

2d. I am therefore directed to request, that you will on your own part, and through your subordinates, encourage as much as possible the use of the English language in the transaction of public business and in public correspondence by Uncovenanted Deputy Collectors qualified to take advantage of such encouragement, and that you will receive and cause to be received from them in English, all letters, reports and statements, which at present are usually furnished in that language by Covenanted Officers.

3d. Unless you can point out sufficient reason why it should be otherwise, the Board consider there can exist no necessity for these Officers or their Subordinates using the Persian language in the execution of their duties, which may be exclusively transacted either in English or Bengalee.

4th. The Board hope to be able at no distant date to propose a definite plan for the discontinuance of the Persian language in Revenue Offices, and the substitution for it of English and the vernacular language of each Province,—and they will gladly receive from you any suggestions upon the subject that you may be able to supply. Meanwhile they are utterly opposed to forcing the use of Persian into new offices, and upon a new class of Officers, who rarely understand that language, and they are satisfied that you will gladly co-operate with them in preventing such abuse from arising or extending.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

2d. It is expected you will observe that the several Special Deputy Collectors shall confine their operations, in the first instance, to the investigation of tenures claimed as rent-free, and to large and valuable tracts of unquestionable recent alluvial formation.

3d. With reference to the second paragraph of the Orders of Government, you will impress on your Subordinates due attention to the anxiety of the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal "that no unnecessary alarm should be given to the Landholders by the institution of Suits on insufficient grounds to establish the liability to assessment of lands attached to permanently settled Mehals but alleged to be 'lowfee,' except when the permanent Settlement was formed on a detailed and recorded measurement,—as in Chittagong or Sylhet,—or where,—as in the districts bordering upon the Sunderbuns, or upon the forests which skirt the valley of the Ganges both on the east and west, there existed at the date of that arrangement very extensive wastes, certainly not included within the limits of any Estate, and of which the boundaries in relation to the cultivated lands adjacent were pretty accurately known it must always be a matter of extreme difficulty to urge such claims, without, at the same time, (whether the attempt be eventually successful or otherwise,) affording plausible grounds for the allegation that the Officers of Government are disposed to break the faith of the permanent settlement."

You will enjoin them receiving with great caution all information tendered by informers, and carefully to abstain from giving such encouragement to that class of persons as might enable them to impose upon and plunder the people.

5th. With reference to the cases referred to in the 4th paragraph of the Government orders, you will the Sudder Boards desire, instruct the Special Deputy Collectors in your Division to report through you, for the Sudder Board's orders, whenever a strong prima facie case of lowfee exists to warrant their soliciting permission to institute a Suit on behalf of Government to investigate the point of liability to assessment.

To L. J. HALLIDAY, Esq.

Secretary to the Sudder Board of Revenue.

Revenue } Sir,—The Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal considers it to be very desirable that the several Special Deputy Collectors should conduct their operations, in the first instance, to the investigation of tenures claimed as rent free, and to large and valuable tracts of unquestionably recent alluvial formation.

2 His Lordship is very anxious that no unnecessary alarm should be given to the Landholders, by the institution of suits, on insufficient grounds, to establish the liability to assessment of Lands, attached to permanently settled Mehals, but alleged to be 'lowfee,' except where the permanent Settlement was formed on a detailed and recorded measurement,—as in Chittagong or Sylhet,—or where,—as in the Districts bordering upon the Sunderbuns, or upon the forests which skirt the Valley of the Ganges both on the East and West, there existed at the date of that arrangement very extensive wastes, certainly not included within the limits of any Estate, and of which the boundaries, in relation to the cultivated lands adjacent, were pretty accurately known, it must always be a matter of extreme difficulty to urge such claims, without, at the same time, (whether the attempt be eventually successful or otherwise) affording plausible grounds for the allegation that the Officers of Government are disposed to break the faith of the permanent settlement.

3 For these reasons, the Government requests that the Board will issue general instructions to the Special Deputy Collectors, to defer all investigations regarding alleged lowfee lands until they shall have disposed of all the Lakhiraj cases on their respective files. They should also be directed to receive with great caution all information tendered by informers, and carefully to abstain from giving such encouragement to that class of persons as might enable them to impose upon and plunder the people.

4 These restrictive orders are not intended to apply to lands in the 24-Pargunnahs, Jessore, or Backergunge, reclaimed from the Sunderbun Jungles since the date of the permanent settlement, nor, of course to Chittagong or Sylhet. And as regards tracts, really lowfee, existing in other quarters,—as is understood to be the case, for example, with respect to some of the Pargunnahs of Birhoot,—the Sudder Board are authorized, on being satisfied by the Special Deputy Collector's Report, through the Commissioner, that a strong "prima facie" case exists to warrant proceedings, to grant permission to the former Officer to institute a suit on behalf of Government to investigate the point of liability to assessment.

ARRARS OF SETTLEMENTS, APPOINTMENT OF F. J. HALLIDAY, ESQ.

Mr. Secretary Mangles, on the 11th ultimo, addressed the Board regarding the great arrears of settlements, permanent and temporary, pending in the office of the Sudder Board, as having engaged the anxious attention of the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal, who feels that the whole effect of the resumption operations, and the settlement in numerous and important cases of the rights and claims of the people and the Government, are in abeyance until a satisfactory commencement is made in submitting the settlement proceedings, revised by the Board, for His Lordship's sanction; and it having been ascertained by a demiofficial reference to Mr. C. W. Smith, shortly before that officer left India, that there were at that time on less than 957 cases, involving a Sudder Juma of rupees 3,83,646 to be disposed of, (to which it is understood, and, indeed, was to be expected, that considerable additions have since been made, whilst not more than one or two have been reported to Government) His Lordship requested that the Board would favor him, with the least possible delay, with their sentiments, in regard to the manner in which the very heavy arrears above specified may most conveniently and certainly be got rid of, at the same time that the current influx of such reports from the many officers now engaged in the formation of detailed settlements is kept pace with, and a new accumulation presented.

It occurred to His Lordship that these objects would be best attained by employing the Secretary to the Board, Mr. Halliday, in clearing of the arrears of the settlement reports, whilst the member to whom that appointment has been assigned, in succession to Mr. Smith, takes up those that have come in within the last two or three months, (fixing whatever date the actual number to be disposed of may shew to be most convenient,) and those that may daily come to hand, another officer being appointed to take charge of Mr. Halliday's general duties, as an officiating additional Secretary to the Board.

His Lordship requested that the Board would report their opinion upon this plan, or suggest any that they may think preferable at their earliest convenience.

Mr. Mangles was instructed to add, that the Governor was of opinion that the member to whom the superintendence and report of settlement operations is entrusted, ought not to take any part in the current business, or ordinary sittings of the Board, except to arbitrate a difference on a subject of first rate importance—minor points of difference may as formerly be submitted at once to Government.

SENIOR MEMBER'S MINUTE.

Having so often witnessed the very griveous consequences attending a frequent succession of Secretaries to our Board, the very serious obstruction to the public business on every such occasion, created by the unavoidable delay which must occur before a new Secretary can obtain any information of the previous records, or the numerous subjects calling for constant, prompt and retrospective intelligence, I deprecate most earnestly our Secretary being taken from his present office and entreat the junior member will join me in soliciting the Governor of Bengal to abandon this part of the suggested arrangement.

2. With the utmost deference I propose, that we should state to His Lordship that it appears to us that the accumulated arrears of settlement are too great for it to be possible that any individual singly should be able duly to investigate and report on them within any period which would at all adequately relieve the mischievous consequences at present occasioned by the whole effect of the resumption operations, and the settlements in numerous and important cases of the rights and claims of the people and of the Government, being in abeyance until this very important duty is accomplished.

3d. It is reported that 1251 Settlement records are now collected in our office for investigation and report and not commenced upon, and that the annual juma of the estates amount to sicca rupees 5,15,318. I presume that with reference to the great delay that has occurred and the paramount importance of availing further procrastination, that it is indisputably desirable that, it possible, the whole of this arrear of settlements should be investigated and reported to Government within this year, or perhaps within six months at latest. Now six months, deducting Sundays, and not allowing for any other intervals, give 156 days and that number multiplied by 8 gives 1248*. Now two very efficient public officers unremittingly employed and with nothing else to do, would not, I think, be able on an average to accomplish and report on more than 3 settlements per day each, if so much; whilst allowing for occasional indisposition of either themselves or of any or their subordinate officers, I believe it would be found that this mass of duty would employ the best exertions of two thoroughly qualified public officers (undertaking it without delay) to the close of this year to execute it perfectly and satisfactorily.

4. Employing a less effective strength to so arduous an undertaking, must most objectionably prolong its completion whilst no saving will be obtained since the expense of two officers for 8 months, or if one officer for 16 months will be the same though the advantage to the Government and to the people would be lamentably differently.

5th. In regard to the present arrears, I have to propose that either they be assigned to two efficient public officers to cleaf off, or that these records be returned to the Commissioners from whose offices they are received, and that they be returned respectively until their settlements have been all reported to Government from all revenue duties, the Collectors subordinate to them being for that period required to correspond with this Board direct. The former of these arrangements as the records are already here is perhaps preferable.

6th. It will, I consider, be as much as any single officer can accomplish, to dispose punctually and without suffering any arrear to accumulate of the settlements which will daily arrive taking into account also those that may have been received within the last month, more particularly as a very great accession to the number of settlement records received, must arrive within the two ensuing months. I would therefore recommend, that with the inconsiderable exception mentioned, to Mr. Tucker should assigned the disposal of the settlement records which may daily come to hand.

7th. I have not delayed an instant in obeying the orders of the Governor of Bengal to report my opinion without delay, and I beg to plead the exceeding hurry with which this paper has been written in excuse for its imperfections.

(Signed) J. PATTLE.

Sudder Board of Revenue, 15th April 1837.

P. S. The forms of settlement papers in use in the upper provinces, would not suit the settled provinces: the settlement officers in the upper provinces are able and experienced, and their settlements are most closely investigated and examined by the Commissioners; our settlement officers are inferior, and the settlement records come to us direct.

* Arrears 1251.

† 23 cases per mensem only.

MINUTE OF THE JUNIOR MEMBER.

1. I concur with the senior member generally in considering that the removal of our Secretary at the present moment would be attended with very serious detriment to the discharge of public business.

2nd. Mr. Halliday's services are, I consider, of greater value to the Government as at present employed, than they would be if transferred to the settlement department.

3rd. Mr. Halliday, during the year he has been in charge, has introduced very important reforms into the details of the Board's Office, the consequences of which are now beginning to be felt in the facility with which documents and references, not procurable under a week in former days, are obtainable, and in the dispatch* with which current business in general is conducted.

4th.—Some very important subjects, moreover, are now pending in which Mr. Halliday has possessed himself with information from our records which cannot fail to be highly valuable to the Board in assisting their deliberations.

5th.—I allude to rules for the investigation of Lakheraj tenures, to the revival of the sale laws, to the revival of the Batwarrah laws, to the entire reform of the present system of accounts in Collectors' Offices, and other matters of equal importance, in all of which the information collected would be lost to the Board were Mr. Halliday's services confined, as proposed, to the revival of the settlements.

6th. And no new Secretary, however great his abilities, could possibly supply his place in the general management of the details of the office, without considerable experience, and just as the new Secretary's services were becoming really useful, he would in all probability be displaced by the return of Mr. Halliday to his office.

7th. It appears that there are at the present time upwards of 1250 settlements at an annual Jumma of 5,15,318 rupees before the Board, pending orders.

8th. It appears also that from 1st January to 30th June last, Mr. Smith disposal of settlements as follows.

Permanent,.....	141
Temporary,.....	96
	237+

And that during the succeeding six months his time was so much occupied by the preparation of operation reports, that the cases disposed of fell very far short of the number above stated.

9th. Now no man could possibly work harder than Mr. Smith did, and it is not to be supposed that a greater progress will be made by any one officer than was effected by him.

10th. Mr. Smith, it seems, disposed of about 14 cases on an average during each working day of the month, while he had no operation reports to draw off his attention.

* From April 1836 to April 1837, there were letter received 4,922 Dispatched 3,789.

† From a statement signed by the Head Assistant settlement Department, and before me since this minute was drafted, I find that Mr. Smith actually disposed of 295 cases only in 13 months, from 28th December 1835, to end of January 1837, which gives an average of about 23 cases per mensem only.

11th. Assuming 400 cases per diem to be all that one persons could get through, besides drafting the operation reports, it would thus take one officer about 8 years to work off the existing arrears alone.

12th. If the cases are to be continued to be reported as at present, I should say then, that instead of an officiating additional Secretary, one shall require one extra temporary member at least for the next 3 or 4 years.

13th. But it appears to me that the mode of reporting settlements at present followed, should be modified, and that the practice of the western Board should be approximated to.

14th. The Collectors, I understand, in the Western provinces, only forward to the Commissioners an English detailed report, with English Tabular statements written on two sheets of folio. The Commissioners to test the Collector's proceedings, send for the Persian records in a few cases only. In all other cases they make their report at length to the Board, on the papers furnished in English by the Collector, after hearing the objections of petitioners, requiring explanations, &c., and the Board after satisfying themselves of the general correctness of the settlements, report the cases of a whole Pergunnah to Government in one short letter, forwarding with it the Commissioner's and Collector's reports, and the figured statements in original.

16th. Now the interests at stake in the upper Provinces, are not less valuable than those in the lower, and the settlement officers in the latter are equally entitled to confidence with those in the upper. And I see no good reason why the same system generally speaking should not be followed.

17th. It is evident, that by the present arrangement the most important part of the duty of 12 Commissioner's is thrown upon one member of the Sudder Board of Revenue. It is evident also, that the facility of reference, and local enquiry, of correction of error, of rebutting excuses, and objections made by parties to the settling officer's proceedings, is much diminished by the transfer of the entire record, and that in every case from the settling officer direct to the Board; and that the means of doing justice to the interests of Government, without intrenching on the rights of the people, are crippled and protracted.

18th. I would suggest that whether it would not be a more advisable plan that the services of one of the judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut should be transferred for a time to the Sudder Board of Revenue. That the officer transferred should consult with Mr. Tucker as to the most advisable modification of the existing arrangements involving the re-engagement of the services of the Commissioners in the preliminary check and correction of settlements: a better plan being hit for the future, existing arrears might then be disposed of by the two members conjointly, the operation reports being also simultaneously prepared. The experience of a twelve month would shew what progress was made under this arrangement, and how long the services of a 4th member might continue to be required. Meanwhile, as I understand, the state of business in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut would admit the transfer of one judge without inconvenience, no additional expence would be incurred.

19th. Finally, I take the opportunity of recording my opinion, and my sentiments are, I believe, in full accordance with those of the 2nd member, Mr. Smith, that the Secretary to the Sudder Board of Revenue, is an officer who should be removed as seldom as possible, there being no equivalent for that knowledge of details and method of management of a large establishment, which arrangements alone can afford, and that true policy and true economy would be consulted by assigning an increase of emolument to an efficient Secretary who, from his standing in the service, would otherwise become entitled to promotion, instead of removing him with that object. It must be understood as speaking on the general principle and not merely with reference to the particular Secretary now in office.

The 17th April 1837. (Signed) H. WATKINS

OFFICIATING MEMBER'S MINUTE.

Nature of Settlement	Number of Ditto	Annual Jumma

I took my seat at the Board on the 17th ultimo, since when my time has been very much occupied with references from the other members and recording my opinion on some very heavy and important cases.

I have gone through the reports and papers of seven or eight settlements only, in most of which intermediate orders were required, which prevented of course, for the time, the submission of the cases to Government.

On the present plan, I see no prospect whatever of my being able to dispose of the existing arrears of settlement work in any reasonable time, so that the future accession to the list shall not be delayed in like manner. To clear the file, and enable the Board to keep pace with the settlement officers, is unquestionably a matter of the last importance, whether as concerns the interests of the estate, or the rights of the parties. Under the arrangement suggested in Mr. Secretary Mangle's letter, much may be done, but it is quite impossible for me to throw out even a hint at present as to the period at which the business may be accomplished, so much depends on the manner in which the settlements have been conducted, drawn up, and submitted to the Board. The Secretary and myself may devote our individual attention to the duty, but defective settlements may materially thwart our exertions, as we could not submit them for the confirmation of Government in an incomplete state. However, the Government may confidently rely on our doing our utmost to meet their very reasonable wishes on this point, and I am not prepared to suggest any other arrangement better calculated to secure the object in view. The method of our joint operations might be left for future consideration, either to divide the work each taking a portion and acting independently of the other, or any other plan which actual practice and experience may afterwards suggest as an improvement. Probably the great majority of temporary settlements may be disposed of by the Board without reference to Government, and it may be a question for future consideration, if we do not make the rapid progress anticipated, or expected of us, whether the Government might not authorize the Board to confine settlements in perpetuity to a certain limit say 500 rupees annual jumma, merely submitting monthly lists of such cases for their information, and that of the Hon'ble Court of Directors.

Any other subordinate arrangements for expediting the business on hand, which a more practical acquaintance with the subject will doubtless enable us to suggest, may be afterwards submitted for the approval and sanction of Government if necessary.

(Signed) C. TUCKER, Officiating Member.

15th April 1837.

The above minutes were forwarded to Government on the 18th ultimo by the Board, and Mr. Secretary Mangle, on the 2nd instant, forwarded for the information of the Board, under orders of the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General, copy of Mr. Mangle's address to the Secretary to the Supreme Government, from whom His Lordship had received authority to carry into effect the arrangement proposed.

It communicated the appointment of Mr. C. F. Trevelyan to officiate as additional Secretary to the Board during Mr. Halliday's employment in the special duty of bringing up the arrears of settlement reports. The Governor did not deem it necessary to issue separate instructions to the latter officer.

His Lordship thought it desirable that the duties under the jurisdiction of the Board, should be divided according to the pending number, and expected influx of settlement reports between Mr. Tucker and Mr. Halliday, so as to assign to the one and to the other officer an equal number of old and new returns. If a particularly heavy influx of reports from any district, as Chhota, for example, renders the original division unequal, the matter may be re-adjusted. But the dispatch of business will certainly be greater under this plan, which will permit each revising officer to employ with advantage the knowledge which he already possesses, or may acquire in the course of his labours, of a particular district or class of districts than if all the old reports were made over to Mr. Halliday, and all the new ones retained by Mr. Tucker, as suggested that Messrs. Pattle and Walters would conduct the current business of the Board referring for Mr. Tucker's arbitration only those cases of first rate importance on which they may differ, minor points of disagreement may, as formerly, be submitted at once to Government.

His Lordship relied with confidence on the zeal and energy of Messrs. Pattle and Walters. He is well aware that the demand which the exigencies of the public service impose at present upon those gentlemen in the affairs at the head of the Revenue Department, is very heavy, but he feels, and has no doubt that they feel also, the great importance of the objects for the attainment of which such arduous exertions are necessary, and he is assured of their co-operation to the most desirable end of duty and completely carrying into effect those works of reform and improvement which are already, under their superintendence, in progress, and by the success of which the efficiency, order, and prosperity of the Revenue Department in the Lower Provinces will, His Lordship trusts, be permanently established—

CONSULTATION.—TUESDAY, MAY 2, 1837.

IMPORTANT TO DEPUTY COLLECTORS.

Baboo Shishchunder Paulit, recently appointed to the Deputy Collectorate of Baulsah, applied to the Board on the 3d ultimo, to be supplied with a seal of office, a set of Regulations, a tent, an establishment of 4 peons, and an appropriate room for a cutcherry.

The Board have answered the requisitions by allowing a seal and a set of Regulations, and made a reference to Government regarding tents generally for Deputy Collectors, but as to peons, the point has been disposed of by the Commissioner of that place, who has informed the Collector that he would assist his Deputy with peons, and should the Collector not be able to give the Deputy a room for a cutcherry, a reference will also be made to Government on that head.

POTTABS OF SOONDERBUN LANDS.

Mr. Commissioner Figue, on the 20th January last, forwarded a copy of an address from the Commissioner in the Soonderbun with five pottabs and kabbooleats granted to and taken from the Soonderbun grantees, Messrs. D. McDougal and John Storm, and Messrs. David Hare, F. J. Wood, & D. McDougal, for the purpose of being registered.

The Board forwarded the documents to Government, and Mr. Secretary Mangies, on the 18th of April last, informed the Board that the pottabs had been registered.

REMISION OF DUES FROM THE ZEMINDARS OF KOTHIDE, & C. CUTTACK.

Mr. Commissioner Ricketts of Cuttack, on the 16th of March last, submitted to the Board a copy of a letter from the Collector of Pooree, bringing to his notice the circumstances regarding the balances from the zemindars of Kothide, &c., in the hope that the Commissioner would consider them such as to induce him to recommend the absolute remission of them.

It appears that the Collector some time ago cancelled the proprietor's lease for the purpose of bringing the Estate under Khas management, and it was stated that assessment was too high, and the result of three years of Khas management placed that opinion beyond a doubt. The undermentioned sums.—

1243.....5,630—5—9½

have been written off the accounts of that Collectorfship, the assets being deficient to that extent, after paying all expenses of management and the zemindars mahikana.

Of the balance due when the lease was cancelled the following sums have been realized.

Balance for 1240.....	41,797 0 5
Realized by sale of personal property, &c.....	7,100 15 10½
Realized by Mahikana for 1241, 1242 and 1843..	19,175 4 2½
Realized by collections from the Estate for balances.....	9,474 14 5½
	35,771 2 7

6,025 13 10

Balance still outstanding.

The crops from this estate, the Collector learnt of Mr. Colvin, who had visited almost every village in the estates, had suffered most severely, and he anticipated not only large remissions for the current year, but considerable reductions in the jummas of the villages for 1245. The zemindar's prospects in consequence of the general failure of the crops, are of course materially affected, and he is less able to dispense with the little Mahikana to which he will be entitled on the collections. In consideration, therefore, of the over assessment of the estate and of the zemindar's utter want of means to liquidate the amount due, the Collector trusted the Commissioner would recommend that the balance of Company's revenue 6,025-13-10 should be absolutely remitted.

The Board on the 18th ultimo, under the recommendations of the local authorities, submitted the case to Government, advising the remission, and Mr. Secretary Mangies, on the 26th ultimo, informed the Board, that the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal had been pleased to authorize the remission under the circumstances stated.

CONSULTATION, — TUESDAY, MAY 23, 1837.

GREAT ARREARS OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE SUPPER BOARD.

Present—C. E. Trevelyan, Esq., Secretary, James Pattle, Henry Walters, and Charles Tucker, Esqrs., Members.

It appears that the examination of the proceedings of the Board have fallen considerably in arrears, and the reason assigned is, that at present the establishment for that particular purpose is very inefficient. In the course of the consultation, Mr. Fordyce, one of the examiners of the establishment, was summoned before the Board, and on being questioned by the Senior Member, stated, that he had examined 10 months' proceedings in the space of 10 months, and that he, Mr. Fordyce, was frequently taken up with the examination of current correspondence.

The Senior Member desired Mr. Fordyce to put in a written statement of the service done by him, and the Secretary thought that efficient individuals should be employed as examiners; that the present pay of an examiner is only 100 rupees per mensem, but if the Board would recommend it, the Secretary would apply to Government to increase the pay of examiners to 200 rupees a month and employ well-educated persons for the purpose.

The Senior Member observed, that in former years the Senior Member used generally to be answerable for the efficiency of the establishment, but Mr. Trevelyan presumed, the Secretary was the fittest person to be answerable for the efficiency and conduct of the establishment, and that the arrears now discovered existed when he took charge of the office; but that he would desire Mr. Fordyce to furnish a weekly report of his labour, and give him such assistance as he conveniently could by other hands.

APPOINTMENT OF SHAIK ABDULLAH AS DEPUTY COLLECTOR OF MIDNAPORE RE-CONSIDERED.

The appointment of the Shaik, was mooted by the Senior Member, that gentleman having been recently informed that the Shaik is not qualified in several respects for the situation. It was asserted by the Senior Member, that he had not the least knowledge of this appointment, or of its having obtained the sanction of Government, and that it was by the verriest chance that he obtained a knowledge of it. The Senior Member was inclined to attach blame to the uncovenanted hands, but from the facts, so far as we could obtain them, it is evident, that the appointment has been made regularly and in the usual course.

The nomination roll was first of all given to Mr. Walters, the Member, of that division, who, in accordance with the local authorities, ordered a recommendation of the appointment to Government. It then passed in the usual course to the Secretary (as by a rule of the Board, the Member having charge of the division, agreeing with the Commissioner, a reference for the opinion of any other Member is deemed unnecessary) who ordered a draft accordingly; it then went to the uncovenanted assistant who drafts for the division; a draft in the usual form was prepared, it returned again to the Secretary, obtained his approval and order of despatch, and being subsequently signed by him was sent up to Government and the appointment of the Shik was duly sanctioned.

The Board have come to the determination of reconsidering the above appointment, and will immediately address Government on the subject.—Huskaru, May 25.

CONSULTATION.—TUESDAY 11TH APRIL, AND FRIDAY 12TH MAY, 1837.

ARRANGING OF SETTLEMENTS APPOINTMENT OF P. J. HALLIDAY, ESQ

MINUTE BY THE JUNIOR MEMBER.

1st I concur with the senior member generally in considering that the removal of our Secretary at the present moment would be attended with very serious detriment to the discharge of public business.

2nd. Mr Halliday's services are, I consider, of greater value to the Government as at present employed, than they would be, if transferred to the settlement department.

3rd Mr. Halliday during the year he has been in charge has introduced very important reforms into the details of the Board's Office, the consequences of which are now beginning to be felt in the facility with which documents and references, not procurable under a week in former days, are obtainable, and in the dispatch with which current business in general is conducted.

4th—Some very important subjects, moreover, are now pending in which Mr. Halliday has possessed himself with information from our records, which cannot fail to be highly valuable to the board in assisting their deliberations.

5th—I allude to rules for the investigation of Lakheraj tenures to the revival of the silk laws, to the revival of the Butwarrah laws to the entire reform of the present system of accounts in collectors' offices, and other matters of equal importance, in all of which the information collected would be lost to the Board were Mr Halliday's services confined as proposed to the revival of settlements.

6th And no new Secretary, however great his abilities, could possibly supply his place in the general management of the details of the office, without considerable experience, and just as the new Secretary's services were becoming really useful, he would in all probability be displaced by the return of Mr. Halliday to his office.

7th. It appears that there are at the present time upwards of 1250 settlements at an annual jumma of 5,15,318 rupees before the board pending orders.

8th. It appears also that from 1st January to 30th June last, Mr Smith disposed of settlements as follow

Permanent	141

* From April 1836 to April 1837, there were letters received 4,922, Dispatched 3,789.

† From a statement signed by the head assistant settlement Department, laid before me since this minute was drafted, I find that Mr. Smith actually disposed of 296 cases only in 13 months from 28th December 1835 to end of January 1837, which gives an average of about 23 cases per mensem only.

And that during the succeeding six months his time was so much occupied by the preparation of operation reports, that the cases disposed of fell very far short of the number above stated.

9th Now no man could possibly work harder than Mr Smith did, and it is not to be supposed that a greater progress will be made by any one officer than was effected by him.

10th Mr. Smith, it seems, disposed of about 1½ case on an average during each working day of the month, while he had no operation reports to draw off his attention.

11th. Assuming 400 cases per diem to be all that one person could get through, besides drafting the operation reports, it would thus take one officer about 8 years to work off the existing arrears alone.

12th. If the cases are to be continued to be reported as at present, I should say then that instead of an officiating additional secretary, we shall require one extra temporary member at least for the next 3 or 4 years.

13th. But it appears to me that the mode of reporting settlements at present followed should be modified, and that the practice of the western board should be approximated to.

14th I lie collectors, I understand, in the Western provinces, only forward to the commissioners an English detailed report, with English tabular statements written on two sheets of folio. The commissioners, to test the collector's proceedings, send for the Persian records in a few cases only. In all other cases they make their report at length to the Board, on the papers furnished in English by the collector after hearing the objections of petitioners, requiring explanations, &c., and the board after satisfying themselves of the general correctness of the settlements, report the cases of a whole pergunnah to Government in one short letter, forwarding with it the commissioner's and collectors reports and the figured statements in original.

15th Now the interests at stake in the upper provinces are not less valuable than those in the lower, and the settlement officers in the latter are equally entitled to confidence with those in the upper. And I see no good reason why the same system generally speaking should not be followed.

17th. It is evident that by the present arrangement that the most important part of the duty of 12 commissioners is thrown upon one member of the Sudder Board of Revenue. It is evident also, that the facility of reference, of local enquiry, of correction of error, of rebutting excuses, and objections made by parties to the settling officer's proceedings, is much diminished by the transfer of the entire record, and that in every case from the settling officer direct to the Board, and that the means of doing justice to the interests of government without intruding on the rights of the people are crippled and protracted.

18th. I would suggest that whether it would not be a more advisable plan that the services of one of the judges of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut should be transferred for a time to the Sudder Board of Revenue. That the officer transferred should consult with Mr. Tucker as to the most advisable modification of the existing arrangements involving the re-engagement of the services of the commissioners in the preliminary check and correction of settlements a better plan being hit for the future, existing arrears might then be disposed of by the two members conjointly, the operation

2nd. Finally, I take the opportunity of recording my thanks to my Secretaries and, I believe, in full accordance with the wish of the 2nd member, Mr. Smith, that has been referred to the Sudder Board of Revenue, is an officer who should be removed as seldom as possible, there being no equivalent for that knowledge of details and method of management of a large establishment, which experience alone can afford, and that such policy and true economy would be consulted by assigning an increase of emolument to an efficient secretary who, from his standing in the service, would otherwise become entitled to promotion, instead of removing him with that object. I must be understood as speaking on the general principle and not merely with reference to the particular secretary now in office.

17th April 1837 (Signed) H. WALTERS.

N. B.—I read the Government orders and the Senior Member's minute, on Saturday at sunset.

OFFICIATING MEMBER'S MINUTE

I took my seat at the Board on the 17th ultimo, since when my time has been very much occupied with references from the other members and recording my opinion on some very heavy and important cases.

On the present plan I see no prospect whatever of my being able to dispose of the existing arrears of settlement work in any reasonable time, so that, the future accession to the list shall not be delayed in like manner. To clear the file, and enable the Board to keep pace with the settlement officers, is unquestionably a matter of the last importance, whether as concerns the interests of the estate, or the rights of the parties. Under the arrangement suggested in Mr. Secretary Mangle's letter much may be done, but it is quite impossible for me to throw out even a hint at present as to the period at which the business may be accomplished, as much depends on the position in which the settlement have been conducted & drawn up, and submitted to the Board. The Secretary, and myself may devote our best efforts to the duty, but effective settlement can only be effected by the exertions, as we could not submit them, of the confirmation of Government, in an individual case. However, the Government are considerably relieved by our doing our utmost to meet their very respectable wishes on this point, and I am anxious to suggest any other arrangement, better adapted to secure the object in view. The method of settling arrears will be left for future consideration, and I leave the work which takes a portion and hinders the independence of the other, of any other the which will be wrong, but the measure may after all be "settled" as an "interim" one. Probably the whole policy of temporary settlements may be dropped by the Board without reference to Government, and it may be a question for future consideration, even to not make the same progress as the Government has made, whether the Government might not influence the Board to confine settlements in perpetuity to a certain limit, say 500 rupees annual jumma, thereby eliminating monthly lists of such cases for their consideration, and that of the Hon'ble Court of Directors.

Any other subordinate arrangements for expediting the business on hand, which a more practical acquaintance with the subject will doubtless enable us to suggest, may be afterwards submitted for the approval and sanction of Government, if necessary.

(Signed) C. TUCKER, Officiating Member.

15th April 1837.

The above minutes were forwarded to Government on the 18th ultimo by the Board, and Mr. Secretary Mangles on the 2nd instant, forwarded for the information of the Board, under orders of the Right Hon. the Governor-General, copy of Mr Mangles's address to the Secretary to the Supreme Government, from whom his lordship had received authority to carry into effect the arrangement proposed.

It communicated the appointment of Mr. C. E. Frelsman to officiate as additional Secretary to the Board during Mr. Halliday's employment in the special duty of bringing up the arrears of settlement reports. The Governor did not deem it necessary to issue separate instructions to the latter officer.

His lordship thought it desirable that the districts under the jurisdiction of the Board, should be divided according to the pending number, and expected influx of settlement reports between Mr. Tucker and Mr. Halliday, so as to assign to the one and to the other officer an equal number of old and new returns. If a particularly heavy influx of reports from any district, as Chittagong for example, render the original division unequal, the matter may be re-adjusted. But the dispatch of business will certainly be greater under this plan, which will permit each revising officer to employ with advantage the knowledge which he already possesses, or may acquire in the course of his labours, of a particular district or class of districts, than if all the old reports were made over to Mr. Halliday, and all the new ones retained by Mr. Tucker, as suggested by Messrs. Pattle and Walters would conduct the current business of the Board, referring for Mr. Tucker's arbitration only those cases of first rate importance on which they may differ, minor points of disagreement may, as formerly be submitted at once to Government.

His Lordship relied with confidence on the zeal and energy of Messrs. Pattle and Walters. He is well aware that the demand which the exigencies of the public service impose at present upon those gentlemen in the affairs at the head of the Revenue Department is very heavy, but he feels, and has no doubt that they feel also, the great importance of the objects for the attainment of which such arduous exertions are necessary; and he is assured of their co-operation to the most efficient end of duty and completely carrying into effect those works of reform and improvement which are already under their superintendence, in progress, and by the success of which the efficiency, order, and propriety of the Revenue Department in the Lower Provinces, will, he trusts, be permanently established.

COMMITTEE, TUESDAY, 9th MAY, 1837.

ESTATE—KIAMUT, CHOWDHAT TURWAS, MAJRA, SHAWA.

Mr. Commissioner Hawkins of Shauleah, on the 20th April last, submitted for the consideration and orders of the Board some papers connected with the sale of Pergunnah Kiamut Chowdhut Turwas.

That estate was sold for arrears of revenue by the Collector of Shauleah on the 30th December last, and was purchased jointly by Ram Kissen talookdar and Jaggurnath Nundee, each of them being purchasers of eight annas shares. The sale was confirmed by Mr. Officiating Commissioner Bailow on the 11th of February last.

The Collector on proceeding to the realization of the purchase money, found that Ram Kissen talookdar, one of the purchasers, had died in the mean time, and reported the fact to the Commissioner, stating that the other purchaser, Jaggurnath Nundee, was willing to pay up the whole amount of purchase money, if he was put in possession of the entire estate.

With reference to the working of the sale Roobukaree the Commissioner thought it advisable to direct the Collector to call upon the heirs of the deceased purchaser to state whether they were willing to complete the purchase. The widow of Ram Kissen replied to the call in the first instance, by saying that she could not pay the amount, she afterwards offered that she would pay it, if allowed a month. This application the Commissioner thought it right not to comply with, but directed the Collector to call upon her to pay the sum in ten days, on failure of which all right derivable from the incomplete purchase of Ram Kissen, would be annulled under Clause 1st Section XXI, Regulation XI of 1822.

In the event of the money not being paid, the Commissioner wished to be informed what should be done. Should the sale be set aside, or should the entire purchase money be received from the remaining purchaser, and the sale be thus completed with him? It appeared to the Commissioner that there was a little irregularity in the sale, by which a difficulty has now been created in consequence of the death of one of the purchasers. The Commissioner added that the defaulting proprietor has never urged any objection against the sale.

The Board, on the 9th instant, instructed the Commissioner that the sale may be concluded with the remaining purchaser if the widow of the deceased joint purchaser do not pay the amount of that share.

The Board at the same time requested, that to prevent the recurrence of such dilemmas, the Commissioner should instruct the Collector, that he is always to cancel a sale and re-advertise the estate, if the whole amount of purchase money is not paid when demanded of the purchaser, or purchasers, and further that more than one purchaser can only be considered as joint and undivided purchasers of the whole estate (with exception to shares of estates sold when under Butwarrah) and could not be held as purchasers of shares of an undivided estate, whatever may be their private understanding.

SALE OF PERGUNNAH TURT BATTIA—NUDDEAH.

Mr. Commissioner Pigou, on the 24th April last, transmitted, for the purpose of being laid before the Board, a Account sale in English.

Collector's Roobocarie, 17th April 1837.

Collector's Roobocarie, of sale 31st December 1837.

Date of sale 23d February 1837, date of confirmation 31st March.

petition of Appeal from the confirmation of the sale, with his replies to the allegations set forth in the petition.

ALLEGATIONS.

I. The petitioner stated that a ten anna share of Kiamut Batta, recorded in the name of Hariadun Mookerjee, at a Sudder Jumma of rupees 1,500, belongs to himself, and his sharers, and was disposed of at public sale by the Collector of Nuddeah on the 13th Falgoun last, in satisfaction of a balance of rupees 1,390 9-6 for the sum of rupees 6,800.

II That the above sale was confirmed by the Commissioner, and the plea in the petition subsequently preferred overruled on the grounds of the sale having been already confirmed. Against the validity of the sale the petitioner urged.

First. That the Collector's ihtahar specifies the 15th Choith, as the day of sale, whereas the sale took place on the 13th Falgoun.

Second. That he tendered the balance on the 10th Choith and that the Collector refused to accept it.

III That the Estate was sold far below its value.

The Board informed Mr. Pigou on the 9th instant, that they saw no reason to disturb the proceedings of the local authorities and that the Board have accordingly rejected the petition.

HOOGLY COLLEGE—STIPENDS TO CERTAIN STUDENTS.

Mr. Commissioner Lewis, of Mooredabad, on the 21st of March last, called the attention of the Board to a letter from Mr. Commissioner H. Walters, of the 31st December, in which the continuance of stipends to certain students in the Hooghly College, from the Imambarah trust funds, was recommended.

The subject was brought to the notice of Mr. Lewis by the Principal, Dr. Wise, and it appears that the young men in question are considerably inconvenienced by the delay in the decisions of their claims.

The Board on the 17th instant sanctioned the renewal of the stipends of four students, Moghal Jan, Ali Baksh Sydar Ali, and Raza Ali for three years from the present date. In case of the decease of any of the individuals mentioned within the above period, their pensions to lapse to the endowment.

TULUNAH OF PRONS—ZILLAH BEHAR.

Mr. Commissioner Davidson, of Patna, on the 27th March last, submitted for the consideration and orders of the Board, copies of a letter to his address from the Superintendent of settlement in Zillah Behar, and his reply thereto.

the Board of Revenue had agreed with his predecessor in opinion, that the Tuluhanah should not be levied from persons whose attendance is required. For the Native Revenue Officer and settlement officers) and connected with the interests of the State, as has been the case in the past. Mr. Houlton was therefore directed to forward contingent bills for all sums thus expended, either by himself, or those subordinate to him.

As the validity of the Board had been obtained to the contrary, the Superintendent argued that it would be almost impossible for him to trouble them any further, and as it seemed to him possible that the Government was not fully apprised of the extent of expenditure and the importance of the measure which has been authorized, and as Mr. Houlton did not in his report enter any estimate, it appeared advisable to afford some more distinct information on these points which may tend to obviate future difficulties and dissatisfaction.

The Superintendent stated that very lately an account was entered by the Nazir of his Court, purporting to show the amount due for Tuluhanah for one quarter, viz from August to the end of October, the sum total was 818 rupees 10 annas.

It was true that a controlling power is vested in the Superintendent, and that he is expected to adopt measures for restraining this expenditure within the limits of moderation, and availing himself of that privilege, he has reduced the bill in question most materially, but intimated that if it is deemed advisable to pursue the present system, the expense will continue to increase in proportion to the number of settlements which he hoped to augment.

Without enumerating the documents of various descriptions which are circulated through the Nazir, Mr. Houlton observed that the greater portion consisted of dustucks and notices served on Putwarries. With regard to the former, the cost of a summons to account for balances due, appeared in all equity chargeable to those who choose wilfully to incur them, and the practice therefore hitherto prevalent, has not in this respect, been altered, but as concerns the Putwarries and others concerned and summoned during settlements, both temporary and perpetual, Mr. Houlton would argue more at length.

That no settlement whatever takes place without the full knowledge of the parties interested, Mahiks, Seyh Ryuts, Putwarrees, or whoever they may be, and that a proclamation requiring their attendance is invariably issued, before any proceedings are held, how then can those (Mr. Houlton questioned) who neglected to warn the authorities, be considered in any other light than as wilful absentees, and is it not reasonable that they and not the Government, should defray the costs resulting from their contumacy, which are individually so trifling, though in the aggregate enormous; for it is to be remembered, that the settlement officer is on the spot, or in its vicinity, and that the Tuluhanah only amounts to two annas. It is entirely owing to the convenience so detrimental to the Government interests, which every where exists between the Putwarrees and the Hakdars, and to the mal-practices and bad faith of both, that so many notices are required, to the vast extent of the duties of the settlement officers. The Putwarrees and Landholders then, of those Mouzas under settlement, since they fail in their duty by absenting themselves, ought really to pay the fees who are sent to enforce obedience, the Putwarrees and Hakdars situated in the vicinity of the Mouza, under assessment, and whose evidence is frequently required as connected with its completion. It is not as if the interests of the Government are alone at stake, all the neighbouring landholders are most intimately concerned in the adjustment of various disputes and the demarcation of boundaries, and disadvantages of non appearance would be felt almost wholly by those parties, and as it is mainly for their convenience that they are summoned, Mr. Houlton was of opinion, that the State is not called upon to bear the expense. Their Putwarrees .00, are bound by the nature and terms of their appointment to be present.

Mr. Houlton thought that these, and all incidental charges of a like description, are not paid either by the Putwarrees or Hakdars, or by this, or that individual, they are always entered and accounted for under the head of village expenses, under which denomination they appeared to Mr. Houlton to be legitimately classed. All landholders and farmers when engaging with the Government, understand that they are to defray these and similar items connected with the usual proceedings of the various courts, and hence that Mr. Houlton never meet with any complaint on the subject when settling villages, nor ever heard of any being made elsewhere.

In concluding, Mr. Houlton observed, that the subject is one of considerable importance. The precedent being once established, the measure as yet adopted only for Behar, would, he supposes, become general, thereby involving the expenditure of thousands on the part of Government.

Mr. Commissioner Davidson, however, brought to the Board's notice the circumstance of no similar charges ever having been transmitted by the settlement officers, employed in other districts of the division; still in no instance was a complaint preferred, nor did the Commissioner believe that the charge made against the person summoned has heretofore been thought a hardship.

The Board informed the Commissioner that they saw no reason to depart from the rule formerly laid down regarding the liability of Government for Tuluhanah in the cases alluded to by Mr. Houlton.

They are, however, of opinion, that much money might be saved were Mr. Houlton to put into practice the plan experimentally adopted by the revenue officers of the Commissioner's division, of entertaining fixed poodahs, and serving notices and summonses through them, assigning to each as many notices as ones served by one individual.

The Board thought it in either case proper to warn the Superintendent of Khas Mehals that processes are not inordinately issued, and that no expense not indispensable is incurred.—Harkaru, May 26.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA

INFANT SCHOOL.—The Calcutta Infant School does not appear to have made any progress in the school for Christian children, and in consequence the expenses have been reduced, and Mrs Perkins, the mistress of the school, has been permitted by the Society, during the past year, to transfer her services to the Female Orphan Asylum. An attempt to apply the system to native infants, through the medium of the English language, entirely failed, and a similar result attended a school set up under charge of a native, for which lessons were prepared by Mr. Perkins, and the names of the objects and figures represented in the lesson cards printed in Bengallee characters. However, under Mr. Perkins's personal management, a native school in the Chitpore Road, in a room belonging to Baboo Gourmohun Mody, has attracted a daily attendance of 70 to 80 children between 2 and 7 years old, and the number is increasing. Mr. Perkins has also instructed six young men, to enable them to take charge of small schools elsewhere, and endeavours are making to disseminate the system.

AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATION.—An association denominated the Australian Association, has been formed to keep up a constant communication between Australia and this country. Invalids will be able to secure good accommodation in their passage to Australia, through the agency of this Association.

MEDICAL OFFICERS.—Some time ago a reference was made to Government, as to whether the medical officers at civil stations were to be permitted to practice among the European residents in the interior of districts. Government have now decided that civil surgeons are to be allowed to practice, subject to certain conditions which make their public duties, and that very properly, the first consideration. But in urgent and particular cases, a departure from the letter of the conditions is said to be admissible.

INLAND CUSTOM HOUSE.—A rumour has gained credit among the natives in the market, that the inland customs are again about to be established, and has created a great sensation amongst them. The report is totally false.

THE BONDED WARE-HOUSE ACT.—Messrs. Cockerell and Co., on the 2nd instant, made the first entry under the provisions of the Bonded Ware-house Act. Some idea may be formed of the facility afforded by the measure, from the knowledge that the whole of the entries from the signature of the secretary to the Ware-house, to the permit to convey the goods from the ship to the Ware-house, including appraising and the granting of the bond for the duty, was completed in the space of half an hour.

STORM ATTENDED WITH LOSS OF LIVES.—About a fortnight since, the village of Laukee and its neighbourhood were visited by a fearful storm, which blew down houses, rooted up large trees, and caused the loss of a great number of lives.

SHIPWRECK.—The bark Rebecca has been lost near Ganjam. Her crew, and a great portion of the cargo, have been saved, mainly through the exertions of Mr. Weatherell. The former have arrived in Calcutta.

DAMAGES DONE BY THE NORTH-WESTER.—Considerable damage was done by the north-wester experienced on the evening of the 1st instant. The north wall of the Racket Court and the mast of the Seamen's Chapel were blown down—a great number of trees and huts were prostrated by the storm, about twenty dinghies are said to have foundered or been dashed to pieces on the beach, and several lives, it is reported, have been lost.

INSURRECTION AT CANARA.—Aldonga have been received from Coorg and Mysore to the 22d ultimo, of a very favorable nature. The principal post of the insurgents, between Canara and the upper country of Coorg, was at a place named Bisleer Ghat, which was supposed to be occupied by them in considerable force. Captain Hunter, the Military Assistant to the Commissioner in Mysore, made a spirited attack on their stockade with a very small party of Mysore Infantry, and some dismounted sowars, and succeeded in frightening them into a retreat, and taking temporary possession of the village of Bisleer without loss. He was much too weak to retain the village, but the impression made, and the information obtained, will, it may be hoped, have left no difficulty in the way of the Regular Force which was moving upon Bisleer for the purpose of entering Canara by that route.

THE STEAMERS.—Government have resolved to build a new steamer at Bombay, to receive the engines of the Enterprise, to carry twelve days' coal and 150 troops. The Ganges, which has been found in a very bad state, is to be repaired so as to answer for a tug, or a sea going steamer.

The iron boats, which left Allahabad on the 26th of April, encountered many difficulties on their passage to Ghazepore. On the 19th, in passing Bairea, a few miles above Ghazepore, where a reef of konkur rocks extends across the river, the steam boat was, by a strong eddy occurring in a very narrow channel, thrown with excessive violence against a rock which sent a hole in the iron, below water, about a foot long. The accommodation vessel took another rock at the same moment, and a hole was made in her bottom about 18 inches diameter. Both vessels were immediately run on a sand bank, the pump set to work, and at 4 p. m., (the accident having occurred at 11 30 a. m.) the leak in the steamer having been stopped, the treasure to the amount of 10 lacs of rupees was transferred to her from the accommodation boat, and she proceeded with it to Ghazepore, where it was delivered in charge to the Collector. The hole in the accommodation boat having been stopped with gunny bags as a temporary measure, was now more securely filled up with a large plug made of the end of a Europe cable, which being knotted after a sailor's fashion, and tapered, was hauled into the hole from the outside, until the head of the knot pressed with equal force against all parts of the iron and effectually stopped the leak. The boat then dropped down and met the steamer returning to her assistance, was taken in tow, and anchored on the 30th at 3 p. m. off Ghazepore, to re-embark the treasure. The boats were to leave Ghazepore on their return to Calcutta on the 1st of May.

CAPTURE OF A SHARK.—A shark was caught in the river on the 1st instant. It was seven feet long, and proportionately thick. The monster was taken to the police office, and the fishermen who captured it, after receiving the usual reward for their trouble, took it away.

A NEW ROAD.—Bahadur Panchanan and Hunkodar Bose, have made a road from Panhattee to Barrackpore at their own expense.

THE REEF BUOY.—The Reef Buoy, which broke adrift eight or nine months ago, has been found drifted ashore on the Coromandel Coast, as far down as Tanjore, about latitude 10°.

BANK OF BENGAL NOTES.—The Hybomnie, which arrived during the week, has brought out the first batch of the Bank of Bengal notes for Company's rupees.

THE FIRES—The subject of the late fires, has engaged the attention both of Government and the Fever Hospital Committee. A letter of the Chief Magistrate, addressed to the Secretary for Bengal, has been published, enclosing a petition from a Mr. Harris, and a report by Lieut Abercrombie, the one and the other being on the subject of the frequent fires which at this season of the year occur in Calcutta. The proposition included in the petition, and in the official report of Mr. Abercrombie, is to the effect that Government should make order, rule, ordinance, or regulation, whereby all persons should be prohibited from erecting straw huts, with thatch roofs, within Calcutta; and the Chief Magistrate gives it as his opinion, that such a demand, on the part of the inhabitants of the puchah houses, and of Mr. Abercrombie, ought not to be complied with.

The following is a summary of the fires that have occurred since the commencement of the year, and the loss of lives, &c. occasioned through their agency.—

* Several soondre-wood Golaks, in one—and timber yards in the other also.

On the 24th instant the whole of the dwellings in Chudam Gully and its vicinity, was burnt down.

About a fortnight ago, a whole village in the Pandoo Parganah, was destroyed by fire. It broke out in the house of a field labourer.

On the 27th of April last, a destructive fire happened at Fumlook, and property to a considerable amount was consumed by it.

About nine o'clock on the night of the 27th of April last, a fire happened at the mart of Gowaree. It broke out in the house of a woman named Dropo, and destroyed upwards of one hundred houses, most of which were ware-houses, with goods in them. A pukka godown, which contained a large quantity of rice, was also destroyed. The loss of property by the accident is stated to have been to a considerable amount.

In consequence of a recommendation from the Police, comparatively few of the huts in places which had been exposed to the ravages of the recent fires have been rebuilt, the inhabitants having betaken themselves to lodge with their connections in the suburbs, or formed temporary habitations from the ruins of such sheds as had been pulled down. A vague idea is also entertained that the Government intend to take some steps for regulating the erection of buildings, and in this state of uncertainty, all those who can get accommodated elsewhere, refrain from reconstructing their huts within the town, until its determination is made known. In the mean time, whether apprehensive of the permanent deterioration of their property from the desertion of the ryots or, anxious to raise funds in order to erect tiled houses for their tenants, the owners of some lots of ground are seeking to mortgage or sell their holdings.

THE PICE PLAGUE.—Continues unabated, and the Government views the sufferings of the poor from the effects of this distemper, with its usual apathy. The pice still sells at the rate of fourteen annas and three pice for the rupee, and the prospect of a fresh supply of the coin to lessen this enormous discount, appears as distant as ever. Were those in authority, who are in the receipt of thousands of rupees per mensem, to be mulcted five pice out of each rupee of their salaries, until this grievance to the poor was removed, how soon would we have the mint at work coining a large supply of the desiderated coin.

THE PENAL CODE.—It is said, that the Penal Code has been completed, and is now under the consideration of the Council.

BARRACKPORE STEEPLE CHASE.—Black Diamond won the steeple chase at Barrackpore on the 5th instant. The sport was marred by an unfortunate accident which befell Mr. Robins of the 15th N. L., who was riding Taffy. He experienced a severe fall and fractured his leg.

BILLS ON PROVINCIAL TREASURIES.—The Accountant-General is prepared to grant bills on the provincial treasuries to the extent of the surplus cash, at rates varying from par to 2½ per cent. This will be a convenience to the public, and would be more so, if its continuance could be relied on without interruption from want of funds.

SENAITS' LAND TENURES.—The Council of India have passed an Act, for the appointment of a Commission to enquire into the state of the land tenures in the Straits Settlements, and lest alarm should be taken at this proceeding, a resolution is appended to the Act, explaining the necessity of it for the purpose of defining and legalising existing bond-fide possession, and that it is the intention to enforce the rights of the State "in cases only in which they may have been wilfully or fraudulently infringed." Mr. Wm. R. Young, the Secretary to the Board of Customs, Salt and Opium, and a Member of the Customs Committee is to be appointed Commissioner for this necessary investigation.

ACCIDENT.—An accident occurred on the 26th instant at Mr. Teel's tannery at Kudderpasa. The pillars of a puckah shed having got out of the perpendicular from the badness of the foundation, an attempt was made to raise the roof which they supported, when it fell down with a terrible crash upon the people employed and buried them under its rains. They were extracted very much bruised.

INDIGO PROSPECTS.—Extract of a letter from an indigo Planter in Raj-hye, dated 30th April. The month of April has past, without adding any thing to our hopes. The condition of the poor cultivators is indeed wretched, and were it not for the liberality of that much wronged class, the planters, they would be in a state of utter starvation, as the mahajuns have ceased to make advances, their assistance being always dependent upon the probability of obtaining cent per cent on their loans. As it is, where indigo cultivation does not extend, robberies and murders have become alarmingly frequent. So much so, that it has now become a habit for travellers to proceed in large bodies for mutual protection. The grain crops, it is expected, will also suffer severely from the lateness of the sowings. From all quarters complaints come pouring in of the want of rain and the bad prospects of the cultivators.

A MONSTER.—A man named Ramchand Doss, residing in the town of Nudda, has a boy aged about eleven years, whose make is like that of baboon, but he has no tail. His strength is so great that he can cope with three or four grown up men at once. He is very partial to fruits and especially plantains. He cannot speak, and when he feels hungry he requests food by signs. He is harmless in general, but it is not safe to approach him when irritated, which he is easily, if laughed at, or otherwise teased.

THE PACE DISEASE.—A committee of Medical men, have pronounced the Pace disease not to be the plague of the Levant, and Col. Skinner states that it is the same disease with which Hansee was afflicted with about five years since. The plague now appears to have greatly abated in the rapidity of its progress and its violence, and it is expected that the present hot weather will entirely eradicate it. Meanwhile the sanitary cordon on the frontier is strictly maintained, and all persons and goods subjected to quarantine.

DACOITY IN MAUNROOM.—On the night of the 3d of April last, the dwelling house of Tinkuchunder Bhuckut, of Roghoonauthpoor, was stormed by a large gang of dacoits, who carried away property therefrom to a great amount, consisting of gold-mohurs, rupees, jewels, gold and silver ornaments, wearing apparel, and brass and kansas utensils. The ruffians killed four, and wounded several, of the inmates of the house. The police of the district is making strenuous exertions to trace the offenders, and the property they made themselves masters of.

MURDER OF A BOY.—On the night of the 29th of April last, a boy was murdered at Sobha Bazar, by some person or persons unknown. The head of the deceased was found lying in the streets, but no trace had been discovered of his body.

CROWNING THEATRE.—The managers of the Theatre came to a resolution on the 26th instant, to call the proprietors together at the Town Hall on the 3d of June at ten o'clock for the purpose of holding a consultation about the state of the funds. Report says, that the affairs of the bazaar are not in the most flourishing condition, and that the best efforts of its managers to provide for a rainy day, have not been more successful than those of the builder; that the expectation at the meeting is likely to be as severe a drencher to the proprietors as the first north-wester that shall happen during a performance will be to the unfortunate pitties.

PERSIAN.—Government, it seems, have at last seriously determined on the abolition of Persian in the courts. A circular has been addressed to the Revenue Commissioners, to give the appointment to a candidate for a Deputy Collectorship, or other office, who understands the English language, in preference to one who does not, whenever they are in all other points of qualification, except Persian, equal.

MOFUSSIL.

DELHI.—The old Queen of Delhi, Begum Moomtaz Mehel, died on the 23rd instant, from a paralytic stroke, which seized her on the 16th instant, on her return from celebrating the Moharrum.

It is said, that Sungees Beg, the Kutwal, has at last succeeded in reversing the penalty of the law, by obtaining his release from the criminal jail by order of the Commissioner, and that he calculates on his early reinstatement into his former post, from whence he was removed in consequence of the occurrence of a dacoity, with murder, at the indigo factory, a site not very far from the Kutwalee.

Captain Burnes has passed Kot-ulee-morad in Scind.

MUTTRA.—A goldsmith, who had by effecting some cures, earned for himself the reputation of a wizard, was recently seized and subjected to a process of cremation, by the deluded relatives of a boy who had died after taking one of the goldsmith's pills. The infatuated men are in custody.

CHUNAR.—The cholera is making fearful havoc among the residents of this station: scarcely a residence has escaped without the loss of one or more of its inmates.

MEERUT.—A slight shock of an earthquake was felt at Meerut on the 8th ultimo.

On the 30th ultimo, a man of the Horse Artillery, stationed at Meerut, was murdered by one of his comrades in the barracks, who ran his sword through the unfortunate man's body. A quarrel about a ginger-beer bottle led to the catastrophe.

SHAHABAD.—On the tenth day of the last Moharrum festival, a great riot took place at Shahabad. Shaikh Tharuck Hossen, a Vakool of the Dewanny Court of the Zillah, and one of the followers of the famous Syed Ahmad, having collected a mob of about two or three hundred men, some armed with sticks others with swords and shields, proceeded to the Musjid and destroyed the tanjeees there: tanjeees—dary or parading tanjeees, being considered idolatrous by the sect to which he belongs. Of course, those who attempted to oppose this proceeding, were severely maltreated. The Thanadar of the district also, with his subordinates, endeavouring to put a stop to the riot, was handled in a very rough manner. The Magistrate himself at last came to the spot, when the rioters took to flight; but a number of them, together with their ring-leaders, were soon captured, and are now in the Nizamut Adawlut-gaoi.

SONA.—The weather lately has been unprecedentedly cool. By many the almost universal sickness that prevails is attributed to the state of the weather.

A guard from the 37th N. L., consisting of a naick and five sepoy, proceeding from Agra to Naeenach in charge of medical stores, was attacked by Blueels between Blueelwara and Humesargurh. Two sepoy were killed on the spot and the remainder were more or less severely wounded.

An attempt at murder under very unsatisfactory circumstances, was made in the European lines on the night of the 9th instant. A private of the Grenadier company, named Duffy, about 10 o'clock P. M., armed himself with a bayonet, and proceeding to the tent of private Ritchie of the same company, inflicted five wounds on the man while he was asleep. One wound entered the chest, having passed through the arm and is very dangerous. The others are comparatively slight, but the unfortunate sufferer is in an almost hopeless state. No reason can be assigned for this dreadful act. The parties were on intimate terms, and had been smoking together but a short time before the murderous attempt was made.

FIRE IN ZILLAH BEHAR.—A short time since the toshakhana of Maha Rajah Mitterjeet Sing, of Sahelgunge, was destroyed by fire, together with property to a considerable amount. The fire broke out in the house of a carpenter near the menagerie of the Rajah, and it soon communicated itself to the latter place, and from thence to the toshakhana. Every effort was made to arrest the flames, but without effect. It is stated that the toshakhana contained property and cash, to the amount of about fifteen lakhs of rupees, of which between five and six lakhs worth were saved. The Rajah is said to be much distressed by this calamitous accident, not for the loss of actual property, so much as for that of the valuable papers.

BANCOORA.—Very recently a number of convicts, whilst working on the roads at Bancoora, at midday, feeling thirsty, drank of a spring; shortly afterwards, some twenty or twenty-five of them were seized with an ague and breathed their last before eight o'clock that evening.

BERELLE.—During the Moharrum festival, the Mahomedans at Berelle commenced a series of persecutions against the Hindus at that place, in consequence of their wishing to celebrate the festival of Ramnovomee, which occurred during the Moharrum. They were prevented by troops stationed for that purpose from committing hostilities on the day of Ramnovomee; but on the next day, on the withdrawal of the troops, the Mahomedans desecrated several Hindu temples and assaulted the Hindu community. The ringleaders of the mob which perpetrated these atrocities (court officials) are in custody.

MUSSEERABAD.—The plague is making a great sensation here, and the medical officers are working under the highest possible pressure, so that if they escape plague and pestilence, they are likely to fall victims to fatigue.

LOODERANAH.—Two Hindus, one a Brahmin and the other a Kait, who were formerly students in a public seminary in Calcutta, and since by their own exertions have attained a very handsome proficiency in English, have both formally renounced the idolatry of Hinduism and become converts to Christianity. The renunciation was perfectly voluntary, and was made in the presence of Capt. Wade and other residents of the station.

BURDWAN.—A large influx of sick prisoners coming into Burdwan from Bancoora, some of whom were dying and the physician in a precarious state of health the Magistrate, Mr. F. Kipwith, with an active humanity much to be admired, did not hesitate on his own responsibility, to make a large expenditure for the supply of nutritious diet, wine and brandy, which the Doctor (Mr. G. N. Chetty) considered most necessary to the preservation of the patients. The matter was reported to the Commissioner who, under the circumstances of the case, did not hesitate to sanction the charges incurred. The high priest of the Temple of Saughan, Subhanud Ozah, died on the 30th ultimo. The man was of a very facious character and has saved by his death a world of trouble to the Magistrate and Collector of Beerbhoom. The sons of the late Ozah and of his predecessor have respectively put in petitions to succeed to the gaddis, who will succeed is uncertain.

MOONSHEDABAD—One of the native deputy collectors of Moonshedabad, has embezzled the whole of the revenue of an estate, which he was deputed to collect. His office has been put under attachment.

NATIVE STATES

INDIA—His Majesty spent on the Moharrum three lakhs of rupees, wrung from the hard hands of his wretched subjects. The festival passed without the usual murders and atrocities which have hitherto invariably accompanied it. This improvement is ascribed to the Brigade formed by Col Roberts, which, however defective, is stated to be infinitely superior to the ragged, disorderly troops of the line.

IRAN—Intelligence received from Iran, states that His Highness, the Prince of that place, having moved from the camp of Isfahrad, had arrived at Isfahan. It is further stated, that information being brought that a body of robbers of the Allamann tribe, inhabiting the frontiers of Tabreez, had plundered English merchants, of property to the value of several lakhs of rupees, His Highness immediately set out, at the head of some thousands of troops, to chastise the offenders. After a march of three days and nights, he reached the site of spoliation, and about three thousand of the Allamans, who were taken prisoners by His Highness's troops, were put to death.

CAUBOOL—One day, while the chief of Caubool was out on a hunting excursion, His Highness was informed by one of his companions, that a camel rider was lying dead under a date tree, and his camel was sitting beside him. His Highness had the curiosity to inspect the body of the deceased personally, and on having his clothes searched, a letter was discovered, to the address of one of the Ammeers of this Court, from the chieftains of Scind, forwarding a loan of 20,000 rupees in part payment of the sum of 50,000 rupees of which they had agreed to make him a present, for dissuading the chief of Caubool, from making any attack upon Scind. His Highness took particular care of the document, and on his return to Court read it to the Ammeers, one of whom appeared to be frightened out of his wits on hearing the contents of the same: this circumstance convinced His Highness that that was the traitor for whom the letter was meant. His Highness lost no time in sending him to prison.

OWALTOO—On the 17th of April, Major Sutherland, the British Resident, mentioned that when Juhau Rao Baboo, a relative of the Mama Sahib, kildadi of Surwase, situated seven miles beyond the Pargunnah of Surwase, was in attendance on him, there was a disturbance between the court of the Resident and the officers of Juhau Rao Baboo, in the course of which two or three men received serious wounds. After this Juhau Rao Baboo, with his followers, surrounded the Resident's tent with the intention of destroying him. The Resident explained to him, that the Company would lose nothing from his death: "England can boast more worthy sons than me," said the Major; "but it will undoubtedly cause a difference between the Maharajah and the Company." On hearing this the Baboo withdrew his followers and returned home. Such a violence was never before offered to the person of the Resident. The Baboo ought to be punished. Sewajee represented to the Major, that between the Honorable Company and the Maharaj there was friendship and unity of sentiment, that whatever the Resident wished should be done. The Major desired him to confine Juhau Rao and his accomplices, and said that he had written an account of the transaction to the Government, and that he would communicate the answer on receiving it.

JUZZAR—The Rajahs of Juzzar and Tejarah have been at the old practice of removing each other's land-marks, and carrying on a small system of mutual massacre. This year the disputes have run so high that notice has been given to the A.ia Government, who have instructed Major Allen to adjust the question to the mutual satisfaction of both parties—if he can.

PERHAWAR—An action of more than ordinary severity has taken place between the Affghans and the Sikhs, in which the latter were defeated, and their commander, Harri Sing, killed. His defeat, probably, will be followed by many difficulties to the Sikhs, as it will be the cause of inducing their disaffected Mohammedan subjects, a very numerous class, to flock to the standard of Dost Mahomed, which they were hitherto deterred from doing from a dread of the Sikhs' power, which they deemed to be irresistible.

MADRAS.

THE MINT—The Madras Mint is about to coin half and quarter anna pieces, the want of which is severely felt by the inhabitants.

H. M. S. CONWAY—H. M. S. Conway sailed on the 27th of April for Rangoon, having been ordered thither by the Supreme Government for the protection of British interests in the excitement following the dethronement of the King of Ava.

THE CANARA INSURRECTION—The advices received from the seat of insurrection continue of a most favourable description. Colonel Williamson's detachment arrived at Oochingy on the 22d instant, and was to move down the pass on the 23d. That Officer and Colonel Green were in communication with a view to concert a combined operation against the rebels. Dewan Baboo, with his choice band of gallant Coorgs, had advanced into Canara, and after slight opposition from parties posted along the road whom he dislodged, taking one and taking nine prisoners with some matchlocks, had taken possession of the town of Soolea. The advance of the Coorgs on one side and the approach of the troops on the other, had struck terror into the rebels, and ~~some~~ ^{the} pursuit was the order of the day with the pretender and his adherents. The occupation of this post by the Coorgs is considered of great importance, as it cuts off the retreat of the insurgents towards some of the most inaccessible parts of Amroosolea, and will have the effect of driving them towards our troops entering Pooteer from the other side. The gallant conduct of the Coorgs and their attachment to our interests is beyond all praise. Heavy rains have fallen since the latter end of March and various parts of the Coimbatore district, which had previously suffered most severely from want of water and forage for cattle.

OFFICE OF MASTER ATTENDANT.—It is decided that with the exception of about half a dozen of the principal ports, the office of Master Attendant at all the other ports of the Madras presidency is to be discontinued, after the lapse of the lives of the present incumbents, or as soon as they can be otherwise provided for. The Master Attendants who are to remain are not to be allowed any fees or to trade, but their salary is to be very considerably increased.

ATTEMPT TO BREAK OPEN A MAGAZINE.—An attempt was recently made to break open the Magazine at Samul-coral at night. The villains nearly succeeded in effecting their object, but were, apparently, scared away by the approach of day, when the partial breach that had been effected was discovered and repaired and means adopted to prevent a future attempt being successful.

THE COORG REBELS.—The Dewan, by the latest accounts, is still in the neighbourhood of Soclea with about 950 Coorgs. The pretender had dismissed the greater part of his followers with the view of making his way with a few of the principal rebels into the Naggur district. The place of his destination, however, is not certain, though there is no doubt about his having fled and his forlorn condition may be guessed from the circumstance of his leaving behind him his arrows of war. These, in the shape of a treasure of 13,800 rupees, had been laid hold of by the active Dewan Baboo, who found the coin in the jungle near Soclea, where it had been buried by the insurgents when they recently found themselves attacked at that place. A reconnoitring party of Colonel Williamson's had been fired upon at a barrier about six miles down the Calgand Pass. This was returned with good effect, and the chief leader of the insurgents in the neighbourhood wounded, and subsequently made prisoner. On the approach of a gun and larger force, the insurgents evacuated their strong position at the barrier, and took refuge in the surrounding hills. Several prisoners have been since sent in, and confidence was beginning to be restored in the district. The insurrection is attributed to the machinations of the Brahmans.

The following is the description of the pretender, has been proclaimed and which is given from the account of Dr. Palmer, who, with his wife, providentially escaped from the Coorg's clutches.

Description of the person styling himself Apparampara and Rajah of Coorg. Height—about 5 feet 3 or 4 inches. Age—25 or 30 years. Complexion—Dark bamboo, marked with small pox—pleasing expression of countenance—when smiling, shews a very beautiful set of white teeth—slight Jewish expression. Hair—Bushy and long curls hanging over his shoulders. Limb—Very slight and shoulders rather high. Whiskers—Of peculiar appearance surrounding nearly the whole of his face. Beard—Exceedingly bushy and 3 or 4 inches long.

CAPTAIN BURESTALL.—Government have given Captain BureSTALL, for the assistance rendered by him to Major Bowler's party at Mangalore, 2,000 rupees—and thanks.

CAPT. CHINN.—Capt. Chinn was to proceed on the evening of the 10th inst., from Madras to Trincomalee, where he was to rectify his sailing directions.

BOMBAY.

SERIOUS RIOT.—On the 22d of April a most serious disturbance occurred in Bhwendy. It appears that the feast of the Mohurats as well as a Hindoo festival named Ramnoumie, occurring on the day in question, the Mussulmans of Bhwendy menaced the Hindoo population of that place by holding out threats, in the most abusive language, of the manner in which they would beat every Hindoo whom they would find forming the procession called chebesau, which consists in parading the images of the several gods in a palkee accompanied by music. The Hindoos, apprehensive of these threats being put into execution, abstained from the observance of the customary procession, but upon the following day the Hindoo musicians, who had heretofore been in the habit of joining in the celebration of the Mohurram, refused their attendance; the coolies of the same religion would not carry the taboos, and all combined in absenting themselves from the Mahomedan procession. The Mussulmans enraged at this, violently entered five temples, destroyed the images, assaulted the Brahmans and other Hindoos who were present, to such a degree, that one man lost his life, and having polluted the shrines by spitting upon them and committing other nuisances, they entered several dwelling houses, beat the inmates and treated many females in a manner most indecent. The tumult lasted for a considerable time till some parties of Hindoos ran to Callian to call for the assistance of the authorities. The Kumavadar of that place accordingly repaired to Bhwendy with a small force, and having written to Mr. Giberne at Tannah for a party of Seebundies, whom he speedily obtained, succeeded in apprehending about one hundred and fifty of the rioters. On the same night a similar affray, but of less atrocity, occurred at Dassein. These cases are now undergoing due investigation by the local authorities.

MR. WARDEN.—The Senior Police Magistrate of Bombay, Mr. Warden, is obliged to leave that presidency on account of ill health.

DEATH OF SWAMPE.—The Swamee, or the great Hindoo Priest of Shunkeshwar, died a short time since at an advanced age of more than 80 years. It is said that he had passed twelve years in austere devotion, previous to his inauguration, for which circumstance and for his literary character he was much venerated. He was fond of meddling with politics, and was frequently a mediator between contending jaghirdars. His ready purse, which enabled him to supply the wants of many of the minor chiefs of the Southern Marathes country, gave him a considerable influence over them, independently of what he commanded by virtue of his sacred station.

BISHOPRIC OF BOMBAY.—The elevation of the Venerable Archdeacon Carr to the Bishopric of the Diocese of Bombay, which has been erected into a Bishop's see under the provisions of the Company's last charter, has been officially announced.

THE COMPANY'S RUPEE.—The Company's rupee is declared to be the money of account, in superaddition of the local currencies, in the Poona Collectorate from the 1st May 1837.

THE POONA COLLEGE.—Nearly twenty paid students have been lately admitted into the Poona College, to fill the vacancies.

CEREMONY OF ADOPTION.—A ceremony of adoption was performed at Petlad (a village about 20 kos distance from Baroda) in the house of Kumbhar Ramdass, the Mamlatdar of that place. The ceremony was performed in a very grand and imposing manner, and a large sum of money was expended by Kumbhar Ramdass in entertaining his guests, among whom were the prime Minister and several nobles of the court of Baroda, and in distributing alms and presents to the Brahmans. The hereditary god of Chinchwad, who had honoured the occasion with his presence, received a present of 60,000 rupees.

THE TRANSIT AND SALT DUTIES.—It is currently reported in the mercantile circles of Bombay, that the Government of that presidency is not disposed to view with a friendly eye the efforts now making there to procure a remission of the Transit Duties on the same footing as in Bengal and Agra; and, moreover, that instead of tacitly allowing the Supreme Government to take its own way, since it will not urge upon its notice the claims of this presidency, it is proceeding in a course of active opposition against its interest. It has also advocated the imposition of a further tax on salt.

The Petition to the Supreme Government on the subject of the transit duties, was sent in on the 2nd instant, to the Bombay Government to be forwarded to Calcutta, having 258 signatures of the European and native merchants resident in Bombay, attached to it. It was accompanied by a letter from the Chamber of Commerce, strongly advocating the prayer of it.

THE DAMAUN TERRITORY.—Two guns at the distance of fifty yards from one another, have been placed on the shore of the Damamn territory and the "Infanta Regatta" on the mouth of its river to prevent the Goa army entering it. Travellers are detained at every battery to enquire into the purport of their journey, and if no satisfactory account be given, they are prohibited from passing through."

A SUTTER AT SATTARA.—On the 5th instant, a sutter took place at Sattara. She was the elder wife of one Khunderao Sabedar, third judge in the Adawlut of His Highness. This person died in the 40th year of his age. H. H. did what was in his power to prevent the widow from sacrificing herself, and promised to continue to her the salary of 175 rupees, which was received by her husband, but she was inexorable, and burned herself before a numerous crowd of spectators and a large body of the Raja's attendants and troops who attended her. She has left behind a son aged twelve years.

THE SURAT SUFFRERS.—About one lakh and fifty thousand rupees have been subscribed for the relief of the sufferers from the great conflagration at Surat, by the native population at Bombay.

BURMAH.

The following is an extract of a letter dated Moulmein, 1st May 1837:—

"A detachment from the Prince of Tharawaddy's Army has taken possession of Rangoon. Our communication with Ava is cut off and we have no news of Col. Burray since the 4th March, and no news of a detachment of the 13th regiment, a subaltern and 30 men, which left Rangoon for Ava in the beginning of March. On the 26th the Commissioner here sent Lieut. Smith, of the 13th, 5 sepoy and a dozen of lascars to Rangoon with directions to push on to Ava with a dispatch for Col. Burray. We are very uneasy from the want of intelligence. The native Regiment here is in a state of great discontent, to the great term, at the clipping legislation of the enlightened government which pledged themselves that it should enjoy the same advantages as the British Regiment. To-day they have reduced a water-carrier in each company, leaving but one to a company, which is a breach of contract, stoutly resented. From the lubberly manner in which another G. O. G. is put together it reads as if Government were going to stop their provision allowance, which I shall not credit till I see the abstract; so the men think they may as well make a strike at once; on duty too, nearly every other day, does not tend to reconcile them to their present condition. If a Government can gather any thing from experience, the Indian one may guess what a dangerous affair it is to coquet with a mercenary's pay. The habit of breaking faith has become second nature to it, and I dare say they know not what they do.

The following information has subsequently been received.—

"Authentic intelligence has been received from the Capital of Ava to the 24th April, to the effect that the Prince of Tharawadi has gained the entire ascendancy, and taken on himself the administration of the Kingdom. The Capital had been invested and taken by the Prince's force, and the revolution was complete, it appears to have been fortunately marked by an absence of bloody executions. Combining this with the intelligence that the Prince's flag was flying at Rangoon it is clear that his authority is now very firmly and widely established. The British Residency was safe and had been duly respected.

CEYLON.

A NEW PAPER.—A new paper has been established at Colombo in Ceylon for, it would appear, to support the Government against the exposures of the Colombo Observer. The new paper is entitled the Ceylon Chronicle.

PENANG.

Penang papers to the 29th of April, have been received which intimate that the statement that the Dutch frigates (which were sent to Achoen to demand the restoration of the Dutch guarda-costas schooner Dolphin, which had been cut off by her crew and taken into Achoen, as well as that of the infant son of the commander of the vessel and the treasure which was on board at the time she was run away with, and also the surrender of the crew,) had, on their return to Java,—after receiving a refusal from the King of Achoen to comply with their request,—captured the proud Achenese bark Baggiannu, is totally unfounded. The commander of one of the frigates, however, on his quitting Achoen, had threatened the Rajah with infliction of the severest punishment the vengeance of the Dutch could devise, on the return of the frigates. The Rajah had in consequence, issued a proclamation, interdicting the departure of any of his subjects from the country, under a penalty of being fined fifty dollars for every infringement of the mandate. We may, therefore, in a short time, hear of the commencement of hostilities between the Dutch and Achoenese; that is to say if Mysheer finds himself strong enough to spare a sufficient number of troops from the war on the west coast of Sumatra, for to attack the Achoenese.

Two labours belonging to the brig Zoroaster, recently implicated in the murder of Captain and Mrs. Patton, had been captured and taken to Penang. They were delivered up to Captain Chads by a Malay chieftain, Tuan-ke Ibrahim, who had apprehended four of them, but two died at Acheen.

Some more piracies had been committed in the Straits and a great number of Malays had assembled at the Lancavies, for the purpose, as it was stated, of invading Keda at the instigation of the ex-King. Considerable apprehension was entertained in consequence, but the bands were dispersed without committing any mischief, by a Mr. Bullock, a bullock merchant of Keda, who resorted to the Lancavies, dressed in fantastic habiliments, and told the assembled Malays, that if they did not instantly disperse, an English man-of-war would be sent to blow them and their prahu out of the water. This intimation struck such a panic into the Malays, that in a very short time there was not a single prahu to be seen at the Lancavies. The permitting of the ex-Rajah of Keda to reside any longer at Bruaa, however, being considered highly injudicious, and as he still prevailed respecting his departure, means were adopted to coerce him to keep his promise of quitting that place. This object was effected through the agency of the sloop Zebra and the gunboat Diamond, but not before several lives had been sacrificed in the attempt. The Rajah was taken to Penang in his own vessel, the Julia, on the 26th of April, and was shortly afterwards to be sent to Malacca, or Singapore, his request to be permitted to come to Calcutta to meet the Governor-General being refused.

SINGAPORE.

Singapore papers to the 6th of April, state, that the Dyak savages, united with the Illanoon, pirates had been committing serious depredations in the Straits. The object of the former being, more than any thing else, the obtaining of human heads to carry home as trophies of their prowess, several unfortunate fishermen had been seized and decapitated by them, while others had been made slaves of by the Illanoonese. The Wolfe and the steamers had been sent in quest of these sanguinary marauders.

The Chamber of Commerce at Singapore, has drawn up a memorial to the King in Council, complaining of another infringement of the Treaty with Holland, which appears to have been overlooked during the recent discussion between the two Governments in Europe. The act complained of is a resolution of the Netherlands Government, dated the 14th of November, 1834, prohibiting "the importation of British cottons and wools from Singapore into any of the possessions or dependencies of the Netherlands Government in the Eastern Archipelago, saving only the three principal ports of Batavia, Samarang and Sourabaya in the island of Java."

The Ship Victory has been condemned at Manila.

CHINA.

Canton papers to the 18th of March mention, that the Emperor has granted his permission to Captain Elliott, the British Superintendent, to reside in Canton, that the Governor of Canton still persists in his determination of compelling the departure of several of the old foreign merchants from that city, and it is expected that they will be obliged to quit, that there was an extensive fire in Macao on the 16th March, and that the brig Fairy, of Canton, which had been set off by her crew, had been found in the bay of Santa Maria, in the island of Mindanao, scuttled and sunk in deep water. There was a total interruption of trade in the market, and foreign commodities, were selling at a loss to the importers.

The Ruby has brought China news to the beginning of April,—all of a most discouraging kind. Canton Prices Current to the 4th April, mentions Bengal cotton to be selling at Sp Drs. 7. 5 a 10 "very dull," and opium, new Patna, 755, Benares 700, Malwa 550 a 555 dollars per chest, with the remark, that "the Bengal drug is almost without demand, out considerable sales of Malwa have been made at the existing low prices." The opium deliveries in the month of March are stated to have been as follows: Patna, old and new 313 chests; Benares 181, Malwa 1475½, total 1969½ chests, which, added to the deliveries of the preceding eleven months makes the whole quantity delivered during the year of report,—of Patna 5283½ chests, Benares 2795½ and Malwa 13,430½, together 21,509 chests, the sale value of which is estimated at 14,287,330 dollars. The Stock at Lintin on the 1st April, amounted to 8364½ chests.

Canton letters of the 29th of March, speak in very desponding terms both of cotton and opium, and report the exports of raw silk to have been so heavy as to threaten the English market with a severe depression—namely, up to the 14th March 18 100 bales, with every probability that the Asia, Leontine and other vessels loading would take at least 1000 more, and that still another 1000 bales would be exported before the next season, so that the very highest estimate given out some time ago is likely to be exceeded by the actual extent of the trade this year.

Another letter of the same date reports, on the subject of the Opium trade, that "the feeling of the people is at present so agitated that it is quite impossible to say how things are likely to go on. Sycee is very scarce and is quoted at 5 per cent premium—Company's bills 80 days' sight at 220, and in the Hong when to be had 222." "The stock (of Opium) on hand will be frightful." The writer adds—

"I have not heard lately what they have been doing on the Coast, but I believe not very well. There has been a little misunderstanding with the Mandarins, and I don't know whether they have settled it. The Ruby is for the present the last vessel sailing for your port."

The following is a short extract from a Singapore letter of the 27th April

"We have sad accounts from China per Ruby, chiefly owing to the heavy importations of Malwa within so short a period, and positive instructions from Bombay to sell at once, which has thrown all the Opium of the season on the market, and caused a rapid decline to Sp. Drs. 500. Very little doing in the Bengal drug. In fact the all engrossing topic seems to be the insolvency of some of the Hong Merchants and the liability of the Colony for their debts. Some of the shippers of Malwa have instructed their Agents here to take out of the passing vessels the following lots provided they can get the prices affixed—50 Chests at 720, 40 Chests at 580, 50 Chests at 640 and 25 Chests at 610, but there are no buyers for the China Market at nearly 100 Sp. Drs. below the last quotation, and our own is well supplied."

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET

(From the Bengal Hurkaru Price Current, May 27.)

TEA.—Accounts from the Factories during the week, with the exception of some parts of Myitthaing, Salun and Pungah, are just as unfavorable as before; the present scorching weather is fast destroying the young shoot, and there is every probability of several concerns requiring a re-sowing.

RAW SILK.—The advices from Canton per the Ruby, mention the exports thence as nearly double of any previous year, which cannot fail to operate unfavorably on the home market upon all descriptions. There is nothing doing in the article here, and prices are still very low.

INDIAN SILK.—Continues neglected, and we quote the prices as in our last.

COTTON.—Nothing doing, and prices must give way sufficiently to admit of purchases being made with safety against the continued discouraging accounts from China.

WOLLEN.—Continues to engage attention for the British and American markets, and prices keep firm.

WOLLEN.—Has again been in limited enquiry, and prices have somewhat given way. We notice a few orders by Natives for shipments to the Cape and Bombay.

WOLLEN.—Shell and Dye of middling quality continue to be required for, for Liverpool and American markets, and our quotations are well supported.

WOLLEN.—Has been in fair enquiry during the week for the English market, but the prices exhibit a marked decline on our previous quotations, consequent on the large supplies in the market.

WOLLEN.—Shipments of Rice to the Mauritius continue limited, and we have no change in prices to notice—very little also doing in finer sorts for the Europe market.

WOLLEN.—Nothing doing in this drug, and our quotations are nominal.

The advices by the Ruby are of an exceedingly gloomy cast, and from the enormous supply of Malwa poured into the Chund market, this season, at an unusually early period, the prices of that description are expected soon to fall to Sp. Din. 500,—the Bengal drug will doubtless participate likewise in this depression.

The deliveries in March are stated to have been—

Paint Old and New,	313 chests
Bengal,	181
Malwa,	1476½
	1969½ chests which added to the deliveries of the preceding eleven months make the whole quantity delivered during the year.

Patna,	5,303 chests
Bengal,	2,784
Malwa,	13,430½
	21,509½

The Stock at Linton on the 1st April amounted to 8,364½ chests.

TIN.—Continues to give way in price, and transactions are limited.

ALUM.—A sale has been effected at our quotation.

CAMPION, WACE AND NUTMEG.—Without sales, and remain at our former quotations.

PAPER.—In limited enquiry, and remains as last quoted.

WOLF TWIST.—The Market remains favorable as regards demand, but the prices of Nos. 60 & 80 continue low.

TURKEY RED AND ORANGE YARNS.—Are enquired after, but without any improvement in prices.

CHINTZ.—There has been a slight improvement in the demand of Chintzes, but the prices obtained show no improvement on previous rates.

WHITE COTTONS.—Sales chiefly of Jaconets and Lapets have been effected to a fair extent at former prices.

WOOLLEN.—The market remains as stated before. We report a few sales of superfine cloth, at steady prices.

COPPER.—Continues to give way in price, and transactions have still been very limited, owing to the prevalence of the rumour last week noticed, but as it has now been officially contradicted by Government, more activity in the market may be immediately expected, as the Stock of all sorts, but especially this metal, must be extremely small in the leading marts of the interior.

RAW.—Without sale since our last, and the prices of the assortments remain without any change.

STEEL AND LEAD.—Also without sale, and remain as last quoted.

SPELTER.—A sale has been effected, at a further reduction in price.

TIN PLATES.—A sale is reported at our former quotation.

QUINCELY.—Without sale, and remain as last quoted.

WINE.—No later advices from home as to the operations of the season being yet received, lower prices have been submitted to, where sales have been forced, but holders generally are firm.

BRANDY.—The importations of the past twelve months have been so very far below the average of previous years, that the article is now causing considerable enquiry and prices are on the rise.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN GOVERNMENT AND THE AGRA BANK.

To R. H. Scott, Esq.

Secretary in the General Department to the Lieut.-Governor of the N. W. Provinces.

Sir,—The Shareholders of the Agra Bank proposing to establish a circulation of Notes, payable on demand, and being satisfied, that nothing will contribute more to the utility of such a measure, and to the extension of its success, than that those notes should be accredited by the Government Revenue Officers, I have, by their desire, the honour to request, that you will submit to the Honorable the Lieutenant-Governor the following grounds on which that favour is humbly solicited.

When in the month of March 1833, the Committee, engaged in drawing up a plan for the establishment of the Bank, applied to Government for its countenance and support to the projected Institution, they were informed in reply, by Mr. Officiating Secretary Bushby, that the Governor-General in Council did not see a sufficient prospect of its success to induce him to grant their request.

The four years that have since elapsed, have afforded evidence of the utility, the stability, and general success of the Bank. Twenty lakhs of rupees of Capital or deposits, have been brought by its instrumentality into constant action. No Funds have been lost, but on the contrary the Shareholders have divided fair profits on their Capital, though the business of the Bank was in the first instance necessarily on a narrow scale and conducted under many disadvantages. Such, indeed, has been the uniform prosperity of the Institution, that although the subscription for Shares was only closed six months ago, they have been for some time at a premium of 20 to 25 per cent. in the market.

It may be added, that the Bank now numbers amongst its proprietors some Natives who are men of extensive landed property, such as the Koorar Petembur Singh of Etawah, Mirza Mogul Beg, Rajah Suranath Singh, and others who are at the head of houses of business of the highest respectability, such as those of Jodhray Bideechund, Balchund Koonj Lal, Dowlut Ram of Hattass, &c., &c.

To meet the increasing calls on the Bank for accommodation, as well as still further to extend its credit, the proprietors have come to the resolution of doubling the amount of its present stock, so that its paid up capital will shortly amount to 20 lakhs of rupees.

As a further guarantee to the public of the very ample security it offers, it has been made a fundamental rule of the Bank partnership, that if one-third of its capital should ever be absorbed by losses, its business shall be closed.

A half yearly statement of the affairs of the Bank also must be published, which shall exhibit in a clear and concise view, the actual position of the Bank in respect of assets, and liabilities, attested by the signature of the Secretary; an authenticated copy of which statement, shall, if required, be furnished to any officer whom Government may be pleased to appoint.

Besides the usual reserve of cash, to the amount of one-fourth of the value of the promissory notes in circulation, which the shareholders engage to retain in readiness, the Bank proposes to place in the hands of any officer at Agra, appointed by Government for that purpose, Government Promissory Notes to the full amount of the bank, notes in circulation, with power to dispose of as much of the same as may be necessary, in case the Bank should at any time hesitate, when required, to cash such amount of its notes as may have been received in the Government Treasury.

To facilitate legal recourse against the shareholders, they are desirous of obtaining an Act of the Legislative Council, enabling them to be used, as well as to use, by their Secretary.

The shareholders do not at present contemplate the circulation of their bank notes beyond the Collectorate of Agra, in which they will be prepared to cash them on presentation. But should they hereafter provide funds for that purpose at other places under this Presidency, to the satisfaction of Government, they trust that the indulgence now requested, may be extended to their Agencies at those stations where such provision shall be made.

The shareholders are willing to confine their circulation to notes of the value of rupees 50 or upwards, so that their paper can never come into such use as to displace the coin required for the small contributions in which the revenue is realized from the cultivators, and by which the transactions of the great mass of the population are conducted.

As to the mode in which the extent of the bank note circulation can be at any time ascertained, the shareholders of the Agra Bank are ready to adopt any system of check that may appear to Government to unite certainty with convenience. They would suggest that this object may be accomplished, by rendering the signature of a Government officer a requisite preliminary to the issuing of notes. The penalty for non-observance of this rule, being a fine to the amount of the value of all notes circulated without such verification, recoverable by summary process before a Magistrate. A register of the notes thus countersigned, may be left with the officer of Government who is appointed for that purpose, and who can always see that the amount of notes sent from time to time for this verification, corresponds with the new entry in the register, and with the amount of deposit of Government notes, sent along with them.

The same register will also enable Government to fix the amount of Stamp duty, proportioned to the circulation.

In submitting the foregoing proposals, the shareholders of the Bank of Agra are desirous of being understood as intending to include every security that has hitherto been suggested by the most enlightened authorities, for the wholesome regulation of bank note issues.

Should, however, any further checks or precautions be deemed requisite for the better security either of the revenue or of the community, the shareholders will be happy to do all in their power to meet the views of Government in that respect; and they are always willing that the favour for which they now apply may be withdrawn, if at any time Government should see reason therefor, either in the mode of management of the affairs of the Bank or on any public grounds whatever. Like other Banks of deposit, the Agra Bank is capable of becoming eminently useful by collecting from numerous individuals small sums, which, while insulated, can hardly be applied to any advantage, but which in the aggregate are available for important purposes. Not for the exigencies of the improvident, nor to offer inducements to adventurers having nothing to lose, to prosecute tempting but hazardous speculations with borrowed funds—but to facilitate the acquisition of increase to those who already possess some property, and whose character for prudence is the best guarantee for the beneficial application of pecuniary facilities in the promotion of their own advantage, and consequently that of the community.

A Bank of issue adds to this public service, that of rendering substantial credit, founded upon actual property, capable of answering many of the purposes of a circulating medium; and so long as its operations are guided by prudence, and its notes are never issued except in real transactions, and are thus true representatives of actual value, they afford the best means of fostering productive industry of every kind.

Such an institution may be justly compared to one of those magnificent tanks, to which extensive tracts of land are in some parts of India indebted for their fertility. Those grand reservoirs intercept no useful streams, but become the temporary depositories of the superfluous waters of one season, in order to distribute them at another, so as to meet the wants of the industrious husbandman; and are thus instrumental in "spreading plenty o'er a smiling land," that would otherwise languish in poverty under scanty crops, or lapse into arid and barren waste.

The proprietors of the Agra Bank crave but liberty of way for the current, by means of which similar blessings may, they trust, be diffused through at least this city and district, entreating that no needless obstruction be presented to a course fraught, as they confidently believe, with prosperity to this community, and threatening no danger nor injury in its operations to any interest public or private.

It might appear impertinent to expatiate more at large on the generally recognized advantages of solid and well conducted Banking Establishments; but I may be allowed to remark that there are few places where the people would derive more convenience from a safe and well regulated paper currency than at Agra, from the scale of its commercial transactions, and the excessive abundance of base or light coin; for no where are imposition on the one hand, and extortion on the other, by the native officers of revenue, in their payments and receipts, alleged to be more frequently practised.

Should the Honorable the Lieutenant-Governor deem it proper to submit this application to the Supreme Government, the proprietors of the Agra Bank earnestly hope, that it will be supported by this powerful recommendation, and they are satisfied that nothing else will be wanting to insure its favourable reception by the Governor-General in Council.

Agra will then have to boast of giving under the auspices of Sir Charles Metcalfe's administration, the example of the first Bank of circulation that has ever been established on principles of similar security.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient humble Servant,

(Signed) G. J. Gordon,

Agra, May 2, 1837. Secy. to the Agra Bank.

To G. J. Gordon, Esq.

Secretary to the Agra Bank.

SIR,—The Hon'ble the Lieutenant Governor having read with attention the propositions from the Agra Bank, contained in your letter of the 2nd instant, desires me to communicate the following observations in reply.

2nd.—What is wanted from the Government is, the the notes of the Bank shall be received as money in the collection of state revenue.

3rd.—Security is offered to guard the Government against loss; and what is offered appears to be sufficient for that purpose. The Lieutenant-Governor does not apprehend any loss to the State from a compliance with the application; but there appears to His Honor to be objections of a more general character.

4th.—The proposal is tantamount to an application for permission to coin money, or in other words to give to pieces of paper without any intrinsic value, the worth and currency of the gold and silver coin of the realm, for the benefit of the Bank.

5th.—The coining of money seems to the Lieutenant-Governor to be a privilege belonging properly to the State alone, and which ought not to be conferred on any individuals or mercantile bodies for their peculiar advantage.

6th.—If paper money were much required by the community, in preference to gold and silver, as being more convenient, it appears to the Lieutenant-Governor, that it would become the duty of the Government to provide a sufficiency of the desired article, with due care and precaution, and that this branch of its functions ought not to be transferred to others.

7th.—A further objection seems to the Lieutenant-Governor to exist in the monopoly of benefit, which the adoption of this proposal would confer on the Agra Bank. This is said with a view to the probable practical effect. If such an advantage were conferred on the Agra Bank, it could not justly, His Honor conceives, be withheld from any other individuals or associations that could offer equal security. But the inconvenience attending a general extension of the privilege, would probably cause its limitation, and thus a monopoly would be established in behalf of a favoured Institution, to the injury of others engaged in similar transactions, and equally entitled to support and encouragement from the State.

8th.—His Honor acknowledges that these opinions do not seem to have been entertained by Governments elsewhere. The privilege of coining money has been conferred on the Bank of England at Home, and by the Government of India on the Bank of Bengal; but the Bank of England and the Bank of Bengal are chartered Banks, intimately connected with the Government in their transactions, and in the latter, the Government of Bengal holds a large share.

9th.—The privilege has been denied to the Union Bank of Calcutta, which seems to resemble the Agra Bank more than any other Banking Institution in India; and unless the distance from Calcutta be deemed a sufficient reason for a different decision, it is to be inferred that the Government of India would likewise refuse the privilege to the Agra Bank.

10th.—The proposal could not of course be acceded to without the sanction of the Supreme Government, and not being able to recommend the measure, or to anticipate a successful result from the reference, His Honor thinks it right in the first instance, that his sentiments should be communicated to the Agra Bank.

11th.—If it be still the wish of the proprietors that their application be forwarded, it shall be done without delay; and it is very possible that the Supreme Government may take a different view of the question from that which the Lieutenant-Governor entertains.

12th.—His Honor regrets that it has been his duty to return so unfavourable a reply to the proposition of the Agra Bank. The Lieutenant Governor rejoices at the success of that institution, and trusts that it will continue to operate with increasing prosperity.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

(Signed) R. H. Scott,

Officiating Secretary to the Lt. Governor, N. W. P.
Genl. Dept. Encl. Agra, 6th May, 1837.

To R. H. Scott, Esq.

Officiating Secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor, N. W. P.

Sir, — I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 6th instant, conveying the objections of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, founded on general principles, to the proposals of the Proprietors of the Agra Bank, relative to an issue of notes payable on demand.

Having submitted your letter to the Directors of the Bank, I am instructed by them to request that you will do them the favour to lay before His Honor the following remarks in explanation of their views, in the hope that they may obviate the objections which have occurred to his mind; or, should they unfortunately fail in having that effect, that they may be forwarded to the Governor-General along with my former letter, with the expectation suggested by His Honor, that the Supreme Government may be disposed to view the general question in a more favourable light—His Honor having been pleased to admit, that no loss can be apprehended to the State from a concession of the favour requested by the Bank. I may here state, that for the further security of the State and of the Community, the Bank, in case of any eventual depreciation in the market value of Government promissory notes, will every six months, or oftener if desired, adjust its deposit by adding whatever further amount may be wanted to equalize its value with the amount of notes in circulation.

With reference to the 2d paragraph of your letter, in which the object of the Bank is summarily stated to be, that its notes should be received as money in the collection of the State Revenue, the Directors desire me to express their regret, that the proposal of the Bank should have appeared to His Honor liable to such a construction.

The proprietors, in point of fact, expect and desire nothing more than that their notes should be received as cheques, for the due payment of which security, confessedly ample, has been provided. Were their proposal virtually even of the nature apprehended by His Honor, it would have been quite unnecessary for the Proprietors to have limited their views to the Collectorate of Agra, and unmeaning to have stated as the reason of such limitation, that the Bank does not for the present undertake to provide the means of cashing its notes elsewhere.

To have rendered the proposal of the Bank equivalent to a desire, that its notes should be received as money in the collection of the revenue, it must have included a further request, that the Officers of Government should be directed to disburse them in payments—and to effect this, the paper of the Bank must be declared a legal tender. I need scarcely assure His Honor, that nothing was further from the minds of the proprietors than such propositions; but if any doubt should remain on his mind, the Directors would appeal to the whole tenor of the letter that conveyed their proposal. What they do desire, amounts to no more than that the local officers of Government shall not cast discredit on the notes of the Bank, so long as they deserve full credit from the rest of the community—and so long also, as no public grounds may arise for obstructing their circulation.

You state in the 4th paragraph, that the Lieutenant Governor, under that impression of the views of the Bank, which it is the object of the foregoing explanation to remove, considers the proposal of the proprietors of the Agra Bank as tantamount to getting permission to give to pieces of paper without any intrinsic value, the worth and currency of the coin in the realm.

The proprietors certainly do propose to render their circulation more deserving of credit and consequently of currency, than any other paper that has ever been offered by a private establishment to the community. But, except in so far as credit in all its forms may and does enable the community to conduct their more important transactions in business, without the actual intervention of gold or silver payments, the paper of the Agra Bank can have no pretension to be regarded as of equal value with gold or silver; nor can anything, short of the compulsory power of the legislature to make bank notes inconvertible, and at the same time a legal tender, place them even for a moment on that footing; and the instant that bullion should come to be required for exportation to a neighbouring state, all the power of Government even would be unable to maintain such paper in the forced and unnatural position to which it had been temporarily raised.

The paper of the Agra Bank, differing therefore from any other paper founded on credit, only in the perfectness of that credit, cannot, it is submitted, be justly regarded as equivalent to money on account of its being accredited by Government to a certain degree more than the bills drawn by Calcutta merchants against goods consigned to London, which bills are purchased by the Government of Bengal, can be considered as money. Private bills of that description are, as is well known, the common substitutes for bank-notes in the west of England, where the same order on London may and often does serve for 150 money transactions between its date and term of payment. It has never been suggested that the makers of such bills usurped any portion of the privileges of the State, though their paper served for a time all the purposes of the coin of the realm more efficiently than coin itself could have done. I may add that a similar practice obtains at Agra. A hoondee or draft on a distant mercantile town frequently passes in payment through many hands, performing in each instance of transfer all the functions of the currency, until it is finally despatched for realization. In other parts of India, most extensive commercial transactions are conducted by mere credit and debit entries in Bankers' books; and in all these cases the original drawer of the Bill, or the Banker, derives a profit from his credit; precisely analogous to that which other Bankers enjoy from the issue of promissory notes payable on demand. Credit in all these instances would appear to perform precisely the same functions; nor is it easy for the Directors to conceive on what principle any line of distinction can be drawn between the various cases that should render one class of them less legitimate or less deserving countenance than the others.

It was stated on the part of the Proprietors, that peculiar convenience would be derived by the community at Agra from the substitution of paper for coin in pecuniary transactions of large amount, and it might have been added that not only base and light coin is most abundant at this Station, but as a further source of inconvenience, that in fact, no large sum can be safely received without having recourse to three different measures of minimum weight corresponding with three different coinages at present in circulation.

His honor is of opinion that if such inconveniences be felt, it is the duty of Government to supply the articles of some currency which would remedy them; he admits, however, that this does not appear to be the conclusion arrived at by the British Government at home. The proposition has, indeed, been advocated by some respectable authorities, but judging by the result, it would appear that weighty objections has determined the Government against its adoption. The Bank at least is not aware that the justness of the principle advanced by His Honor has been recognized in any of the official proceedings of the Home or Local Authorities; and it seems hard that while Government refrains from admitting that such an obligation is incumbent on itself, credit should be refused to private paper on the ground of that very obligation.

If the principle adverted to should be adopted, there can be no question that a paper circulation at all times convertible into gold or silver, will afford to the community the same convenience in all respects, but that of representing commercial credit, whether issued by Government or by private Bankers. But if paper be thrown into circulation without representing a full equivalent, either in bullion or in goods, such an issue of spurious currency would be productive of mischief, because, being in excess of the existing circulation, capital, it must in so far have the effect of depreciating it. Banking is the only mode of introducing paper as the representative of any other commodity than bullion—and if Government merely exchanged notes for silver or gold of the same amount, it could only do so at a considerable expense of establishment for that purpose, and for the custody of the precious deposit, without any equivalent remuneration in the shape of profit or revenue.

For these and similar reasons it may be presumed, that Government will not undertake of itself to supply the convenience of a perfect paper circulation to the community, but leave that office to be performed by Banking establishments.

From a subsequent paragraph it would appear, that the Lieutenant-Governor conceives that the Bank of Bengal enjoys a privilege equivalent to that of giving to paper the worth and currency of coin. But the Directors would submit to the consideration of His Honor, that if that Bank really possessed a talismanic privilege of such value, its profits could scarcely be limited to a rate so moderate as nine per cent. per annum on its capital, which in the actual average of its dividends during an experience of upwards of thirty years, and which scarcely, if at all, exceeds the profits of the Union Bank, which enjoys no privilege whatever, and has comparatively scarcely any bank-note circulation.

The Lieutenant-Governor seems to apprehend that a general extension of the privilege sought by the Bank would be attended with so much inconvenience as would probably cause its limitation, and thus a monopoly would be established in behalf of a favoured institution, to the injury of others engaged in similar transactions. But the Agra Bank, though first in the field, lays no claim to be admitted to any favour from which others establishing otherwise equal claims, might be justly debarred. The services of an officer of Government, which are solicited by the Bank, differ but little in their nature or extent from those rendered habitually in all other branches of the Stamp Revenue, and which might be exacted by the existing Banks, were it not more convenient for them to arrange otherwise by an annual compromise with Government.

With respect to the refusal of Government to accredit the notes of the Union Bank as a precedent for similar demand to the request of the proprietors of the Agra Bank, it may be suggested, that, in all probability, the Union Bank did not tender such a perfect guarantee to Government, and the community as that which has been offered by the Agra Bank. But were it otherwise, the Proprietors of the Bank of Bengal, together with Government itself in the capacity of their Partner, were parties interested in withholding from others participation in a privilege—which it might be alleged, formed a virtually part of the compact with the original subscribers, when they entered into partnership with Government in establishing the Bank. However judicious or otherwise might have been the connection then formed by the Government with the Bank of Bengal, it may have appeared that it cannot now be dissolved, or at least that its concomitant advantages cannot be taken away from the Bank without injury, nor, unless compensation is made without injustice to the proprietors. But if such, as seems probable, were the grounds of the refusal to the Union Bank, they are inapplicable to the case of the Agra Bank. No indulgence that may be granted to it by Government, can interfere with the monopoly which the Bank of Bengal has hitherto enjoyed; inasmuch as the circulation of Bank of Bengal notes—or of any notes payable only in Calcutta, is impracticable at this distance, where they necessarily cease to serve the purposes of notes payable on demand. They are in fact accordingly, always at a discount when offered for sale at this place; while cash can command payment of a larger sum at Calcutta.

Trusting that the importance of the subject, as a question of public and private interest, will be accepted as an apology for trespassing at such length on the attention of Government,

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient humble Servant,

G. J. GORDON.

Agra, May 22, 1837.

Secy. Agra Bank.

To G. J. GORDON, Esq.

Secretary to the Agra Bank.

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 23d instant, and to convey to you the following sentiments and remarks of the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor in reply.

2. It does not appear to the Lieutenant-Governor that the rejoinder of the Directors of the Agra Bank to my letter of the 6th instant, alters in any respect the character of their first proposal. They still apply for the privilege of having their notes received as money in the collection of the public revenue: and the question for consideration still is, whether that privilege ought to be granted, or withheld.

3. In stating briefly, in reply to the first application of the Directors of the Agra Bank, his reasons for conceiving that it was the duty of the Government to withhold that privilege, His Honor did not intend to be drawn into a discussion on the abstruse question of paper currency; but as the Bank Directors seem to have misapprehended his meaning in some instances, His Honor thinks it right that a few remarks should be offered on the contents of their last letter, and this will be done most conveniently by following the order of the paragraphs in that document.

4. In the first paragraph, the Lieut. Governor is represented as objecting to the proposals of the Agra Bank, "relative to an issue of notes payable on demand." His Honor begs that it may be clearly understood; that he has offered no objection to the issue of notes payable on demand. That was not the matter referred for his consideration. What the Lieut. Governor has objected to, is the grant to the proprietors of the Agra Bank of the exclusive privilege of having their notes received as cash in the public treasury. His Honor calls it exclusive, because practically it would be so.

5. In paragraphs 3, 4, and 5, the Bank Directors object to the Lieutenant-Governor having considered their application as one for the privilege of having their notes received as money in the collection of state revenue. If this be not in reality the purport of their application, His Honor does not know what is. They say that they only desire that their notes should be received as cheques;—but this is to be understood of all paper money that is not forced. Bank of England notes and Bank of Bengal notes are cheques, but are nevertheless received as money. In proof that they have no intention, that their notes should pass as money, they advert to the limitation of their views to the Collectorate of Agra, and to their declaration of their not undertaking to provide the means of cashing their notes elsewhere. But this does not in any way alter the nature of their application as regards the Collectorate of Agra; and only shews that they are disposed to proceed with prudent caution in their speculation. There is nothing to prevent its extension beyond that limitation, when desirable for the Bank; for the Government, if it acceded to the arrangement in the first instance, would hardly object to its extension on the same terms. In like manner they advance as another proof of their innocence of that proposal, that they did not request the Government to disburse their notes and declare them to be a legal tender. If their notes were received as equivalent to money in the state treasury, they would naturally and of course be disbursed from it, to all who might wish to receive them. To declare the paper of the Agra Bank to be a legal tender, is altogether another affair, which could not be contemplated, and would not be necessary for the currency of the paper, if it were received at the public treasuries, and obtained credit with the community. It is stated on the part of the Bank to be only asked, that their paper should not be discredited by the Government; but surely the privilege applied for of having their notes received as money at the state treasury is something more than that.

It is unnecessary to enter into any discussions of the relative uses of bank-notes, bills of exchange, bill-drawn on goods and other commercial bills, to which the 6, 7, and 8 paragraphs, of your letter refer. Those uses agree in some respects but differ in others. Bank-notes by universal consent have acquired the name of paper money, and are more especially used as substitutes for coin in general currency. The proprietors of the Agra Bank cannot suppose that the Lieutenant-Governor meant to apply to their proposed notes any other description than what he should conceive to be applicable to all paper money based on credit, and it was unnecessary on their part to strive to convince His Honor, that paper is not gold, and cannot be made equal to it by compulsion. Compulsory measures of the legislature to make bank-notes inconvertible and at the same time a legal tender, are quite out of the question in the present discussion. The Directors state, professing to regard all commercial bills as on the same footing, that they cannot conceive on what principle one class of bills or notes should be less legitimate or less deserving of countenance than the others. They seem to forget that they themselves are seeking to establish the superiority of one class over all others, seeking for bank-notes a privilege not accorded to other classes of bills.

Para. 9, 10, 11, 12; 7. The Lieutenant-Governor is not aware that there is any urgent call for paper money at Agra, or that such inconvenience exists in commercial or pecuniary transactions as to render necessary recourse to that substitute for coin. His Honor is disposed to consider the present application of the Bank as originating more in their own views, than in any call on the part of the community for the introduction of a paper currency. But if a paper currency be required at Agra, it must be required at other places in these Provinces, and it would be the duty of the Government to provide for it on a more extended scale than the limited one proposed by the Agra Bank, and it is inexpedient for the Government to embarrass itself by an arrangement so local and restricted. In applying for the receipt of their notes as money in the state treasury, the proprietors of the Agra Bank appear to His Honor to ask for a very great privilege, which cannot be granted without strong reason; and the Lieutenant-Governor cannot agree with the Directors of the Bank in their opinion, that it is hard to refuse such a privilege to private paper, for on whatever grounds the refusal may rest, there is no obligation to grant such a privilege and no one is entitled to expect it. The Bank Directors state it to be hard, that the exclusive right of the State to manufacture money should be objected to their application, when it is not intended to acknowledge the corresponding obligation. But the authority which makes that objection, would abide by the obligation, and an authority which would not acknowledge the obligation would not probably make the objection. It is not necessary that His Honor should enter on the question of the supply of paper money on the part of the State, no such measure being, as far as the Lieutenant-Governor is aware, in contemplation. If it were ever adopted, it would obviously require great prudence and caution, and it is not to be supposed that it would be undertaken without due regard to the important considerations by which it ought to be regulated.

Para. 13. 8. The Lieutenant Governor does not know why the Directors of the Agra Bank impute to him the supposition, that the Bank of Bengal has a talismanic privilege and boundless power of making paper money, without any reference to the regulations and restrictions, under which the paper money of Banks working on sound principles must be issued. This is surely putting a meaning on His Honor's words, which the Bank Directors must on reflection know they were not meant to convey. Nevertheless the power of issuing paper money, which shall be received as equal to coin in the state treasuries, is a vast privilege, and it is this that the Agra Bank applies for, without shewing any reason why it should be granted.

Para. 14. 9. There is nothing stated in the 14th paragraph that in any degree diminishes the probability, that the privilege if ceded to the Agra Bank would become a monopoly: it is right for the Bank not to entertain any such views; but the Directors must be well aware, that such would be the natural practical result.

Para. 15. 10. It is not requisite to enter into any discussion of the motives by which the Supreme Government was actuated, in refusing to the Union Bank the privilege granted to the Bank of Bengal, and now sought by the Agra Bank. If, as surmised by the Directors of the Agra Bank, a desire not to interfere with the monopoly of the Bengal Bank in Bengal, was a part of those motives, it is not clear, that the grant of the privilege to the Bank would not interfere with the monopoly of the Bank of Bengal; for it does not seem impossible, that the circulation of the paper of the Bank of Bengal might be extended to these Provinces.

Para. 2. 11. From these remarks the Directors of the Agra Bank will perceive that the objections to their proposition, which have occurred to the Lieutenant-Governor, have not been removed by their last letter. Your letters of the 2d and 22d instant, therefore, will be submitted, as requested by the Directors of the Bank, for the consideration and orders of the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General in Council.

12. The Directors of the Bank appear to think that the Lieutenant-Governor has intended to attach something blameable to the application which they have made; but His Honor begs them to be assured that he has no such intention. They are naturally and laudably exerting themselves to benefit the institution under their management. That is their duty. It is His Honor's as the local representative of the Government, to consider whether sufficient reasons exist to justify the grant of the privilege which they seek. The difference is that the privilege appears to His Honor to be immense, and sure to be a monopoly, and that the Bank Directors seem to regard it as a little matter, which ought to be easily accorded.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient Servant,

R. H. Scott,

Offg. Secy. to the Lt.-Gov., N. W. P.

Agra, May 31, 1837.

INCREASE OF THE CAPITAL STOCK OF THE BANK.

It will be recollected that the proposition to increase the stock of the Bank was originally connected with that of a paper circulation.

The reason appeared so obvious to the Directors, that less pains were taken to explain their views, than it would seem, from what has appeared in the public prints, would have been satisfactory to some of the shareholders. Amongst so large a body there were some who had either not adverted to the published statements of the modes in which the funds of the Bank were invested or were not familiar with sound principles of Banking. To them it might have been well to point out that only a small portion of the funds of the Bank was employed otherwise than in loans repayable within long dates, the Directors relying on the balance in hand, and the monthly instalments of payment of those long loans for the means of meeting any calls from the depositors.

But though within certain limits, this was a safe and sound mode of conducting business, where the immediate liabilities were of small amount, the far greater part of the deposit funds not being claimable without two months previous notice, it is one that they durst not follow, with an issue of promissory notes payable on demand. It would be the height of imprudence, to issue notes of that description without having a much larger amount employed at short dates, in exchanges, discounts, loans for short periods on the security of goods, cash credits also realizable at short dates, &c., &c.

Now the question was, whence were to come the funds for those operations? The demand for further loans at long dates continued urgent, so that there was no doubt that even a larger amount than was already employed in that way, might be safely and profitably so invested.

The original stock had risen to a considerable premium, the moment almost the subscription to it was closed. It is obvious, therefore, that if more capital was wanted it would be readily forthcoming, and the greater the increase of capital the greater would be the security of all parties—of the depositors, of the holders of the Bank's notes, and of the shareholders themselves.

The only point then, that remained to be determined, was the amount that might be easily raised by the shareholders, in the shape of new subscriptions within a moderate time, so as not to deteriorate the value of their present stock. On mature deliberation, the Directors resolved to recommend to the proprietors to double the present amount of stock. The proprietors at the last general meeting, adopted the recommendation of the Directors, and the result has proved the judiciousness of that counsel; for with a great demand for shares from the public, not one is to be procured at the rate of premium current before that resolution was adopted—and the premium now demanded is higher than before, shewing that none of the present shareholders on the spot, are willing to forego any part of their privilege of subscribing at par.

SHARES IN THE ORIENTAL LIFE INSURANCE SOCIETY.

The late secretary of the Agra Bank applied on behalf of the Directors to the Secretaries of the Oriental Life Insurance Office, for permission to pass applications for Life Insurance at once, instead of having to postpone applications for loans pending a reference to Calcutta. To this proposal the Directors of the Oriental replied, that they could not recommend such a delegation of authority, unless the Agra Bank took itself a large interest in the Oriental Office. In the expectation, that this would be acceded to, the Oriental society, on the occasion of their limiting their stock to 500 Shares, resolved that fifty should be expressly reserved for the Agra Bank.

The Directors of the Bank, however, postponed coming to any decision on the subject, till they should have an opportunity of consulting with the present Secretary, as to the expediency of the purchase. It appearing from his report that handsome dividends might be expected, it was agreed that the fifty shares, should be taken in the names of four of the Directors, two other shareholders, and of the Secretary, and that it should rest with the proprietors to consider those shares as the property of the Bank or not, as they might deem expedient.

The following statement will furnish the grounds on which a decision may be formed, one way or the other.

By assuming the shares as the property of the Bank, the privilege of taking risks in cases where a speedy decision is of consequence, will be obtained, that being left to a Committee formed of two of the Directors and the Secretary.

A considerable half yearly profit may be expected in the form of a dividend, and a further bonus proportioned to the share of business which the Bank gives to the Oriental.

The contribution for 50 shares is sicca rupees 12,500 to which the Oriental Society have added interest at the rate of 4 per cent. from the date of the preceding half yearly dividend, making sicca rupees 12,750, or Co. rupees 13,600. On the above Capital sicca rupees 12,500 or Co. rupees 13,333-5-4 a dividend of rupees 100 per share was declared at the last meeting, giving, after deducting interests as above, a net profit of rupees 4,733-5-4. To this will have to be added the Bonus above alluded to, the Bank's share of which has not as yet been communicated; but it is not likely to be less than rupees 2,000, nor more than rupees 4,000. At all events, the aggregate dividend will probably amount to upwards of 50 per cent. on the price of the shares.

It is not to be supposed that so large a profit can be expected twice a year, but what has been already realized will, if accepted, enable the proprietors to increase the dividend for the current half year, by one per cent. at least, and thus tend to enhance the value of shares.

The only countervailing consideration is the risk supposed to be attached to the business of life insurance.

By the rules of the Oriental no dividend can be declared except of funds in excess of one and a half years' average payments on lapses. There can be, therefore, no call for a contribution unless such an unprecedented rate of mortality shall have taken place, as will cause all those reserved funds, as well as the incoming premium, to be absorbed.

The whole of Funds of the Oriental are invested in Company's paper in the names of three of the Directors.

G. J. GORDON,

Secretary Agra Bank.

Agra, June 1, 1837.

P. S.—By a letter from the Secretaries of the Oriental Life Insurance Office just received, it appears that the bonus above alluded to amounts to Co. rupees 3,802-8 making the total with dividend on Co. rupees 13,333-5-4, the price of the fifty shares, rupees 8535 13-4, or about 61 per cent.—Agra Ukhar, June 10.

After an attentive perusal of the correspondence between the Agra Bank and the Lieut.-Governor, which we have published, we do not quite agree with the Agra Ukhar about the weight of the reasoning on either side. Instead of being struck with "the strong contrast which the masterly reasoning and expanded views of the Bank afford to the trifling objections, the unscientific arguments, and the illiberality of the local Government," (the italics are ours) we perceive only on the one side a good plausible case made out, and on the other a statesmanlike view, even though perhaps mixed up with a little prejudice, of objections that ought not to be overlooked. Considering that there is something like a reaction in public opinion as to the utility of unrestricted Banks of issue, and that Parliament has deemed it necessary to appoint a Committee to enquire into the system of banking in England in consequence of the disturbed state of the currency, charged upon the over-issues of Joint-stock Banks—that not only the ministers of the day are of opinion that these require to be put under special controul, but the proposition was supported by a majority of three to one (121 to 42) in the House, including Sir Robert Peel, who took occasion to say, that "the power given to Country and Joint-stock Banks generally to issue paper had certainly a tendency to diminish the evil of a crisis, but it would also have the effect of diminishing the value of money, raising prices, and changing the value of property in all parts of the kingdom;"—it is rather bold in our brother to attack the objections of the Lieutenant-Governor as "reasons which belong not to the present advanced state of the science of Political Economy,"—as if the theory of money were now perfectly laid down. His Honor may be theoretically wrong in saying, that "the proposal (to issue Bank notes accredited by Government) is tantamount to an application for permission to coin money," and Mr. Fullarton may have been very correct in his remark, that "bank-notes are not in fact money; they are merely a form of credit;" while in his admission in the next sentence, that "credit in a wealthy community is continually performing the offices of money and under a thousand shapes, even without the aid of a Bank circulation," he admits the principle that the notes of a Bank are at least a substitute for money—in other words, that they are either an addition to the amount of the circulation, or they displace a portion of it. If this be not coinage in a literal sense, it is doing more, for the stamp of the King is not a mere assurance that so much gold will be given on demand, but the gold goes with the stamp; they cannot pass into separate hands, and be paid away in two distinct purchases; whereas a bank of issue puts out its notes, not in exchange for specie to be held in deposit, but really upon its credit only and often to an amount many times in excess of the specie in store. The footing on which Mr. Gordon's proposal would place the notes of the Agra Bank, limiting the amount to the value of Company's paper deposited with Government, would no doubt be a very sufficient security both to the Government and to the public; but the mere fact of the existence of that security, though it would in every way greatly extend the facilities of circulation, would not prevent an influence upon prices, nor prevent possible embarrassment in cashing the notes at the Bank, in the event of a large issue of paper. Mr. Gordon in his second letter admits that, "If paper be thrown into circulation without representing a full equivalent, either in bullion or in goods, such an issue of spurious currency would be productive of mischief, because, being in excess of the existing circulating capital, it must in so far have the effect of depreciating it." Now this admission tells against a very probable state of things. The notes of the Bank may be issued in discounting short bills, which are not bullion, nor goods, but only another representative of credit; or they may be employed to purchase the very Company's paper that is to be lodged as the security for them: and a sudden demand for coin might, under such circumstances, very much embarrass the Bank, though its balance sheet showed a very prosperous state of affairs and no bad debts. However, it is not our purpose to raise up phantoms of alarm, but merely to show that the question is not one to be lightly dealt with. The Lieutenant-Governor rightly sees that the sanction required of him would in practice be an exclusive as well as an important privilege, and might possibly produce evil, and further, that it would interfere with the privileges of a chartered bank in which the Government is interested. It cannot therefore be matter of surprise that his Honor should demur, though we were not prepared to expect he would if a great measure rest his objections upon the contested principle, that "if paper money were much required by the community, it would become the duty of the Government to provide a sufficiency of the desired article, with due care and precaution, and this branch of its functions ought not to be transferred to others." Care and precaution in the way of legal or other restrictions are of indisputable propriety; but we do not see why the state may not make a bargain with a private corporation to do this duty for it, of course under proper controul. The bargain, if made, should be of an exclusive nature, and the parties receiving the privilege should pay a fair consideration for it. A mixed and unrestricted paper currency is an evil any where, and is now pretty generally admitted to be so in England.—Cutwara Courier, June 21.

(Sd.) G. UDNY,
Secy. to the Bank.

2d. Proposed by Mr. R. D. Mangles, seconded by Baloo Russomoy Dutt, and

An amendment to this resolution was proposed by Mr. B. Harding, viz. that after the word constituent be inserted, instead of the word "gratis," the words "at a charge of one per cent." This amendment was negatived.

The original proposition was then put and there appeared by the report of the scrutineers—

For it.....	21
Against it.....	22
Majority against it.....	1

Mr. J. Pattle was called to the chair.

1st. Proposed by Mr. E. Macnaghten, seconded by Mr. J. W. Cragg, and

Resolved,—That it is not at present desirable to extend the operations of the Bank either by way of branch banks or agencies, or in any manner to place the assets or responsibility of the Bank beyond the immediate controul of the Calcutta Directors, but it is nevertheless desirable that the Charter should confer the power of establishing such banks or agencies, should circumstances hereafter make such a measure expedient.

For it.....	17
Against it.....	15
Majority in favor of it.....	2

8th. Proposed by Mr. H. T. Prinsep, seconded by Mr. E. Macnaghten, and

Resolved,—That this meeting sees no objection in allowing the registered share to stand as the Draft Act at 1,000 rupees but does not think that less than a 4,000 rupees interest ought to be the qualification for a vote for the election of a Director, or at meetings.

An amendment to this resolution was proposed by Mr. J. W. Cragg, viz.

That this Meeting see no reason for making any alteration in the present value of the shares. The amendment was negatived.

A second amendment to this resolution was proposed by Mr. G. Udney, viz.

That the amount of stock to be entitled a share be reduced from 4,000 rupees to 1,000 rupees, and that the amount of stock necessary to qualify for a vote to be reduced from 4,000 rupees to 1,000 rupees, also. This amendment was also negatived.

Negatived.—That, with reference to Clause 23d of the Draft Act (of which copy is in the margin) the words "or be in the service and pay of the Honorable Company," shall be inserted after the words "Government Securities." 14th. For it 11,
Against it. 14

Majority against it 3.

15th. Proposed by Mr. B. Harding, seconded by Mr. R. H. Cockrell, and

16th. Proposed by Mr. B. Harding, seconded by Mr. R. H. Cockrell, and

Resolved.—That the number of the Government Directors be reduced from 3 to 2, giving one Government Director to every $5\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs of stock, and the public one Director for every $6\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs of stock.

CHURCH BUILDING FUND FOR INDIA.

ESTABLISHED 1834.

Trustees.

The Lord Bishop of Calcutta,	The Honorable Henry Shakespear,	Henry
The Venerable Arch-deacon Dealtry,	Major Hutchinson	v
The Rev Thomas Robertson,	} Ex. Off.
The Rev Henry Fisher,

Secretary.

The Rev. Josiah Bateman.

The trustees of the Church Building Fund have been for some time anxious to render an account of their proceedings since the publication of the last report in 1835, and the recent arrival of the Lord Bishop at the presidency enables them now to effect their object. They propose to offer a brief summary of what has been actually accomplished, with a statement of the accounts, believing that this course will prove more generally acceptable than a long report. One glance will then enable subscribers to discern the progress of the fund, and to ascertain that its course, though unobtrusive, is practical and useful. Its influence, both directly, and indirectly, is widely felt, and the general impression of the trustees themselves, and the one which they would wish to convey to others is, that of cheerfulness and encouragement. They are sanguine enough to anticipate that ere many years have passed, there will not be a considerable station in India without a building dedicated to the honour of Almighty God, and set apart for the public worship of our Protestant Episcopal Church.

For the erection of a Church at the hill station of Mussooree, the trustees made last year a grant of 1000 rupees. A very handsome subscription from the visitors, and residents in the neighbouring stations, raised this sum to upwards of 6,000 rupees. The first stone of a small Gothic building was laid by the Bishop in May, 1836, although the severity of the winter and other causes seem to have checked the rapid progress of the work, yet the Church will probably be opened for divine service during the present year. The business has been managed by a small local committee, and the work ably superintended by Captain Kirke, of Deyrah Dhoon. The name is Christ Church, Mussooree.

At Simlah, in like manner, a subscription of nearly 3,000 rupees was raised in July last, for the enlargement of a building then used for public worship, for adding a tower and chancel, and giving to the whole structure something of an Ecclesiastical appearance. The trustees voted and have paid 200 rupees towards this object. Captain M' Causeland, of Simlah, kindly undertook the work, assisted by a small committee, and the last report gives every reason to expect that the whole is now very nearly complete.

There is no Church at Lodanah, nor any building suitable for divine worship, though it has become a station of much importance, and with a considerable Christian population. The trustees have therefore made a grant of 600 rupees, which, with about 800 rupees subscribed there in October last, will suffice to build a Church upon a plan submitted and approved of by the Lord Bishop's simple indeed and plain, but sufficiently large for the immediate wants of the station. The work is not yet begun, but the arrangement is confided to the care of a building committee in communication with the trustees.

At the station of Allyghur much anxiety has been expressed for the erection of a church, and some of the residents have most liberally come forward and raised upwards of 2,000 rupees for that purpose. The trustees have voted 200 rupees in addition. The work will be immediately commenced: the money is all collected; and a very neat and elegant plan has been submitted and approved. The church is of course very small. It will only accommodate from 50 to 70 persons, but that is at present sufficient.

Bareilly has never had a Church, not any suitable place for the worship of God. Divine Service has been for some time performed in the house of the Reverend Chaplain of the station. The Christian population is increasing rather than otherwise, and during the recent visit of the Bishop they spontaneously came forward and subscribed the handsome sum of 3,560 rupees for the erection of a church. The trustees have met this with a grant of 1,000 rupees: which with another 1,000 rupees recently obtained from Government, will be sufficient to complete the design. The management of the details is placed, as in all other cases, under a Local Committee in communication with our Trust Fund.

A church and chapel are now rising rapid at Cawnpore, the foundation stones of both having been laid during the Bishop's visit in February last. They are large, and calculated to accommodate about 800 persons each. The chapel is erecting at the eastern end of the cantonments and at the expense of Government. It is making excellent progress, and Captain Greene, to whose care and skill the execution of the work is intrusted, reports that it will be nearly completed before the ensuing rains. The church also is rising upon a wide and noble site given by Government. This building is likewise kindly superintended by Captain Greene assisted by a small committee. The architecture is Gothic, and the elevation very handsome. The work is necessarily not so far advanced as in the chapel, which is a very cheap and simple structure: but the progress is very satisfactory, and the building will probably be covered in before the end of this year, and completed early in 1838. It was stated in the last report, that the trustee had voted 12,000 rupees towards this object; but the conditional arrangement there also alluded to, having failed, the grant was not completed till this year. They have already transmitted 9,000 rupees to Cawnpore, and are responsible for 3,000 rupees more to the Church Committee. It is estimated that the church will cost about 25,000 rupees. The whole amount is available, by the handsome contributions of the Governor-General, the Lieutenant-Governor of Agra, the Bishop, the Commander-in-Chief, and the civil and military residents at Cawnpore and its neighbourhood, in addition to the above grant made by the trustees. In Cawnpore alone upwards of 7000 rupees were raised. Certain stores and military buildings also made over by government, have been found of essential benefit. So that the resources are quite sufficient to cover the outlay required. The names given to the sacred edifices were Christ Church and St. John's Chapel.

At Allahabad a church is being built under the management of the executive engineer and a local committee. The trustees have voted and paid 6,000 rupees in aid of the work, which is advancing in a very satisfactory manner. When completed, the church and spire will be very handsome. It is intended to accommodate about 400 persons, and stands on a good site at a considerable distance from the fort.

The sum of 1200 sicca rupees, voted as a loan for the completion of the church at Barrackpore, has been considerably increased by the trustees from time to time. They have been induced to exceed the original sum by a desire to meet the wishes of the station, and to complete the work in the most satisfactory manner. The church is now finished. The whole sum drawn from the fund has been 3919 Co.'s rs. and the amount raised from local resources is 1,555 Co.'s rupees, leaving a balance of 2364 Co.'s rupees due to the fund.

The grant of 600 sicca rupees, mentioned in the last report, has been transmitted to Singapore. The exterior structure of the church at that station is finished but some delay having arisen from the want of sufficient funds to complete the interior fittings-up, it has not yet been opened for divine service. This, however, it is hoped, will soon be remedied, under the care and suggestions of the Rev. E. White, recently appointed Chaplain of Singapore.

Adverting to the present state of the funds, the trustees are almost afraid to mention that they have listened to applications for churches from Hazareebaugh and Chittagong. They are so anxious however to meet the present feeling upon the subject with all promptitude, that, when thoroughly informed of the intentions of Government and of the extent of the grant required from the Fund, they will prefer trusting to the continued support of their subscribers, and forestall their means, rather than seem backward in rendering their aid. They are especially called to consider the case of Hazareebaugh, a new and large military station, and likely from the healthiness of its climate to become of considerable importance. There are already about 1,100 Christians there, with a chaplain, but no place at all for divine service. It may also be mentioned in connection with this subject, that the grants for Loodjanah, Bareilly, and Allyghur have been made contingent, as to the time of payment, upon the receipt of the necessary supplies.

The trustees venture to indulge the hope that this brief account of their proceedings will meet with general approbation, and be considered an evidence that they have not been negligent in the duty confided to them. Grants have been made for eight new churches, and assistance has been rendered in the way of loan for a ninth. The information acted on, in every case, has been founded on personal inspection; and in making their several grants the trustees have gone to the utmost limits that prudence would allow. The ready and spontaneous local aid afforded in so many instances, will not, it is hoped, be allowed to interfere with the regular subscriptions on which the Church building Fund depends. The advantage of concentrated efforts, were it only in the calling forth and giving a direction to this local aid, is quite obvious: and the necessity of continued support and increased zeal both from collectors and subscribers to the fund is indispensable. On this it must depend for its future stability, for the fulfilment of the engagements already entered into, and for the accomplishment of the hopes so anxiously cherished.

The cash balance against the Fund, when its pledges are taken into account, is 1987 Co.'s rupees; but the receipts though not so large as was anticipated, are pretty steady, and will soon reduce the amount; whilst a recent change in the method of collecting will, it is hoped, when carried into full effect, increase them considerably.

A complete list of the names of present subscribers was impossible, without great delay, and a much longer report. This, therefore, has been postponed for another opportunity, and a general account substituted. The very frequent changes of residence, occurring in every station, render any thing more than a careful statement of receipts and disbursements on the whole, very embarrassing. The sums acknowledged by the secretary to the collectors, can most conveniently be again acknowledged by them to the subscribers, and this, with the published accounts, will perhaps be considered sufficient.

The only other points to be mentioned are, first that C. W. Smith, Esq., C.S., having been compelled by ill health to resign his trusteeship and leave Calcutta, the Hon'ble H. Shakespear has been requested to become a trustee, and has kindly consented to accept the office and secondly, that the present secretary, at the desire of the trustees, has resumed his former office, which in the interim has been so ably and efficiently supplied by Captain Marshall.

All communications, therefore, on the business of the fund may be directed as formerly to the Bishop's Palace.

By order of the Trustees.

J BATEMAN, M. A., Secretary.

EAST INDIA AND CHINA ASSOCIATION.

We have been favored with the following copy of a letter from the President and Vice President of the E. I. and China Association to the Directors of the East India Company on the subject of the annual demand on this country for home payments. We understand that from a private communication with the chair and Sir John Hobhouse, it is understood the proposal is likely to be carried into effect, and certainly as regards the China Finance Committee —

TO THE RIGHT HON'BLE THE COURT OF DIRECTORS OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

Honorable Sirs,—The Committee of the East India and China Association beg to state to your Hon. Court, that they have received a communication from the Bengal Chamber of Commerce requesting them "to endeavour to prevail upon the Court of Directors, and the Board of Control to fix in due time the sums to be raised at home by drafts on the Indian Treasury, and the supplement of remittance by the several presidencies on security of shipments, publishing to the community as early as possible such prospective arrangements, that those engaged in trade may take their measures accordingly, and that the tenor of its course may not be disturbed by abrupt interference, generating uncertainty, unnatural excitement," and the Committee in accordance with the recommendation of the chairs of your Hon. Court, at an interview with which the undersigned were honored, proceeded to bring the subject under the notice of your Hon. Court, because, although they believe there is every disposition on the part of the Home Government, to carry the India trade with it in its arrangement, without any desire to reap the undue benefit by exchange operations, or having in view any other object than that of securing the punctual receipt in this country of the amount required for the home charges, yet they are of opinion that the mode hitherto adopted has been in many respects, from its uncertainty, inimical to the interests of the trade between India, China, and the United Kingdom.

With this conviction the committee venture to submit to your Hon. Court the expediency of ascertaining at the earliest possible period the prospective wants of the Company, and of taking measures in advance at home for raising funds to meet the same so at the occasion as the management as possible of the usual course of the trade between the two countries, and they believe this effect would be attained by the adoption of a plan to the following effect assuming that the financial arrangements of the Company for raising the £3,200,000, advertised for their home charges for 1837, to have been completed, it would be desirable,

1st. That the Hon. Company should in the first week in March next, advertise the sum they propose to raise for 1838, say, for illustration £3 200,000, and continue in each succeeding year to make a similar communication

2d. That the advertisement should declare that the amount so required should be raised in a specific manner, say for example, (leaving the precise sums for the future regulation of the Hon. Court,) £2,000,000 to be raised in London by selling bills upon India, the treasury to be opened for the sale on the 1st January 1838, a month previous to which the rate of exchange either to be announced by advertisement or left to be regulated by tender.

700,000	to be advanced in Bengal on goods hypothecated to Great Britain
200,000	do do Madras do
200,000	do do Bombay do

£3,200,000

And in the event of the proposed advances on hypothecation not being accepted to the extent specified, any one of the presidencies, the authorities at the others to have the power of the extending the amount of their advances so as to complete the remittances required from India for the season.

By this arrangement the mercantile community will be able to judge of the effects of these operations upon the India trade, and should the arrangements have tendency to militate against any particular interest the emergency will be met by the timely notice thus given.

With respect to the advances in China, it is the unanimous opinion of the Committee of the East India and China Association, that experience has shewn since the opening of the China trade, contrary, it is admitted, to the earlier anticipations generally entertained, that the establishment of a committee of the Hon. Company's servants at Canton for the purpose of advancing money on the hypothecation of goods, has been disadvantageous to the best interests of the trade between Great Britain and China, and they therefore, respectfully request that your Hon. Court will be pleased at the earliest opportunity to transmit directions to Canton that your servants employed upon that duty may be withdrawn and their operations cease at as early a period as may be practicable.

We have the honor &c., &c.

CALCUTTA PUBLIC LIBRARY.

At a monthly meeting of the proprietors and subscribers which took place at the Library Rooms on the 3d June, the following was the result.

It was resolved, that Mr. Dyce Sombre, having so liberally contributed to the vested Fund, should receive the thanks of the Curators, and the Librarian was directed to write to that effect.

It was also resolved that in consequence of the increased expense which had fallen on the printing of the Library Catalogues (and which was not contemplated at the time when the resolution limiting their price to one rupee was passed), the sense of the next meeting should be taken as to the propriety of charging two rupees per copy for each catalogue, that being in fact about the real prime cost price.

It was also resolved, that those subscribers who after being written to for their arrears should fail to pay, should have their names struck out of the list altogether.

The Monthly Report was then read.

MEETING OF THE PROPRIETORS OF THE CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE

Our readers are aware that at a meeting of the Chowringhee Theatre Proprietors this day fortnight, a Committee consisting of Mr. C. R. Prinsep, Mr. J. P. Grant and Mr. Dorin was appointed to ascertain wherein the current and contingent expenses of the theatre can be reduced, and to report accordingly. This day the proprietors again assembled at the Town-Hall, and the report was brought up and read. It noticed several items of expenditure which had contributed to place the theatre in its present pecuniary position, for instance, the retention of a large establishment during the repairs of the house, a disbursement of between rupees 300 and 400 for silver gilt medals for managers; the average cost of the manager's breakfasts, and various other items, including the sum paid for the repairs of the house, which, it was stated, exceeded the amount of cost for which a new theatre might have been erected. The remarks contained in the report were not applied censoriously to the management; on the contrary it was admitted by all present, that with so unwieldy a body more frugal charges could not have been expected. "The past management," said Mr. C. R. Prinsep, "were such as under any circumstances could not have been successful." But Mr. Trower thought the report contained reflections on the management which were stronger than necessary, nor was he satisfied as to its accuracy on one or two points. He did not mean to question the good advice contained in the report, but he was inclined to think that the Committee had been misinformed with regard to several items of expenditure, and, under the circumstances, he thought it due to the management, to allow the report to remain open to explanation for a fortnight. Mr. W. P. Grant declared he had no intention of casting reflections on the managers. He for one was quite ready to acquiesce in a vote of thanks to them for the trouble and interest they had evinced for the prosperity of the partnership. And with Mr. Grant all the proprietors present seemed to concur. Nevertheless Mr. Trower was not satisfied, he thought that no expenses had been incurred but such as were necessary, and he suggested that the items objected to, be submitted to Mr. James Prinsep and Mr. William Prinsep. But the gentlemen named by Mr. Trower not being proprietors of the theatre, Mr. W. P. Grant could not accede to a proposition which would submit the pecuniary affairs of the house to their approval or otherwise. He again declared that he did not blame the managers, but the system which allowed so many gentlemen to have a share in the management. While, however, he acquitted them, he was far from holding the four gentlemen equally blameless under whose direction the house had been repaired. He felt no hesitation in accusing those gentlemen of having led the proprietors into unnecessary expenses,—of having spent more money than they ought to have done. There was a little confusion during the time Mr. Grant addressed the chair, and the reporter heard indistinctly what fell from the speaker, but he believes Mr. Grant doubted the efficiency of amateur operatives, thinking the four gentlemen to whom he alluded, would have better consulted the interest of the proprietors had they determined on a plan and given it to a professional builder to execute by contract. Mr. Farmer stated that the heavy work had been executed by contract. After much discussion, on the motion of Mr. Prinsep it was agreed to leave the report open to examination for a fortnight.

A proposition from Captain Hyde for a lease of the theatre for five years was next brought under discussion, and was, as we understood, rejected without a division. Mr. Prinsep and several gentlemen expressed their opinion that to let the theatre was tantamount to converting it into a place of amusement similar to Sadler's Wells. Mr. Farmer also tendered to rent the theatre from the 1st of July to November next, at rates 400 per mensem, and to place the performances under the control of managers appointed by the proprietors. But Mr. Farmer's proposition was not put to the vote.

The following resolutions were carried unanimously.

Resolved, that the suggestions of the committee for carrying on the theatre under three managers be acted on until the 30th April next, and that Mr. Parker, Mr. W. Palmer, and Mr. J. P. Grant be requested to undertake the duty of managers.

Resolved, that excepting the proprietor's tickets no free admissions be allowed when the theatre is let except such as shall be issued by the lessee.

Resolved, that the committee who had the kindness to prepare the report be requested to submit a scheme for the payment of interest thereon.

Resolved, that the committee be requested to take measures for ascertaining the exact state of the roofs, and the cheapest means of making them rain proof. —Oriental Observer, June 17.

John Stewart, Esq., proposed by J. C. Wilson, seconded by A. Colvin, Esq.

The President read a report of the committee appointed at the last general meeting of the Society, to reconsider the suggestions of a former committee, on the best means of encouraging improvements in the breed of cattle and sheep in India.

The opinions of the committee, on the subject of the probable expense, of maintaining an experimental breeding farm being exceedingly conflicting, the members of the old committee, deemed it prudent to concede the point, for the present, and to subscribe to a Resolution, which it was thought, would meet the end contemplated, that of awarding premiums and medals to the public, for the best imported cattle, and that the amounts of such premiums should be adjusted, after the resolution had met the concurrence of a general meeting. The suggestion, which had the approval of the members of the committee when present, was thrown back by a minute of this body member absent, Mr. Robinson,—who took objection to the absence of specification in the amount of premiums, and Mr. Walters having adopted Mr. Robinson's views, the president proposed that the report be returned for amendment, to be again brought up at next meeting.

Dr. Wallich proposed, with reference to the numerous interesting and important questions which have come before the Society, that standing committees be appointed, to consider and report at once upon matters referred to them, by which means a more solid opinion might be given by members, who were conversant with the subject submitted, and thus rectify the inconvenience of constantly forming new committees, which were frequently composed of gentlemen, who, although well qualified to offer an opinion on one question, would be lost in taking an erroneous view of another.

Dr. Wallich's proposal was seconded by the Chair, and by the meeting generally. But the nomination of members was left for another occasion, although Mr. Stirling commented that no time should be lost, in bringing about so important and useful a measure.

Dr. Wallich reported, on behalf of the Agricultural Committee who inspected the Society's Nursery last week, that the sugar-cane plants were in a thriving condition, and that a resolution had been proposed, not to trench upon the young stock in at least 18 months, when the society might be able to supply all applicants.

COMMUNICATIONS.

In the report of proceedings for last month, the Secretary omitted to allude to an interesting extract contained in Dr. Wallich's communication of the 9th May—from London's Gardiner's Magazine for December 1836—page 684—on the mode of accelerating the growth of seeds by scalding. The extract is too long to quote here, but will probably appear in the Society's transactions.

The following are notes from Dr. Wallich to the Secretary—

No. 1. Dated 15th May, forwarding a note from Captain Jenkins, together with specimens of the Assam Red Bean.

No. 2. Dated 25th May, acknowledging the receipt of sugarcane, sent to the Secretary, by Dr. Montgomery of Singapore.

No. 3. Dated 26th May, enclosing a report by Mr. Masters on the condition of the sugar-cane from Singapore, which have arrived in excellent condition,—some packed in dry sand, and some simply wiped round with straw. They are very fine canes and resemble (if they are not,) the Otaheite cane.

No. 4. Dated 13th June, presenting to the Society in the name of Dr. R. Wight of Madras, some printed copies of a paper drawn up by that gentleman in the cultivation of cotton in the Peninsula.

No. 5. Dated 13th June, forwarding for presentation to the Society, in the name of Captain Jenkins of Assam, specimens of mazanhurry morayah, and of green, floss silk, and annexing extract of a letter from that gentleman, giving some information regarding these samples. Captain Jenkins suggested, that if any means could be adopted to reel the silk of the wild silkworm—which is now wound off by the hand—it might become a valuable acquisition to our best exportable resources. With a view to attract attention to the subject, Captain Jenkins offers to place 500 rupees at the disposal of the Society, for a premium or premiums, to encourage experiments—and suggested that the society, should set aside 5,000 rupees towards the same object.

Proposed by the President, and Resolved, that the Secretary be requested to convey the Society's best thanks for Captain Jenkins's liberal offer—and to accept it,—and that the matter be referred for consideration, to a committee consisting of Dr. Spier, W. Storm, Esq., G. T. F. Speed, Esq., C. K. Robinson, Esq., and Professor O'Shaughnessy.

No. 6. Dated 13th June, describing the curious mess of calafornia presented at last meeting by Mr. Bignell as approaching nearly to the species of sympodium involvens, and pulvinatum, having the property of beautifully expanding, when put into water.

Dr. Wallich has retained one piece for further examination.

From Rev. D. Mangles, Esq., dated 18th May, stating in reply to the Secretary's letter of the 29th April, that instructions have been issued to the Commissioners of Circuit, to cause to be forwarded to the Society's office, monthly returns of the prices of grain, in their respective districts.

From Dr. A. Campbell of Nipal, of dated 6th, 7th and 10th May, acknowledging receipt of American maize forwarded by the Secretary, and forwarding, by desire, some specimens of the maize of Nipal.

From Dr. Montgomery of Singapore, dated 17th April, forwarding per "Gaulleidon," a box and two bundles of sugar-cane of two kinds the produce of the island, and requesting to be favored with a report as to their quality, and value in reference to the Otaheite cane.

From Sir Thomas Anbury, to Sir E. Ryan, dated Saugor, Bundelcund, 23d May, forwarding some seeds of a melon grown at a place called "Kooreapoor" (close on a small sandy stream) about 10 miles from that station.

Sir Thomas describes this melon to be decidedly superior to any he had tasted in Bengal, or in the N. W. Provinces, and having distributed the seed to several friends in Calcutta, Sir Thomas is of opinion that with care and good management it may be established here.

From Col. D. McLeod, of Engineers, to the Secretary, dated 13th June, forwarding two small parcels of melon seed from the same source as those received by Sir E. Ryan, one parcel superscribed "Rock melon of Saugor," 2 feet 2½ inches circumference, the other "high flavoured melon from Saugor."

From Mr. Millet, dated 23d May, furnishing an account of the mode, &c. adopted by him in the culture of the musk melons presented at last meeting.

N. B. Mr. Millet having fulfilled the conditions of the Society's resolution, the Secretary had paid, on receipt of this communication, 200 rupees to Mr. Millet, and presented him on behalf of the Society, a silver medal.

Memo—Erratum in last month's report. The motion of the President was to reward Mr. Millet with 160 rupees and a silver medal, but as Mr. M. had incurred an expense of 170 rupees, Mr. Storm proposed as an amendment, seconded by Capt. Leach, that 200 rupees be awarded, and it was resolved accordingly.

From Mr. Millet to the Secretary, dated 13th June,—sending six melons of the same description from seed, which was first planted, as the last crop attained maturity, and which are certainly superior in flavor to the former.

From Capt. T. P. Cawley, Superintendent of the Doab Canal, dated 10th May, mentioning his endeavours to introduce the cultivation of superior varieties of rice along the line of the Doab Canal, by the annual distribution of fresh grain (procured from a place N. of Nahan, famed for the kind called "Benemath"), to all the rice villages in the neighbourhood.

Mentions having successfully introduced the Otaheite sugar-cane, which will enable him to distribute it largely. Offers his services to advance the interests of the society.

From the same, dated 11th May, forwarding for the opinion of the Society, a sample of indigo, manufactured by Serjeant Pigott, an overseer on the Doab Canal.

From Major J. R. Ouseley, principal Assistant to the Commissioner of the Saugor and Nerbudda Territories, dated Camp Bantool, Hoshungabad, May 14th, in reply to the Society's circular under date the 31st March, forwarding a list of answers with reference to that part of the country, to the several questions therein contained.

From Colonel Dunlop, dated Head-Quarters Simlah, 15th May, remarking on the several varieties of fruits obtainable at Simlah, such as grapes, apricots, walnuts, &c., which are represented as tolerably good, but susceptible of great improvement by grafting and budding. Promises to collect specimens of grain and forest seed for the Society. Notices having been American cotton growing at Ferozepore, on the Sutledges. States that more cane is much required in that quarter. Asks for a supply of garden seeds to reach Simlah by October or November.

From Major Garstin, dated Meerut 21st May, presenting the Society, for the sake of the seed, some dried raspberries of an inferior kind, the produce of his garden, and requesting information as to the best method of improving the species. Promising to give the result of some experiments with artichokes, asparagus and wild strawberries.

From J. P. Marcus, Esq., Naunsagar, 29th May, presenting to the Society two bottles of the Rosa grass seed, with a small phial of oil distilled by him from the grass. Stating that the process for manufacturing the oil will be found in the 3d volume of the transactions of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta.

Memo.—The oil being packed with the seed, was found broken on the packet being opened; but the colour would admit of it being called genuine oil.

From Captain Lysaght to H. Walters, Esq., dated Bolarain, 16th May, acknowledging receipt of garden seeds, forwarded by the Society. Forwards a phial of Simool cotton, and a sketch of and giving information regarding the method in practice in that part of the country of drawing water from wells.

From the Hon. Mr. Melville, dated Berhampore, 15th May, presenting a specimen of cotton grown at that station from Upland Georgia seed.

From the same, dated 1st June, forwarding a larger supply of the above cotton, with a specimen of the soil.

From Mr. J. W. Laidlay, dated Berhampore, 1st June, advising the establishment of an Agricultural Society at that station, and soliciting the co-operation of the Society of India.

From Mr. H. C. Hulse, Veterinary Surgeon at Muntra, dated 12th and 29th May, offering for the consideration of the society, some remarks, based on his own experience, in the rearing of sheep, horned cattle and horses in India, and tendering his further services in furtherance of the objects in view.

The Secretary was directed to pass these communications to the cattle improving committee.

From E. Bental, Esq., Magistrate and Collector of Dinageppoor, tendering his services towards establishing a Branch Society at that station, and requesting the co-operation of this Society.

From Lieut. J. Hannington, dated Pirula, 7th June, intimating the establishment of a new station in the Jungle Mehal district which seems to him well adapted for the growth of Upland Georgia cotton, requesting a supply of the seed and Otaheite cane.

From G. H. Smith, Esq., dated Mussoorie, 23d May, intimating his intention of trying experiments in the Doon with cotton, tobacco, sugar, indigo, &c.; requiring information upon the culture of these articles, and a supply of seed from the Society's stock.

From R. Lowther, Esq., dated Allahabad, 4th May, acknowledging the receipt of further supplies of cotton seed. Advises despatch of two quart bottles more of the Sandoway tobacco seed.

Mr. Lowther regrets his inability to establish a garden, at present, in consequence of the high price of ground rent in the vicinity of the station.

From J. P. Marcus, dated 3rd May, (Naunsagar) promising to furnish replies to the queries conveyed in the Society's circular, but stating his inability to form a Branch Society at present, as recommended by Mr. Walters, owing to the general poverty of the zemindars and others in that neighbourhood.

From Lieut. H. Bigge, dated Bissenath, 21st April, forwarding a paper on the destruction of several lime and orange trees in his garden, by a maggot, together with two specimens of the same, and three pieces of the trees destroyed.

From Captain S. F. Hannay, dated 12th May, mentioning that the hemp forwarded by Captain Macfarquhar of Tavoy, (alluded to in last proceedings) is the shon hemp largely cultivated in Upper Assam, and used for making fishing-nets, for which it is well adapted from its great strength and elasticity.

From Mr. C. Vellet, seedsman, Cape of Good Hope, dated 6th March, in reply to the Secretary's letter of the 20th December last, on the subject of a supply of vegetable and flower seeds, for the approaching season—states that the order was in a state of forwardness, and would be shipped by the first favorable opportunity. Explains the cause of not having sent any cauliflower seeds last year. The crop at the Cape had completely failed.

From Mr. A. Larten, dated Shahabad, 28th May, stating that the seeds required for the Madras Society will be despatched on the 8th proximo.

From J. Little, Esq., Secretary Agricultural and Horticultural Society at Bombay, dated 6th May. Acknowledging the receipt of the Secretary's letter of 7th March, and of the American cotton seed—which had been widely distributed over the cotton district.

Asks to have an efficient mallee sent round from Calcutta.

N. B. This is a most difficult commission, and the Secretary fears he can hold out no hopes of procuring an intelligent gardener.

From J. H. Stocqueler, Esq., dated 18th May, forwarding a reprint of the Society's transactions, vol. 1—100 copies.

From J. Davenport, Esq., Secretary to the Branch Society of Comilla, acknowledging the receipt of seeds sent by this Society, and desiring to be supplied with the transactions.

From Mr. J. W. Masters, dated 7th June, offering a few plain remarks on the different specimens of soils from the Valley of Nipal; presented to the Society by Dr. A. Campbell.

From the same, dated 12th June, presenting to the Society, specimens of the three primitive earths, which form the principal ingredients in all soils partly artificial, but supposed by Mr. Masters, to be useful in comparing soils.

From the same, dated 14th June, forwarding further specimens of cotton of kinds, the produce of the Society's nursery, grown out of season.

From Mr. J. Paterson, to Dr. Strong, forwarding a sample of Soondebund Mould.

From Thomas Bagley, Junr., to Captain Nash, dated 4th February 1837, presenting through Mr. Allan, some selected Sea Island Cotton Seeds.

From James Grant, Esq., Collector at ———, forwarding by instructions from Government, prices of grain for one month.

From the Royal Asiatic Society, its transactions, Journal No. 6.

Dr. Hufnagle, presented a specimen of cleaned cotton, the produce of his garden from Upland Georgia seed—also a skein of twist made of it, which was considered a very promising specimen.

The Society will soon have a standard by which to compare samples of cotton, from the twist and cloth, now under process of carding and weaving, at Fort

Glower, from the large supply of seed received from Colonel Calcutt

Specimens of Egyptian cotton from Mr. Bell's garden, showed a considerable improvement on the former samples from the same trees. Those now produced are from straggling branches left when the bushes were cut over, the ensuing crop will determine whether the Cotton degenerates in quality or not.

The Secretary also presented from his garden 14 quart bottles of tobacco seed, the produce of seed received through Dr. Walkich, from Dr. Wight of Madras — likewise sent bottles of English clover seed.

The thanks of the Society were ordered to be offered for all the above communications and presentations

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

Wednesday Evening, the 7th June, 1837,

The Hon'ble Sir Edward Ryan, President, in the Chair

Dr J Swiney Lieut M Kittoe, Professor O Shaughnessy, & W Bicon, and Francis Robinson, Esqrs, were elected members of the Society

Mr Muir was proposed by Dr. Falconer, seconded by the Secretary,

The following reply from Government was received to the reference regarding the Mackenzie MSS

To James P Insep, Esq, Secy to the Asiatic Society.

Sir — With reference to your letter, dated 10th September 1836 I am directed to transmit to you the accompanying copy of a communication from the Government of Fort St George and to state for the information of the Asiatic Society, that the Right Honorable the Governor General of India in Council has authorized the Government of Fort St George to expend a sum not exceeding 7,000 rupees, in order to obtain from the Rev Mr Taylor an examination and collation of the manuscript work in the vernacular languages of India, collected by the late Colonel Mackenzie, and the restoration of any that may be found to deserve it

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

H. T PRINCE, Secy to Govt

Council Chamber, 10th May, 1837.

Mr. Taylor estimates, that the preliminary collation and examination of the manuscripts, including the restoration and copying of those injured, decayed, or becoming illegible, as may appear desirable on investigation, may occupy about a year, and half a year more is allotted for those at Calcutta. Of the whole he is to give an anxious whence it will be determined what shall be translated or published in original. He ventures to anticipate "some results from the enlightened recommendation of the Asiatic Society, that will justify their decision to the literary world, and furnish an important addition to our knowledge of history, mythology, philosophy, ethics, and local customs, modes of thinking and other habits of the people of South India."

A letter from the Secretary of the Asiatic Society of Paris, M. E Barneof, communicating officially the grant of 1,500 francs per annum, for the purchase of Sanskrit MSS. on account of the French Government, and requesting the Calcutta Society to undertake the commission.

The following letter from Capt. Harkness, Sec. Roy. As. Soc. of London, was read.

Royal Asiatic Society's house, 14, Grafton Street, Bond street, London, 24th January, 1837.

Sir,—I have the pleasure to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 6th of June last, enclosing a bill on Messrs Morris and Co. for £31 10s, the amount of your Society's subscription to the Oriental Translation Fund up to the year 1835, inclusive.

With reference to the last paragraph of your letter, I am requested to say that, as a body, the Oriental Translation Committee is precluded from taking any portion of the Oriental works (texts) you are now publishing, as it could not, consistently with the objects of its institutions, present them to its subscribers. Several of the Members, however, have expressed their intention of becoming, individually, subscribers to each edition, as completed, and I hope, also, to obtain a few subscribers from among the Members of the Royal Asiatic Society. In the mean while I trust that the powerful advocacy which the cause received in this country has been long and thus, productive of much benefit. It was supported by the united influence and exertions of the Royal Asiatic Society, and the Oriental Translation Committee, and the result was confidently understood to be, that the Bengal Government was to be instructed, at least, to defray all the expense attending the publishing of the works which it had commenced to print, but which it had transferred to your Society to complete.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient humble servant,

H. HARKNESS, Secretary.

Oriental Translation Committee

The Secretary observed, that

Captain Harkness's letter was the first official notice the Society had received from London of the state of their Memorial, regarding Oriental publications, sent through the Government here, and to duplicate through the Royal Asiatic Society, in 1836. It appeared that, from motives of delicacy, the Council of the Royal Asiatic Society thought it right not to publish what had been done in the Annual Review of its proceedings, while the subject was still under consideration; but that the favourable result of the application to the Court of Directors being now generally known, they ventured to announce the success of their intercession. He thought, therefore, that it implored the Society to notice the information they had long since possessed through the private correspondence of their English agent.

The committee appointed by the Royal Asiatic Society to wait upon the Chairman, and Deputy-Chairman, and upon the President of the Board of Control, consisted of the Right Honorable C. W. W. Wynne, President, Sir Gore Ouseley, Sir A. Johnston, Sir G. Staunton, Vice-Presidents, and Professor Wilson. Mr. Wynne opened the interview in both instances, and stated the case very clearly and sensibly, going into the general question—the impolicy of setting aside the native literature and institutions, and dwelling particularly on the assistance sought for the abandoned Oriental publications. Professor Wilson also delivered a long address the substance of which was published in the form of two essays in the London Asiatic Journal. Sir Gore Ouseley, and Sir A. Johnston, followed; and the high authorities replied in set speeches, expressing a disposition to favor the application without any pledge to the line that the Court or the Board would pursue. The Court's reply was understood to be delayed through the lamented death of Mr. Mill, the historian of British India, who had been empowered to draw it up.

This then was the moment for the Society, to show its gratitude to the distinguished individuals whose influence and talents had been so warmly exerted in supporting their memorial. Professor Wilson and Sir Gore Ouseley, were already on the list of their Members; to them, nothing more than their warmest thanks could be proffered; but to the Right Honorable President of the Royal Asiatic Society, to Sir Alexander Johnston, and to Sir G. Staunton were due the highest compliment the Society was capable of paying.

He begged therefore to propose, that these gentlemen be elected honorary Members, without the usual form of reference to the Committee of Papers, and that letters of thanks be addressed to each for the cordial support they had given to the cause of Oriental literature.

After a few objections on the score of departure from established form and want of full official information, the proposition was put from the chair and carried Nem. Con.

A letter from Professor Rain, Secretary of the Royal Society of Northern Antiquaries at Copenhagen, acknowledged receipt of Asiatic Researches, xiii. xviii., and forwarded the Society's Reports for 1836. One addressed to the English Members, contains an account of Iceland from the oldest Icelandic records.

Professor O. Frank of Munich, acknowledged receipt of the Mahabharat, vol. ii.

The Secretary of the Antiquarian Society, ditto of the xth vol. As. Res.

The following Report of the Committee of Papers on the subject of the Museum, was read:—

To JAMES PRINSEP, Esq.

Secretary to the Asiatic Society of Bengal.

Report of the Committee of Papers on the Museum Question.

The Committee having perused Dr. Pearson's Report on the operations of the Museum for the second experimental year, and having examined the state of the objects of Natural History, acquired, set up, and arranged under his superintendence, is of opinion that the Society is much indebted to his zeal and exertions, and that the sum voted for the support of the Museum in May, 1833, and renewed in May, 1836, has been well bestowed and profitably expended.

2. That nothing less than the actual demand for the Society's income on other objects imperatively necessary, such as the publication of its Researches, and the repair of its premises, would warrant the withdrawal of support from a department every day becoming of greater magnitude and importance; but that the following estimate of the receipts and payments of the Society for the ensuing twelve months, renders this continuance of the Museum establishment on the Society's present means inexpedient.

Estimated Receipts, for 1837-8.

Cash balance in the Bank of Bengal, &c.	652 14 1
Interest on the papers deposited with the Government Agent, &c.	835 0 0
Quarterly contribution, &c.	6,500 0 0

Estimated Charges.

Arrears of Establishment for March and April, 1837, &c.	563 11 0
The Museum allowance for April, &c.	213 5 4
Subscription to Journ. As. Soc., for 1836, not yet paid, &c.	1,293 0 0
Establishment and charges for 12 months, &c.	3,200 0 0
Subscription to the Journal Asiatic Society, for 1837, &c.	1,500 0 0

Deficiency, Co.'s Rs... 1,446 2 3 without estimating even a reduced allowance for the maintenance of the Museum.

3. That, viewing the maintenance of the Museum as a national object, and calculated to be of immense importance to science if placed upon a footing of efficiency, with a professional Naturalist at the head, directing researches and systematizing information obtained from various sources, both public and private, in all the branches of physical science, but more particularly in regard to the Natural History of British India and Asia at large; it is incumbent on the Society to make a full and urgent representation to Government on the subject, and to solicit such support as is accorded in most other countries to similar institutions of national and scientific utility.

That historical, antiquarian, and statistical researches, although they may not demand so large an outlay as the prosecution of physical inquiries, merit equally the Society's attention and the encouragement of Government, and should be included in the proposed representation, and that therefore a yearly grant of 10,000 rupees should be solicited in aid generally of the objects of the institution.

4. That pending the application to Government for pecuniary assistance, it is desirable to maintain the Museum on its present footing, and to retain the services of Dr. Pearson as Curator, from month to month, until the question be decided.

EDWARD RYAN.

For the Committee of Papers.

Proposed by Mr. W. Crockett, seconded by Mr. E. Surling, and carried unanimously, that the Report be adopted by the Society.

The Secretary then read draft of the proposed application to Government, which was ordered to be circulated in the Committee of Papers and forwarded without delay.

Library.

Baboo Nair Comul Se presented a copy of the catalogue of the Sanskrit works in the College of Benares for publication with the catalogue of the Society's books now in the press.

The Government of Bombay presented 5 copies of Lieutenant T. S. Cairless's Survey Report of the Indus navigation below Hyderabad.

The Right Honorable the Governor-General forwarded a copy of Professor Whewell's Researches on the Indes, 6th series with a request that the Society would undertake to promote inquiries on the Indian coasts to complete the theory of colidial lines for the Bay of Bengal, towards which the Government would be happy to contribute its aid.

Mr W H. Macnaghten presented two works in the Marhatta and Hindi languages the Siddhanta Shiksham prakasa by Subhaji Bapu, and the Bhugolo saro tikhya, by Mr Unkara Bhat Joshi, written for the purpose of explaining the correct system of astronomy to their countrymen.

Mr Macnaghten also exhibited to the meeting two handsome silver emblematical inkstands, representing a joshiki pandit seated between two globes, expounding their use from the Siddhantas—and around the stand, richly embossed, the twelve signs of the zodiac—a Sanskrit couplet on each expressing that it was presented by the Governor-General in Council in token of approbation of the astronomical learning and zealous endeavours of the pandits to enlighten their countrymen. The following extract of a letter from Mr. Wilkinson, Governor-General's Agent at Bhillai, describes what they had done to deserve so high a compliment.

"I had shortly before entertained in my private service a Siddhanti who possessed a higher degree of knowledge of his profession, and having had an opportunity of making myself whilst at Kota in some degree acquainted with the Hindu astronomical books, I had communicated a knowledge of them to my own Shastri, by name Subhaji Bapu, a man of wonderful acuteness, and intelligence, and sound judgment, and to Unkara Bhat, one of the principal Joshis of this part of Malwa. The arguments by which I had for the previous eight years of our connexion in vain endeavoured to impress on Subhaji Bapu a conviction of the truth of the real size and shape of the earth and of other important physical facts, now carried to his mind the clearest conviction when shown to be precisely the same as those of their own astronomical authors. His was the master mind, and it exercised its influence over the minds of all the other pandits. He was lost in admiration when he came fully to comprehend all the facts resulting from the spherical form of the earth, and when the retrogressions of the planets were shewn to be so naturally to be accounted for on the theory of the earth's annual motion, and when he reflected on the vastly superior simplicity and credibility of the supposition that the earth had a diurnal motion, than that the sun and all the stars daily revolve round the earth, he became a zealous defender of the system of Copernicus. He lamented that his life had been spent in maintaining foolish fancies, and spoke with a bitter indignation against all those of his predecessors who had contributed to the wilful concealment of the truths that once had been acknowledged in the land.

"Subhaji Bapu's first care was how he was to enlighten the people of Chandu and Nagpore, the land of his birth. At Bombay, Calcutta and Madras, and at Delhi and Agra, and here also, the truth he said must spread, but how will the mid-land of Nagpore, visited by no travellers from foreign countries, accessible to no ships from other islands, and maintaining no schools, — how will the eye of its population be opened? I recommended by embodying all the facts he had learned in a treatise in Marhatta. He immediately undertook the work. I have got it printed, and I now have the honor of submitting two copies of his work, with a request that they may be presented to the Governor-General of India.

"It is a work which will bear the test of even a severe criticism. It is full of philosophical reflections. From the different productions of different countries mutually necessary he argues the intention of Providence to unite all mankind by commerce in the bonds of an interested affection. He hence infers the restrictions laid on Hindus against travelling to foreign countries to be violent and unnatural. He smashes the folly of astrological predictions, and upholds the wisdom and mercies of Providence in veiling the future from our curiosity, and in keeping us all in our duties by an unflinching hope. He leaves none of the numerous vulgar errors held by all Hindus in connection with his subjects of geography and astronomy to pass without a complete and satisfactory refutation.

"Unkara Bhat, who holds the next rank in talent and usefulness, has written a free Hindi version of Subhaji Bapu's book on the Pauranic, Siddhantic and Copernican systems."

Read a letter from Lieutenant Kittoe, stating that he had despatched a cart to Tamlook to take down the Bhudaneswar slabs, the restoration of which had given the greatest satisfaction to the priests and people.

Lieutenant Kittoe also forwarded copies of the principal inscription in the old Lat character at Arawastuma near Dhoulas in Orissa, with a short account of the caves and temples discovered there by himself and a map of the place.

Captain Smith, Engineers, forwarded accurate facsimiles of the inscriptions at the Buddhist monument of Sanchi near Bhillai, with a paper describing their position.

Captain W. Murray presented some beautiful drawings of this very curious mound, and of the highly ornamented stone sculpture of its gates and frieze.

The Secretary read a note on the inscriptions, which had proved of high interest from their enabling him to discover the long sought alphabet of the ancient Lat character (or No. 1 of Allahabad)—and to read therein the inscriptions of Delhi, Allahabad, Bethnah, Girnah and Cuttack—all intimately connected, as it turns out, in their origin, and in their purpose.

Lieutenant Kittoe also presented facsimiles of a copper grant in three plates dug up in the Gumsur country, of which the Secretary with the aid of Kamala Kant Pandit supplied a translation.

It relates to a grant of land by the Bhanja rajas to a Brahmin named Bhandreswar.

The Honorable G. Turnour transmitted a paper on an examination of the Bali Buddhistical Annals, including a translation of the Attha katha of Buddhihaghose, and a table of the Pitakattayan.

Major J. Sleeman communicated the first part of his History of the Gurha Mundela Rajas.

Lieutenant Siddons forwarded a translation of the commencement of the Dadupausti Grantha, with a promise to continue the same should it prove acceptable.

Professor Wilson formerly intended to have done the same thing—the translation of Dadu's moral instructions is highly interesting.

A list of the native tribes in Sinde and specimen of their language was communicated by Captain Alexander Burnes from Bahawalpur.

Physical.

G. Webb, Esq., C. S., forwarded for presentation to the Museum a second collection of the butterflies and insects of Sikkim.

Dr. T. Cantor presented some fragments of bones perfectly fossilised, extracted from the superficial clay at Bhangpalla below Diamond Harbour.

In these bones the animal matter is entirely replaced by iron and carbonate of lime, although they were imbedded in quite a modern alluvium. Their discovery throws a new light either on the period required for fossilization, or on the age of the alluvium.

Mr. W. T. Lewis of Malacca, presented the model of a Chinese double bellows for the museum; also some tin and gold ore.

The Tapir sent up by Lieutenant Mackenzie had, with the Committee of Papers' sanction been made over to the Secretary, it being out of the Society's views to keep living animals.

Mr. B. H. Hodgson forwarded some beautiful Zoological drawings for inspection on their way to Europe, also two bottles of snakes peculiar to Nipal.

Lieutenant Hutton presented a notice of the Indian Boa Python Tigris.

A letter from Professor S. Von der Busch, of Bremen, proposed exchanges of land and fresh water shells and other objects. Referred to the Curator.

Dr. T. Cantor presented drawings and a notice of one of the fossils in the Colvin collection which had been cleared from matrix for the purpose of examination.

It proves to be the skull of a gigantic fossil Batrachian, and by comparison of the relative measurements of the common frog, it must have belonged to an animal of 40 inches in length?—a proportion between fossil and recent species which has no parallel only in the neighbouring family of reptiles, the salamanders, of which the specimen, from the Oenningenschicht, known by the name of Homo biluvis testis, measured three feet in length.

The following notice of a curious optical phenomenon observed in the Red Sea was communicated by Captain A. Burnes from Bahrein.

Extract of a letter from Lieutenant W. Ford of the Indian Navy, dated Mount Sinai, September 26th, 1838.

"You once expressed a wish to know something of the Djibbel Norkana or sounding mountain, conceiving which there has been so much doubt and discussion in Europe. I visited it on my way here—it is situated on the sea shore about eight miles from Tor. A solid slope of the finest drift sand extends on the sea face from the base to the summit (about six hundred feet) at an angle of about 40° with the horizon. This is encircled or rather encircled, if the term is allowable, by a ridge of sandstone rocks running up in the pointed pinnacle, and presenting little surface adapted for forming an echo. It is remarkable that there are several other slopes similar to this, but the sounding or rumbling, as it has been called, is confined to this alone. We dismounted from our camels, and remained at the base while a Bedoin scrambled up. We did not hear the sound until he had attained a considerable height. The sound then began rolling down, and commenced in a strain resembling the first faint notes of an Eolian harp, or the fingers wetted and drawn over glass—increasing in loudness as the sand reached the base, when it was almost equal to thunder. It caused the rock on which we were seated to vibrate and our frightened camels (animals you know not easily alarmed) to start off. I was perfectly astounded, as was Captain W.—and the rest of the party. I had visited it before in the winter month but the sound was then so faint as to be barely evident, but now the scorching heat of the sun had dried the sand and permitted it to roll down in large quantities. I cannot now form the most remote conjecture as to the cause of it. We must not I had now refer it to the sand falling into a hollow, that might produce sound but could never cause the prolonged vibrations, as it were of some huge harp string. I shall not venture on any speculation, but, having carefully noted the facts, I shall lay them, on my arrival in England, before some wiser head than my own, and see if he can make anything out of them.—Journal of the Asiatic Society for May.

MEETING OF THE MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments on the 3d of June, 1837.

The following letters were read.

From Assistant-Surgeon R. Marshall and Surgeon J. Nisbet, 48th Regiment N. I., requesting that their names might be withdrawn from the list of members.

From the Secretary of the Medical Botanical Society of London, accompanied by a copy of the transactions of that body, and Karl Stanhope's address.

From Messrs. Jager, M. Moegling and H. Treg, missionaries of the Basle Evangelical Society, stating that they begged to present a treatise upon the fossil remains of Wurttemberg, by M. Jager, of Stuttgart, accompanied by a letter from that gentleman and the same question, with which they had been entrusted in leaving Europe for India. M. Jager's letter stated, that he had been much interested by Mr. Cuvier's account of animals and vegetable remains found in the Jura. He offered to procure for the Society specimens of some of these fossils, and requested to receive in return any preparations of a similar nature which the Society might be able to furnish him with, together with any Indian publications which treat of this subject.

Dr. C. Haffnagle, proposed at the last meeting, was elected a member of the Society.

Professor Oersted was elected an honorary member, and Mr. Le Chevalier Eydon a corresponding member.

The following communications were then presented.

Description of a new species of zygæna (hammer-headed shark) with anatomical sketches illustrating the peculiar formation of the head, by Dr. Cantor.

2. Account of a preparation of Exostosis of the bones of the ankle joint taken from a patient whose leg was amputated, by G. Madden, Esq., Civil Surgeon Futteypore, which was presented for the Medical College Museum, exhibited one of the most beautiful specimens of the disease in question, perhaps ever beheld.

3. An anomalous case of small pox, by D. Manasse, Esq., H. M. 16th Foot.

4. Case of extra Uterine Pregnancy, terminating fatally by hæmorrhage, communicated by Allan Webb, Esq. This case was accompanied by a preparation of the parts which Mr. Webb explained to the meeting, in illustration of his paper.

Some very beautiful specimens of calculus extracted by Mr. Mackinnon of Larkhoo, were placed on the table.

Mr. Lindsay's case of necrosis presented at a former meeting, was then read and discussed. The patient at 30 had both legs broken by a wall falling on him: both fractures were much comminuted and the right tibia protruding about the middle of the leg. The man would not at first submit to amputation, but profuse suppuration and irritative fever ensued, and he at length consented to the operation, which was performed a fortnight after the accident. Both legs were removed on the same day, the right above, the left below the knee joint. At first the patient went on well and the left stump healed before the end of August, but the right stump remained open and continued to suppurate with anæmia, running up towards the tuber ischi and groin. The femoral artery had degenerated into a mass of puriform lymph up to within an inch of Poupart's ligament, above that spot, it contained some long red clots. The vein was filled with an orange coloured coagulum and its coats thick and pale up to the same point. The femur was much enlarged, the shaft having the usual oblique irregular appearance of a new shell of bone, and it contained within it the osseous matter, which was some six inches in length. The femur itself formed a very interesting specimen of the disease and was exhibited to the meeting.

BENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND

PROPOSITION FIRST.

Proposed that Regulation XXIII of the Fund Deed be thus modified, viz to expunge the concluding clause, "or to accept double such annuity as the sum of his subscriptions and other sums of money which he may have paid into the said Fund, together with compound interest thereon as aforesaid, may be sufficient to procure, according to the rate contained in the Table of Rates hereinafter contained, and to substitute the following words

'Or to accept an annuity of £150, together with such additional annuity as the sums of his subscriptions and other sums of money which he has paid or may pay into the said Fund, together with compound interest thereon as aforesaid may be sufficient to procure according to the rate contained in the Table of Rates hereinafter contained. Provided always the aggregate amount of such annuity do not exceed the aforesaid sum of £300, except in such cases as may come under our 2d Proposition, should it be adopted. And provided also that no sums or sums of money once paid into the said fund, be afterwards withdrawn therefrom.

The following remarks are submitted in support of the above proposed modification of Regulation XXIII.

That since the Medical Retiring Fund has commenced its operations by declaring three annuities out of a large number at present in arrears, yet of the numerous subscribers who have completed seventeen years service, very few only have been found able or willing to accept the Fund pension on the terms offered.

That this unlooked-for result is in some measure owing to an expectation of obtaining the Pension certain, but it is equally certain that there are many who would gladly accept the annuity were they not prevented by their inability to fulfil the required conditions.

It would therefore appear that the Medical Retiring Fund as it present constituted, does not entirely suit the circumstances of the persons for whose benefit it was designed.

Our Fund offers yearly six annuities of £150 each, provided the Retiring members pay in to the Fund a sum sufficient to procure an additional annuity of an equal amount. This is an undoubted privilege to all who possess the means and are willing to invest the requisite sum in a life annuity, for our Fund receiving from Government six per cent interest (the whole benefit of which goes or ought to go to the annuitant, is thereby enabled to grant annuities on much more favourable terms than any Insurance Office at home. But if the Retiring member be either unable or unwilling to avail himself of this privilege of purchasing an additional annuity of £150,—why should we refuse to give him the full amount of the pension which we are prepared gratuitously to bestow on other members, and by so doing reject steps that might otherwise be obtained at the usual price? The step of the one class of men is equal in value to that of the other, and ought in justice and policy to be purchased at an equal price, unless it can be satisfactorily shown that to do so would involve a serious loss to the Fund.

If a subscriber retiring on the diminished annuity here proposed, live a shorter time than the estimated number of years, the Fund will gain less by his death than it would have done had he been forced to buy up the full annuity. And on the other hand if he live longer than the expected time, the Fund will lose proportionally less. For example, A. an annuity on £200, lives four years less than the expected time—the Fund gains by his death £800 or £400 less than it would have done if A. had taken the full annuity.—B an annuitant on £200, lives four years longer than the estimated time,—the Fund loses by him £800 or £400 less than it would have done had B. taken the full pension.—If therefore an equal number of "good and bad lives" were to retire on the diminished annuity, it appears to be matter of indifference to the interests of the Fund, whether they do so, or prefer purchasing the full annuity. For, suppose 20 "good" and 20 "bad lives" were to take the diminished annuities,—then the average losses on the long lives, would be counterbalanced by the average gains on those who die early—thus the Fund would pay gratuitously pensions of £150 to the whole 40 annuitants for periods equal to the average duration of their lives; and the sums set aside for the additional pensions, would on the average answer the purpose for which they were deposited,—and this is precisely the expected result of the full annuities.

But it may be argued that "bad lives" will generally prefer the diminished and "good lives" the full pension, and that this will deprive the Fund of a portion of the gains required to meet losses in another quarter. For example C., an annuitant on £200, dies four years sooner than the expected time; the Fund gains by his death £800; D a full annuitant, lives four years longer than the calculated time—the Fund loses by him £1,200 or £400 more than it gained by C. But if bad lives take the full, and good lives the diminished pension, the result will be reserved thus.—E. a full annuitant, dies 4 years sooner than the expected time—the Fund gains by his death £1,200.—F. an annuitant on £200, lives 4 years longer than the calculated time, the Fund loses by him only £800 £400 less than it gained on E.—Now in all these cases the Society out of its own funds deposits precisely the same amount on account of premium to the retiring Officer.

As the fear that a greater proportion of "bad" than of "good lives" will prefer the diminished annuity, seems to be the only objection of weight which can be made to the proposed alteration, it is necessary to consider it at some length.

That a subscriber in bad health would generally prefer a Bonus is probable; the temptation to do so being greater to all who doubt the value of their own lives.—Such persons would at once carry off a large portion of the Society's funds, no part of which could ever return to it.—But he who has only the power of taking the diminished annuity is differently situated; he can carry away none of the funds, and has consequently much less inducement to follow this course on the single ground of presumed bad health. It is seldom that any one is disposed cordially to agree with his friends or Medical advisers in the opinion that he has only a few years to live; unless indeed this opinion be backed by the prospect of some immediate gain. A dying man resigning the Service to secure a Bonus, would gain a considerable advantage for his heirs, and cause a serious loss to the Fund;—but what object could such a person propose to himself by declaring for the diminished annuity? For these reasons therefore we are of opinion that other motives than a consciousness of being a "bad life," would generally influence subscribers in their determination to accept the reduced pension. Such as want of funds;—a design to settle in some one of the colonies, where a certain command of ready cash is so necessary to insure success;—a laudable disinclination on the part of fathers of families to sink their whole capital in a life annuity, &c. &c. But admitting that some undue proportion of "bad lives" were to take the diminished annuity and so cause some loss, or more correctly speaking some diminished gain to the Fund; it is contended that this disadvantage would be more than counterbalanced by the accelerated promotion caused by enabling many to leave the Service, who under the operation of the existing regulations are precluded from doing so. If we were a common Insurance Company calculating on deriving a certain profit to ourselves on the result of our transactions, it would then be inadmissible to permit any member to take the proposed reduced annuity—but as we profess to derive no gain, our only concern should be to guard ourselves against loss;—or we may incur a certain extent of risk of loss, to obtain a greater benefit in the shape of accelerated promotion.

Government which pays the 6 per cent interest might reasonably object, if we were to propose allow all members to lodge money to procure higher annuities than £300, but it cannot object to their being satisfied with smaller pensions.

It is especially to be kept in view, that the proposed alteration cannot of necessity continue to have effect more than a limited number of years, because in the course of time, members will have paid up their minimum subscriptions before getting the offer of the Fund pension;—its effect must therefore decrease in extent year by year, until at last it die a natural death.

Our present experience clearly proves that something must be done fairly to commence the operations of the Fund as a scheme intended to accelerate promotion—for it can hardly be doubted that out of about fifty subscribers at this moment having the offer of the pension, there are many who would willingly retire to their native country on a consolidated annuity of about £350 (namely, the Fund premium annuity and Compy's Retiring Pension) but who find themselves forced to remain in India from want of means to purchase the remainder of the Fund. This is a condition, which if not proved to be necessary to prevent serious loss to the Fund, must be admitted to be as cruel to the individuals so situated, as it is impolitic with regard to the general interests of the members.

PROPOSITION SECOND.

It is a subject worthy of serious consideration whether the Medical Retiring Fund would not be materially improved by granting, in the manner to be hereafter explained, a limit number of increased pensions to Superintending Surgeons actually in India, who may be willing to retire before, or at the expiration of five years' service in that grade.

One great object of the Fund, is accelerated promotion; it is therefore reasonable that all ranks should participate in this benefit in as equal a manner as may be consistent with the other objects of the Society.—But if the Pension prove (as it is feared it will) too small to tempt the highest grades to resign their lucrative situations, it will generally be accepted by Surgeons (probably young ones) and the scheme will turn out to be a promotion Fund to Assistant Surgeons only.

It is not probable that any pension we could afford to give to members of the Medical Board would be sufficient to induce them to retire sooner than they would otherwise do,—besides their time being already limited the step is not worth the sacrifice of much money. But unless we can tempt more Superintending Surgeons to quit the Service than would do so if no such Fund existed, the Senior Surgeons will scarcely gain a step. The great object should be to prevent Superintending Surgeons from remaining more than a few years in that grade, and thus to give all ranks a reasonable prospect of enjoying for a time the almost only lucrative situation our Service holds out. For the Board is at too great a distance to be generally contemplated by the juniors.

The Major of a Regiment receives more money for his step than any one junior in rank; first, because he causes greater promotion by his resignation, and, secondly, because he gives up a more valuable appointment. Why may not Superintending Surgeons be bought out on a similar principle? If it be asked, why we do not extend this to members of the Board?—the answer is that their steps would cost more money than the promotion caused by their resignation would compensate. At present our Fund really pays much more for the Surgeon's step, than it does for that of the Superintending Surgeon, although the one vacates an appointment of 700 and the other one of nearly 2,000 rupees!—for the sum which is required to procure an annuity of £300 for a man of forty years of age, would very nearly purchase an annuity of £400 for one of 55, the average age of our Superintending Surgeons. So that to give Superintending Surgeons £400 a year, would hardly cost us more money than the sum we are now prepared to deposit, to provide the regulated annuity for young Surgeons.

Had all Surgeons been members of the Fund, a donation to go towards the increased pensions for the Superintending Surgeons, might have been demanded from the Surgeon who gained his promotion by the step; but in our present circumstances (all Surgeons not being subscribers to the Fund) such a rule is inapplicable, though such a one eventually may become available.

The following proposed new Regulation, it is believed, would not only provide a remedy for the present evil, without increasing the Subscriptions of the members, but also secure the profitable employment of funds which would otherwise lie in abeyance and in a state of uselessness as far as regards the objects for which they were subscribed. In concurrence with these views and with the terms of the preceding Proposition herewith submitted (supposing it to be approved and adopted) the following would be our second

PROPOSED NEW REGULATION.

"That in the event of two or more of the six annual premium annuities of £150, with the authorized purchasable addition, not being accepted, the whole or any part of the funds applicable to such unaccepted annuities, shall be appropriated to the purpose of providing one or more increased premium annuities of £200 each, to be offered to all Superintending Surgeons actually in India, who shall resign the Service on or before the 31st October 1838, and subsequently to such Superintending Surgeons only as may have held that rank not more than five years,—together with such additional annuity as the sum subscribed by each of such Superintending Surgeons and other sums of money which each may have paid or may pay into the said Fund, with compound interest thereon, may be sufficient to procure:—provided always that such aggregate annuity do not exceed the sum of £400;—and provided also, that no sum or sums of money once paid into the said Fund, be withdrawn therefrom."

Or, supposing the first proposition herewith submitted to be rejected, the following would then be our second:

PROPOSED NEW REGULATION.

"That in the event of two or more of the six annual annuities of £300 not being accepted, the whole or any part of the funds applicable to such unaccepted annuities be appropriated to the purpose of providing one or more augmented annuities of £400 each, to be offered to Superintending Surgeons actually in India at the time, who shall resign the Service on or before the 31st October 1838, and subsequently to such Superintending Surgeons only as may have held that rank not more than five years, on condition of their fulfilling with regard to this augmented annuity, all such terms as are required by the Regulations from the accepters of the smaller annuities of £300 each."—Calcutta Courier, June 14.

The Directors of this Society have caused investigation to be made with great care into the existing Institutions for Life Assurance, &c. &c., and they trust they have been fortunate in selecting from each what as a whole will place their Establishment on the most secure, judicious, and satisfactory footing both to the Proprietors and the Assured.

The plan of this Society is to transact all its business on such terms as to leave, in all human probability, a small but certain excess of profit on the general result of its transactions. A small portion of that profit is set apart as a compensation to the proprietors, who have advanced the capital necessary for defraying the unavoidable expense of the Institution and who have pledged the subscribed amount of their capital in order to afford that responsibility, which relieves the assured from any contingency of loss to which they might be liable without the intervention of such a guarantee.

* The Society makes a natural distinction between persons exposed to the hazards of Military and Maritime occupations, and those whose occupations are of a Civil nature; but Members of the Military Service holding offices purely Civil, and subject to no extra risk, will be admitted to Assurance, or continuance of Assurance, at Civil rates of premium, while engaged in duties purely Civil. In all cases it will be in the discretion of the Directors, whether to require the higher or the lower rate of premium, and that discretion will be regulated by the the circumstances of each particular case.

Persons assured with this Society for the whole term of Life, will be entitled to three-fourths of the profits, after they shall have made five complete annual Payments: in every subsequent year a similar division will take place, the profits being estimated from the average of the five preceding years: thus one year's average profits will be annually divided. Separate Tables, both Military and Civil, have been adopted for the whole of life at reduced rates for such persons as may prefer a lower rate of premium to participation in the general profits.

Premiums are ordinarily payable half yearly in advance, but policy holders are at liberty to make arrangements with the Society to pay their premiums in one amount, in annual or quarterly payments, or during a given number of years; viz. 5, 10, 15, or 20 annual payments. Many persons may wish to avail themselves of a present season of prosperity and adopt the latter course, and although their contributions will thus cease to with the expiration of the term they may fix upon, their share of the profits will continue to be added to their policies annually during the remainder of life.

An assurer on a policy for whole life having paid premiums in India for a period of not less than five years, shall on returning to England, be entitled to continue his policy on the payment of the English rates of the Society corresponding with the age at which he originally assured.

An assurer on a whole life policy on which premiums have been paid in India for a period less than five years, shall be entitled on his return to England to continue the same at English rates in like manner on payment of the Indian rate of premium for one year after arrival in England.

In either case no reference will be had to the state of health of the party but the conditions of the assurance will be those of the Home Policies.

When application is made for assuring a life subject to more than ordinary hazard, an augmented Premium will be charged proportioned to the increased risk, which will be regulated by the strictest attention to justice between the Society and the Assured, according to the circumstances of the case.

The parent Institution being in London with a similar establishment in Calcutta for granting Policies, Premium, as well as Claims, are payable in either country at the entire option of the Policy holder. The establishment of Sub-Agencies at Madras and Bombay, under the management of the Calcutta Branch, affords similar facilities to persons residing at either of the Sister Presidencies.

Where the application for Assurance makes no mention of the date from which the Assurance is desired to take effect, the Policy will be issued on the date of the risk by the Directors; no Assurance to be binding on the Society until the first Premium shall have been actually paid to the Agents.

Every proposal for Assurance will be immediately attended to, and the Assurance completed generally within a few days after the application is made.

The accounts of this Society, after being investigated by Auditors, chosen as well by the Assured as by the Proprietors, will be laid before a General Meeting to be convened for that purpose: in like manner the accounts of the Parent Society will be regularly transmitted to India for the same purpose, — the India Branch enjoying reciprocal advantages with the parent Society.

All policies becoming Claims on the Society will be discharged within 3 months after proof of the Assurer's death has been furnished to the Directors, either in London or Calcutta.

The Directors of the India Branch of the Society are empowered, after a lapse of any number of years, to treat for the purchase of Policies, or to advance, if required, on any Policy by way of loan two-thirds of its estimated value, and also to appropriate the profits at the option of the assured in the augmentation of the amount of Policies in diminution of the Annual Premiums, or in permitting them to accumulate till all further payment of Premiums becomes unnecessary.

All applications for assurance must be accompanied by a Medical Fee of eight rupees.

The Tables, Blank Forms, and other particulars requisite to enable persons to effect assurance, may be had on application to the Agents.

By Order of the Directors,

BAGSHAW AND CO.
Agents and Secretaries.

No. 1. In this class parties insured in the Oriental and Universal receive no refund (unless in the Oriental he is at the same time a proprietor; in which case he is entitled to his proportion of quarter of the profits) and cannot continue their insurance at the expiration of the five years without fresh certificate of health. In the Laudable, the insurance goes on and each party insured is entitled to his proportion of the whole surplus in the ratio of the amount premium paid. The amount of this refund is estimated at 1-4th.

No. 2. This class is confined to the Oriental and Laudable. In it an insured in the Oriental can obtain renewal of his insurance at the expiration of six years on increased rate of premium, but he gets no return profit except as above. In the Laudable as before the insurance goes on as a matter of course, and the party is entitled to his share on the whole profits.

No. 3. In this class, as before parties insured in the Oriental and Universal are entitled to no share of the profits except as above in the Oriental. In the Laudable they as before have a share of the whole. But limiting the payments to five years in this and the following class does not afford a fair comparison.

No. 4. This refers to the Universal and Laudable only. Parties insured in the Universal in this class are entitled after having paid premium for five years to a participation in $\frac{1}{4}$ of the profits. In the Laudable of course they participate in the whole.—Hurkay, June 23.

SUPREME COURT.

JUNE 19, 1837.

This was a very busy day in the Court, the Judges sitting till half past 5, hearing equity motions. The following were the most important.

THE KING V. JANOOZE DOPE.

The Advocate-General applied for the judgment of the Court regarding the bailing of the defendant and not requiring him to attend at the new trial. He stated that there was a distinction in England between criminal informations and indictments. In criminal informations the presence of the defendant was not required; but they were tried on the civil side of the Court, which was not the case in an indictment. The Chief Justice desired the Clerk of the Crown to search for the order which had been made on the last trial when the defendant did not attend, and judgment was postponed until it was produced.

JOHANNAS STEPHEN, THE YOUNGER, AND OTHERS, versus

EDWARD KENT HUME.

In this suit Mr. Clark moved for an attachment against Mr. Bird of Dacca, for a breach of the injunction of this Court, in not giving up possession of lands in the Mofussil to the receiver of this Court, appointed in the suit. The learned Counsel stated that Mr. Justice Grant had refused this motion in Chambers on the ground that Mr. Paulin, the Attorney of Bird, was dead, and that no other attorney appeared on record for Bird although Bird had been personally served with the rule nisi (the injunction). The grounds for Mr. Clark's application, we understood to be. 1st, that the established practice of this Court has never been to stop the progress of a cause because the attorney on record for one of the parties was dead. 2dly, that the practice of the Court of Chancery at home, which was relied upon as a ground for refusing this motion, does not apply here, for there is no Clerk in Court here, and his functions are performed by the Registrar; (Equity) and the learned Counsel cited three Peere Williams Rep., and the 9th Vesey, in support of this ground. 3d, that the conduct of Bird was a contempt of the authority of the Court, a defiance of it; and that Mr. Bird had been personally served with the order of the Court, and that therefore the Court ought immediately to act upon it, and punish the individual whether party to the suit or not.

Mr. Grant. You see there are two points of view, under which to consider this case, and there is no question at all of any conflicting jurisdiction, between this and the provincial Courts. 1st. If you consider Bird as a party to the suit who has appeared, and who has taken out grounds to oppose the appointment of a receiver, but who did not come in and persist in his opposition at the argument, then he is in the situation of a person who has admitted the jurisdiction of this Court, and who has recognized its former order, but who has now refused to obey this last order. The other view is that of considering him as a sort of third party, the receiver we believe of the Mofussil Court. Rep. not a party to the suit who has committed a contempt of Court by disregarding the order of this Court.

Mr. Clark continued, and as we understood him, treated Bird as a person who had admitted the jurisdiction of this Court by appearing in the suit. The learned Counsel was heard at great length.

Chief Justice. We have not gone into the merits of this case; we decided upon the application as a point of practice merely. We think Mr. J. Grant is right in requiring, previously to our granting the attachment, that an order should be served on Bird, requiring him to appoint another attorney to appear for him in the suit, he having no one at present appearing on record to represent him in this Court.

We will take the order calling upon him (Bird) to appoint an attorney obtained previously to this motion as part of the grounds, but there is no evidence before the Court, that this order was personally served, although there is an indorsement on the back, shewing that it has been served only through the Post office—which service would have been inefficient service of subsequent orders, had we any proof that this first order had been personally served. After all, the best way perhaps will be to give you leave to amend your grounds, and in the mean time that this motion do stand over, this course will save expence. Motion stands over.—Hussain, June 20.

SREEMUTTY JOYMONY DOSSEE BOHOO RANEE V. SREEMUTTY SEBOOSOONDERY DOSSEE BOHOO RANEE.

The complainant and defendant are the two widows of rajah Sibchunder Roy. The suit was instituted by complainant alleging that the rajah had previous to his death given her verbal directions to adopt, after his decease, her grandson Collycoomar Mullick as son to him, and praying the court to decree accordingly. The suit came on for hearing on evidence in July last, when, in consequence of the conflicting testimony adduced, the court directed certain issues to be tried on the plea side of the court to establish the fact of the alleged direction of adoption. The issues were tried in November last, and after a trial of five days, the court found a verdict in favour of the complainant Joymony establishing her claim to adopt Collycoomar Mullick. Defendant Seboosondery thereupon filed a cross bill against Joymony which has since been dismissed by the court. The original suit afterwards came on for hearing and decree on the finding of the issues, when the court made their decree on the 30th of March last in conformity with the finding of the issues, and directing complainant to perform the ceremony of adoption within one month.

Seboosondery Ranee now files a petition of appeal against the verdict on the issues, and also against the dismissal of her cross bill, likewise against certain portions of the decree of the 30th March last. The motion now was that the appeal be allowed. The court were engaged hearing the arguments of counsel when our reporter left. For complainant, Mr. Advocate General, Mr. Prinsep, Mr. Leith, and Mr. Grant. For defendant Mr. Clarke, Mr. Osborne, and Mr. Nott.—Englishman, June 20.

JUNE 20, 1837.

EDWARD WHYTE V. WILLIAM LYALL AND OTHERS.

Complainant is one of the executors of James Napier Lyall, deceased; defendants are partners in the firm of Lyall, Matheson and Co. The bill was filed for an account.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Clarke for the Complainant, entered at length into the facts of the case, as they appeared in the argument on the caveat, before Mr.

Justice Grant, in Chambers. The learned counsel argued, that defendant's reluctance in giving up the will, together with there appearing a sum of only £1,600 in it in England at the credit of the estate, subsequent to the time that Mackenzie, Lyall and Co. had paid by instalment Rs. 60,000 to Lyall, Matheson and Co. in liquidation of the amount due by them to the testator, compelled Mr. Whyte to file this bill.

Mr. Prinsep and Mr. Cockburn for Lyall, Matheson and Co. insisted that complainant had been too precipitate. The first application for the delivery of the will was on the 19th September; on the 21st defendant offered to give up the will; the caveat was argued on the 29th, the bill filed the same day. There was therefore evidently no delay as to giving up the will that could justify the imputation of a fraudulent intention. It is positively denied that the account had ever been applied for, while on putting in the answer the account was admitted to be correct, and proceedings would have terminated if defendants had consented to pay their own costs. The learned counsel argued that where a party never demands an account, but rushes into equity and then finds the account correct, it is the rule that he shall pay the defendant's costs.

Mr. Leith and Mr. Grant who appeared for Mr. Robert Lyall, and Mr. William Lyall, where stopped by the court, their lordship being quite clear that the parties were entitled to their costs.

Mr. Advocate-General replied at length, insisting that the conduct of defendants compelled the complainant to file the bill; and that the costs should fall on the parties who had occasioned them. The late hour at which the argument terminated compels the reporter to be brief, and will not admit of further notice of the learned advocate's reply.

Chief Justice.—What do you ask for Mr. Advocate-General?

Advocate-General.—We ask to dismiss the bill, and be paid our costs.

Mr. Justice Grant.—Did you ever hear of a case where that was allowed?

Advocate-General.—Well, my lords, if I cannot have that, I will ask that all the prayer of the bill be carried into effect.

Chief Justice.—This is a novel and an extraordinary proceeding. Mr. Advocate-General says at the end of a long argument, first, let the bill be dismissed, and he be paid his costs; secondly, if he cannot have that, let the whole prayer of the bill be granted. I apprehend this is a most novel proceeding. In the opening this was stated to be a question of costs, and the whole answer has been received as true. This of itself is prima facie ground for believing that the bill was unnecessary. It is quite clear that the bill must be dismissed; but is the party who filed it to have his costs? Circumstances may occur to induce a court of equity to allow costs where a party asks to have his bill dismissed; but it is a very unusual proceeding. Now what are the circumstances here? James Napier Lyall went to England in 1835; on the 19th of September 1836, accounts are received of his death; on the same day Mr. Whyte, who was largely indebted to the estate, applies for the will; on the 23d of September the will is given up; the caveat is entered on the 22d, overruled on the 30th, when Mr. Whyte became fully armed, and could have taken out probate, and obtained an account. But what does he do? He does not wait for the hearing of the caveat, but on the day before the hearing he files this bill which he now applies to have dismissed.

The bill (which must have taken some time to prepare), charges fraud throughout, in the strongest terms and is put upon the file before the complainant demanded even an account from the defendants; and now that the bill has been filed, the answer of Lyall, Matheson and Co. is not impugned. The result is that the defendants have acted honestly and fairly; that they have most properly disposed of the found of the testator as his agents; and instead of a large sum remaining in their hands, it is shown the sum is a small one and that invested. The complainant asks for his costs because, as he says, the conduct of the defendants, rendered the filing of the bill necessary. I am of opinion that the defendant's conduct as to the caveat was improper, but it is not without excuse considering the circumstance of Mr. Whyte being largely indebted to the estate. But what excuse is put forth for filing this bill? It has been hurried on the file before asking for account or explanation. It is not a light matter that fraud should be charged so indiscreetly against these defendants, and they have done right as any person in their situation would have done, in coming boldly before the court, to deny fraud upon oath, and they have done so most satisfactorily. We are of opinion that this bill must be dismissed, and that the complainant do pay the costs.

SHEEMUTTY JOYMONKEY DOSSEE BOHOO RANEE V. SHEEMUTTY
SEBOSOOMEDERY DOSSEE BOHOO RANEE.

The argument on the motion in this cause was not concluded until half past five on Monday, when their lordships decided that the petition of appeal should be amended; that the parts of the petition appealing against the finding on the issues and against the dismissal of the cross bill be struck out, and that the petition so amended be allowed; each party paying her own costs.—Englishman, June 21.

IN THE GOODS OF T. D'O'LY, DECEASED.

The testator was one of the sufferers in the Charles Eaton. Previous to his departure from India he made his will, and amongst other property therein mentioned, is a sum of Rs. 14,000 in the hands of Cruttenden and Co. with a memorandum placed opposite the item, in substance, or to be lent to Mr. J. A. Currie for twenty months, from the 1st of May 1834. Testator did not name an executor to his will, but the night previous to his departure from this country, he folded the will in an envelope, and directed it to Mr. J. A. Currie, who is married to the sister of testator's wife. Mr. Currie applied for probate, and the order was made, but stopt on a caveat being entered by the Ecclesiastical Registrar of the court. The direction on the envelope addressed to Mr. Currie, was, "to be opened and acted on only in case of my death."

During the argument the court remarked that the paper of the will and the envelope were of two different descriptions; that there was written on the will and not on the envelope, "opened in the presence of us. C. D'O'ly, R. Powny," though there were not any affidavits before the court sworn by those gentlemen. The Court took time to consider.—Englishman, June 23.

JUNE 26, 1837.

IN THE GOODS OF THOMAS D'O'LY, DECEASED:

Application for probate made by Mr. J. A. Currie, and caveat entered by the ecclesiastical registrar. The caveat was argued on Thursday last and briefly noticed in our publication of the following day. The court took time to consider, and this day their lordships decided that there was not a sufficient appointment of an executor by the will, and that the caveat must be allowed; moreover their lordships intimated, that in a future proceeding it would be necessary to prove the will, and evidence must be given of the death of Mrs. D'Oily.—Caveat allowed without costs.

IN THE GOODS OF ALLAN GILMORE, DECEASED.

This was an application for probate supported by an affidavit sworn by Mr. Limond, which set forth that testator made his will, and in May last directed deponent to add a codicil thereto. Mr. Limond added the codicil and when doing so, it appeared to him expedient and proper that Mrs. Limond, one of the legatees named in the will, should have the amount of her legacy settled on herself. Mr. Limond added to the codicil words to that effect, intending to submit the same for Mr. Gilmore's approval; but from the date in May when Mr. Limond received the will for the purpose of adding the codicil thereto, to the 9th instant, on which day the testator departed this life, Mr. Gilmore remained in a state which rendered it inexpedient to submit the codicil and addition for his approval or otherwise.

The court of course could not recognize the addition made by Mr. Limond, and required a more explicit affidavit before they granted probate on the testamentary document which had been handed to Mr. Limond for the purpose of adding the codicil.—Englishman, June 27.

INSOLVENT COURT.

JUNE 24TH.

IN THE MATTER OF FRANCIS LEWIS BARBER.

Mr. Leith appeared for the insolvent. The discharge was opposed by Mr. Advocate General on behalf of the Bank of Bengal.

The insolvent deposed that he had, as secretary to the Hooghly River Insurance Company, discounted two notes at the Bank of Bengal for rupees 708, and rupees 874; the money was applied to the discharge of policies due by the Company. Insolvent was a member of the Company, so were John D'Cruz, Dr. Rifer and Robert Fleming. But these parties had not any knowledge of the discounting at the Bank or of the existence of the notes. Stapleton who endorsed the notes, is not a member of the Insurance Company. Does not know Stapleton. He looks like a man. Does not know that he is under age. When the letter of demand came, Stapleton said he was a minor. Insolvent merely wanted an endorsement, being short of cash. Witness had often raised money in a similar manner without the knowledge of the other members of the Company. The office is still in existence, but insolvent, at least witness thinks so; nevertheless the Company would continue to insure if any one offered a premium. (In reply to Mr. Leith) I have raised money before at the Bank on notes which have been paid. I do not know if any demand has been made on the solvent members by the Bank. Stapleton stated himself to be under age, but he may be of age. He is an assistant in the Surveyor General's office. The Bank when they discounted the Bills, did not enquire as to the endorsement. (To the Advocate General.) Stapleton was paying his addresses to my daughter; she refused him, I did not.

Mr. Advocate General submitted that on this evidence the court would remand the insolvent. Mr. Leith was heard in reply and insisted that there was no evidence of fraud or nothing to show that Stapleton was under age, or if he were that the insolvent was aware of it.

Mr. Justice Malkin in giving his decision, said, there was evidence of misconduct on the part of the insolvent, but not of sufficient misconduct to stay his discharge. Insolvent was discharged.

Muddosooden Day was remanded for four months from the date of filing his petition, and Calclough St. Kiernan was declared entitled to the benefit of the act.

IN THE MATTER OF FERGOUSON AND CO.

This was an order nisi, obtained by Mr. Clarke on the 10th instant, that Samuel Gregson and Edward Edwards, assignees of David Clark, a bankrupt, be at liberty to prove their claim of the sum of sicca rupees 6,54,029 appearing admitted on the amended schedule of the insolvents.

Mr. Advocate-General and Mr. Leith opposed the rule being made absolute on this ground,—that the house was not in solvent circumstances at the time Mr. Clark retired from it; and that it was well known at the time to the members of the firm that the assets were not sufficient to meet the obligations of the firm.

Mr. Thomas Hyde Gardiner was sworn and examined by Mr. Leith. The witness spoke to the signature of the various members of the firm on a document, bearing date the 28th March 1828, purporting to be a statement of the affairs of the house made out from the books. The document contains a variety of names of debtors with amounts specified opposite to their respective names. In the first column of figures is inserted the amount of debt due by each individual or party; in the second is inserted the amount which at a similar investigation in 1824 was considered a fair deduction from the value of the several debts, and in the third is inserted the amount of deduction which was considered necessary in 1827.

From the statement it appeared that the debts, and estimated value of property belonging to the firm, such as houses, indigo factories, &c. left a balance in favor of the firm to the amount of rupees 5,55,43,939, besides a suspense account of rupees 7,92,448, which was composed principally of the accumulations of interest upon the diminished amount of doubtful debts, and which made together an apparent surplus in favor of the firm of rupees 63,36,387. Against this, however, had to be placed the deduction made from the doubtful debts in the statement, amounting to rupees 66,16,000, and a further sum of rupees 3,84,100 to be deducted on other accounts, making together rupees 700,00,000, and thereby leaving a deficiency of assets to meet the obligations of the firm amounting to rupees 6,63,612.

Mr. John Smith, in the statement, subjoins this note to the deficiency carried out:—

— “ which I think may be made up from the profit and loss account of the present year; and notwithstanding the large sum allowed in this statement we must not flatter ourselves that even this will bring the concerns of the house to a fair par valuation, which I consider a most desirable object to attain; and I trust it will be carefully kept in view by all parties concerned, though it would eventually fall rather hard upon some of us if it were done all at once. In the mean time I do believe the accounts to be much more strictly assessed now, and more fully allowed for than they ever have been before, and I think any excess upon 65 lakhs may consequently be divided on 30th April next, leaving the unappropriated two anna share at the credit of the general stock account; and going on upon our present shares, and interests for a further period of three years or say to the 30th April 1831, when with care and a tolerable share of good fortune, some further dividend may probably be afforded, and leaving the concern in a still progressive state of improvement.

(Signed) JOHN SMITH.

25th March, 1828.

"I have only to say that the above meets with my entire concurrence."

(Signed) W. F. Clark, W. Melville, J. Gilmore, W. F. Fergusson.

Mr. T. H. Gardiner also spoke to a letter in the hand writing of Mr. D. Clark, from which it appeared that the writer was aware of the statement, and of the affairs of the house being in the state therein represented.

At the request of Mr. Clarke, the matter stands over till next court day.

IN THE MATTER OF — BECHER.

The insolvent is an officer in the army. At the time of his discharge the usual order was passed directing him to pay over to his assignee one-third of his pay and allowances. The insolvent had stated his inability to comply with the court's order, alleging that the paymaster had deducted, and is deducting one-half of his pay, to satisfy decrees of a Military Court of Requests, although the debts for which the decrees were made, had been inserted in the schedule of the insolvent.

An application having been made on a former day for an attachment against Lieut Becher, the court took time to consider.

Mr. Justice Malkin now pronounced his decision, that the deduction by the paymaster is illegal, the decrees of the Military Court having no effect after the insolvency.—Englishman, June 26.

SUDDER DEWANY ADAWLUT.

MAY 1, 1837.

BEFORE W. MONEY AND R. W. RATTHAY, ESQS., JUDGES.

Rajah Anund Kishwur, Bahadoor, Appellant.

Baboo Chutter Dharee Sahoo, Respondent.

Appellant's Vakeels J. C. C. Sutherland, Esq., and Moonshee Hussain Allee.

Respondent's Vakeels N. B. E. Baillie, M. A. Bignell, and A. A. Seve-tre, Esqs., Moonshees Ubbas Allee, and Ram Praun Roy.

Plaint for the possession of the Purgunahs of Rujwahsee and Sumrahee, situated in Zillah Sarun, estimated at upwards of rupees 5,925, triennial amount of jumma.

The respondent in this case was the original complainant in the Provincial Court of Appeal at Patna, where he filed his plaint on the 27th of September 1828, and stated in his plaint that the afore-stated two purgunahs were his ancestral property, and the purgunah of Mujoovah is the ancestral property of Rajah Anund Kishwur, Bahadoor; and the River Gunduck which flows between the two purgunahs is the natural boundary of the property of these litigating parties. Whilst this complainant was a minor, and consequently could not attend, as requisite, to his affairs, the father of Rajah Anund Kishwur, Rajah Beer Kishwur Sing, Bahadoor, seized on these two disputed villages, on the plea that they were included in his family estates, and formed a portion of the villages of Majooovah, Sippah and Cowvadee, in the B. S. 1198; and the validity of this complainant's claim will appear manifest by the perusal of a decree which the complainant obtained in the Zillah Collectorate Court, for the possession of the village of Doomahatta, in which estate the aforesaid 2 villages of Rujwahsee and Sumrahee are situated, and form a portion of it. The complainant further stated, that the main stream of the river Gunduck, which forms the boundary of their respective estates, formerly flowed to the south of these 2 villages, but that now it flows to the northward of them, and his estates extend to its banks. In conclusion, he added, that the period of 12 years, allotted by the Government Regulations, to parties deprived of their rights, to institute a suit for their repossession, had not as yet expired.

Rajah Anund Kishwur, in his reply to the plaint of Chutter Dharee Sahoo, asserted that these 2 villages, for the possession of which this plaint has been filed against him, are his ancestral property, and that they are included in his estate of Majooovah; and his ancestors, from time immemorial, have enjoyed undisturbed possession of them; and consequently by the 2d clause of the 3d section of the 2d Regulation of Government, of the year 1805 A. D., this plaint of this complainant cannot be admitted, as upwards of 12 years have evidently elapsed since these villages have been possessed by this defendant and his ancestors, as a part of their ancestral estates. Further, these two villages were allotted to and formed a portion of the estate of Majooovah, before the 10 years' settlement of B. S. 1198, and these two villages are mentioned in the Government settlement with this defendant's forefathers, and are included in the pottah granted to them by the Government for their estates in zillah Sarun. And if these two villages were the ancestral property of Baboo Chutter Dharee Sahoo, why did he discontinue paying the Government ground-rent for them? and further, when he complained against this defendant for the possession of the village of Doomahatta, why did he not then include these villages in his plaint, if he had been illegally deprived of them? And this defendant further added, that when Baboo Chutter Dharee Sahoo, complained against him in the Mofussil, for the possession of the Purgunah of Doomahatta, he then, by his plaint in that case, admitted that these two villages, Rujwahsee and Sumrahee, were a portion of this defendant's property, exclusive of the villages of Majoovalah, Sippah and Cowvadee.

This case was first heard on the 30th December 1830, when Mr J Harrington, one of the Judges of the Provincial Court, dismissed the plaintiff's case on the plea, that upwards of 12 years had elapsed since the time this complainant had been dispossessed of these villages, for the re-possession of which he has instituted this suit, to the date of its institution.

Dissatisfied with this decision, Baboo Chutter Dharee Sahoo, appealed to the Sudder Court, in the miscellaneous department, on the 4th of April 1831, and he stated in his petition, that the Judge of the Provincial Court had refused to hear the testimony of his witnesses, who could depose to the fact of Rajah Beer Sing Kistiwur, taking forcible possession of these villages from this complainant, and on the 18th of July 1831, this petition being read in the Sudder Court, (present H Shakespeare, Esq) it ordered the proceedings to be returned to the Provincial Court of Patna, with instructions to the Judges of that Court, to take the evidence of this petitioner, on the point stated in his petition, and afterwards to give the case a re-hearing, and then pass their final decision on its merits.

The Provincial Court, in conformity to these instructions of the superior Court, upon completing the depositions of the complainant's witnesses, gave the case a re-hearing on the 3d January, 1832, when they reversed their former decision and decreed the case in the plaintiff's favor.

Against this award the appellant appealed to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Calcutta, in 1833, and it was primarily heard on the 28th of March, 1837, before Mr W Money, one of the judges of the Sudder Court, who after perusing the documents filed in the case, and scrutinizing the new maps of these estates as sketched by the Canoongoes of the district, and the old map filed by this respondent in a former case, likewise the old maps of Mr Baddon and Ramderi Sing, who were deputed as Aumeens to go to these villages, and after examining the locality of the respective estates to deliver a plan of these estates from the result of their enquiries on the spot. The judge gave the preference to the report and map of Mr Baddon, and he further opined, that the main question to be decided is, whether these disputed villages are the ancestral property of the appellant Rajah Anand Kishwer Bahador, or whether he has forcibly and illegally wrested them from the respondent Baboo Chutter Dharee Sahoo, as stated by him, in his replication, and whether the old, dried stream of the river Gunduck, which was the former main channel, was the boundary of the two estates, as stated by the appellant, or is the present main stream the real boundary as agreed by the respondent, and is the boundary to vary with the variations of the main channel of the river, or to hold firm to one partition, and lastly, are these two villages included in the state of Doomahatta, which appertains to the respondent's landed tenure, or do they form a portion of the villages of Majoovalah, Sippah and Cowvadee, and as such are attached to the estates of the appellant, and whether this decision of the Provincial Court, which is based on the evidence of twelve villagers, who have deposed to the appellant's father having deposed the respondent from these villages forcibly, is correct or not. It appears to this Court that the testimony of these twelve men, who are hirelings of the respondent, is not worthy of credit, and they must have evidently perjured themselves, for their depositions clash with the facts sworn to by each other, as is evident on examination of the report and plan of Mr. Baddon, drawn up on the 6th and 7th of April, 1836, which were executed previous to the institution of this suit, and the boundaries of the estates of these litigating parties, are minutely defined on that map, and it is clearly stated that these two villages of Rujwahes and Sumrohes, were in B. S. 1111 included in the estate of Sippah in zillah Sarun, and appertained to the landed tenure of this respondent's ancestors, but in B. S. 1151, they were detached from the estates of the respondent's ancestors, and attached to the estates of the appellant's ancestors, and are still in the appellant's possession, and the respondent has no claim whatsoever to them, and therefore it is evident, that the Collector of the zillah of Sarun separated these two villages from the estate of Sippah, which belonged then to this respondent's forefathers, and included them in the state of Majoovalah, which appertained to the estate of this appellant's ancestors. And the Collector was empowered to do so on these grounds, because all the landed property of Rajah Futeh Sahoo, the ancestor of this respondent, were, previous to B. S. 1151, confiscated, because he had rebelled and fought against the Government of the H. E. I. Company, and it became Government property, consequently Government was justified in disposing of it as they pleased. And when the Governor-General in Council in B. S. 1210 restored to Baboo Chutter Dharee Sahoo, on his petition, his ancestral property, that was the period, if any of the villages which were formerly included in his ancestral property had been omitted in the restored grant, to him he had the error brought to the notice of Government, and had them re-included in his grant, this opportunity he has neglected to profit by, and it is now too late for him to object to the tenor of that grant. And it does not appear from the documents filed for the Sudder Board of Revenue in this case, that these two disputed villages are included in this renewed grant to Baboo Chutter Dharee Sahoo, and if the appellant had forcibly deposed the respondent from these villages, and they had formed a portion of his estate, and he had a right to them, the respondent, when the Collector separated them from his ancestral property, should have complained against this partition at the Collector's Court. This he has not done, and thus it appears clearly, that the respondent could not have been forcibly dispossessed of these villages by the appellant, for he never was in possession of them, nor can this Court award him possession of what he never did possess. Besides this, it appears by a recognizance this respondent gave on the 5th March, 1816, in the Criminal Court of the Mofussil, regarding the disputed property of these litigants, that this respondent has in that document acknowledged that these two disputed villages appertain to the estates of this appellant, and these documents are testified by the depositions of numerous witnesses without any prevarications or clashing in their testimony, these, therefore, fully invalidate the evidences of the twelve witnesses, who have sworn in this case, that the appellant's father forcibly deposed the respondent of these villages. And the Sudder Board's order, on the subject of the restoration of Futeh Sahoo's estates to this respondent in 1798, as per Government order of 1791, expressly states, that if any portion of the former estate of zillah Sahoo has been farmed out to any persons they cannot revert to him, but only those villages which are still undisposed of by Government, are to be restored to him. On which order, the collector of the district of Sarun, after instituting enquiries on the spot, gave in his report to the Sudder Board. The villages of Kallampoor and Cowvadee, which are estimated at 84,737 rupees yearly rents, and the Government revenues of which are 8,473-11-4, and the village of Sippah, the rents of which, estimated at 32,557 rupees, and the Government rents of which are rupees 3,855-11-4 are in conformity to the Government orders of 1791, restored as the remaining undisposed portion of the late zemindary of Futeh Sahoo, deceased, to his son Baboo Chutter Dharee Sahoo, and these two disputed villages are, not included in this schedule of the estates of Futeh Sahoo, restored to this respondent; and this schedule is attested by this respondent; and this appellant's forefathers, it appears, held possession of these two villages, long before this respondent had his father's estates restored to him, therefore this respondent has no plea to ground his claim on; and so far from being dissatisfied, he ought to be thankful to Government that they have restored to him what he now held; for if they chose to have done so, they could have disposed of the whole of this confiscated property. Nor did the respondent in his complaint against this appellant's father, for the possession of the village of Doornahatta, include these villages in that suit; on the contrary, it is in that decree, dated 27th November, 1804, plainly stated, that these villages are separate from Doornahatta and appertain to this appellant's estate, nor is there any document filed in this court, which can in any wise tend to establish this respondent's allegation regarding these villages. Further, it is established, that the main stream of the river Gunduck, has deserted its former channel and removed two or three coss to the Northward, and that it has taken a circuitous route. From the reports of Mr. Braddon of 1806 and of Mr. J. Pringle of March 1828, it appears that the former main stream of the River Gunduck, forms the boundary of the estates of the litigating parties, and from the part of Deosah on the south, of the river where it curves to a point, near the two embouchures of the river, to near the north bank, where there is a mangoe tope near the village of Heeroghur, extend the estates of the respondents; and from the north banks of the river Gunduck near Deosah, to the two and three curves of the river at Dhurumpoor and Rajhwahee, extend the estates of Rajah Beer Kishwung; and although the river might have subsequently changed its course, still the boundaries of the two estates must remain unaltered, and the new channel of 1834, which this respondent states is the renewal of the old bed of the river, is an incorrect statement; and the case no. 274 of the printed reports of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, which is referred to by the respondents as bearing on the case, is not analogous to this case, because the river referred to in that case, was invariably shifting, whereas this one, after once changing its course, remained stationary. Lastly, as these villages by the permanent settlement of 1810, were without any objection on the part of the respondent assigned to and included in the appellant's estate, and even in the survey of this district by the Assistant Surveyor General, they appear still to form an integral portion of this appellant's estate; it appears to this court that there was no necessity on the part of the respondent to have instituted this suit in the Provincial Court, as he has no title whatsoever to the villages he claims in this suit; therefore this court orders that, this appeal of the appellant be decreed in his favor, and the decision of the Provincial Court of Appeal at Patna of 3d July 1833, be received, and the appellant be established in possession of these villages, and the respondent pay all the legal costs of this suit with interest thereon. This order of Mr. Money's was subsequently confirmed by Mr. R. W. Rattray on the 18th May, 1837.—Hurkaru, June 22.

MOFUSIL JUSTICE

As an instance of the manner in which justice is meted out to individuals in the Mofusil Court, the case of Budder Odden Ostagur, and others, appellants, and William Smith Esq., respondent, is here adduced for the information and opinion of the public.

In this case, Mr. William Smith purchased from Radapersad Doss, (the buyer at the Sheriff's sale) the rights and title of Budder Odden Ostagur to four lower rooted houses and a piece of ground situated in Kurriah and in Jaunagar Banrahpoorkur, in the suburbs of Calcutta, and now forming a portion of the zillah of 24-pergunnahs. His right to the possession of these houses was contested by the two sons of Budder Odden Ostagur, on a fictitious deed of gift, and by Calysunker Palit, money lender, on a pretended bill of sale executed to him by the sons of Budder Odden Ostagur, but which document has never been produced throughout the whole of the proceedings of the case.

Eventually Mr. W. Smith instituted a suit against Budder Odden Ostagur in the Zilla Court of the suburbs of Calcutta. This case was non-suited by Mr. J. Master for want of parties, and the plaintiff was desired to sue not only Budder Odden Ostagur, but all the claimants likewise, who had put in their claims in the former suit.

This second action was decreed in the plaintiff's favor by Mr. W. N. Garrett, the then acting judge of zilla 24-Pergunnahs, the zilla of the suburbs of Calcutta in the interim having been amalgamated with the zilla of 24-Pergunnahs, under the latter denomination. Mr. Garrett, in decreeing the possession of these houses to the plaintiff, further ordered that the defendants be made to pay to the plaintiff's the rents of these houses from the 3d May, 1837, the date of sale by the Sheriff to Radapersad Doss, whose representative the plaintiff was, up to the date of the plaintiff being put in possession of them. Against this decision the defendants appealed to the Sudder Dawanny Adawlut, and on Calysunker Palit's presenting a petition for a separate appeal, H. Shakespear, Esq., the judge before whom his petition was read, gave his opinion that there was no ground for a separate appeal: ultimately, one joint appeal was admitted by the said judge. This appeal was primarily heard by T. C. Robertson, Esq., and eventually by C. W. Smith, Esq., both of whom concurred in confirming the decree passed in plaintiff's favor by W. N. Garrett, Esq.

Subsequently, on a petition of C. French, Esq., the respondent's vakeel, D. C. Smyth, Esq., issued an order that the zilla Judge depute an Aumeen to assess the rents of these houses, and make his report to the zilla judge, who, after investigating it, is to issue an order for the payment of what sum he may consider just from the appellants to the respondent. On this order being read before C. R. Martin Esq., the zilla judge, he deputed Moonshy Mahomed Cauzim, as an Aumeen, to assess these rents, when the respondent appeared by his mooktars, Mr. R. F. Smith and Moonshy Shereaut Alla; but the appellants did not appear before the Aumeen; and Kasinath Palit, the son and representative of Calysunker Palit, one of the appellants, presented a petition to the zilla judge to be exempted from the payment of these rents on the plea of his being a purchaser of one of the houses. This petition was forwarded by Mr. C. R. Martin to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, where it was heard by D. C. Smyth, Esq., who, as the case had been originally decided by T. C. Robertson, Esq., referred the petition to him; and this judge on hearing the petition read on the 9th of June, 1836, ordered that the petitioner was not to be exempt from the payment of these rents. In the interim the Aumeen made his report to the zilla judge, stating that the rents appeared to have been fluctuating, and he could not fix on a precise sum. This report was read before E. R. Barwell, Esq., who fined the Aumeen 20 rupees, and ordered him to revise his proceedings within 15 days; he likewise declared his opinion from the tenor of the appellant Kasinath Palit's petition and the order of T. C. Robertson, Esq., on it, that the petitioner must pay the rents of the house he had claimed.

Before Moonshy Mahomed Kazim could revise his report he died, and Gour Mohun Roy was then deputed as an Aumeen by Mr. Barwell to assess the rents of these houses, and before him both the appellants and the respondent appeared by their mooktars. The respondent's mooktar, Mr. R. F. Smith, before this Aumeen, examined many European and native witnesses, viz. the former tenants of these houses, their servants and the neighbours. He further filed authenticated copies of 18 agreements of these houses, which were filed in this suit by the appellants themselves, as a part of their evidence and which copies were obtained by Mr. R. F. Smith officially from the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut on stamped paper, and authenticated as true copies by the Registrar of the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut.

The agreements went to show, that these houses, were generally tenanted from the 3d May, 1827, the date of the Sheriff's sale; and that their rents varied from sa. rs. 55 to sa. rs. 30 per mensem, and the tank was let at 5 rs. per month. The depositions of the witnesses likewise established that all these houses were occupied most of the period of litigation, and that rents of the one Palit claimed, and the two at Kurriah, varied from 50 sa. rs. to 40 sa. rs. per month, and that the 4th house was occupied by three of the appellants as their dwelling house during the same period, and its rents might have been averaged at 8 or 10 rs. a month. In closing his investigation, Gour Mohon Roy averaged the rents of the three houses at sa. rs. 45 per month each, and the three appellant's dwelling house and the tank together, at sa. rs. 10 per month, and as such sent in his report to the Zillah Judge.

Whilst this investigation was carrying on, Mr. R. F. Smith, the respondent's mooktar, filed a petition before T. C. Robertson, Esq., protesting against the construction Mr. E. R. Barwell, the Zillah Judge, had put on his order of the 9th 1836, regarding the payment of the rents by Kasinath Palit, the son of Colysunker Palit, and stated in his petition, that this construction was against the tenor of the decree passed in the respondent's favor, which decreed the rents to be paid jointly by all the appellants. This petition was heard on the 12th September, 1836, when T. C. Robertson, Esq., explained his order of the 6th June thus that as the petitioner Kasinath Palit had in his petition only mentioned one house, and the order was given on that petition, it might have led the judge into the error mentioned in the respondent's mooktar's petition, but such was not the intention of the judge in passing that order. On the contrary, the meaning was that the decree be executed according to its tenor, without the least deviation in favor of any of the appellants all the appellants be held jointly and separately liable for all the rents. Against this order Kasinath Palit petitioned and prayed for a division of rents; but T. C. Robertson, Esq., the judge, rejected his petition, and confirmed the order of the 12th September, 1836. Palit then again presented another petition, which being read, T. C. Robertson, Esq., said that he did not think it necessary to pass any order on it as the two former orders on this subject of the 12th and 20th September, 1836, had fully explained the manner in which the decree was to be executed as regarded the rents. This petition was, after Mr. T. C. Robertson's departure for the Cape, taken up by Mr. J. R. Hutchinson on the 21st January, 1837, who acted in his place, and who put an interpretation on Mr. T. C. Robertson's order of the 9th, June, 1836, in direct contradiction to Mr. T. C. Robertson's own construction of it, as shown in his order of the 12th September, 1836, and confirmed on the 20th September 1836; and against the regulation, which directs that no order passed in the regular proceedings of any case can, after the confirmation of the order by two judges and the final disposal of the case, be reversed by any subsequent miscellaneous proceedings that may be held on it. Mr. Hutchinson, in his order of the 21st January, wrote that the respondent's plaint in the Zilla states that the appellant Kasinath Palit is claimant of only one of the houses; which is not the case, for the plaint says that Palit says that he is a claimant of only one house, but the plaint itself is filed, against all the parties in one joint suit, and as such it has been decreed in the Zillah Court, and confirmed by two judges in the Sudder Court, one of whom, T. C. Robertson, Esq., in three orders passed by him subsequent to the decree, has already fully explained the matter as to the realization of these rents. These objections were all urged by the respondent's mooktar, Mr. R. F. Smith, but in vain. This is as yet, the last order passed on this case in the Sudder Court.

In the Zillah Court, shortly after Gourmohun Roy, the Aumeen, had sent in his report, Kasinath Palit, one of the appellants' petitioned Mr. C. R. Barwell, the Zillah Judge, stating that the Aumeen had not taken the depositions of the persons residing in the neighbourhoods of these houses, whereas the witnesses, Wagh Thakoor, Azem Odden, Bendabua Mundal, were all neighbours, and are still residing in the neighbourhood. On this petition being presented, it was heard during the absence of every person authorized to appear on the behalf of the respondent, and without any intimation to him or his mooktar, Mr. R. F. Smith; and although Goury Sircar, one of the vakeels of the Zillah Court, was the respondent's vakeel, during the proceedings of the equity suit regarding the possession of these houses, yet as he either by his ignorance of the law or wilful neglect, had been the cause of the respondent's loss of the first case he had instituted in the Mofussil, after the equity suit had been disposed of in the Zillah Court, no fresh vakeelutamas had been given to him in this case, nor was he in any way authorized to conduct the proceedings still pending with regard to the realization of the rents of these houses. Mr. Barwell thus, without giving the respondent an opportunity of confuting the statements made in Kasinath Palit's petition, deputed a third Aumeen, Mouly Fuzil Rubee, who, in addition to being the Futwa Maulvy of the Zillah Court, a duty which obliged him to attend the Session Judge's Court in every criminal trial, is the Moonsiff for the Entally division of the 24-Pergunnahs, which division extend from Gownagar to Gurriah about 70 miles in length. Yet in addition to these multifarious duties, for which he is paid, sa. rs. 210 per month, he can spare time to assess rents and sell seized property in the Zillah. The purwannah to this third Aumeen differs from the purwannah sent to Gourmohun Roy, which likewise differs from the purwannah sent to the first Aumeen, Mouly Mahomed Kazim, so there is in one case regarding one matter three separate purwannahs, differing from each other in their tenor and none tallying with the decretal order, as passed by the Zillah and confirmed by the Sudder Court, directing three Aumeens, who have taken about six months to settle these rents, being paid one sicca rupee per day, besides being found conveyances, and 6 sa. rs. a month for peons, by the respondent.

This Mouly Fuzil Rubee has taken the deposition of four or five corn dealers, who were pointed out by the appellants' mooktars as living in the neighbourhood of these houses. None of them have ever been employed in collecting the rents of any similar house in or out of Calcutta, ever lived in or possessed any similar house, nor did any of them know any of the tenants who lived in any of these three houses; but they have sworn that they have heard from the domestics of the tenants that these houses rented from 25 to 30 rs. a month, yet none of them can tell the name of any of these domestics, nor the name of any of the tenants, nor the motives which could have induced them to ask these domestics any question regarding these rents. It does not even appear whether this information was spontaneously supplied, or whether it was sought for; yet this Mouly rejects the respondent's mooktar's petition to file the evidence of the witnesses examined before the Aumeen Gourmohun Roy, on the plea that this evidence was not taken before him and cannot be depended upon, although some of the parties are admitted generally to be respectable persons, viz. Mr. Vincent Rees, of the Surveyor General's Office, Mr. George Cattell, Deputy Registrar of the General Department, Mrs. Henry Black, wife of Mr. Black of the Pilot Service, who have sworn to having rented one of these houses from 50 to 55 rs. a month for 4 years collectively. He has likewise refused to admit the copies of the agreements although authenticated by the Registrar of the Sudder Dewany Adawlut, on evidence, and further to take the respondent's evidence to show what has been the depreciation of the rents of houses on the Circular Road from 1827 to 1837, and if a house now rents for 27 rs. a month, what might have been its rent in 1827. He has further refused to take evidence to show that Kaly-sunker Palit used to lend money on interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, and that it is not likely that he would buy a house for sa. rs. 4,000, as admitted by himself in his replication in this case, the rents of which would fall under 40 sa. rs. per month at the time of his purchasing it, although this Aumeen himself once made this remark. He now estimates the rents on the vague assertions of these corn-dealers at 27 rs. a month for each house; and one of which witnesses, named Roopchand Mundel, he fined, when about to take his evidence, 10 rs. and after detaining the man some time in custody at his house, remitted the fine. Thus he clearly, by estimating the three houses on the Circular Road at 27 rs. a month, shows and agrees with the former Aumeen in so far that he considers their renting to have been equal; then throwing away the evidence of attested documents, viz. the copies of agreements, and the evidences of Messrs. Rees and Cattell, and Mrs. Black, he fixes them all at 27 rs. a month, on the hear say evidences of four or five corn-dealers; and moreover, out of six years and eight months, he awards only one year and three months rents for the house which Kosinath Palit says his father claimed, and the full period of the six years and eight months for the other property; and he, although there is the copy of an agreement to show that the tank rented for 5 sa. rs. a month, awards only one rupee a month for it, and has similarly reduced the rents of the house occupied by the three appellants themselves, without assigning one single reason to the respondent's mooktar for his strange conduct. The deduction of 5 years and —months for vacancy he has voluntarily taken upon himself to make, as nothing about it is stated in his purnannah.

This Aumeen's report was sent to the Zillah Judge, W. Cracroft, Esq., on Monday the 5th June, when it was the respondent's mooktar's intention to present a petition to the Judge, stating his objection to this Aumeen's report, and whatever order was passed by the Zillah Judge we will try to obtain.

SUDDER BOARD OF REVENUE.

CONSULTATION, — TUESDAY, 16TH MAY, 1837.

ENDOWMENT — BHAGULPORE.

Mr. Commissioner Brown, of Bhagulpore, on the 15th of March last, transmitted copy of a letter from Mr. Special Deputy Collector Travers, dated the 27th ultimo, embracing all the information he was able to obtain regarding the estate of pergunnah Obbehpore, Zillah Moonghyr, granted by Mahomed Allee Verdee Khan to Shah Golam Moulah, for religious purposes.

Mr. Special Deputy Collector Travers, in reporting upon the pergunnah, said it was subsequently confirmed by Mr. Warren Hastings to Shah Mahomed Bheek, descendant of the original grantees, and to his heirs forever.

This tenure was decreed by Mr. Travers in favor of the Lakherajdar on the 6th September last. Its recorded rugbah amounts to 55,704 biggahs, and the jumma has averaged according to the returns of the putwarree from four to five thousand rupees per annum during the last seven years. It was especially intended by the grantor, that the profits of this estate should be devoted to the exercise of religious duties, taken more peculiarly in the sense of devotional acts, rather than for purposes of public benefit and usefulness. A school, however, has always been kept up, and in the course of Mr. Travers's progress through the districts to visit some other estates, he took the opportunity of looking at Obbehpore.

The number of boys at present entertained upon the establishment amounts to fifty, and Mr. Travers was informed that they generally average about this number.

Two masters are kept at fixed salaries, who give instruction in Arabic and Persian respectively. These are the only two languages taught, and of the former few seemed to take any advantage; in the latter several boys appeared to be highly proficient. The reading, Mr. Travers observed, was fluent and correct, and some excellent specimens of writing were shewn to him.

Books of religious instruction claim their first attention of course; and after these, the standard of composition appears to be taken from the form commonly observed in the Mofussil Courts. Copies of petitions and roobocaries invented for the occasion, perwannahs, thannah reports and such like, were brought for Mr. Travers's inspection. Hindoos and Mussulmans are alike admitted, though Mr. Travers saw but a few of the first named.

The greater number of boys come from a distance of 20 or 30 miles, remain at school 10 or 11 months, during which time they are provided with Board and lodging gratis, as well as clothes in case they require them, and visit their homes usually once in a year for a month or thereabouts. Those who are sent from the immediate neighbourhood are scholars, and do not depend upon the establishment for any thing beyond mere instruction. On the whole, Mr. Travers was very much pleased and satisfied with his inquiries, and not a little surprised to find any thing even half so systematic as the method of education employed. With some care and attention on the part of the local agent, Mr. Travers thought the advantages of the place could be made more extensive, and he had reason to believe that any proposal on the part of Government to place the school upon a more efficient footing, would meet with ready acquiescence from the present proprietors of Obbehpore.

The Board on the 11th of April last, transmitted the above report for the information of the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General, observing that the estate, though comprising 55,704 biggahs of land, yields only from four to five thousand rupees,—that the resources of the grant must have been misrepresented, or else that the estate is altogether mismanaged; but as the objects of the grant appeared to be religious and not directly educational, it would be a question for His Lordship whether it would be proper for Government to interfere in any respect in the management of the estate and the application of the proceeds. We give the concluding correspondence in full in accordance with the orders of the Board.

To F. J. HALLIDAY, Esq.,

Secy. of the Sudder Board of Revenue.

Sir, I am directed by the Right Honorable Revenue } Governor of Bengal, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 11th instant, with its enclosures, and to request that you will inform the Board, in reply, that with reference to the last sentence of Mr. Travers's letter of the 27th of Feb. last, and to the opinion entertained by them, "that the resources of the grant must have been misrepresented, or else that the estate is altogether mismanaged," His Lordship is inclined to think that it would not be difficult for the local agents, acting under Mr. Officiating Commissioner Brown's immediate directions, to induce the administrators of the property to devote a larger part of it to purposes of education, including, possibly, instruction in the English language, and in the principles of mechanics, surveying, &c. At any rate the attempt should be made, and the Governor relies with much confidence upon Mr. Brown's judicious management and knowledge of the people for its success.

2. The Governor requests that the result may be reported for his satisfaction, and for communication, if necessary, to the Committee of Public Instruction.

3. The enclosures of your letter are herewith returned, copies having been kept for record.

I am, Sir, your most obdt. servt.

For William, } (Signed) ROSS D. MANGLES,

To G. F. BROWN, Esq.,

Officiating Commissioner of Bhagulpore.

Sir, With reference to your letter dated } Miscellaneous. } the 15th March last, on the subject of the Obbehpoore endowment, I am directed to transmit to you the records noted in the margin.*

You will perceive that the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal, with reference to the last sentence of Mr. Travers's letter of the 27th January last, and to this Board's opinion, that either the resources of the lands have been misrepresented, or that the estate has been altogether mismanaged, "is inclined to think that it would not be difficult for the Local Agents acting under Mr. Officiating Commissioner Brown's immediate directions, to induce the administrators to devote a larger part of it to the purposes of education, including, possibly, instruction in the English language, and in the principles of mechanics, surveying, &c.," also that his Lordship has the greatest confidence in your discretion and judgment in the execution of orders requiring the exercise of so much delicacy and intelligence for their satisfactory fulfilment.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

5th. The increase of the jumma of 1833-4, compared with 1832-3, the last year reported on, is rupees 69,731, occurring principally* in the Chittagong, Cutlack, Moonghyr, Moorshedabad and Calcutta provinces, with a small amount of 234 rupees from mowza Uleepoor

in Rungpore under Regulation II. of 1819. There would also have appeared an increase in the Patna division from a number of small mehals; but that the Collector of Shahabad has charged a sum of rupees 2,971 as a real decrease in pergunnah Chounsah in anticipation of the authority of Government for doing. The accountant however, states he has been desired to re-add them to the rent roll until that sanction shall have been obtained. The increase in Chittagong arises almost entirely from the Nohabad mehals of pergunnah Chittagong, to which is to be added the Neemuk Gardee mehals, the revenue of which used to be paid in salt, and rupees 607 from pergunnah Rus-soolnugur, hitherto excluded from the Towjee without authority. Against this accession of revenue appears a sum of rupees 8,048, directed by the orders of Government, dated the 1st January, 1833, to be made in the Nohabad Mehals. In Hidglee the increase is to be found in the Estates of Mooinamootah and Jellamootah, with a small sum in that of Doordumuan, the rest being made up of the petty resumptions of lakraj lands, and a nominal increase of rupees 443 arising from alterations in the monthly kists not affecting the annual jumma, against which appears a decrease in mouzah Koolegachuah of 82 rupees under authority of Government dated 8th September 1829. In Pattaspore the increase is made up chiefly of small sums, of which the accountant has been called on for a further explanation, with a nominal sum of rupees 3,333, being the sum of an increase on the first seven months of 1240, which causes a corresponding charge of nominal decrease in the following year, against which is a small decrease in pergunnahs Kamadachoar, Grudaubar, Kismut-gedauchur, and pergunnah Shabunder Bishenpore, for explanation of which a reference has been made. The increase in Cutlack is under authority of the Government orders dated 31st January 1832 in pergunnah Maunkbunt Talookhan; that in the northern division being from sundry mehals not included in the Mustabood or Towjee accounts, while a decrease appears under the orders of the 10th of February 1834 in talook Bissenpore, pergunnah Secaree. The increase in the southern division is merely nominal arising from alterations in the monthly kists. The real increase in Moonghyr amounts to only rupees 240 in pergunnah Bullnah and Nyepore, the rest being nominal, and the result of alterations in the monthly kists, as is also the small amount in Bhaugulpore.

In Tirhoot the only amounts desiring particular notice, are the increase in mouzah Karopore, pergunnah Boochee Mayori Mulsurabad, Jswantpore Bulthee in pergunnah Dhurpur, and mouzah Punnchau Kissen in pergunnah Ram Ghurwund, the remainder being a small sum. On the other hand a decrease appears of rupees 1,650 rupees 908 of which is from mouzah Nethenpore Punglis under the orders of Government dated 12th April 1833, and the remainder arising from alterations in kists, and hence merely nominal. The entire increase of Dhurum-pore is from one mehal mouzah Sumjunh, in zillah Nathpore, under orders of the 10th
June 1833. In Hooghly the increase consists of rupees
2,507 from talook Digra, and rupees 2,345 from Chin-surah, with two or three small amounts, and the decrease is rupees 426 in chur Bunsburea, whilst Burdwan shews the increase in Chur Majdeea Pergunnah Patoo-lee, and chur Maltipoor pergunnah Rannahattee. The increase in Jessore arises chiefly in mehals newly settled; that in Backergunge from some newly cultivated Soon-derbund mehals of pergunnah Jafferabad, and small increase in the farming settlement of Mahanund Hyat, and that in the 24-Pergunnahs on various small estates.
Against these are a few items of decrease, consisting of the sum of rupees 50 in Dhee Calcutta, 502 rupees on Khas mehals in Jessore, and rupees 220 from sundry estates in the 24-Pergunnahs, for explanations of the two latter of which a reference has been made.

Rajmahal 3,732 some large amounts in the Jession of Cut- } 20,319 sums through the districts, tack } rupees 4,884 of the increase in Moonghyr is merely nominal, one half of it arising from alterations in the monthly kists, and the other in the demand on account of Bukyah Towjee, and the rest consists of small amounts; while that in Rajmahal is entirely from the estate Towfeer Harpursad in pergunnah Teles Guree. The increase in Tirhoot compre-hends rupees 2,870 in Muthee Burhur pergunnah Suresna, and 1,084 rupees in Havee Bhowarah pergunnah Havee, the rest being made up entirely of small amounts. Backergunge shews an increase of rupees

15,366 from Muhulut Durree Abaddee, and rupees
1,387 from Kureeza pergunnah Bazoorgomedpore
Badooree Syllaboonah Sawkureeah mouza; and in the 24-Pergunnahs the following are the large items of increase, the rest being made up of small amounts.

rupees 928 out of the rupees 1,092 of increase in Hidjee, arise in the Jellamoolah estate and that in southern Cuttack is obtained from Kilah Koordah.

7th.—It is with regret that the Board notice the decrease in the collections upon the assessment of 1833-4 to so large an amount as rupees 12,31,372 as compared with the previous year 1832-33; but this may in some measure be accounted for by the severe calamities which attended that disastrous year, a belief that is borne out by the increase found in the second year under report, which though small, (rupees 30,989), is perhaps as much as could be expected from the slow recovery that would follow such a season of loss, and the effect of which it requires a long tranquility and continued prosperity entirely to overcome.

Bukyah of 1832-3	Rs.	8th.—The Bukyah col-realized in 1833-4		lections are much greater

Do. of former years		review, than in the precedditto	1,83,216	ing one 1832-3; but with-
Bukyah of 1833-4		standing the Board's last realized in 1834-5		report of the 11th July.
more	7,67,369	1834, shewed them in that
Do. of former years		year to have greatly ex-ditto	19,593	ceeded the amount collected on this account in its predecessor: the second year under review in fact shews an increase of realizations on this account, over those of the last year reported upon, to the extent on account of the year immediately preceding that of report, of rupees 10,22,847 and on account of former years of rupees 2,02,809. Nevertheless, the Board regret to observe that the gross balance had in the first of the two years now under report, increased very considerably from the causes noted in the preceding paragraph, and which had received a check in its successor when the gross balance was less by rupees 82,975.

9th.—The surplus collections not included in the Towjee, exhibit a large decrease* in the first of the years now reported, over its predecessor.* This decrease is chiefly made up of large amounts, and arises as follows:—

Rupees 34,775 on account of chur lands in Bulloah, rupees 14,853 on the Puteetabodee lands in the 24-Pergunnahs; rupees 10,112 on account of the decreased collection from resumed jageers and villages not included in the Towjee in Behar: rupees 84,107 realized from talook Tajpore in Tirhoot; rupees 14,768 in the salt revenue of Southern Cuttack; rupees 25,671 of Nemuk Sayer in Tirhoot; and rupees 82,388 of decreased collections in Sumbulpore. In the next year 1834-35 a small increase† is discoverable, of which rupees 5,569 is from resumed lakraj lands in Beerbhoom; rupees 15,403 from jagheer mehals formerly belonging to the Newaib of Dacca; rupees 9,105 part proceeds of sale of pergunnah Barceeghattee; rupees 13,982 on small mehals in Behar; rupees 3,923 on account of malgoorzree lands from the heirs of invalid jageerdars in Bhaugulpore, besides an addition to the chur lands in Nuddeeah.

10th.—The increase of consolidated penalty and interest under Regulation VII., of 1830, that appears in the year 1833-4 over its predecessor, corresponds with the increase in the amount of gross balances, as does the decrease in the second year under review 1834-5§ with diminution in those balances, aided also by the de-ermined by Government to forego this charge from the sufferers by the calamities already referred to.

11th.—A great falling off appears in 1833-4¶ in the item of collections, as "batta, fees, fines and other contingencies," which may be best explained by a reference to the accounts of the previous year, which exhibit an increase to a more than equal amount.

The year 1834-5|| however, shews an increase in its predecessor against rupees 1,24,382.

12th.—The gross amount of revenue collected in 1833-4, falls short of that 11,85,291; of which

2,49,288 are accounted for in the deterioration of the abkaree collecthe head of Customs decrease on the gross collections is however nearly made up in the

55,113, so that the average deterioration during the last three years in this department, has been rupees 1,46,788 per annum.

13th.—The charges in both the years under review have experienced a slight diminution, amounting in the first year 1833-4 to rupees 63,498, and in the second year 1834-5 to rupees 26,192; the result, however, is not so satisfactory as could be desired, since the former year shews a deficiency in the net receipt as compared with 1832-3, amounting to rupees 11,21,793, and although the latter year included in our report exhibits an increase in the net receipts of rupees 8,95,979, yet even this is rupees 2,25,814 less than the net receipts of our last report of 1832-3.

which exhibits the rate per cent. of outstanding balances on the 31st December 1834 for 1833-4 on the jumma of the year, premising however that in making these calculations, fractions have been rejected. In five districts, viz. Dinagepore, Bugoorah, Burdwan Deputy Collectorate, Bogree and Dhurrumpore, to which may be added Beerbhoom, the amount unrealized being under ten rupees, all arrears had been cleared off, and the average proportion of arrears amounts to 8½ per cent. on the jumma; so that of those districts in which balances were still remaining at the period above mentioned, the amount in twenty-four instances fell short of the average, while it was exceeded in twelve districts.

15th.—The outstanding arrear on account of 1834-5 is a little more favorable, and the Board subjoin also a

In six districts the balances have been entirely cleared off by time of closing the accounts; they are Purneah, Rajmahal, north-east Rungpore, Cooch Behar, Dhurrumpore, and the Deputy Collectorate of Burliwan, and in that of Burdwan an amount of only 8 rupees remained unrealized. The average proportion of arrears on account of this year, is on the total jumma of rupees 3,01,64,462, only about 5½ per cent., and it appears that in thirteen districts the arrears exceed this rate, while in twenty-two they fall short thereof: on making a comparison too, with the average rate of the previous year, viz. 8½ per cent., it will be found that the present exhibits as many as twenty-seven districts in which the rate of arrears falls short of that amount, exclusive in both instances, of such places as shew no arrears whatever, which, if included, would make thirty-four of the present against thirty of the first year now under report. The latter part of paragraph three above, further shews that the balance outstanding on account of 1833-34 on the 30th of April, 1836, or two years after expiry of the year of the demand, did not exceed 3½ per cent. on the total amount of jumma for the year.

16th.—The remissions on account of khalarree rent, &c., during the years under review, amounted in the year 1833-34 to ½ per cent. — and in 1834-35 to ¼ per cent. on the jumma.

17th.—The Board have now nothing further to observe with reference to these accounts, than to bring to the notice of the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal, the proportion that the cost of collection bears to the amount collected, which was in 1833-34 10½ per cent. and in the following year (1834-35) a still more favorable rate of 10½ per cent; and it may be worthy of remark that this in both instances falls short of the average rate whereat the revenue of the United Kingdom is computed to be collected, and which is estimated at 11½ per cent.

your most obedient servant,

CONSULTATION, — TUESDAY, 16TH MAY, 1837.

INACCURACIES IN THE PERSIAN AND BENGALIEE TRANSLATIONS OF TWO REGULATIONS.

Mr. Commissioner Lewis, of Moorshedabad, on the 18th of March last, submitted, for the consideration of the Board, a letter in original from the special deputy collector of Burdwan, pointing out inaccuracies in the Persian and Bengallee translations of clause 2 Section 111. Regulation XIV. of 1825, and clause 1 section 11. Regulation XIX. of 1793.

Mr. Special Deputy collector Tayler, sets out by stating that, Clause 1, Section 2, Regulation XIX. of 1793 declares "all grants made previous to 12th August 1765, by whatever authority, and whether by a writing or without a writing, &c., shall, with certain provisions, be deemed valid."

Also, that Clause 11, Section 111, Regulation XIV. of 1825, provides, that "Lakhraj tenures, of which uninterrupted possession shall have been held exempt from assessment, at and subsequent to the several dates thereafter mentioned, shall be considered to be valid, without evidence to any formal grant, or confirmation of the same."

Without attempting to impugn the propriety of the term "valid," as above applied, and which Mr. Tayler conceived to be essentially correct, it would yet, he (Mr. Tayler) thought be no difficult task to shew that this singular, has, in its application, given rise to many conflicting and contradictory decisions, to much of the doubt and uncertainty which has perplexed resuming officers, and to much of the dissatisfaction and disgust now ranking in the minds of the Lakhraj-lars.

That the word refers only to the primary validity of the original grant, which has nothing to do with the confirmation of the tenure in favor of any other but the original grantee, further than being an indispensable precedent condition of that confirmation, one would imagine. (Mr. Tayler observed) that the succeeding clause in both the regulations quoted, would have been amply sufficient to demonstrate this, and keep the interpretation of the word within its prescribed limits; but as Mr. Tayler happened to have seen several decisions of the higher authority (the Special Commissioner's) in which tenures have been continued to heirs, without any proof or evidence of hereditary right having been demanded, simply and solely on the strength of these two clauses, Mr. Tayler was justified, he thought, in asserting that the wording has contributed to the misunderstanding of their intent.

But, however this may be, as regards the English expression, there could be no doubt (Mr. Tayler thought) that the transaction into the native languages, is grossly incorrect: On a reference to the Persian translation of Clause 11., Section 111., Regulation XIV. of 1825, Mr. Tayler found the word rendered جایز this being in some degree calculated to mislead particularly as its opposite نا جایز is the particular word in use among the natives to denote an unsound and resumable tenure. The translation however has the merit of being at least tolerably accurate.

The Bengalee version of the same word, however, in Clause 1., Section 11., Regulation XIX. of 1793, proves that the translator at least utterly misunderstood the purport of the term, and to this point, Mr. Tayler directed particular attention.

By a reference to the Bengalee regulation, the Board would perceive that instead of the word অব as in clause 11. Section 111., Regulation XIV. of 1825, the translator renders it by an unjustifiable paraphrase or "shall be confirmed," taking a very large leap of 60 years from the validity of the original grant as having been made and held previous to 1765, to the confirmation of the tenure subsequent to 1825.

This unwarrantable deviation from the English version has also entered into the Persian translation of the same clause; in which it is rendered, بلستور سابق بحال و برقرار خواهد بود thus again confounding the pre-existent validity of the tenure, which is all that is intended with the subsequent continuance thereof, which depends on many other contingencies.

As nothing is (Mr. Tayler believed) so calculated to excite dissatisfaction and disgust in the minds of those who suffer by the enforcement of the law, as any incongruity in the law itself, or uncertainty in its application, Mr. Tayler begged earnestly to recommend that this point should be referred for the consideration of Government, in order that the translation above referred to may, if incorrect, be rectified, and the misapprehension which has arisen from the erroneous rendering of the translator be removed.

Mr. Tayler concluded by observing, that it cannot be thought unimportant that the officers of Government should be cleared from every appearance of acting contrary, or even on a forced construction of the law.

TO THE COMMISSIONER OF MOORSHEDABAD.

Miscellaneous.

Sir,—The Board have considered Mr. Tayler's letter to your address, of the 14th February, on the subject of a supposed mistranslation of Regulation XIX. 1793.

You have not favored the Board with any opinion on the question, and neither from Mr. Tayler nor from yourself have the Board received any distinct suggestion for the amendment of that which the former officer supposes to be wrong.

The Board direct me to say, they admit some little fault may be found with the translations of Clause 1., Section 11., Regulation XIX. 1793; but that any person could be deceived as to its meaning who had read the succeeding clauses, the Board can by no means allow: taken in connection with the exceptions and limitations which succeed it, clause 1., of the Section alluded to seems, even in the translation objected to, to be quite clear enough for common apprehension. Were, however, the versions open to all the animadversion which Mr. Tayler has bestowed upon them, the Board would look upon them as better let alone, than changed, or otherwise interfered with after the lapse of so many years.

It has always been ruled, that the English version of the regulations is alone to be considered the law, and that the law cannot be affected, or in any shape altered, by defects in its versions in other languages, which are made for the assistance of the natives and with as much attention to accuracy as may be from time to time attainable.

To correct the versions now found fault with in a manner which some might think favorable to the Government claims, and adverse to their own, would, in the opinion of the Board, be more likely to engender disgust and disaffection, than the occasional misconstruction of existing terms by a few hasty and ill judging individuals.

TO THE COMMISSIONER OF REVENUE FOR THE DIVISION OF

Mis. Dept.

SIR,—The Sudder Board of Revenue have had before them several references, shewing the inconvenience experienced by the Special Deputy Collectors in consequence of their not being at liberty to draw on the Treasuries of the districts in which they are respectively located. To remove that inconvenience they are pleased to direct, with the advice of their accountant, that you will authorize the Collectors in your division to advance to Special Deputy Collectors such sums required for temporary disbursement as have previously received your sanction, and instruct them to hold such advances in their inefficient balances, in the name and at the responsibility of the officers drawing the money, until audited bills are furnished for the adjustment of accounts.

2. In compliance with a suggestion of Mr. Dorin, the Board direct me to request that you will call the attention of the Special Deputy Collectors to the necessity imposed by the orders of Government in the Financial Department, under date the 26th January 1835, of obtaining in all practicable cases, monthly audit for all advances received by them from a Collector's Treasury.

3. You will, of course, understand that these orders do not confer on you any power to sanction charges either temporary or permanent with which you were not previously vested, and that any new demands that may arise for the disbursement of sums under the head of miscellaneous charges beyond 500 rupees must be reported in the usual manner to the Board. The object of this order is to enable the Special Deputy Collectors to obtain without delay from the Treasuries sums of which the disbursement has been regularly sanctioned under existing orders.

SIR,—I am directed by the Sudder Board of Revenue to forward to you, for your information and guidance, the accompanying copy of para. 2, of a letter from the Secretary to Government in the Revenue Department, modifying the rules at present in force, respecting the purchase on the part of Government of small shares of Mehals under Butwarra when the bids of the public do not cover the balance, and directing that such purchases of such shares shall be left to the discretion of the Local Authorities, instead of being imperative.

2nd. You are requested to communicate these orders to all the Revenue Authorities in your division whom it may concern.

Para. 2d. It is obvious that inconvenience may often result from the purchase of small shares of Mehals under Butwarra, and the orders to which the Board refer render that measure obligatory when the bids of the public do not reach the amount of balance. His Lordship is therefore pleased so far to modify those orders, as to leave the purchase of shares of Mehals under Butwarra to the discretion of the local authorities.

CONSULTATION, — TUESDAY 30TH MAY, 1837,

RULE FOR THE LISTS OF PETTY ESTATES — SYLHET.

The Board on the 26th of November last, promulgated by circular to the several Commissioners, the adaptation of the following rule passed by Government on the 8th November last regarding the kists of petty estates, viz.

For estates with a sudder jumma of 10 Rs. } 1 kist.
or under..... }
Do. above 10 and not exceeding 50 rupees..... 2 do.
Do. above 50 and not exceeding 100 rupees..... 3 do.

Mr. Commissioner E. M. Gordon, of Dacca, on the 5th April last, communicated the above order to Mr. Collector Mytton of Sylhet, trusting he would set about preparing a new kistbundy with as little delay as possible.

Mr. Gordon could not take upon himself to dispense with the signatures of the parties concerned without a reference to the Board, but recommended Mr. Mytton to commence the work in hand, while he made a reference.

Mr. Collector Mytton on the 6th of the same month replied, stating, that in attempting to carry the orders of Government into effect he had been met by difficulties which were not perhaps contemplated when the above orders were passed.

In the first place, Mr. Mytton submitted, that it is not mentioned on what date the jumma from those estates on which the Revenue is leviable in one kist is to be demanded, but he concluded that it is intended that it should be at, or soon after, the date of the last kist as it now stands. This appeared to him to be the most equitable course, but in pursuing it the uniformity which appears to be one great object of the order in question will not be attained, for the former kistbundy was drawn out on no fixed plan, and the revenue of one estate of 10 rupees jumma may be payable in the first three months of the year, while that of another may be spread over 9 months. This difficulty Mr. Mytton thought was not insuperable, the kists of all such talooks could be fixed so late as not to fall before the last kist as it now stands of the talook of the class, whose last kist falls the latest of the year.

Mr. Mytton observed that the Majority of the estates in Sylhet are split up into fifties and hundreds of shares. A great many of these are called "Hissa Karija" but are sold with the original estate, according to Mr. Tucker's report of the 16th March 1827, and the orders passed thereon. These "Hissas Karijas" have distinct kistbundies, and while on the one hand a complete amalgamation of their jumma with the original estate would cause the greatest confusion and be objectionable as leaving undefined the exact sum due from each Hissa, in each month, which is now well known and understood, still on the other hand (Mr. Mytton went on to state) the forming a separate kistbundee for each "Hissa Karija," would be a work of time and expense, and would probably be looked upon as acknowledging that which has been denied, viz., the legality of the separation of these Hissas.

The copying out the kistbundee which was formed by Mr. French is said to have taken eight mounhurs for nearly a twelve month, and three of the head Omiah afterwards were required to compare them, which must also have been a work of time.

Mr. Mytton concluded by saying that although it is undoubtedly an object of importance to obtain uniformity, still it should be taken into consideration, whether it is of such importance as to be worth obtaining at such an expense and with such difficulties in the way: Mr. Mytton's opinion was, that it is not.

Mr. Gordon, in replying to Mr. Mytton's communication, observed that although no reasons are set forth, either in the letter from the Secretary to Government, or in that from the Sudder Board, for the proposed alteration in the mode of paying the instalments of the Government Revenue, Mr. Gordon nevertheless felt satisfied, that not a desire of uniformity, but a humane regard for the comfort and convenience of the land holders, was the chief motive that led to the issuing of the orders now under consideration.

It was felt by the ruling authorities to be a great evil, that men should be compelled to leave their homes frequently and to make considerable journeys, to pay into the Treasury very small sums; and so just and proper did Mr. Gordon look upon the orders of Government to be, that it ought not to be ordinary difficulties which should deter the local authorities from carrying them into execution.

Mr. Gordon scarcely understood why it should not be practicable to form the kistbundies with the proprietors of the original estates, making both these and the holders of the separations sign them. This seems necessary to secure the latter from the encroachments of the former. If the plan Mr. Gordon proposed should be practicable, a separate kistbundee with the separate holders would not be necessary, — a distinct kistbundee with these appeared to be obviously objectionable, as in some degree recognizing the legality of the separation.

After a little more correspondence on the subject, the whole of it was submitted to the Board on the 5th of May last by Mr. Gordon for consideration and orders.

TO THE COMMISSIONERS OF DACCA.

Miscellaneous.

Sir, — The Sudder Board of Revenue having had before them your letter No. 117, dated the 5th instant, on the subject of their circular orders of the 26th November 1836, direct me in reply to communicate as follows.

The Collector must make his arrangements for his own office, apportioning the payment of the Kists after the principal harvest. When there is one Kist the payment of it should be after the Ouse harvest, where there are two, after the Ouse and Amun, and where three, after Ouse and Amun and miscellaneous crops. The time of each payment should be appointed by the collector according to local circumstances, so as to suit the convenience of the people. —

In being required to sign the kistbundees, the Board consider that parties can affix their signatures to printed Kistbundies as they come in to make payments of Revenue, and that it is not either expedient or necessary that they should be sent for our purpose.

In cases of rules for arrears, or in consequence of decrees of court, the new proprietors will be required to sign the Kistbundies as a matter of course.

On the subject of illegal separations touched upon by the Collector, the board direct that such separations will be where a sale of such separated portion has actually taken place, and been confirmed in all other cases of illegal separations, re-annexation should take place at once, and the whole estate should be held "Ijmalas," the entire property being held answerable for the entire Sudder Jumma.

It will be advisable for you to require the collector to report monthly on the progress made by him in the preparation of the new Kistbundles.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
your most obedient, humble servant,

TALOOK SHIBNARAIN GOOPT SYLHET.

Mr. Gordon, on the 25th of March, submitted copies of correspondence relating to the mode in which it is proposed to put in force the registration laws in the District of Sylhet, and that a doubt is expressed as to the meaning of the order communicated in the 9th paragraph of the Sudder Board's letter, "to register only specific and ascertained portions of original estates."

Mr. Collector Mytton, on the 25th March last, in acknowledging the receipt of Mr. Gordon's letter enclosing the order above referred to with regard to Talook Sheebnarain Goopt, and, with reference to the correspondence respecting the sale of that estate, directing him immediately to put in force the registration laws in order that Mr. Mytton should have a recorded proprietary body to deal with in the disposal of claims to fazilaut. The recent orders of the Board, extending the Provisions of Section IV., Regulation I. of 1801 to this District, render the complete registration of the proprietors of every state in the district an object of the first rate importance, and in order to effect this, Mr. Mytton's best endeavors should not be wanting.

Mr. Mytton had come to the conclusion that ordinary Dhakhil Karj proceedings, and recommending for fine by the Governor-General any person omitting to register transfers, will not answer the required purpose. Many transfers are of such a small portion of land, that it would not be worth the purchasers while to present a petition and incur the expenses of serving the Ishlahars, the payment of Registration fees, &c.

Mr. Mytton proposed to send copies of the present towjees to the Putwarries of the several zillahs, and require them to institute local enquiries respecting the names of the holders of the different talooks, and the proportions of jumma demandable from each. The information they will embody in the form of a statement, and on receiving it, Mr. Mytton will publish it in an Ishlahar in the particular pergunnah, and at the Sudder station, and all objections to this record will form the subject of a summary investigation.

Mr. Mytton requested that if the plan met with the Commissioner's approbation, he should sanction the temporary but immediate entertainment of two mohurirs on 7 rupees per mensem each, to prepare copies of the towjees, and by the time they have forwarded this work, the present busy time to the Putwarries of measurement will be over, and they will have leisure during the rains to perform the other part of the duty.

In the 9th paragraph of the Board's letter under notice, Mr. Mytton said, there is some obscurity, or rather that it is at variance with the tenor of the rest of the letter. It directs Mr. Mytton only to register specific and ascertained portions of original estates as three annas, two annas, &c., which is in fact only to register portions of estates divided by Butwarrah, whereas the rest of the letter evidently contemplates the registration of the name of every holder of Malgoozary land, be his portion adjusted by Butwarrah or not. The Board must, Mr. Mytton apprehended, intend to caution him against registering as distinct estates any portions, the partition of which has not been effected under the Butwarrah laws.

The Commissioner, in reply to Mr. Mytton, sanctioned the employment of the Mohurirs, and gave him other instructions of a minor nature.

TO THE COMMISSIONER OF DACCA.

Miscellaneous.

SIR,—The Sudder Board of Revenue having had before them your letter of the 25th March last, No. 71, direct me in reply to explain their views as follows.

In putting in force the registration laws in Sylhet, the Collector must be very cautious in observing the provisions of Clause 2, Section VII. Regulation XLVIII. of 1793, in order that illegally separated me hals may be registered as separate estates, independent of those of which they originally formed a part. He should also ascertain as carefully as possible and record the portion of each estate which each Shikmee Shercek or coparcener may hold, and the portion of the original jumma assigned to it if regularly separated.

When no specific portion of the Jumma has been sold, or otherwise transferred, the petty holders in actual possession must be registered in a lump as joint proprietors, and the whole of the estate considered responsible.

You will be pleased to instruct the Collectors to enforce to their utmost extent the provisions of Regulation XLVIII. of 1793 and VIII. of 1800, when he will be enabled to know the parties with whom he has to deal. He must also be informed that he will be held answerable that the Putwarries do not pervert the duty on which they are employed, viz. ascertaining who are the present occupants and holders of the lands, to the purpose of extortion.

When the Collector has ascertained the fact of actual possession, he need not make tedious summary enquiry, or take upon himself the office of a judge as such a procedure is no part of his duty. It will be sufficient to refer the parties claiming and opposed to his orders, to the Civil Courts to establish their right to the share claimed.

Finally, the Board will be glad to hear from time to time of the progress made in the renewal of the Registers.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your most obedient humble servant,

The Sudder Board of Revenue have recently had before them a communication from the Commissioner of Patna conveying information called for by the Board, on certain points connected with the sale of Mouzah Choelah, in reply to which the Board have informed the commissioner, that as the restored proprietor did not attend when summoned to adjust his accounts, they consider that he should be held responsible for the payment of interest to the purchaser at the cancelled sale. The board, however remark, that the istamut was essentially defective in as much as it did not mention for what purpose the proprietors were summoned, and as they were defaulters, they might have imagined, that some measure of severity was the object of the requisition for their attendance.

A circular has been issued for the information of collectors in substance as follows—that whenever a defaulting proprietor may be entitled to an adjustment of accounts during the attachment of his estates, previously to the land being brought to sale in liquidation of arrears, a notice written in the vernacular language of the district should be served on him, acquainting him that his attendance in person or by vakeel is required, at the collector's cutcherry, for the purpose of adjusting his accounts, and that in default of attention to the notice, the adjustment will be made in his absence. Further that serious responsibility will attach to any omission in this respect as tending to occasion all the difficulties and embarrassment consequent on a sale of land being reversed on the score of illegality.

The commissioner of Dacca has recently submitted copies of correspondence in connection with the Board's Circular Order No 55, dated 26th November 1836, and stated that although the difficulty of getting the land holders to sign the new kistbandy still exists, he is yet of opinion the obligation should not be dispensed with.

The Board in reply. The collector must make his arrangements for his own office, apportioning the payment of the kist after the principal harvest. When there is one but the payment of it should be after the ouse harvest, where there are two, after the ouse and amun, and where three, after the ouse, amun and miscellaneous crops. The time of each payment should be appointed by the collector according to local circumstances, so as to suit the convenience of the people.

In regard to signing the kistbandee, the Board consider that parties can affix their signature to printed kistbandees, as they come in to make payments of revenue, and that it is not necessary that they should be sent for on purpose.

In cases of sales for arrears, or in consequence of decree of court, the new proprietors will be required to sign the kistbandees as a matter of course.

On the subject of illegal separations, the Board direct that such separation should on no account be upheld. The only case that will justify the confirmation of an illegal separation will be where a sale of such separated portion has actually taken place and been confirmed, in all other cases of illegal separations, re-annexation should take place at once, and the whole estate should be held 'Ikmalte,' the entire property being held answerable for the entire sudder jumamah—Englishman, June 12.

Gentlemen, }

I have the honor to request that you will communicate to me the nature of the orders which have been issued to Special Deputy Collectors with regard to resumption cases decided before their appointments to their present offices, in order that I may be able to determine when the orders of this Commission in cases in appeal before it ought to be addressed to Collectors and when to the Special Deputy Collector.

The Special Deputy Collector of Burdwan, &c. appears to consider that he has no concern with the proceedings in appeal in cases decided by the Collectors or Deputy Collectors before his appointment, and I should imagine that in general it would be inconvenient that such cases should be removed from the Collector's offices, but when further investigation is considered necessary, which often involves as much labor as the original proceedings, it will probably be the intention of your Board that the cases shall pass through the office of the Special Deputy Collectors.

To the Commissioner of Revenue for the Division of

Mis. Dept. }

Sir, } I am directed to state that, in the opinion of the Sudder Board of Revenue, the proper time has arrived for taking effectual measures to substitute, as far as may be unobjectionably practicable, the English and vernacular languages for the Persian, in the business of the Revenue Department.

2nd. The subject naturally divides itself into two branches; 1st. The correspondence carried on by the Revenue Officers among themselves; and 2d, their communications with the people.

3d. It is the wish of the Sudder Board that the European Officers belonging to the Department, as well as the native officers who are qualified to do so, should carry on their Official Correspondence with each other in the English language only. English is strictly the language of the Revenue Department, and all the Revenue proceedings are forwarded in English to the superior authorities at home. Correctness and accuracy will also be promoted, and the influence of the corrupt Omra will be diminished by the circumstance that every draft will be either written or revised by the European Officer in his own language.

4th. You will therefore be pleased to instruct the European Officers subordinate to you to correspond with each other, as far as possible, in English, and whenever the want of leisure and of qualified Clerks prevent them from writing in English, the Board desire that they will write in the vernacular language of the district, whatever that may be. The Persian language is in no case to be used in correspondence between European Officers.

5th. All orders, whether original or passed on petitions or other papers, addressed to European Officers, must be invariably written in English.

6th. The other branch of the subject relates to the communications between the Revenue Officers and the people.

7th. As regards this division of the subject, the Board desire that all orders, advertisements, notices, summonses, in one word, all documents which are intended for the information of the people, be written in the vernacular language of the district, whatever that may be, and in no other.

8th. Petitions and other papers presented or sent to the Revenue Officers by the people, must, for the present, be equally received and attended to, whether they are written in the vernacular language, or in English, or in Persian.

CONSULTATION, — TUESDAY, 6TH JUNE, 1837.

RESUMPTION OF LAKHIRAJ LANDS RAJESHYE.

Mr. Special Deputy Collector W. P. Goad, on the 3d of April last, submitted through the Commissioner of his division, several observations with a view of obtaining their instructions as to the mode of proceeding he is to observe.

Section XII. Regulation III of 1828 declares, that the non-registry of a Lakhiraj Tenure in the manner prescribed by the regulation, renders such tenure liable to assessment. This law, Mr. Goad observed, is clear enough in its application in all Zillahs, where a regular Register exists; but in the several Zillahs included in his jurisdiction, he is at a loss to know how it is to apply. In Rajeshye, for instance, Mr. Goad says, a few Registers containing only 15,500 entries are to be found, almost entirely unauthenticated, and altered in numerous places; whereas, it is evident from examining an immense mass of old, worm-eaten papers, which are better than a heap of dust, that so many as 60,000 entries might have been made, had the Registers been duly prepared. The laches here, is evidently on the part of the Government servants, and it is hard to make the Lakhirajdar now suffer for their fault. The principle, Mr. Goad believes, is that the Lakhirajdar is to prove, that the non-registry of his sunnud was occasioned by the neglect of the collector, but the long lapse of years, has in most instances, removed all living witnesses; and fires and other accidents destroyed such documentary evidence as might have enabled him to prove his due observance of the law. This difficulty would have been easily overcome, had the Registers been properly prepared, but how, asks Mr. Goad, is he to act as the case stands? The owners of 16,500 tanures which have been duly registered, have the option of reference to the Register; but the remainder are totally deprived of such advantage. In Dinajpore and Rungpore the principal registers were burnt along with the Collector's cutcheries: the question therefore is, how is the non-registry principle to be applied where it is difficult, nay impossible, to decide on whom the charge of laches is to be fixed.

Mr. Commissioner Hawkins, in forwarding Mr. Goad's letter to the Board, entirely concurred in attaching the laches to Government, and bore out the destruction of the Dinajpore and Rungpore Registers by fire, also the fact of only 16,500 registries having been made out of 60,000.

Mr. Hawkins further stated, that on receipt of Mr. Goad's letter, he asked that gentleman to know, whether he did not derive some assistance from this number of the Register, and the Collector's initials appearing on the sunnud purporting to convey the grant. That gentleman's reply showed that the circumstances alluded to will not materially assist him in the investigation, as he apprehends that none of the sunnuds will be found to have been signed by the Collector, and that the numbers on them cannot be depended on.

The only thing that struck the Commissioner as likely to supply the deficiencies in the offices of the several Collectors of the Division, is that copies of the Lakhiraj registers of Rajeshye, Rungpore, and Dinajpore may possibly be found in the Karkoon Duffer at the presidency.

Should none such be forthcoming, Mr. Hawkins would not recommend a better course, than to direct the Special Deputy Collector to put aside altogether the question of Registry, and decide every case on its merits independently of that particular point. It would scarcely be just, Mr. Hawkins observed, to call upon a man to prove that his sunnud had been registered, and proceed to resumption, in failure of such evidence, when the means of proof were placed in the hands of the Government officers, and are not now forthcoming.

To J. HAWKINS, Esq.,

Commissioner of Bhauleah.

Miscellaneous.

Sir, — In reply to your letter of the 9th April last, I am directed to transmit copy of a report, which has been furnished by the native officer in charge of the Karkoon Duffer. If any further information indicated by this report to be forthcoming, is required, it shall on your application be immediately furnished.

With regard to the course of proceeding to be adopted in consequence of the total, or partial destruction of the Registered sunnuds, I am directed to observe, that in Dinajpore and Rungpore, where the Registers have been burnt, the case is clear. The penalty for a non-registry cannot be enforced, against those who may declare they have registered, or against whom no doubt exists of non-registry, and the cases must be enquired into and decided accordingly.

In Rajeshye further explanation is needed. There are registers there it appears, containing upwards of 16,500 entries, but the evidence on which it is presumed, that there might have been many more entries made, than actually exist, is not stated with sufficient clearness. You are requested to call on Mr. Goad for a more particular explanation of that portion of his letter dated

"It is evident from examining an immense mass of worm-eaten papers, which are little better than a heap of dust, that as many as 60,000 entries might have been made, had the Register been duly prepared."

SALE OF MOUZA CHEELA—SAHABAD.

Mr. Commissioner Davidson, of Patna, on the 2nd of April last, submitted a copy of a report from the Collector of Shahabad, furnishing information respecting Mouza Cheela, called for by the Board on the 21st April 1836.

Mr. Collector Taylor, in reference to the records of the office, stated that it does not appear that any reply was ever made to a letter referred to by the Board, and he therefore would proceed to furnish the required.

The queries put by the Board were as follow:—

"Whether any process was issued requiring the defaulting Proprietor to attend for the adjustment of accounts; and, whether any and what adjustment of accounts took place in consequence of the measures adopted by the Collector as mentioned in paragraph 6, of his letter of the 25th May 1835?"

To the former Mr. Taylor replied in the affirmative, and, as directed in the Board's letter, enclosed the original italanamah, or notice issued on the 4th May 1836, for the attendance of all the parties, and the Nazir's return to the same, reporting that the Suzawul was present, but that the Proprietors were not to be found. On the face of it an istithar was also issued warning the latter to appear within the term of eight days, or on failure, that their case would be thrown out, but that up to this date nothing further has been heard of them.

In reply to the latter query, he added that the proprietors having failed to appear on the above notices, no adjustment of accounts has as yet taken place.

TO THE COMMISSIONER OF PATNA.

Miscellaneous.

SIR—The Sudder Board of Revenue having had before them your letter, No. 80, dated the 22d ultimo, I am directed to inform you that as the restored proprietor of Mouzah Cheela did not attend when summoned to adjust his accounts, they consider that he should be held responsible for the payment of interest to the purchaser at the cancelled sale, and you will be pleased to instruct the collector of Shahabad accordingly.

The Board, however, direct me to remark, that the italanamah was essentially defective, in as much as it did not mention for what purpose the proprietors were summoned; and as they were defaulters, they might have imagined that some measure of severity was the object of requisition for their attendance.

SALE OF THE RIGHTS OF GOVERNMENT TO AMANUT INVALID LANDS—BHADOLPORE.

Mr. Commissioner Brown, of Bhadulpore, submitted to the Board, on the 5th of April last, copies of several reports made to him by Mr. H. C. Hamilton, the officer in charge of the Khas and resumed mahals in that district, relative to the proposed sale of the rights of Government as maliks, or proprietors of sundry portions of amanut invalid lands scattered over a vast number of estates in Purgunnah Bhagulpore, Chye, Furkeeah, Colgaug, &c.

* Vide Circulars of the Sudder Board of Revenue, dated 24th Aug. 1830.

Mr. Brown, on the 21st of February last, brought this subject to the notice of the Board in transmitting a similar proposition from Mr. Hamilton for the sale of lands in like predicament, situated in Pergunnahs Carey and Jehungyah, but the reports since received from Mr. Hamilton and now submitted on the orders of the Board, have induced Mr. Brown to reconsider the matter, and he now sees reason to believe, that if Mr. Hamilton's proposition can be complied with consistently with the instructions issued by Government on the 27th July 1830*, it will be the best course that can be devised for the good of the state.

The quantity of land alluded to in the reports now forwarded, is 10,754 beegahs, which are scattered over an area of 156 distinct villages; there being in many villages not more than one or two beegahs, in some less even than that; and in others five hundred beegahs and upwards. But the whole so dispersed, and (with regard to the waste lands particularly) so divided into small, insignificant patches apart from each other, and the soil of each varying with its locality, that it is no easy matter to form an assessment which will in future stand good, or admit of being efficiently controlled.

It further appears, that that these lands have yielded Government no return, since the time they were purchased from the original Zemindar, and that no persons are willing to come forward and take a temporary lease of them; as an order to reap a profit it will be necessary in the first instance, to incur a considerable outlay in order to bring the waste portions into cultivation.

The arrangement now proposed by Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Brown believes, the only one calculated to yield without further trouble or expense, a certain revenue to the state, and Mr. Brown therefore recommends it, if it be feasible, for the approval of the Board.

TO THE COMMISSIONER OF BHADOLPORE.

Miscellaneous.

SIR,—The Sudder Board of Revenue having had before them your letter, No. 786, of the 5th April last, direct me to observe, that they are sensible of the great inconvenience of managing small estates scattered over a considerable extent of country; but the recommendation to dispose of them by sale is inconsistent with the principal of the orders of the Court of Directors, and of the Governor on the subject. There is, consequently, no alternative but that of granting leases of 20 years, which should be on a progressively increasing jumma, when the lands require any outlay to bring them into a state of cultivation, as pointed out in their orders of the 4th April last.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

ABSTRACT

Reply to 9th May, No. 90—Forwards copy of Correspondence on the disuse of the Persian language.

(COPIES.)

No 52.

TO COMMISSIONERS 1ST TO 5TH DIVISIONS AND DEHLEE REVENUE.

Sir,—The Sudder Board of Revenue, North Western Provinces, having carefully watched the progress and result of the experiment of adopting the Hindoostanee language as the medium of official transactions in the Revenue Department, in the districts in which the attempt has been made, are satisfied that the time for abandoning the Persian in favor of the vernacular idiom has fully arrived.

2. We have no law, the Board observe, which requires the maintenance of Persian as a language of record in the Revenue Department. All the oral communications of the Revenue officers of every class with the people, are in the vernacular dialect.

It is obviously desirable that all the records and written communications, should be in the same language, similarly intelligible to the great body of the people, and affording to them every facility of free intercourse with their European masters.

3. In the Revenue Department, in which so much information and assistance is to be obtained from the people themselves; in which a congruity of the principles and practice of the administration which their usages and opinions is so much to be desired; and in which a popular mode of introducing and conducting any measure, or the contrary, so materially affects its failure or success; the adoption of their familiar idiom as the medium of transacting official business throughout the whole department, cannot fail to produce satisfactory result.

4. The Board observe, that from its first introduction the change can be either inconvenient or irksome to two classes of persons only. These are, the native officers, who have become accustomed to read and write in Persian, and will dislike any departure from an established and habitual routine; and the European officers, to whom at first, the unfamiliarity of the Omlah with Hindoostanee as a written language, and the consequent change to slowness and hesitation from ease and rapidity of communication, will create some loss of time and increase of trouble.

5. The Board trust that there is no officer under their superintendence, who would not indignantly repudiate the idea of holding the most interesting concerns of a whole people fettered in the trammels of a foreign tongue, and debarring the population from understanding the orders and arrangements which involve the very continuance of their most cherished property, for the mere sake of saving himself a little temporary extra trouble.

6. For the native officers, they must be made to understand, that their continuance in office, and the favor of their employers, depends on their exerting themselves with energy and good faith, to carry through a plan so obviously fraught with advance to their countrymen.

7. The Board propose that the Persian character shall be retained, at any rate for the present, except in those very few districts, Bundelcund perhaps, in which the Nagree has obtained an established and almost universal currency.

8. The Board wish you to understand and to explain to the officers under your control, that it is not the mere substitution of Hindoe verbs and affixes, while the words and idiom remain exclusively Persian, which they desire to see adopted. They desire that every paper shall be written in the phrase, in which a well-spoken respectable man, altogether unacquainted with Persian would express himself.

9. The Board trust that the European officers, and especially the Native Deputies, will watch and set themselves against the attempts of the Omlah, to keep up a foreign jargon, almost as unintelligible to the people as that which they have forsaken, and oblige them in all cases to use their best endeavours to write as they would speak. Especially they trust, both the European officers and Native deputies, will themselves set them the example of recording their meaning in brief and simple terms. They are satisfied if this be carefully attended to, that instead of the long, circumlocutory, pedantic sentences in which their ignorance of Persian obliges the Omlah to conceal their poverty of language under an exuberance of formal phrases, learnt by rote, simplicity, brevity, and precision may soon be attained.

10. The Board have often been struck with the facility, felicity, and force with which a common zemindar would express himself, contrasted with the farrago by which, a Persian deposition-writer would misrepresent his discourse.

11. A little attention to this matter will speedily abbreviate the prevalent, useless, and wearisome lengthiness of official records and writings, and amply compensate for the time and pains devoted to effect so desirable an object.

12. The Board desire that the district authorities should give every possible encouragement to those native officers, who heartily co-operate with them in carrying through this alteration, and mark with their displeasure those, who, by neglect or perverseness, impede or thwart these efforts. The change is to commence from the month of October (or Koor) next, from which date every official paper is to be written in the Hindoostanee language and Persian character throughout the Revenue Department both Sudder and Mofussil.

13. I forward herewith an Ishtahar to which you are requested to give full publicity in your own and the Collectors' Offices, setting forth that applications to the Board from the date above-mentioned, are to be in the Hindoostanee language, and in the Persian or Nagree character, and the order thereon will be engrossed in the language and character of the petition.

SIR,—From a letter received by the Collector of this district, I learn that the Sudder Board of Revenue have directed the introduction of the Hindustani language into the Revenue Department from the month of Koar next.

2d.—I should be very happy to think that this order, though it has not been communicated for my guidance, is equally applicable to my office. The provisions in Clause I., Sec. VI. Regulation II. 1819, that proclamations are to be written in Persian as well as Hindoostani, and in Sec. XX. of the same Regulation, as well as in Sec. IX., Regulation III. 1828, that the final roobucaries are to be in Persian, may however stand in the way of so desirable a change in the Lakhraj department.

3d. In these circumstances I beg to be instructed how to proceed.

Revenue.

SIR,—I have the honor to acknowledge your Circular No. 49, dated 29th July, regarding the discontinuance of the Persian language in the Revenue Department.

2. The Board are probably aware that the change from Persian to Oordoo or Hindoostanee has been already made in these territories. I annex copy of a letter, addressed by me to Government on the 29th October last; and of the instructions issued to the district officers in consequence of the permission given, date 21st November, 1835. For the last seven months the business, including trials in Sessions forwarded to the Nizamut, of every sort, has been conducted in Oordoo.

3. The next question is the character which should be employed. In these territories Persian, either language or character, is utterly unknown, and the consequence of its introduction has been the almost entire exclusion of the natives of these parts from official situations. The late Commissioner denied this, and stated that of 578 officers 265 were native of the country; but in order to swell the latter item, all Kanoongoes, Hindes and Maratta Naweesses, which three must almost necessarily be natives of these parts; Gunga Jullees, Moolla Kooranees, down to Jemadars of Police, whose pay is under 5 rupees a month, are included. The item is almost made up of these classes, and contains very few of the superior grades. The Maratta language and character is, excepting among a few of the country people in Seonee and Baitool, as foreign to the majority of the inhabitants of these territories as Persian: with the above exception, the only people acquainted with that language are the remnant of Mahratta officers and pundits to be found in some of the towns.

4. The Deva Nagree is universally written and understood; and I have accordingly been making every effort to introduce it into our courts, in which I have been zealously seconded by several of the subordinate officers. We have adopted a system of encouragement by publicity, noticing and praising in court those of the old omlah who have arrived at any proficiency, at the same time intimating that those who will not learn must make way for others. Nearly half the business of the whole territories is now conducted in Nagree, even roobukarees are written in it; and so far from realizing the anticipation of the late Commissioner, that the attempt would lead to the discharge of all the existing native omlah, not a man has been discharged yet on this account; and probably not a dozen in the whole territories will be discharged, and those old, worn-out men who are unfit for service of any sort.

5. The people are delighted at the change, and at being able to write their own petitions, and to understand the papers they receive from the office. In some of the Civil Courts of the Sudder Ameen the business is wholly in Nagree, i. e. where the Sudder Ameen is a man whose original education was in Sanscrit or Nagree: the others, whose original education was in Persian and who have only lately learnt Nagree, are allowed to write the final robakaree and the evidence of witnesses, provided they themselves write these in the Persian character for the present, all other papers being in Nagree. The prospect of employment added to the establishment of Government schools, has wonderfully increased the desire for education; so much so, that even the chuprassess and other inferiors about the Court are now learning to read. This feeling would not exist were the Persian character adopted; first, because it is disliked as foreign; and secondly, because it is a much more difficult character than the Nagree.

6. This, it may be observed, is against the general opinion which is formed from the facility with which Persian writers read and write official papers, and the slowness of a Hindes reader. But the comparison has never been fairly made; we forget that the Persian writers had been for hours daily reading and writing Persian for from 20 to 40 years; while the Hindes writers, from there being no demand for that knowledge, merely learn a little as boys and scarcely look at writing above once a week afterwards on an average. If any one doubts that it is practice and not the superiority of the Persian which enabled the writers of that language to display such rapidity, he has only to try the experiment in calling for one of the inferior mohurrirs of an office, who performs his duty in the duffur as a copyist so as to give entire satisfaction, and desire him to sit down in Court to read off petitions and write the orders dictated or to take depositions: he will find the man utterly unable to do any thing of the sort without some practice.* I enclose, to show what progress we have made, several

* I have always made a point of doing this occasionally, in order to break them in and render them au fait so as not to delay business, in the event of one of the superior Omlah being ill or on leave.

Nagree papers written by different individuals of this office, none of whom ever looked at a Nagree letter until a few months ago. I much doubt whether men would be able to write proceedings in the Persian character granting their own vernacular language, in so short a time. The Board would have been astonished to have seen the manner in which our Nagree writers in Gurwall read off petitions and wrote the orders passed upon them.

7. I grant that all this has not been effected without some trouble or tact. Not only have we had opposition to encounter from the existing Omlah, but I have not received that assistance from one or two of the officers which I might have expected. One advantage is, that, excepting Major Low and his assistant Lieut. Browne, every English officer of the division is acquainted with Nagree; and with the exception of Lieut. Cornish and Captain Murray, who have only joined a few months, are good scholars; particularly Mr. McLeod. All these have strenuously aided the object in view. Still it requires constant attention to prevent the old Omlah adopting the Persian idiom in their writings. The native Omlah have been one and all opposed to any part of the new system. They dislike to give up the Persian because this breaks up their monopoly, and they are averse to the change of character because, naturally enough, they do not like the trouble of learning a new one. The opposition has, I have reason to believe, been fostered by an idea that I was only officiating, or that the whole affair was only a fancy of mine, and that I should probably be succeeded by an officer who would revert to the good old system of conducting the business in a language neither understood by governors or governed. The promulgation of the Board's orders now under consideration, has dispelled this idea, and has had great effect in reconciling them to the new order of things.

8. To give the Board an instance of the opposition that has been carried on, I may state that for a considerable time after the permission had been given to present petitions in Nagree, they were nevertheless all written in the Persian character. Being surprised at this, I one day questioned some respectable looking people whether they could write, and on receiving a reply that they could write Nagree very well, why they did not write their own petitions instead of paying a petition-writer; discovered that the Omlah and petition-writers who were connected with the former had given out that although the language might be Oordoo the character must be Persian, in order to preserve their monopoly.

9. It would be a grand step towards the improvement of the people of India in every point of view, could we adopt one language and one character. The English Officers would then be able to learn to do what very few can now; that is read and understand themselves the proceedings which they sign. There can be little doubt that ere long the Oordoo or Hindoostanee will be the language of the whole of the Government Courts and Offices of the Bengal and Agra presidencies, excepting Bengal proper and Orissa. Why should not the character of the people, i. e. the Nagree, be introduced also. It is probable even now that for one who understands the Persian character ten are acquainted with the Nagree. The majority of those who fill the Government Offices are Hindoos, most of them Kaitis, who cannot possibly have any hereditary respect or feeling in favor of Persian: (the wish to maintain it in order to preserve their monopoly is a very different question) they would soon acquire that which was declared to be the road to employment.

10. Doubtless, now that Hindoostanee is to be the language of the Courts, more will learn the Persian character than was the case formerly: many will learn a character in the hope of employment who could not afford time or money to learn a foreign language: still the members that will acquire a foreign character will be infinitely less than those who will learn their vernacular. What a check the existence of two characters opposes to the publication of books for the information of the people; since in many instances the expense of a double publication would not be repaid; whereas if the whole edition were in one character, it might cover its own expense. If Government were only to intimate that after a certain time (a year or eighteen months or two years) the whole business should be carried on in Nagree, it would, I am convinced, be carried into effect with scarce any changes in the Offices: particularly if some public mark of approbation, such as Neknasee Purnannah, or Khilluts and turbans were to be bestowed on those who qualified themselves before the prescribed time.

11. The objections to the Nagree are, that it is written slowly: I have only to express my conviction that when the writers shall have had equal practice, they will write it as fast as Oordoo can be written in the Persian character, or as quickly as English; and even if it should take a little more time, if this have the effect of reducing the voluminousness of our proceedings, it will be extremely beneficial. Another more solid objection is the variety of letters used and the establishment of a recognized Orthography. These defects may be easily obviated. With respects to the first, we have already succeeded in these territories. I enclose a paper A, which I drew up and circulated to all those in this part of the country who were competent to give an opinion. After receiving their replies I drew up and circulated the paper B, and the alphabet therein contained is now that of our offices and schools, and is gradually spreading among the people.

12. A recognized orthography does exist, only the mass of the people are too ill-educated to be properly acquainted with it, and too poor to buy grammars and dictionaries. To obviate this, I am now, in conjunction with Mr. Macleod (and perhaps some others may assist) preparing a vocabulary of some six or eight thousand words, which will be enough for common practice to begin with, and which I intend to print at my own expense should the Education Committee decline the work. My next step will be to procure the translation of some easy works of instruction for the benefit of the people. What an advantage it would be if Government and the Education Committee would patronize the alphabet and orthography so as to make it general. It might without delay be introduced among putwarees, Kanoongoes and Village Schools.

13. At any rate I hope I shall have authority to complete the general introduction of the Nagree character into the courts and offices of this division. The copy of the proclamation mentioned in your 13th paragraph of circular No. 52, did not accompany the letter.

I have the honor to be, &c.

Judl. Civil.

SIR,—I beg now to offer my opinion on another of the propositions contained in Mr. Bird's report on the state of these provinces, dated 31st Oct. 1834, viz. the substitution of Hindoostanee for Persian as the language of the Courts and Offices: it is alluded to in the 66th, 69th and 70th paragraphs of the report in question.

2. I beg to intimate my entire concurrence in Mr. Bird's proposition, and in the statements on this point made in the report. To conduct the business of any country in its own vernacular language and character, is so prima facie, consistent with common sense and justice to the inhabitants, while the introduction of a foreign language and character is completely the reverse, that very cogent reasons indeed must be adduced in support of the latter.

3. The evils of such a course have been great all over India; the consequence of having two languages to learn are, that neither are learnt correctly by the English functionaries, very few of whom could transact business, without the assistance of Natives to read, explain, and write for them; all which tends to introduce what Mr. Bird justly and aptly calls the "Juggle of the Kutcherie; and to make the English functionary virtually of secondary importance to the native Omrah.

4. In those parts of the country in which before our acquisition the official language had been Persian, there might be some plea for retaining it; but here it was positively unknown; the business in these provinces was transacted in Hindoostanee and Mahratta in the Devanagree and Mahratta, (which is only a variety of the former) character; but no sooner did we acquire these districts than we introduced the Persian language and character; which has had the effect of filling all the higher situations with a set of harpies from the provinces, some of whom would never have been employed at all there; and few of whom would ever have been placed in any but inferior situations; to the almost entire exclusion of all the inhabitants of this part of the country.

5. Mr. Bird's assertion that a very pure Hindoostanee is spoken in these provinces is as far I have been able to ascertain perfectly correct: I have had communication with people from every province without finding any difficulty in understanding them or making myself understood. There are certain insulated words in use here which are unknown in the Regulation Provinces, but these are soon learnt; they appear to be a remnant of the old Hinddee; and it is a curious circumstance that many of these words are current in the Himalayah districts of Gurhwall Kamaon, and are quite familiar to me.* All the people to whom I have spoken, express great delight at the prospect of a change; and a hope that the change will not only be made in the language, but that the Dewanagree will be substituted for the Persian character. Some of the wild tribes of Goonds certainly have a peculiar dialect, but to object on that score to the use of Hindoostanee, seems like objecting to the use of English in England, because the Welsh and the Highlanders speak a different dialect.

6. I would therefore propose to introduce the Hindoostanee as the official language; and to prevent delay in business to do it gradually: the petition writers who attend about the offices should be instructed to write all the petitions in Hindoostanee; it should next be introduced into the short orders, roobakaries, depositions and particularly the longer roobakaries.

7. I hope to see this followed by the general substitution of the Dewanagree for the Persian character, but at least with respect to the last two documents. I would urgently beg permission to make the change, the people would then know what orders were issued to them. At present a Chuprassee is sent in to a district with a notification, or order to arrest certain persons, search their homes, &c.; he may do almost what he pleases with his perwanah as his ensign, for neither he himself nor perhaps a single soul in the whole pergunnah or for miles round, can read a word of it. The Dewanagree used here is in general very well and clearly written; papers and petitions are even at present constantly presented in that character; and even two of the seven independent Chiefs attached to this Agency, besides several of those who, though subject to the Courts, are privileged to send letters on business, usually do so in Hindoostanee and Nagree. Although the Persian language is in its own character written more quickly than Hindoostanee; the latter is as quickly written in Nagree as in the Persian character. It would require no additional establishment; merely an intimation to the existing native Amleh that they must learn the Nagree or make way for others, as has been proved by those of my own office, who have begun to learn it on my only expressing a wish that they should do so. In Kamaon almost the whole business was conducted in Hindoostanee and Nagree without any difficulty.

8. I am aware that some petty difficulties would be found at first; the natives having never written their own language would often use the Persian idiom; and it would be some little time before they would write the new language as quickly as they did the former one, but all these would soon be smoothed; and should Government consent to allow the experiment to be made, the result would probably be productive of more benefits than are at first easily imagined.

SIR,—The sanction of Government having been obtained to the gradual introduction of the use of the Hindoostanee in lieu of Persian as the Official language in the Saugor and Nerbudda territories, the following memoranda are forwarded by way of rules for carrying this object into effect.

2. In order to prevent delay in business it must be done gradually; in the first instance all petitions should be written in Hindoostanee; after a little time it may be adopted in short orders, roobakaries, and depositions; particularly in perwanahs, and written orders sent into the interior of the districts, and finally the longer papers and roobakaries will be written in Hindoostanee.

Second. Communications to Courts in the Regulation Provinces had for the present better be written in Persian.

Third. The Persian character will for the present be retained but the whole of the Omlah are to be distinctly told that they must learn to read and write the Dewanagree; a little pains should be taken to teach them to write clearly, and above all to introduce the English custom of writing every word separately instead of running them all into one another. As soon as it can possibly be effected, all perwanahs, orders or notifications, &c. sent into the interior, are to be written only in the Dewanagree character.

Fourthly. As soon as the Omlah are qualified to read them, the people should be encouraged to give petitions in the Dewanagree character, which will enable them often to transact their own business instead of being at the mercy of an office petition-writer.

3. It is probable that some petty difficulties will be found at first; the natives who understand Persian having seldom written their own language will often in attempting to do so, make use of the Persian idiom and Persian words, to obviate which they should be urged to write as they would speak. They will not perhaps at first write the Hindoostanee as quickly as they will the Persian. To conclude, however, the business of any country in its own vernacular language and character, is so prima facie consistent with common sense and justice to the inhabitants, while the introduction of a foreign language and character is completely the reverse, that very cogent reasons must indeed be adduced in support of the latter. I confidently anticipate your cordial assistance, and it is probable that the result of the experiment will be productive of more benefits than are at first easily imagined.

SIR,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 84, dated 30th ultimo, with enclosures reporting the progress that has been made in the territories under your superintendence in the substitution of the vernacular for the Persian as the language of business.

The report is extremely satisfactory, and I am desired to inform you, that you are fully authorized to use the Dewanagree character, and that the Board never contemplated the employment of any other in the Saugor and Nerbudda Territories. They considered the measure enjoined by their circular of the 29th July for the N. W. Provinces to have been already carried into effect in Saugor, and for that reason the circular was merely transmitted for your information.

I am desired by the Board to transmit for promulgation throughout your division, a proclamation in the Dewanagree character to the effect that the Sudder Board will receive all petitions presented in Hindoostanee in the Nagree character, and that the orders passed on such petitions will be in the same language and character.

2d. Under the provisions of clause 2, sec. VII. and XV. of Reg. XI. of 1822, it would appear that the Persian language cannot legally be dispensed with in advertising lands for sale or in recording the particulars of the sale when effected.

3d. I also beg to be favored with instructions regard ing the language in which all judicial investigations conducted by Revenue Officers under the Provisions of Regs. II of 1819 and III. of 1828 should be recorded, since the Persian language would appear to be distinctly prescribed by sec. XX. and XXI. Reg. II. of 1819.

SIR, In reply to your letter No. 214 of the 4th instant, I am desired to request you will authorize the Officiating Collector of Futehpore to procure the required printed advertisements in the Hindoostanee language and the Persian and Nagree characters. As the word language is not used with reference to the Western Provinces, and Nagree is the name of a character not of a language, it is to be presumed the term Persian refers to the character also.

The proceeding required by sec. 15 Reg. XI. of 1822, may likewise be written in the Hindoostanee language, it being intended solely for the authorities in the Revenue Department by whom the use of Persian has been dispensed with.

The Board's orders directing the abandonment of Persian in the Revenue Department are not applicable to proceedings under Regs. II. of 1819 and III. of 1828 which must follow the rules laid down for judicial processes, with which neither the Sudder Board nor Commissioner have any concern.

CONSULTATION,—MAY 30, 1837.

DELINQUENT TREASURER OF THE JESSORE COLLECTORATE.

Mr. Commissioner Pigou, on the 1st April last, addressed the Board, stating that on the 25th January 1833, the Sudder Board directed that the heirs of the sureties^{*} of Cossenath Bunnerjee, late treasurer of the Jessore Collectorate, could not be held responsible for the amount embezzled by the said treasurer, and the only reason Mr. Pigou can discover (and a very valid one it is in his judgment) on which that decision could be founded, is, that by the terms of the security bond, the liability does not rest upon the heirs of the parties exacting the deed, they must be considered exempt from the responsibility.

The Sudder Board, however, having on the 23d May last come to a totally different determination upon this same point, Mr. Pigou felt himself precluded from adopting any course of proceeding until he was favored with further instructions. A copy of the security bond was transmitted by Mr. Pigou with a remark that the heirs of these securities do still possess property which can be proved to have belonged to them at the securities period of their decease.

With reference to the Board's orders of the 19th December last, informing the Commissioner that he is competent to pass orders relative to the sureties of the late treasurer, Mr. Pigou observed that the case was brought under the notice of the Board, in his letter of the 6th June, 1835, in consequence of a reference from the Collector of the 20th May preceding, soliciting instructions as to the proportions which the different sureties should respectively bear in liquidating the amount embezzled, and that on this point he has not as yet been favored with orders.

To H. M. PROOV, Esq., Commissioner of Jessore.

Miscellaneous.

SIR,—The Sudder Board having had before them your letter No. 150, dated the 1st ultimo, on the subject of the responsibility of the sureties of Cossinath Bonnerjee, direct me to enquire whether their orders of the 23d May 1836, in the case of the sureties of Loharam Mookerjee have been carried into effect.

At the time the orders of the 25th January 1833, were issued in the case of Cossinath Bonnerjee, it appeared that three security bonds had been given: viz., one by Berjkishur Moojoomdar, Doorgapersaud Chowdree, and Bimonath Bose, conjointly, in which they do not bind their heirs or pledge any specific property; the second by Radamohun Chowdree, binding his heirs, and the third by Prannath Chowdree, in the same terms as the second. It was with respect to the first, that the Board ruled, that they could not demand payment from the heirs of the sureties. But this did not interdict the attachment of any property which might be proved, to have belonged exclusively to the surety up to the date of his death.

The security bond; which was enclosed in your letter of the 1st November last, executed by Rajas Bunnee Kant, and Goopeneauth, does bind their heirs. The orders issued by the Board on the 23d May last, are not, therefore, at variance with the former orders, and there is no reason why you should not act up to them.

In reply to the last paragraph of your letter, I am directed to observe, that where several individuals are jointly and severally, and without separate specification of responsibility, liable, they are each liable to the whole extent. But of course the public officer enforcing the responsibility, will, from a sense of equity and partiality, endeavour, by making all responsible, to levy the amount in rateable proportions, although one individual could legally be made responsible for the whole amount to the exemption of the others.

You will be pleased to use every exertion to realize in the mode indicated, the dues of Government from all the estates on parties answerable for the same, reporting the result of your measures in six weeks from this date.

I have the honor to be Sir,

Your most obdt. humble servant,

CONSULTATION,—6TH JUNE, 1837.

KHALARY REMISSIONS—JESSORE.

Mr. Officiating Collector Donelly of Jessore, on the 13th April 1836, addressed Mr. Commissioner Pigou in reply to his predecessor's letter of the 21st April, 1834, which Mr. Donelly says, remained unanswered thus long, in order that the Zemindars might have every opportunity of bringing forward their proofs, and to prevent any excuse on their part at a future period. Mr. Donelly offered them months ago, every assistance in his power to procure hopes from the Sherishta; but the only document discovered, which they appeal to in support of their claim, is a report of Mr. Cunningham to the Board of Revenue, enclosing a statement of the Sudder Revenue of Essupore, the Zemindar of Rajah Sree Kaunt Roy, as appointed on the different Pergunnahs of the estate from their actual produce during the years 1,200 and 1,201 B. S. of which and of the reply of the Board thereto Mr. Donelly forwarded copies.

The letter of Mr. Cunningham was erroneously dated as it ought to have been, 1796 A. D. instead of 1766.

Mr. Donelly has compared the figured statement of the Board with the Tahood of the whole of the Raja Sree Kunt's property, dated 1297, B. S., and finds that the remissions on account of Khalaree rents in the Tahood amount to sicca rupees 9,000. His estate was subsequently partitioned and sold in 1203 B. S., in conformity with the report of Mr. Cunningham above alluded to. The statement forwarded by him, was, as he mentions, in his letter made up from the papers furnished by the Putwarries, and contains item of sicca rupees 10,843-10—remissions on account of Khalaree rents. But as in the Tahood of 1197, B. S., for the whole estate 9,000 sicca rupees above was deducted. Under this head Mr. Donelly concludes, under the Board's letter, that sicca rupees 1843-14, must be considered as rent for Khalary lands, not as a compensation for the loss suffered by proprietors, in consequence of the Company's monopoly of the salt manufacture, and consequently that when the manufacture of salt on those lands ceases, so ought the rent.

Assuming this to be the case, Mr. Donelly has endeavoured to ascertain, what Pergunnahs of the whole estate have enjoyed the remission of the 9,000 rupees from 1188. The statement forwarded by the Board shows that Essupore and Koymungle i. e. the whole estate of the Raja, had a remission of 9,000 rupees up to 1201, when it appears to have increased in the exact amount regarding which Mr. Donelly now writes, and for which no authority is to be found save Mr. Cunningham's statement based on the report of interest putwarries. In 1203, 9,000 sicca rupees again appears in Roymungul and new items of 212. In Bagulpore sicca rupees 60. In Nonaugur sicca rupees 1287-1-15 in Mallia sicca rupees 394-12-5 in Rungluah, but in 1204 Roymungul decreases to 7,106-13-7-2, and with the exception of 1208, which Mr. Donelly fancies must be an error, continues at this rate up to 1225, the last year of the statement, why, Mr. Donelly could not state, unless it were to make out a prima facie case for the Pergunnahs Bagutpore, Neerungur, Mallia, and Rangdua, as up to the present time the proprietor Roymungul receives in cash from the Jessore treasury sicca rupees 1,893-2-12-2, which, added to the other sum of sicca rupees 7,106-13-7-2, makes exactly sicca rupees 9,000—the amount entered in the column for 1203 B. S., and in the original Tahood, of the whole property. By referring to the copy of Mr. Cunningham's statement, it will be perceived that there were no musasil collections whatsoever in Roymungul Pergunnah, which induces Mr. Donelly to believe, that this sum of 9,000 rupees was granted on account of the Company's monopoly, and that the proprietors of Roymungul are entitled to the whole amount under this head.

The balance of sicca rupees 2,843-14, received by the holders of the other Pergunnahs of the Rajah's estate, being a surplus amount above the 9,000 rupees, Mr. Donelly considers merely rent of land for Khalarees; and as the proprietors have not been able to shew any document by which they have been declared entitled to a perpetual remission, Mr. Donelly has, under that part of the Board's orders, referring to clause 13, Section ix., Regulation I. of 1824, directed the remission to be discontinued from the close of 1242 B. S., and would submit for the consideration of the Board, whether if any decisions regarding these sums be correct, the amount remitted since the manufacture of salt, was discontinued in this district, ought not to be recovered from the several zemindars. Bagulpore having been transferred to the 24-Pergunnahs, Mr. Donelly has written to the Collector, requesting him to discontinue the remission. The statement of the Board does not regularly up to 1225 B. S., shew the remission granted to Mallia and Rungdua, nor the sum paid in cash to the proprietor of Roymungul,—how this happened is left for the consideration of the Board. Those proprietors, who were in fear of their remission being discontinued, may have caused these omissions through the amlah, in the hope that as a reference to the grand total would shew a decrease, this would prevent the authorities from making any further enquiries. Mr. Donelly further mentions, that there is not any note of the sums now discontinued by him in the Tahoods of the Pergunnahs executed 1233 B. S., after the subdivision of the Rajah's property.

Cheeroobia and Mohdoodhees shew a decrease in 1225. Myhutti has been transferred to the 24-Pergunnahs. The remission in Syedpour shews the same amount through the whole series of years under review up to 1225; those on account Jamsara are sicca rupees 817-10-30-3 in 1206, and 2,661-4-10-3 in 1201 B. S., but in the same year sicca rupees 1843-9 is stopped in Myhatty and Jamsarah, so that this increase is accounted for and continues to 1225. Pygotty and Angurpoo-rah have been transferred to the 24-Pergunnahs. In 1208 sicca rupees 107-12 appear for the first time as a remission to Talbooneesh; but in the same year this amount was deducted from Cheerootea, Modhoodea, and remains so to the last year of the statement.

In conclusion Mr. Donnelly remarked, that from 1196 to 1200, the grand total of remissions keeps at the same amount. In 1201 B. S. it rises without any apparent cause to 21,014-12-4-3 and again sinks in 1204 to rupees 17,277-11-3—and in the next year again rises to 17,539-11-13, at which amount it stands in 1225. If the sum of 1,727-11-13 be added the sicca rupees 1893-2-12-2 amount of cash paid from this collectorate to the proprietor of Roymungul, we have the exact amount of the total remissions from 1196 to 1200, and the sum now resumed by Mr. Donnelly is thereby shewn to be a surplus amount unaccounted for as a perpetual remission. Besides which, so far back as 1191, the grand total never exceeded 19,602-14-11-3 in any year; so that there is no trace in the Board's statement of this sum after that date.

Mr. Donnelly has issued notices to the proprietors of all those pergunnahs in which the khaliars were formerly established in this Zillah, and whose remissions he has continued offering to compromise with them in the manner proposed by the Board. Should they object to do so, Mr. Donnelly would recommend that enquiry be made during the next cold season regarding the situation of the lands, and that they be measured by the making the enquiry, to prevent encroachments on the part of the land holders, after which resumption suits can be recommenced from their recovery.

Mr. Commissioner Pigou, in forwarding the above communication, entirely accorded with the view taken by Mr. Donnelly, and the Sudder Board have passed the following order.

To H. M. PIGOU, Esq., Commissioner of Jessore.
Miscellaneous.

Sir,—The Sudder Board of Revenue having had before them your letter No. 189, dated the 14th May, 1896, direct me to inform you, that they can come to no conclusion from the papers submitted regarding resumption of khaliars remissions in Jessore.

The Board remark that the officiating Collector asserts that the parties have no documentary evidence to adduce in support of their case, but forgets that the circumstance of their having been for a long period in the enjoyment of these remissions, is of itself a strong title. Under such circumstances it is necessary that regular proceedings should be held, at which the parties concerned should be in attendance to offer such objections as they deem proper, and which should be duly recorded.

I am further directed to observe, that as the greater part of the officiating Collector's argument consists of conclusions and inferences, and not of facts, it was necessary to have procured from the salt agent and the salt Board, whatever information would be obtained from their records. Standing as you do, in the place of the late Board of Revenue, it should be your care to see that enquiries of this description are, entirely followed out, and then to present the results for the consideration of the Sudder Board, accompanied by the grounds on which your opinions or recommendations are based.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient, humble servant,

No. 47,

To the Commissioner of Revenue for the Division of

Mis. Dept.

SIR,—Owing to the large increase in the number of uncovenanted Deputy Collector's it has become a matter of importance that the Sudder Board should be kept constantly informed in regard to their character and qualifications, and the extent and success of their exertions in the public Service, with a view to enable the Board to bring distinguished merit to the notice of Government for its appropriate reward, and to employ each individual in the manner in which his particular qualifications are likely to be turned to the best account.

2d. You are therefore requested to observe the following rules which have been devised with a view to this object in the spirit of the Government orders of the 20th December last.

1st. On revising any settlement or other proceedings held by an uncovenanted Deputy Collector, his immediate Superior shall record his opinion of the manner in which the duty has been performed for the consideration of the Local Commissioner, and the Local Commissioner shall in like manner record his opinion on the subject for the consideration of the Board.—

2d. The annual Division Reports, shewing the business that has been done in the Department of Resumption and settlement during the past year, and the plan of operations for the approaching cold season, shall contain particular mention of the manner in which each uncovenanted Deputy Collector has been employed during the past year as far as those departments are concerned, as of the quantity of work performed by him and of the manner in which he has performed it. It will also, of course, be stated how it is intended to employ him during the ensuing cold season.

31. Whenever the services of an uncovenanted Deputy Collector are likely not to be much longer required in any Zilla, his immediate superior shall report the circumstance to the Commissioner with a particular detail of the services, qualifications and character of the Deputy Collector, with a view to enable the Board to judge whether he is deserving of employment elsewhere, and, if so, in what manner he may be employed with the greatest public advantage.

31. I am also directed to take this opportunity of requesting, that, in making nominations of persons to be Deputy Collectors under Regulation IX. of 1833, you will yourself adhere, and require your subordinate Collector to adhere, strictly to the rules published in the Government Gazette, dated October 5, 1833.

PRESIDENCY SPECIAL COMMISSION.

BEFORE E. R. BARWELL, ESQ., SPECIAL COMMISSIONER.

Lakhrāj Cases.

Government Appellant v. Kuwuldussberagee and others respondents.

ZILLAH MYMENSING.

The possessor alleged 842 koor of land situate in Mooga, Ombla, &c., Pergunnah Shareepoor, to be Lakhrāj Dewnton Lands, and produced 5 sunnuds of 1183-1186 1189-1190 and 1899 B. signed by Sumboonth Cherod hree, &c. and one sunnud of 1169 B. bearing the signature of Rughoonarain Chowdhree, &c.

The decision of the Collector, dated 12th February 1835, adjudged the contested lands not to be liable to assessment on the ground that they were held exempt from the payment of Revenue anterior to the British rule. The proceedings were submitted to the local Revenue Commissioner of Dacca, who, disapproving of the Collector's adjudication, preferred an appeal to this Court.

On the 30th November, 1836, Mr. T. H. Maddock, the late Officiating Special Commissioner, on examination of all the records of the case, reversed the decision of the Collector, and confirmed the appeal of the local Revenue Commissioner for assessing the lands in question on the ground, that of 6 sunnuds produced by the respondents in support of their claims, 5 were of dates subsequent to the accession of the Hon'ble Company to the Dewanny, viz. for the years 183, 1186, 1189, 1190, 1199 B. S., and the sixth bearing date 11 Phalgun 1169 B. S. although anterior to the period above quoted, was, (exclusive of its not having been duly registered) evidently fictitious, having been written with fresh ink upon old paper, and bearing prima facie every appearance of a fabricated document.

On reference to Mr. E. R. Barwell, the Officiating Special Commissioner, that Officer, on a full consideration of the case, concurred on the 27th April, 1837, in the judgment passed by Mr. T. H. Maddock, the late Officiating Special Commissioner.

Government Appellant versus Raittee Kant Choudhary, Respondent.

ZILLAH—MYMENSING.

The possessor alleged some land estimated at about 60 koor, situate in Mouza Oobbhayapoor, Pergunnah Shareepoor, as Lakhrāj Bermuttee land, granted by Rameewun Chowdhree to Hurreenath Turkbagee, and produced a sunnud of 1042 B. and the nature of tenure as described in the Tenure appeared to be hereditary, and that the present possessor held the lands by inheritance.

The Decision of the Collector, dated 25th March, 1835, adjudged the disputed lands not to be liable to assessment, on the ground that they were held exempt from the payment of revenue by the ancestors of the respondent prior to the accession of the Hon'ble Company to the Dawanny.

The Dacca Revenue Commissioner, dissatisfied with the decision of the Collector, preferred an Appeal to this Court on the 13th February 1837. Mr. Maddock, the late Officiating Special Commissioner, finding that although the copy of the Register tendered by the respondent, bore date from the year 1202 B. S., yet that it was unauthenticated by the signature of any officer of the Government, and that the sunnud itself likewise unauthenticated had every appearance of a fabricated document, being written with fresh ink on smoked paper, reversed the decision of the Collector and confirmed the appeal of the Revenue Commissioner for the assessment of the land in question.

The case being referred to Mr. E. R. Barwell, the present Officiating Special Commissioner, that officer concurred, on the 5th April 1837, in the judgment passed by Mr. T. H. Maddock.

Government Appellant, versus Mirtoonjoy Banerjee Respondents.

ZILLAH 24 PERGUNNAHS.

The respondent alleged 383 biggahs and 6 biswas of land to be Lakhrāj Bhermuttee Lands.

The decision of the Collector dated 18th November 1835, declared the disputed lands not to be liable to assessment on the ground of their having been held under what he, the Collector, considered to be valid titles, viz. a perwannah bearing date 2d June 1786, or 22d Jeyte 1193 B. S., authenticated by the signature of Mr. Cammack, the former Collector, a Ch. har, dated 2d Aghhun 1196 B. S. signed by Mr. Pye, and a grant for excavating a tank bearing date 19th February 1801, or 9th Phalgun 1207 B. S. under the official seal and signature of Mr. Fitzroy.

The proceedings were forwarded to the Local Revenue Commissioner, who disapproving the collector's adjudication appealed the case to this Court. The case having come before Mr. T. H. Maddock, the late officiating special commissioner, that officer disapproving of the collector's proceedings on the ground, that collectors had no power to grant perwannahs for rent-free tenures, reversed the collector's decision, and confirmed the appeal of the revenue commissioner for assessing the lands in question on the 11th February 1837.

On reference to Mr. E. R. Barwell, the present officiating special commissioner, that officer concurred, on the 9th April 1837, in the judgment passed by Mr. T. Maddock.

Ram Kishore Rao, Appellant, versus Government Respondent.

ZILLAH DACCA.

The appellant alleged 2 kanes, 4 gundas and 2 cowries of land situated in Kismustwuxee, Pergunnah Rajnuggur, to be lakhiraj included in the mal lands, and produced a copy of an Ekwall Butwarrah of 1198 B. in support of his claim.

The Decision of the collector dated 31st March 1836 adjudging the contested lands to be liable to assessment on the ground of their being held under an invalid tenure was reversed by Mr. T. H. Maddock, the late officiating special commissioner, on the 16th March 1837, on the ground they were included in the appellant's permanently assessed estate, and were less than 100 beegahs, consequently in conformity to section VI Regulation XIX. 1793, they could not be considered to be subject to any additional revenue on account of Government.

The case was referred to Mr. E. R. Darwell, the present officiating special commissioner, who, on examination of all the records, concurred, on the 25th April 1837, in the judgment passed by Mr. T. H. Maddock.—Hurkaru, June 29.

To the Commissioners of Revenue for the Division of Outack.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 4th ultimo with the enclosed copies of correspondence with Mr. Special Deputy Collector Crawford, and to state in reply as follows.

2nd. The Board are of opinion that you may legally call upon a Special Deputy Collector to furnish you with any information necessary to enable you to form your own judgment as to the sufficiency and validity of the grounds assigned by the collector for considering the lands exempt from assessment. Without this power you could not properly fulfil the duty entrusted to you of appealing to the special commissioner those cases in which the claims of Government may appear to you to have been improperly set aside.

3rd. The Board, however, conceive it to be utterly beyond your authority to direct a revision of a special deputy collector's decrees. The existence of such a power would be manifestly unjust unless the holders of rent free tenures had a corresponding guardian of their interests vested with similar authority to direct a revision of decrees given against them, and the attempt to add to the severity of the resumption laws by the introduction of such a plan of proceeding, would be highly objectionable and inexpedient.

4th. The year allowed for appealing dates from the receipt of the record of the case by the local commissioner, but it is within the direction of the special commissioner to allow a prolongation on sufficient reason being shown. In the Patna case referred to by Mr. Crawford the year had expired pending a reference back to the resumption officer. The special commissioner would not hear of this plea, and rejected the appeal, not because such a reference had been made back to the resumption officer, but because the year of appeal had expired. It will therefore be incumbent on you on receipt of a resumption officer's proceedings, to review them without loss of time, that in case you find it necessary to call for any further information, the case may be completed and the appeal preferred (if it be proper to appeal) within the year, or the special commissioner be applied to, to grant further period for preferring the appeal beyond the year.

5th. The Sudder Board fully admit that, with the exception pointed out, special deputy collectors are in every respect as completely subject to your control as any other collectors or deputy collectors.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

CAUTION TO TRAVELLERS.—The people in the district of Jessore have lately become so outrageous, that passengers cannot travel the district with safety. In broad day light the most daring outrages are committed with impunity. An occurrence has recently come under notice of a gentleman passing to Jessore, who was attacked, about 7 o'clock in the morning on the public high road, by a numerous body of men, armed with various weapons, and very roughly treated. It has subsequently been ascertained that a Thannadar, or Mohurer, and his peons, were on the spot at the time, but did not come forward to render any assistance. The gentleman was paraded from village to village, amidst the scoffs and jeers of the rabble, and was only saved from worse treatment, by a magistrate's sowarry passing by, which intimidated his persecutors.

THE HON'BLE F. J. SHORE.—The Hon'ble F. J. Shore, Commissioner of Saugor and the Nerbudda, and the author of the able letters on Indian affairs signed a Friend to India, died at Spence's Hotel on the 29th instant.

THE AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATION.—The Australian Association recently formed, gets on very well; already upwards of fifty shares have been taken.

CAPTAIN HARRINGTON.—That old and meritorious officer Captain Harrington, who was appointed by the Local Government to officiate as Master-Attendant on the death of Captain Jamieson, is coming out as head Assistant and Superintendent of Semaphores, with the reversion to the office of Master-Attendant on the next vacancy. This act of justice has been communicated by the Hon'ble Court of Directors to the Supreme Government, in one of the late dispatches.

APPREHENSION OF AN ASSASSIN.—The assassin who fired a gun at Baboo Radharant Set on the 28th of September last, has been apprehended. The villain was induced to perpetrate this cruel deed in hopes of receiving from one Lungar Raj, an up-country man, who bore deadly enmity to the Baboo, a reward of one hundred rupees. It is also said that about three years ago Baboo Ram Mully was murdered by the same inhuman wretch for a recompense of twenty-two rupees.

THE MEDICAL COLLEGE.—Those who feel any interest in the progress of the Medical College will be glad to learn, that some of the more advanced students have formed themselves into a club entitled the "Chemical Demonstration Society." They meet on every Friday evening when one of them previously selected by the Professor, lectures on a particular subject assigned to him, and performs all the experiments in illustration of it. Most of the pupils attend this meeting and a new lecturer is chosen every week.

SIR WILLUGHBY COTTON.—On the evening of the 13th instant, Major-General Sir Willoughby Cotton, landed in Calcutta at six o'clock under the usual salute from the fort.

DECISION ON AN APPEAL CASE.—Late letters from England mention, that the case in which Kirteeschunder Roy and others were appellants, and the Bengal Government and Mohunnee Mohun Tagore respondents, has been decided by the Privy Council's confirming the decree of the Sudder Dewannee. The appellants opened their case on the 13th January, and on that day the 15th and the 16th, their counsel were heard at length. The respondent's counsel were not called on excepting to hear judgment on the 18th January, when the appeal was dismissed.

DR. TWINING.—The mural tablet intended to perpetuate the memory of the late Dr. Twining has arrived from London, and is beautifully executed, being of the gothic order, and the design neat and appropriate. The members of the Medical and Physical Society also will be pleased to learn, that there is still a prospect of their possessing for the Society's rooms a painting of Mr. Twining.

DISCOVERY OF COAL BEDS.—Mr. Homfray, who was lately sent to explore the coal district of the Soane, has made some further discoveries of coal beds; but the most interesting discovery he has reported, is the existence of a stratum of lias limestone of great extent, which is considered a sure indication of coal.

A CANNIBAL.—On the morning of the 4th instant, the thanadar of Hautcolah brought before the Superintendent of Police a fakeer, stating that the man was seen at Nimtollah Ghaut eating of a human carcass! The cannibal was ordered forthwith to be sent out of the precincts of the town.

SHIPWRECK.—A letter has received yesterday from Captain Koenigs, the commander of the brig Mapoon, announcing the loss of that vessel on the night of the 28th ultimo, upon the coast a few miles to the Southward of Manickpatam. The brig was bound for Calcutta, out eleven days from Moulmien.

BALLQUONCE TANK CASE.—The Sudder Authorities have after all handed up this case to Government, maintaining the inherent power of a magistrate to punish an offender, thereby obviating the necessity of a new law to bring British Subjects under criminal jurisdiction in the Company's Courts.

OYSTERS.—On the return of the Pilot despatch vessel from False Point, whither she had been sent with Government stores, her commander, Mr. Patterson, brought up with him a quantity of fine small oysters, which was obtained from a very extensive bed. With a very little trouble, and less expense, the good folks of Calcutta might have their tables constantly and plentifully supplied with this delicacy.

OPIMUM SALE.—An almost unprecedented number of individuals attended the opium sale on the 12th instant, and the prices given for the drug averaged much higher than the state of the market warrants. The next opium sale is fixed for the 12th instant.

THE HEAT.—The heat has been intolerable. On the 1st instant it was 98° in the shade, 108° in an open verandah, and 115° in the sun. A co-temporary's devil makes it appear, that the heat has been so great as 950° in the shade! The ditchers must indeed be endowed with a terrible portion of salamanderine power to endure such roasting weather.

FIRES.—Reports of the occurrence of several fires have been received during the month; but the damage sustained by the flames, does not appear to have been of very considerable amount. Some few human lives, however, have been lost.

THE CROPS.—The excessive drought which still continues, has entirely destroyed the hopes of the cultivators and planters of realizing tolerable crops from late sowings. Complaints are pouring in from all sides of the want of water, and in Chittagong the element has been selling at the rate of eight pitchers for the rupee.

THE PICE PLAGUE.—The groans of the sufferers from this horrid disorder, are heard on all sides, and no relief seems likely to be afforded to them. Five pice in each rupee are now the amount of suffering.

SERIOUS ACCIDENTS.—Four European seamen belonging to the ship Francis Smith, took a dingy at the Custom House Ghaut on the 5th instant, while they were under the influence of liquor, for the purpose of going on board. The dingy had hardly shoved off, when they all jumped overboard. The men belonging to the dingy succeeded in saving the lives of three of them, but the fourth, whose name was James Williams, met with a watery grave.

A charitable Moosulman named Daood Khan, and an African servant of his, met their deaths in a well on the premises of the former on the 6th instant. Daood Khan went down to the well to bring up certain of his goods which he had deposited in it for safety from fire. Being long down, the servant went down, to ascertain what the matter was, but did not return so soon as he was expected: seeing this, a syce in the same employ, followed the example of the African; but before he had gone half way down, he screamed out complaining of suffocation, when he was helped out of the well. The bodies of the other two men were afterwards fished out.

An unfortunate circumstance occurred on board of the ship Dumtless on the 3d instant. It appears that the chief mate of that vessel was on his knees, looking down the hatchway and giving directions to the people in the hold, to look for some packages which were wanted for delivery, when all of a sudden he was observed to draw back, fall on his side, and in a few moments was a corpse.

The bodies of six Moosulmans were a few days ago found on the banks of a tank situate in the middle of an extensive waste, called Cauzoeparah, in the purgunnah of Aunurpoor. The supposition is that these men were travelling through the place, and being overpowered by thirst, and the excessive heat of the sun they went to refresh themselves at the tank, but there being no water in it, and unable to walk further they became quite helpless and died.

On the night of the 17th instant, between eleven and twelve, a native budgerow was upset off Smith's Ghaut, by running foul of one of the ships at anchor. The boat had thirty-five persons in her at the time, by report of the native who hired her, going to see the Chaun Jatra festival at Moyes near Ishera. Of these, ten were drowned, including several women. Many individuals also lost their lives on the river, by the swamping of their boats, when returning from Moyes.

A cotton boat was burnt on the 18th instant, off Sulkas, and fourteen people lost their lives in her.

Mr. Lumley, who had been appointed by the Committee of Public Instruction, second master to the Seminary at Chittagong, on a salary of one hundred and fifty rupees per month, died of apoplexy in Tolly's Nullah, whilst proceeding to Chittagong.

A DOUBLE TRIAL.—A Master Pilot has lately been regularly tried by a Marine Committee, composed of five persons—viz. Capt. E. Ellis, President, two Commanders of ships, and two Branch Pilots, with a Judge-Advocate to conduct the proceedings. The charge was for "bribery." The Committee, after going into every particular, acquitted the Master Pilot, and transmitted their proceedings and verdict to the Marine Board, who, it would appear, are not satisfied with them. It is difficult to say what is intended, as not a word has been said to the Committee. Some say the Board have written to an individual who is up the country for his evidence, and a new trial; in the meantime the Master Pilot is kept from his duty and in a state of suspense,—of course most trying to his feelings, although acquitted.

CORONER'S INQUEST.—A coroner's inquest was held on the 16th instant, on the body of Capt. J. M. Forth, who was reported to have died from the effects of Morrison's pills. The jury, after a patient investigation, returned a verdict of natural death, acquitting the Hygeist's panacea from having any participation in causing the demise of the Captain.

STATIONING OF PILOTS AT FALSE POINT.—It is reported that the Marine Board have recommended to Government, the removal of the Pilot Establishment, or at least a part of it, to Dudeswell's Island, an extensive sandbank surrounding False Point, which at high spring tide is entirely under water or nearly so. This singular proposition, it is said, emanates from the Board's Secretery. The Master attendant, and nine of the Branch Pilots, have put in their vetos against Pilots being located upon his "dismal swamp" which is in every way unsuited for a human residence.

THE PLAGUE.—Further accounts have been received during the week of the rapid subsidence of the Plague, and the present hot weather, which is so inimical to the agricultural interests, will not, by totally eradicating the infection, be wholly divested of good.

THE PLAGUE AND CHOLERA.—Further accounts have reached us during the week, confirmatory of the report of the rapid declination of the Plague in Rajpootana, and we hope in a short time to hear of its total annihilation. The Cholera, however, is making fearful ravages all over the country, and the recent showers of rain, have not tended to check the virulence of this horrible disorder, the mortality created by which, is indeed most fearful. All the places on the river side for the accommodation of the dying sick when carried thither, are occupied, and funeral piles are seen day and night blazing almost without intermission at the burning place at Nuntulla. Indeed in one instance fourteen dead bodies were carried there at a late hour at night to be burnt, thirteen of which had been the victims of cholera and almost all of them had been taken ill that very day.

ROBBERIES.—About three weeks ago the house of a sunnasye at Tribanee was attacked at night by a gang of about twenty robbers. It appears that the villains had received information of there being 2,000 rupees in the possession of the sunnasye. Owing to the cell of the hermit being close to the large and populous bazar, a number of people collected near the spot by the time the robbers had broken open the chest in which the box containing the rupees was shut up. They therefore dispersed only with a trifling booty of a few rupees, some clothes, &c. The sunnasye lost one of his ears from a sword cut. Although a number of people were collected together, no attempt was made to pursue the robbers.

The indigo factory of a French gentleman at the village called Hooda in Zillah Nuddeah was, in the dead of night, about eight or ten days ago, stormed by a gang of dacoits, who carried away money and other property to a considerable amount. It is stated that on the night that the affair took place, the gentleman was absent from the factory; which circumstance must have encouraged the villains to commit the atrocity.

A few days ago, a dacoity was committed in the house of a Mahafun, at Nimtullah, Zillah Nuddeah. The ruffians not only made themselves masters of all the poor fellow possessed, but set fire to his body, after rolling it up in joot. The man escaped death; but he was so dreadfully burnt, that his sufferings were almost insupportable.

MOFUSSIL.

MEERUT.—A disturbance occurred recently in the town, originating in a quarrel between a Mussulman and a Hindoo bunceah, in the course of which the former threw a piece of meat into the shop of the latter. The friends and brethren of the Hindoo instantly raised a hue and cry and proceeded in a body to the kutchery of the Magistrate. That officer pointed out to them the impropriety of the manner of the complaint and informed them, he would investigate any charge which might be brought against individuals, by urree on stamped paper. The bunceahs obeyed, and the case having been heard, the Mussulman offenders were sentenced to fifteen rupees fine, or two months' imprisonment. The bunceahs considering the punishment inadequate, resorted to an old expedient of stopping the supplies by shutting their shops. The Magistrate prudently took no notice of this proceeding, thus shewing them that by keeping their shops closed, they would gain nothing, but most likely suffer a positive loss by their contumacy. The measure has been successful.

A private of His Majesty's 10th Lancers was drowned in a well in rear of the barracks.

A serious assault was committed upon the person of a young female of eleven years in the barracks of His Majesty's 3rd Buffs. A private took the opportunity of the father being on duty, and the mother absent, to commit this diabolical deed. Some apprehension was entertained for the life of the girl; but the Surgeons have reported her out of danger.

MUTTRA.—The statement about a man being cut down by the quarantine peons for resenting rudeness offered to his wife, is not true, and the sanitary cordon has hitherto been maintained without opposition or disturbance. The report on which this statement was advanced, was very prevalent amongst natives of all classes, and originated, probably, in the dislike entertained by them against the quarantine regulations in force.

The ablution annually performed by numbers of Hindoos in the tank at Goverdhan, has this season been interdicted by the Magistrate of Muttra, in consequence of the unwholesome quality of the water, which communicates fever to those bathing in it.

ALLYGHUR.—On the 5th instant, at 7 P. M., a meteor of a circular form, very large, and of a brilliant blue colour, was seen near this town. It moved in a S. Easterly direction, and was visible for nearly three quarters of a minute. It was vividly luminous, so much so as to startle all who saw it, and presented a disc the apparent diameter of which was nearly three feet.

ALTAHARAD.—The celebrated frequer who inhabited a place on the north esplanade for a great number of years, without any protection from the weather but that of a small chatta, has just died. He has left behind him cash to the amount of Rs. 14,000.

MIRZAPORE.—The cotton market continues firm, and considerable sales are daily making to native dealers, principally for country consumption. A heavy amount of business was transacted about the middle of April, in consequence of intelligence having been received from Calcutta that extensive sales had been effected with banyans and others connected with the export trade. The stock of cotton in bond is by no means large, and the imports during the last week averaged but 800 maunds daily, which is considerably short of the ordinary imports at this season.

GYAN.—The Oordoo paper printed at this town states, that the cholera is devastating the place and that thousands are daily falling victims to it. Several conflagrations have taken place and considerable property has in consequence been destroyed.

COEL.—Fever and small pox are devastating this town and district. The deaths caused by the latter amount fully to forty per cent. on those attacked.

BEHAR.—The mortality is abating in this town. According to native calculation it embraced 55,000 deaths.

PAUROOH.—The darogah of the thannah of Paurooh brought to the notice of the Magistrate the following circumstances connected with the murders of a man and a woman, husband and wife, whose bodies were sent to the sudder station. It appeared that on the night of the ninth ultimo, they went to bed between eight and nine o'clock; but the following morning being unusually late in bed, some of the other inmates of the house entered their bed room, and found them both murdered. There were several wounds on the persons of both, but those on the forehead of the woman and under the right ear of the man, were much greater than the others. The woman had ornaments on her person; but none of them nor a single other article in the room, was missed.

RANAGHAUT.—Six men were on the 17th ultimo committed to the sessions for trial, on a charge of burglary and murder.

AGRA.—The plague is rapidly on the decline, and the virulence of the disease abating in an equal degree. This favourable change has led to a relaxation of the severity of the sanitary regulations on the frontier cordon; and a period of fourteen days is now fixed for quarantine and the disinfection of goods, instead of twenty as before. Persons and property from Bhurtpore and Dholpoor do not now suffer detention, and every restraint, consistent with safety, has been removed.

A considerable sensation has been caused among the sporting community of Agra and its vicinity, regarding the locality of the Club house for the Indiau Turf Club. An endeavour appears to have been made by the officers of the Lancers to remove the Club house from Allyghur, the place first fixed on and the most central for all parties, to Meerut. This has caused much dissatisfaction, as many of the original subscribers reside at Agra and in its vicinity, who would be unable to avail themselves of the Club house were it removed; and these subscribers have signified their determination of withdrawing their names should it be removed. Many others also who would be happy to enrol their names, have declined to do so until the cause be decided; and all of them lean towards Allyghur.

The Race Meeting held on the 5th instant, was very respectively attended, and nearly rupees 1,600 subscribed on the spot.

DELHI.—It has been rumoured about Delhi that Rung Rao, Tehsildar at Rawarree, had been charged with committing a very heinous offence, whereby the sufferer subsequently died, and that, in order to suppress investigation, his friends have been basely engaged to obtain a written denial of his participation in the crime, as an acquittance.

CUTTACK.—The dearth of rice at Cuttack and its environs has lately decreased a little, and the distress to the pilgrims will not, in consequence, be so great as was feared. They will only be put to about twice the usual expense for their travelling. A number of pilgrims to Juggernaut, however, have returned home for fear of accident from want of water on the way. In certain places within zillah Cuttack the want of water has been very severely felt.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—Mr. R. Howsden, of the Customs line at Shamlee, accidentally shot himself recently, while travelling dak. He lingered a few days and then expired.

TIRHOOT.—A meeting of the Indigo Planters of this district, is summoned for the 20th instant, for the purpose of framing a code of bye-laws for mutual observance in their transactions with one another.

MOORSHEDABAD.—Two men, master and servant, were poisoned in this place on the 13th of May. The wife of the former, who had an illicit intercourse with the servant, being tired of the barrier her husband opposed to the full enjoyment of her criminal desires, endeavoured to remove it by poisoning him by drugging his victuals. She was too successful—both master and servant partook of the food and soon after expired. The woman is in custody.

NATIVE STATES.

BEKAWTER.—A combination to resist over-assessment by four Thakoor Chiefs, was recently entered into against the Seekur Raja, who called in the aid of Major Forster, who sent a troop to reduce them. They refused to cross swords with this detachment, and having set fire to their villages, five in number, retired to an old fort which was immediately blockaded by the Shekawattee risalla, and the combined quotas of Beekhaner and Shekawatt, Major F. having himself retired to Joonnoo to bring up a couple of guns. During his absence the combined Thakoors made several sallies, in which they suffered much loss, and on the approach of Major F. they evacuated their position, having obtained a free passage through the Shekawatt and Beekhaner posts. They were, however, pursued by Major F., and a few of their force cut down.

KANDAHAR.—A tribe of robbers, who subsisted on the trade between Kandahar and Cabool, have so suffered by its falling off, that almost the whole body has perished. A few of the younger and more athletic who survived, threw themselves on the protection of the Chiefs of Kandahar, who have converted them into soldiers—a profession at but little variance with their former one.

ERAN.—The merchants of this country trading with Bombay, have written to their correspondents at that Presidency to discontinue their periodical consignments, in consequence of the wretched state of the intervening territories of Bokhara and Khorashan. Yet the pacification of these countries is no object with the Government of British India.

AMRAWULPOOR.—Captain Burnes has reached this town, where, with his usual and useful desire to diffuse information, he held a convocation of the principal Sirdars, to whom he unfolded many of the mysteries of knowledge. A Mr. Matheson, an English merchant, under instructions from Runjeet Singh, will join him at Ahmudpoor and proceed thence with him to Cabool.

LUCKNOW.—Messrs. Brandon and Derusett, who had been confined by order of the King, have been released from confinement and dismissed the councils of his Majesty. Their successors have not yet been long enough in office to exhibit their characters, but from what they have done, they appear to be as alive to their own interests as persons in their respectable situations generally are. They do not, however, "boo" with effect equal to their predecessors, nor are they likely to pander with equal delinquency and unscrupulousness to their royal employer. Economical measures are about to be adopted, the first of which will be the dismissal of 1,000 or 1,200 persons: the philanthropic object of them is to enable the King to recruit his exhausted treasury and thus be able to command a fresh supply of his peculiar pleasures. The chief butler has just been dismissed for dereliction of his duty as deputy-pander to the King.

THE SHEIKS AND AFFGHANS.—There was a mistake in the last account given of the battle between the Affghans and Sheiks. It appears that the fort of Jumrood was occupied by some of Hurree Sing's troops, and that the Affghans attacked them. The Affghans were led by Mahomed Khan who had been ill treated by Hurree Sing three years back, and in revenge had joined Dost Mahomed, for the purpose of regaining possession of the fort of Jumrood, which had been taken from him. He succeeded in persuading the Affghans and Dost Mahomed to give him assistance, and made the desperate attempt to regain possession of his birth-right. The action is described as being very gallantly contested on both sides. Several European officers were present in the Affghan Army, and the Sheiks ascribe the determined character of this invasion, the unusual efficiency of the enemy's artillery, the vast assemblage of troops, and undaunted assault of the Affghans in a great degree to the encouragement and daring inspired by the courage of these European officers. Hurree Sing's armour saved him against sword wounds and arrows, but Mahomed Khan, thirsting for revenge, sought him throughout the contest, and having met with him, fired a carbine at him and wounded him. On seeing who had aimed the fatal shot, Hurree Sing rushed sword in hand at his antagonist, and with one blow cut his body in two! Two sons of Dost Mahomed and ten of Runjeet Sing's chief officers, are said to have fallen: two of the Maharajah's Regiments were literally cut in pieces, and the Affghans captured for guns. Flour was selling at Jumrood after the contest at the rate of one rupee a seer! At the time when the battle was being fought, Maharajah Runjeet Sing was at Guzerat; and on hearing the intelligence of the defeat, he sent all his Chiefs to Peshawur together with all his available forces and guns. On the arrival of Khoshal Sing Jemadar, Sham Sing, and others, the Affghans retreated.

The great action between the Affghans and Sikhs, on the 1st Feb., commenced by an attack made by the Sikhs, under the command of Hurree Sing Nulwa, on the Fort of Jumrood: a breach was made in the walls, and Hurree Sing's force attempted to storm it, but was beaten back with considerable loss. Hurree Sing received two sword and one gun shot wounds, from which he died. He appears to have behaved very gallantly, and is reported, when dying, to have told his attendants not to mention his death until they had deposited his body in the heart of the enemy's citadel. The Commander of the Affghans, Mahommud Uzyl Khan, was also killed in action. Seven thousand men on each side are said to have been slain; the victory was dearly purchased by the Affghans. Jemadar Khooshal Sing, with a large and efficient army, had proceeded to the spot, and the Affghans, not liking the appearance of his innumerable host, commenced a retreat, and were pursued for three days, but eventually succeeded in getting clear away. On hearing this bit of joyous intelligence, Maharajah Runjeet Sing ordered a liberal supply of powder to be distributed amongst the army for the purpose of enabling them to fire salutes!

The ukbars, however, mention that the Affghans have again surrounded the Fort of Jumrood, and that daily skirmishes take place; the Peshawur force was much discomforted at the death of Hurree Sing, but Muha Sing, the Thanadar, and other Military chiefs, administered consolation and encouragement.

The troops of Runjeet Sing, near Shubu Ghur, are opposed by the Affghan Chiefs, Suddut Khan and Mahomed Khan, and are engaged in constant skirmishes.

It is reported that Meer Alum Khan, of Bijour, with a force of 30,000 followers and no end of guns, at the request of the son of Dost Mahomed, has arrived near Durra Mujnee, and seems inclined to cross the river Sindh: and Payindu Khan, of Dhurbund, in the provinces of Gondghar and Mirralee, has formed an insurrection, and plundered, sacked, and burnt several of the Maharajah's villages.

GWALIOR.—One John Fren, an officer in the Maharajah's service, had, in consequence of clamorously demanding his pay, been discharged; he had remained at Gwalior for a month, when, one night, at twelve o'clock, he, with forty followers, encamped at a garden belonging to the Mama Sahib; about three o'clock in the morning he seized one gun and a flag belonging to Secunder's regiment. Oomrao Sing and Zalim, and other Officers, accompanied by a company of soldiers, surrounded his camp, and having explained to Monsieur John Fren, that he had duly been paid up and discharged, enquired why he had committed the act of violence: they seized the gun, on which an engagement ensued, in which John Fren and eleven of his followers were killed, and the rest dispersed, and two of the Gwalior troops were killed and nine wounded.

Three Mahrattas, on behalf of the Baiza Baie, attempted to raise a disturbance at Gwalior lately. They were seized and confined by the Mama Sahib. A soldier named Maharaj Sing, who had been in confinement three months at Gwalior, destroyed himself by running a sword into his body. Colonel Jacob has succeeded in reconciling the Maharajah with the Mama Sahib; there had been some quarrels between them.

CABOOL.—Letters from Cabool mention, that Dost Mahomed wrote to the Khybur Walla that an Army is being assembled in Peshawur for the purpose of invading the country of Lahore and attacking Jellalabad, urged him strongly to join the force and to fight desperately, that he would quickly send two thousand Toorks and a large body of Cavalry, and that whenever Runjeet Sing passed the Attock, he himself would join his force. When the Khybur Walla had read the note, his courage rose, an agreement was made between the two potentates, that they should fight in such a manner as to become renowned throughout the world.

LAHORE.—Maharajah Runjeet Sing has crossed the Chunab. The Zemindars of Wuzerabad made some complaints to the Maharajah—he soothed them and desired the authorities to refrain from any harsh exactions.

BURRUPPOOR.—The Rajah has contracted the prevailing epidemic—a desire for quarantine restrictions, which he has established to the westward of his dominions, so as to detain travellers and goods from Rajwarra and Meywar.

BURDWAN.—In consequence of the intolerable heat recently experienced, the mortality in Burdwan from cholera has been very great—thirty to forty people dying every day. No rain had fallen up to the 18th instant, and in many places the people have in consequence been obliged to work in the night instead of the day.

MADRAS.

INJUDICIOUS ASSESSMENT.—The Government have, within the last year, most injudiciously assessed all the petty cultivation of the Neighbouries; the consequence of which is, that the patches of little gardens for the growth of potatoes and vegetables, have already decreased round Quatamund, from about fifty to one-tenth of the number; and will shortly wholly disappear: to the great annoyance of the inhabitants, and the serious disadvantage of invalids, resorting to the hills in search of health.

COURT-MARTIAL.—It is said that two Assistant-Surgeons are likely to be brought to a court-martial, for misconduct during the late disturbances at Mangalore. These disturbances, it appears, have been greatly magnified: it is doubted whether fifty armed rebels simultaneously attacked any one point of Mangalore; and there appears to have been a great deal of ammunition expended by both sides, on one particular occasion, without producing any corresponding effect.

BRIGADIER CONWAY.—Brigadier Conway, C. B., died on the 13th instant of cholera.

LORD AND LADY BRUDNELL.—The Drongan, with Lord and Lady Brudenel on board, arrived at Cochin on the 12th ultimo.

EIGHTH REGIMENT OF NATIVE INFANTRY.—The 8th Regiment of Native Infantry arrived on the 8th ultimo at the Red Hills, where they are halted for the present. They have lost about 27 men by cholera.

CONSTRUCTION OF A NEW ROAD.—A new road is about to be constructed leading from Parry's Castle to Mr. Huddleston's gate, which will be a great convenience to the inhabitants of Madras, and complete the coast road from the Fort to the Adyar.

CAPTURE OF THE COORG PRETENDER.—The Coorgs have captured the Pretender. He was taken on the 13th ultimo, in a small village in the north of Coorg, bordering on Mysore, by a native district officer of Coorg. His name is Poota Buaupah and he is not a brother to Appamunpara, the prisoner at Trichinopoly, as was alleged, but an unknown and unheard of villager in the northern District of Coorg—not Coorg proper, but one of the provinces ceded to it by Mysore many years ago.

He has told a very plain and unvarnished tale as to the part he has taken. He says that he was taken from his village into the low country and then mounted on a white horse and had a cluttry carried over his head, and was made King, because others would have it so. Upon being questioned as to the motives for creating this disturbance, his reply was that the people were so much oppressed by the Collector and Zillah Judges, that they were driven to desperation, that the latter summoned the poor people from their homes and families to a great distance, as witnesses, and kept them for months at Mangalore without means of subsistence; and the former had levied duties and taxes that had never been heard of.

The troops have all returned from the expedition.

Mr. Lewin lately sent to Baupoo, the Coorg Chief, a letter of thanks for his exertions, with a present of 500 rupees. The money he returned, stating that the exertions made by him and his countrymen have been made not for money, but to secure the confidence of the English Government in their new subjects. We sincerely hope it will reward them by preserving to the people the continuance of the present mode of Government, which seems most acceptable to them. That division of Coorg which has been transferred to Canara is the rebellious district—all the rest of the kingdom of Coorg has most abundantly evidenced its fealty to the English. Baupoo has succeeded in recovering the plate chest of the 2d Regiment of Native Infantry, which he sent to Major Dowker.

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE.—A detachment of the 4th Regt. M. N. I. proceeded to a place near Kaseergode to rouse out some two or three score of rebels; it was commanded by Lieutenant Stokes, who had under him Ensign Seppings. On the march a sepoy, Lieutenant Stokes's orderly, fell to the rear, for which Lieutenant Stokes punished him, report says by blows of a musket—and, ultimately, the man having shown restive symptoms by staying behind and diverting himself of his belts, he took a sword and cut him down, nearly severing his head from his body on the spot. Lieutenant Stokes is now under a guard at Mangalore awaiting investigation of the matter.

serious accidents.—A most shocking accident happened on the 25th ultimo, on the beach opposite the Custom House. A boatman was bathing in the sea in a depth of water just above his knees, and as he stooped down was seized on the breast by a shark. He was observed to strike the shark with both his hands, and the monster then quitted his first hold and bit off first one of the man's hands just above the wrist, and afterwards the other arm. At this instant a surf rolled both the man and the shark up on the beach, the former got upon his legs and walked a few steps, towards his comrades, whilst the shark regaining his upright position got off with the retiring wave. The whole business did not occupy two minutes, and although the boat's crew were close to the spot they could render no assistance. The man was put into a palanquin for the purpose of being sent to the Monegar Choultry, but a large body of the boatmen surrounded the palanquin and carried him by force to his own home, where he died in a few minutes.

On the 27th ultimo, a Musnah boat was upset in the surf and an officer belonging to the George the Fourth, a brother of Mr. Phillips of the Civil Service, was unfortunately drowned. Mr. Phillips was on the beach at the time and was an eye witness of the awful calamity.

On the 28th, the Clairmont arrived from Bombay and Cochin, completely dismasted, having experienced very severe weather on her passage. A signal was hoisted on board of this ship for an accommodation boat just as one was returning, which went alongside and took Colonel Passmore, Capt. Dunbar and his lady, Mr. Quieres, and a servant of Colonel Passmore's on board. The boat had passed the second water surf and was pulling for the shore, when she broached to, the boatmen instantly jumped out of her, and left the passengers in a powerless boat to contend with an approaching surf; the result was that the boat capized and was broken to pieces, and the gentlemen and lady were left swimming in the surf. Boats and cattamarans were forthwith ordered off to pick up the unfortunate individuals, and they succeeded in laying hold of the Captain of the ship and his lady (which latter had her nose severely cut): they were safely brought to the shore and have since perfectly recovered. Colonel Passmore was picked up below Royspoo-ram (after having been in the water, about 15 minutes), and although the Assistant Master Attendant got the aid of two medical gentlemen who used all means to save the body, it was too late—and Colonel Passmore was buried on the evening of the 27th ultimo. The bodies of Mr. Quieres and a native servant have not been found."

TRIAL OF JEEVAN TOTY.—The trial of Jeevan Toty, for having wilfully polluted the Sudder Bazar Mosque at Hyderabad, by placing therein a slaughtered pig and smearing the walls with blood, has terminated, and the prisoner has been found guilty, and sentenced to be transported beyond sea for his natural life.

A NEW PAPER.—A new paper, called the New Times, issued from the Madras press on the first instant.

MAJOR GENERAL FOULIS.—The statement of the death of Major-General Foulis, of the Cavalry, is wholly unfounded in truth.

THE MUNRO STATUE.—The statue of Sir Thomas Munro, by Chantrey, is almost ready, and may be expected by one of the last ships of the season from Europe.

MR. JOHN CROOKSHANK.—At a Meeting of the Justices in Sessions held on the 7th of June, Mr. John Crookshank was unanimously appointed to act as Collector of Assessment for the Town of Madras.

SUICIDE.—A Mr. Zscherpel, went, on the 9th instant, into the shop of Mr. Scaife, the chemist, where he asked a youth in attendance to furnish him with some laudanum, which, as he said, he required to use in straitening furniture. The boy sensibly took the bottle into an inner room where his master was, and asked whether the laudanum should be supplied. He was told, not; but, on returning into the shop to communicate the refusal, he saw Zscherpel in the act of walking out, and a glance at an opened family medicine chest on the counter, shewed that its bottle of laudanum had been abstracted. He returned to inform his master, who desired him immediately to run after Zscherpel and get the bottle back. He followed him accordingly into an inner room of a house, where he saw the unhappy man deliberately unfastening the cover of the bottle. The boy called two natives who were about the place to come and help him, and made a rush to get hold of the bottle. Zscherpel quietly knocked him down, treated one of the natives who came up to him in the same manner, and then, having succeeded in getting the bottle (either an ounce or an ounce and a half) open, he swallowed down the whole contents. Medical assistance was soon obtained, and the usual remedies, with the stomach pump, administered, but without avail. The tremendous dose he had taken too soon operated with fatal effect! The cause of the rash act appeared to have existed in extreme depression of spirits, caused by pecuniary difficulties, and family disagreements. The jury returned a verdict of died from swallowing laudanum while in a state of temporary derangement.

MURDER.—The wife of a labourer who had deserted her husband and was living with one of the lascars attached to the 45th Regiment N. I., was murdered by the husband. The husband had come up to Madras to endeavour to reclaim her, and exhorted the woman to return with him to the charge of a young family she had left behind. His counsels and entreaties were vain—she refused to quit her paramour; and when after repeated interviews he found her purpose unchanged, he gave way to a fit of ungovernable fury, and taking a knife, inflicted on her numerous stabs in the head, neck and body. They must have caused almost immediate death.

BOMBAY.

COL. KENNEDY'S APPEAL.—The Court of Directors have passed a favorable decision on the appeal of Col. Kennedy, and have ordered the immediate appointment of that officer to a situation somewhat similar to the one he formerly held, viz—an oriental translator to Government.

FIRE.—The whole of the hay market of Bombay opposite the Babool Tank, containing twenty-nine large stacks, was burned on the 14th instant. The Jame Jamshed estimates the value of the hay at 30,000 rupees. The destruction of such a large quantity of hay and straw has already led to an increase in their prices.

HIGH PRICES OF GRAIN.—All kinds of grain and other necessaries are now sold 25 or 30 per cent dearer than before the occurrence of the fire at Surat. As a considerable quantity must have been exported from Bombay to that place, we suspect advantage is taken of the circumstance by native shopkeepers to raise the prices, though a portion of the rise is due to a deficiency caused by the quantity actually sent out.

A DUEL.—A duel was fought at Mangalore lately between two officers of one of the regiments sent there on duty. Both parties were wounded, one in the leg and the other very severely in the abdomen.

THE SYED KHAN.—The Syed Khan, on her passage from China to Bombay, met with an accident not exactly of every day occurrence. On the 3rd April, in latitude 5° 45' longitude 80° 49', the ship being nearly becalmed, two sword fish were seen from on board, and on the 14th, whilst setting studding sails in the evening, about 14 inches of the sword of a fish was observed sticking in the ship's bows. Eight inches were then extracted, the remainder upon her being put in dock at Bombay.

COL. KENNEDY.—Col Kennedy has been permitted to remain at Bombay on leave of absence.

SUPREME COURT APPOINTMENTS.—The following alterations rumoured amongst the officers connected with the Supreme Court. Mr. Phillips to act as Master in Equity during the absence of Mr. Fenwick for the benefit of his health at the Cape; Mr. Compton, Ecclesiastical Registrar; Mr. Davies, Clerk of Court of Small Causes, and Mr. Ketterer to resume his former appointments of Sealer and Clerk to the Chief Justice. By the death of Mr. Farrier, Mr. Smith also will succeed permanently to the office of Prothonotary.

THE LATE FIRE AT SURAT.—It appears that the accounts of the loss occasioned by the late fire at Surat, have been much exaggerated. The number of burned houses was only one thousand instead of 20,000, and the loss of lives not more than 75 persons altogether, including several who are reported to have been literally baked in which they had taken refuge.

DISURBANCE AT BHOWNDY.—In consequence of the fracas between the Mahomedans and Hindoos, regarding their respective creeds, on the 17th of May several Mussulmans threw some lighted hay upon the warehouse of Mukhun Shett, a Banian merchant, whereby that, with his dwelling house and 15 others in the vicinity, were totally destroyed. This has thrown the Hindoos into such a state of consternation, that every man seems to consider his life and property as held only upon the tenure of the pleasure of the Mahomedan population, against whom from their superior numbers, greater wealth and influence, the Hindoos are afraid to prefer any charges in a public court. Such an alarming aspect do things bear, that a vast number of Hindoos have resolved upon leaving the country, should no check be placed upon the present scenes of violence and insult.

COOLY INSURRECTION.—A cooly insurrection in the Subankanta has taken place and been suppressed within the last three months. We were not cognizant of the affair until it was over.

DISPATCH OF THE ATALANTA.—It is reported that the Atalanta will positively be dispatched to the Red Sea on the 1st proximo. The Hugh Lindsay is about to be brought into dock, to undergo several improvements.

TRANSIT DUTIES.—It is reported that the Supreme Government is about to abolish the transit duties in Bombay at an early period.

BURMAH.

The Prince of Tha-ya-wottee, in spite of the many obstacles that were at first opposed to him, has obtained the throne of the Burmese Empire, without a single battle being fought, and very few sanguinary executions. He has laid his hands on hordes of wealth, which the want of vigour in the Indian administration left untouched, and which he obtained from the ministers, every one of whom he has had imprisoned. The old king and queen have gone down into private life. As to where the heir apparent Tsek-ya-mong is, report is silent. The new king has two sons. The eldest has held an important command in the revolutionary forces, and has probably made up his mind to succeed his father. The second son has been appointed Governor of the city of Ava.

CEYLON.

Letters from Kandy, dated the 25th of May, state that a flood similar to that of 1834 has been experienced in that country. Peradenia Bridge was at that time safe although the river had risen one time in the course of that day 7 feet 8 inches beyond the greatest height of the flood of 1834. Gordon's bridge at the foot of the Kadougauawa pass, and another bridge near Ballapana had been altogether carried away, and also the Nana Oya bridge on the road to Gampola. The lake in Kandy has overflowed its banks, and the damage in Kandy and in the country generally, though the extent cannot be ascertained, is supposed to be greater than in 1834.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—Three highly esteemed and respected officers of H.M. 61st regiment, Lieutenants Shaw, Harkness and Walker, and six natives, met with watery graves by the upsetting of a boat in which they were on the 22d of May. The squall which upset the boat in which these ill fated gentlemen were sailing, was so violent as to cause H. M. Ship Andromache, to drag her anchors, and drive towards the shore. She was fortunately brought up in time by her third anchor.

Lieutenants Shaw and Harkness have each left a wife and children to mourn their melancholy and untimely fate.

PENANG.

THE EX-RAJAH OF KEDA.—The ex-Rajah of Keda, in his own brig the Julia, was got underweigh on the 5th of May, by the crew of the gunboat Diamond, and under convoy of H. M. sloop Zebra, immediately sailed out of the harbour to the southward, and when off midchannel the artillerymen who were placed as a guard over his person, returned on shore. It would appear that the rumour of an intended rescue of his highness by some five or six hundred of his partizans, who were stated to be collected off Pulo Jerajah and Battu Moam, in several prahus, rendered necessary this precaution of their retention on board to the last extremity.

Since the short sojournment in the harbour of his highness, subsequent to his capture at Bruas, it was pleasing to be told the numerous natives who flocked on board daily to pay his highness their respects. The rajah has made two energetic appeals against the ill-treatment he has received from the British Government.

THE RECORDER.—The Honorable the Recorder and Court establishment returned from circuit down the Straits on the 11th of May, in the Diana, which vessel steamed up from Malacca in thirty-six hours. His Honor and Lady Norris landed at nine o'clock under the usual salutes.

SINGAPORE.

DUTCH MANŒUVRES.—It is said that the Singapore authorities are likely to receive an early visit from the Resident of Rhio, on some question connected with the island of Lingin. Major Koff, formerly a Commissioner for the suppression of Piracy, being associated in the business with him. The nature of the question to be discussed relative to Lingin is not known, but a recent communication from Batavia mentions the fact of a son of the Rajah of that island having been there some time ago and that it was reported and understood at Batavia that an offer had been made to the Netherlands Government of the sovereignty of Lingin. It is therefore not improbable the gentle Allynheers are about sending this mission to Singapore to sound our inclinations on the subject. It is needless to remark that the possession of Lingin by the Dutch would be no small detriment to the interests of Singapore, as not only would the whole tin of Singkip be monopolized, and other articles of native produce be thereby diverted from this market, but our manufacturer would be excluded, as in the other minor ports of their government in the Archipelago. Ambassadors from Acheen had also been at Batavia for some time. The object of their mission had not been allowed to transpire. But daily experience teaches us that our government in the Straits cannot be too vigilant in watching the proceedings, and fathoming the designs of the Dutch.

CHINA.

The news from China received during the month, is similar to what was previously obtained. The same vigilance to prevent the opium trade was preserved, and the fulminations against the foreigners, were as loud as ever.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From the Bengal Hurkaru Price Current, June 24.)

INDIGO.—The periodical rains seem to have set in at length and rather moderately in Calcutta and in the near neighbourhood on the 20th instant. Much too late it is to be apprehended to retrieve the Indigo prospects in any important degree. At present indeed there has not been time to ascertain accurately how far even these late rains have really extended, although some indistinct accounts are in circulation of the want of rain still in some parts so late as the 20th, while the river is said to have been rising too rapidly in others.

RAW SILK.—Nothing doing for England; the high prices demanded by holders preventing operations. We observe a purchase of a small parcel Radnagore by a Native for the Bombay Market.

SILK PIECE GOODS.—The market continues inactive. A purchase of 400 pieces Radnagore Corahs by a native is the only transaction reported since our last for shipment to Bombay at our quotation.

COTTON.—Several shipments have been made during the week on the George the Fourth and Abercrombie Robinson for China on account the owners of those vessels. The prices of the produce throughout the assortment are quoted at an advance of 8 annas to 1 rupee per maund on last week's rates.

SALTPETRE.—The transactions during the week are reported, principally for London and Liverpool, we have, however, no change in prices to notice.

SUGAR.—Remains in limited enquiry for Europe. The purchases during the week have been of secondary quality by natives for shipments to Bombay, and the prices show a shade of decline on our last quotations.

LAC.—The only reported transaction in this is a purchase of 50 chests Shell Lac for shipment to Liverpool at unaltered price. The demand for both Shell and Dye continues languid.

SAFFLOWER.—Continues to engage attention, and the purchases reported are for England and France at our last quotations.

GRAIN.—Fine Patna and Patcherry have been enquired for during the week for shipments to England, at a slight improvement in prices.

Amongst the operations during the week we observe a purchase of 8000 maunds Moonghy Rice by Government for Shipments to Penang, Malacca and Singapore.

OPPIUM.—A few lots of the June sale have changed hands during the week for shipments.

The prices of the Drug are quoted at an advance on Benares, and active Shipments are going on in the Clippers.

The quantities remaining in the Hon'ble Company's Godowns up to yesterday are of January	February	March	June	Total

	Sale	Sale	Sale	Sale
Behar,	445	1,190	1,354	3,037	6,036
Benares	312	589	745½	1,924	3,570½
	767	1,779	2,099½	4,961	9,606½

ALUM.—Without report of sale since our last.

CLOVES.—A sale has been effected at a slight improvement in price.

MACE AND NUTMEGS.—A sale of the former has been effected at our quotation.

PEPPER.—Is in limited transaction, at our last quotations.

TIN.—Has been inquired for, with improvement in prices.

MULE TWIST.—Considerable sales of this Yarn have been effected during the week, at a further reduction in prices throughout the assortments.

TURKEY RED AND ORANGE YARNS.—Have also given way in prices.

CHINTZES.—The market for these fabrics continues flat, and sales of Bengal Stripes and Pines have been effected during the week, at a reduction in prices.

WHITE COTTONS.—The market continues favorable for white Cottons, and the descriptions sought for during the week consisted chiefly of Books and Jaconets at better prices than in the last.

WOOLLENS.—We have not heard of any transaction in these since our last.

COPPER.—The prices of this metal compared with those of last week, show still a further reduction nearly throughout the assortments.

The transactions during the week consist of a few sales Sheathing and Tile.

IRON.—Several Sales have been reported this week, but the prices of round, Square and Nail Rods have slightly declined since our last.

STEEL.—Is quoted below last week's prices throughout the assortments.

LEAD.—Pig Stamped, has also given way in price.

SPELTER, TIN PLATES AND QUICK SILVER.—Without sales and remain as last quoted.

ALIEN LAW—DECISION OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

Extract from the Judgment of the Lords of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, delivered by Lord Brougham, on 22d February, 1837.

The first and by far the most important question brought before us in this case is whether or not the Testator being an alien could devise his real property; in other words, whether or not portion of the English law which incapacitates aliens from holding real estates to their own use, and transmitting them by descent or demise, extends to Calcutta, and to the Mofussil.

As the argument for its extending to Calcutta, is very much stronger than for its extending to the mofussil, it may be well to consider the former in the first place.

It is agreed on all hands, that a foreign settlement obtained in an inhabited country, by conquest or by cession from another power, stands in a different relation to the present question from a settlement made by colonizing, that is peopling an inhabited country. In the latter case it is said that the subjects of the crown carry with them the laws of England, there being of course no lex loci. In the former case it is allowed that the law of the country continues, until the crown or the legislature change it. This distinction to this extent is taken in all the books. It is one of the six propositions stated in Campbell, versus Hall, 1 Cowper 204 as quite clear, and no matter of controversy in the case, and it had been laid down in Colvin's case, 7 Reports, 17, as in Dutton versus Howell Shower, Parliamentary cases, page 24, in Blanchard versus Galdy, Salke's Reports, 441 by Lord Holt, in delivering the judgment of the Court, and no where more distinctly and succinctly, than in the decision of this Court (of Privy Council) of which Sir Joseph Jekyll gives a statement in 2 Peere Williams, 75.

Two limitations of this proposition are added, to which it may be material that we should attend: one of these refers to conquests or cessions. In Colvin's case an exception is made of infidel countries, for which it is said in Dutton versus Howell, (Showers Parliamentary cases 31) that though Lord Coke gives no authority yet it must be admitted as being consonant to reason. But this exception or restriction of the principle is treated in terms as "an absurdity" by Lord Mansfield in delivering the Judgment of the Court) in Campbell versus Hall, in page 209. The other limitation refers to new plantations. Mr. Justice Blackstone, in the first volume of his commentaries, page 106, says that only so much of the English law is carried into them by the settlers as is applicable to their situation, and to the condition of an infant colony; and Sir William Grant, in the case of the Attorney General versus Stewart, 2 Merviale, page 161, applies the same exception even to the case of those conquered or ceded territories into which the English law of property has been generally introduced. Upon the ground he held that the Statute of Mortmain does not extend to the colonies governed by the English law unless it has been expressly introduced there, because it had its origin in a policy peculiarly adapted to the circumstances of the mother country.

Then is Calcutta to be considered as an uninhabited district settled by English subjects, or as an inhabited district obtained by conquest or cession? If falls within the latter description, has the English law incapacitating aliens ever been introduced? If that law has never been introduced has there been such an inroduction of the English law generally that those parts of it which have been introduced draw along with them the law touching aliens?

Answers to these three questions, if they do not exhaust the argument, seem to carry us sufficiently near to the conclusion at which we seek to arrive, and it will include a consideration of the only reason for the propositions upon which the judgment below is mainly rested, viz., that the Royal prerogative extends necessarily, and immediately to all acquisitions, however made, and that the forfeiture of aliens' real Estate is parcel of that prerogative.

With respect to the first question, namely, what is the proper description of Calcutta?—the district on which Calcutta is built, was obtained by purchase from the Nabob of Bengal, the Emperor of Hindoostan's Lieutenant, at the very end of the 17th century. The Company had been struggling for nearly 100 years to obtain a footing in Bengal, and till 1696 they never had more than a factory here and there, as the French, Danes, and Dutch also had. Till 1676, the Company's whole object was to obtain the power of trading, and it was only then that they secured it by a firman from the Emperor. From that year till 1696 they in vain applied to the native Government for leave to fortify their factory on the Hooghly, and it was only then that they did make a fortification, acting upon a kind of half consent given in an equivocal answer of the Nabob. Encouraged by the protection they were thus enabled to afford the natives, many of those natives built houses as well as the English subjects, and when the Nabob on this account was about to send a Cazy or Judge to administer justice to those natives, the Company's servants bribed him to abstain from this proceeding. Some years afterwards the Company obtained a grant of more land and villages from the Emperor with renewed permission to fortify their factories; during all this period tribute was paid to the Emperor or his officer the Nabob, first for leave to trade, afterwards as Zemindars under the Emperor, and in 1757, the year memorable for the battle of Plassey, the treaty was entered into with Jaffir Ally indemnifying them for their losses, ceding the French possessions and securing their rights, binding them to pay their revenues like other "zemindars." Eight years later they received likewise from the native Government a grant of the Dewanny or Receivership of Bengal, Behar and Orissa, and of their subsequent progress in power it is unnecessary to speak. Enough has been said to shew that the settlement of the Company in Bengal was effected by leave of a regularly established Government in possession of the country, invested with the rights of sovereignty and exercising its powers; that by permission of that Government, Calcutta was founded and the factory fortified in a district purchased from the owners of the soil by permission of that Government, and held under that Government by the Company as subjects owing obedience, as tenants rendering rent, and even as officers exercising by delegation a part of its administrative authority.

At what precise time and by what steps they exchanged the character of subject, for that of sovereign, or rather acquired by themselves or with the help of the Crown and for the Crown the rights of sovereignty, cannot be ascertained. The sovereignty has long since been vested in the Crown, and though it was first recognized in terms by the legislature in 1813, the act 53, Geo. 3. c. 155 s. 95 is declaratory and refers to the sovereignty as "undoubted" and as residing in the Crown. But it is equally certain that for a long period of time after the first acquisition no such rights were claimed nor any of the acts of sovereignty exercised, and that during all that time no English authority existed there which could affect the land or bind any but English subjects.

The Company and its servants were then in the situation of the Smyrna or the Lisbon factories at the present time.

The next question is, has the English law incapacitating aliens ever been introduced? It follows from what has been said not only that Calcutta was a district acquired in a country peopled and having a Government of its own, but that for a long course of time no such law as that which incapacitates aliens could be introduced any more than it could now be introduced into such part of the Asiatic or Portuguese territory as those factories may occupy. But even when the sovereignty vested in the Crown, there is every argument of probability against a law being introduced so inapplicable to the circumstances of the settlement. Sir William Grant's reasons for confining the Mortmain act to England have a manifest application to this; for though they are mainly drawn from the provisions of that act being adapted to the peculiar circumstances of the mother country, yet they plainly proceed upon the assumption that the intention of the legislature to confine the operation of the act may be gathered from thence, and it should seem that such intention is even more directly to be gathered from the fact that the provisions in question are manifestly inapplicable to the circumstances of the settlement than from the fact upon which the judgment in the case of the Attorney-General v. Stewart proceeds, namely, the circumstances that gave rise to the act being peculiarly British.

At whatever time the sovereignty was acquired and the power of introducing the alien law became vested in the Crown, the real property of Calcutta must have been held indiscriminately by subjects and by foreigners. The sudden application of such a law is in the highest degree improbable, because it would work great inconvenience and grievous injustice. But if the sovereignty were gradually acquired, if the transition of the Company from the state of subjects under the Mogul to an independent authority was slowly made by imperceptible steps, the introduction of the alien law becomes still more improbable, for no act could then be done by the party obtaining the dominion, nor any stipulation made by the party becoming subjects to secure the rights of the one or restrain the power of the other. This may always be done where a conquest or cession at once vests the sovereignty of a district in one state which had previously belonged to another. The treaty may ascertain and almost always does ascertain the relative rights of the parties as to the property of the country; but in the present case in which the property was gradually and imperceptibly acquired, no such definition could possibly take place, and this exceedingly increases the improbability of such a law ever having been introduced at all.

Nor does the argument rest here; the well known facts are wholly inconsistent with the supposition that this law ever was in operation, and the acts of the sovereign power, the legislative acts of the Crown, and those whom its authority has been delegated, and the acts of the Parliament itself, plainly proceed upon the footing of this law never having extended to Bengal.

The facts must of necessity be numerous and of constant occurrence, for every foreigner holding a house by lease or by freehold tenure affords an instance of the law not being in operation, and no instance has been produced, indeed it is agreed on all hands, that no instance has ever existed of a forfeiture to the Crown for this cause. There is no such thing known in those parts as an inquisition of office or any analogous proceeding or any proceeding whatever for entitling the Crown or those exercising its delegated authority to the real estate or the chattels real of aliens within the district: when those foreigners die their real estates have descended to their heirs, or been taken by their devisees, or been administered as assets by their executors without any claim ever having been made by the sovereign power which would here, in England, have been entitled without any office. Ejectments have been brought and the parties in possession have never been advised to set up the defence that the lessor of the property claimed by descent from an alien, and dower has been assigned to widows alien also.

Previous to 1826, which is long after the present proceedings were instituted and after the first decree in the cause was made, no mention of the subject appears ever to have been made in any place or in any court of justice. Assuredly if the law be as is contended and the Crown by law is entitled, no one can contend that it is too late to declare the law and enforce the right. But the whole question turns upon this, has the law in question been introduced? and the non-claim is material to shew that it has not been introduced, because it has not merely the acquiescence of a party, it is the acquiescence of that power which alone possessed the right to introduce the law and affords strong proof that this power never had introduced it.

But the acts of the same power afford positive evidence yet more distinct. The Charter of the 13th George 1st expressly sets forth that the intention of the Crown is to induce foreigners to settle within the district. No other meaning can be collected from the preamble to that Charter the words are these:—"Whereas the East India Company have, by a strict and equal distribution of justice, very much encouraged not only our own subjects but likewise the subjects of other powers, and the natives of the adjacent countries ('the subjects of other powers,' are clearly put in contradistinction to the native's) to resort to and settle in the said towns, factories and places especially in Calcutta, Madras and Bombay." Then, in order to enable them the better to administer justice, (the due and equal administration of which had, as is stated, the effect of attracting strangers,) Corporations of Mayor and Alderman are constituted in the three presidencies, with power to administer justice, and it is expressly provided that of the nine Aldermen in each presidency, consequently in Calcutta, seven shall be natural borne subjects and two may be subjects of any other prince or state in amity with the Crown; and all of these nine Aldermen, when the provisions come to be made for electing them in case of vacancies, are to be chosen from the principal inhabitants of the presidency.

In the successive renewals of this Charter down to the end of George 2d, the only change that is made in this provision, is adding the qualification, that of the nine Aldermen, the two foreigners shall be Protestants. This Charter could hardly have been so worded had the Crown intended that all aliens should be incapable of holding lands, and it certainly could never have contained the provision that two aliens might hold offices of trust under the Crown, or have directed that all the Aldermen including the aliens should be chosen out of the principal inhabitants, if the general incapacities of aliens by the English law had been introduced into Bengal. For even if their disqualification to hold office can be traced no higher than the statute, there can be no argument raised in favour of the introduction of this part of the English law into Calcutta before the statute of William the 3d was passed.

Observe too, in what way the supreme authority in Bengal, exercising the delegated powers of sovereignty, regards aliens, and mark if it views them as at all on a different footing from subjects in respect of rights of property. The Regulation 38, 1793, was made, as the title states, to enforce the "existing rules against Europeans of any description, holding lands without the sanction of the Governor in Council," and the 3d Section enacts that "no European of whatever nation or description shall purchase, rent, or occupy directly or indirectly any land out of the limits of the Town of Calcutta, without the sanction of the Governor General in Council; and all persons now so holding land beyond the limits of Calcutta, without having obtained such permission in opposition to the repeated prohibition of Government or who may hereafter so purchase, rent, or occupy land, shall be liable to be dispossessed of the land at the discretion of the Governor-General in Council, nor shall they be entitled to any indemnification for buildings, which they may have erected on any account."

No statute made for England could have been so framed. It would have been absurd to prohibit Europeans "of whatever nation or description" doing that which only one class of Europeans, namely, British subjects, could by law do. The provision of the Bengal regulation manifestly proceeds upon the assumption, that persons other than subjects could but for the prohibition and the former rules which it is made to enforce, have held lands. It declares, that aliens as well as subjects shall be liable to be dispossessed of lands purchased contrary to the enactment, which would have been wholly absurd if aliens had been liable to be dispossessed upon offence found, whether the prohibition had been issued or not. It would be difficult to produce a clearer recognition that the sovereign power did not consider that the alien law had never been introduced into Bengal. But it seems also to admit, that in Calcutta, and notwithstanding the prohibition, foreigners as well as subjects might hold lands without licence, for it confines the prohibition to the Mofussil—"out of Calcutta," are the words.

The same inference is still more strongly raised by the statute passed in the year 1528-9 Geo. 4 c. 33; the title is "for declaring and settling the law respecting the liability of the real estates of British subjects and others, (that is, persons other than British subject) within the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts in India, as assets for the payment of the debts of their deceased owners." It declares and enacts "that whenever any British subject shall die seized of, or entitled to, any real estate in houses, lands or hereditaments, or whenever any person not being a Mahomedan or Gentoo shall die so seized or entitled," then "such real estate of such British subject or other person as aforesaid shall be assets; and it afterwards declares the executor or administrator "of such British subject or other person," entitled to sell and dispose of such real estate, and to convey and assure the same to a purchaser in as full and effectual a manner as the Testator or Intestate could or might have done in his life time."

Surely, this could have no meaning, unless persons other than British subjects, that is, aliens, could by law "be seized of or entitled to real estate," and nothing could be more absurd than to declare that the Executors and Administrators of aliens should be entitled to sell the real estates of alien testators or intestates in as full and effectual a manner as the testators or intestates could have done if those testators or intestates could not in any manner or way have sold or demised or in any way dealt with such estates. Suppose such an enactment to have been made in any statute relating to this country and see how absurd it would have been. This seems strongly to prove that our laws as to aliens was not understood by the legislature to have been introduced into India before the year 1828, and yet the earliest of the cases, the only one before the case at bar, had been decided at Calcutta, I think the year before.

But it seems to be contended both here and below, that there is something in the law incapacitating aliens which make it, so to speak, of necessary application wherever the sovereignty of the Crown is established, as if it were inherent in the nature of sovereign power, to which a sufficient answer has been already afforded, if the acts of the sovereign power to which we have referred show that no such application to Bengal ever was contemplated, unless direct authority can be produced to shew that this right is inseparable from the sovereignty and, as it were, an essential part of it. Now there is no intimation of any thing of the kind in these cases, where the whole subject is discussed most at large, as in Colvin's case, where all the doctrines connected, however remotely with each head of the argument are broached in Lord Hale's famous judgment in Collingwood v. Pace in 1st Ventris, in Lord Mansfield's judgment in Hall v. Campbell, nor in the later cases of Doe v. Acklan, &c. But in the absence of any such authority the distinct recognition by the sovereign of the capacity of aliens is itself a strong authority against the position which affirms the title of the Crown to aliens' estate to be inseparable from the sovereignty. At the very least it shews either that the right in question does not exist or that it has been waived and renounced.

It should seem, however, independently of these considerations, that there is no variant in the nature of the thing, for the position that this right is an inherent of sovereignty. In several other countries the sovereign has no right. In France, for example, aliens can hold lands without entitling the Crown, and can transmit them to their heirs, the droit d'aubaine having been abolished at the Revolution and the proviso of reciprocity at the Restoration, the law providing that the heir of the alien possessed of lands in France shall succeed to those lands upon his decease, provided that the same law holds in the country to which the alien belongs in favor of a French subject claiming to transmit by succession to his heir in that country. But that has been repealed in 1814 upon the Restoration, and now the law stands discharged, as it were, of that proviso. Besides, if reference be made to the prerogative of the English Crown, that prerogative in other particulars is of as high a nature being given for the same purposes of protecting the state, and it is not contended that these branches of the prerogative are extended to Bengal. Mines of precious metals, treasure, the royal fish are all vested in the Crown for the purpose of sustaining its power and enabling it to defend the state. They are not enjoyed by the sovereign in all or even in most countries, and no one has said that they extend to the East Indian possessions of the British Crown.

Can it then be contended in the third place, that the general introduction of the English law draws after it or with it that branch which relates to aliens? This is the third question proposed, and to this an answer or the materials for an answer have already been furnished; for had the negative position only rested upon want of instances, where the right of the Crown had been enforced, it might have been said that the general application of English laws, implied that of the portion in question. But the acts of the power which alone could introduce this portion, and which alone introduced the English laws generally, shew, that it was introduced not in all its branches but with the exception of this portion at the least. This must be admitted, unless it can be maintained, that there is no possibility of introducing the English law at all without introducing every part of them, which clearly cannot be asserted, for notwithstanding the extent to which these laws have been introduced, it is allowed on all hands, that many parts of them are still unknown in our Indian dominions.

The arguments to which we are advertent assumed, that the English laws regulating real property generally, have been introduced, and for this position the case of Freeman v. Fairlie, has been cited; but that case only decided that the estate in laws and tenements of a British subject in Calcutta, was of such a nature as descend to him according to the English law of succession.—That it was freehold of inheritance. It is true that this conclusion was reached by the adoption of the largest position that the English law had been introduced into the settlement, but whatever went beyond the point of the land, being freehold of inheritance, was obiter, and cannot be said, to have been decided. It must further be observed, that the grounds of the more general position were chiefly the practice of the settlement in regard to the mode of conveyance, viz., by lease and release with the course of succession, and also the Charters of the Company with acts of parliament referring to them, the Charter of the 13th Geo. 1st (1726) being the one principally cited. Now, no one who reads that able judgment can entertain a doubt that the same learned judge, had he been, called upon to determine whether or not the law extended to alien incapacities, if he found the practice wholly against this extension, on which practice he had mainly relied in disposing of the question as to whether the land was freehold of inheritance or not,—if he had found that without any exception the practice was wholly against this usage,—if he had also found the language of the Charters especially that of 1726, as well as the provisions of the Regulations of 1793 and of the act passed in 1828, all proceeding upon the supposition, or assumption, or understanding of aliens being equally capable with subjects of holding and transmitting real property, there is no doubt that he would have decided against extending and applying to the law of alienage the proposition which in the want of one class of cases and in the presence of an opposite class of cases he had laid down upon that branch of the English law connected with the case then under his immediate consideration.

If indeed the whole English law of real property, of even all its principal provisions, have been introduced into these settlements, an event which must have taken place many years back, how came it to pass, that as late as 1819, there could have been any question made whether or not, wills to pass real estate must be witnessed according to the provisions of the statute of frauds? Yet it was then,—and while Freeman v. Fairlie was pending before the same Court for the first time,—determined that those provisions extended to Calcutta, determined too upon a full enquiry into the facts; and examining evidence of persons conversant with the Indian law and its, is plain from the enquiry which Sir William Grant had directed, and from what Sir Thomas Plumer afterwards says, in giving judgment in Gardiner v. Fell in 1st Jacob and Walker page 29, that the mere proof of property being fee simple, and inheritable by the English law, was not sufficient to prove that the statute of frauds touching its transmission to devisees, extended to property in that country. But a further enquiry was directed, whether it passed by the will without more than two subscribing witnesses: nor can any distinction be taken between that case and the present, upon the ground that there the question related to the introduction of a statute, and that here the introduction of the common Law is in dispute; for in Freeman v. Fairlie and in almost every question that can be raised, touching the application of the forms of conveyance known in our law, the agreement is confined entirely to assurances which are the creatures of statute, no instance ever having been produced of land passing in Calcutta by the common law conveyance of Feoffment and Livery. The introduction of the English law is proved by shewing that the mode of conveyance is adopted by lease and release, that is upon the statutes of uses.

Reference has been made both here and in the Court below to the opinion of Sir F. Norton in 1764, and the true account of that opinion was given here, though it does not seem to have been accurately understood below. It holds very distinctly, that the subjects of a conquered or a ceded territory are only to be considered as not being aliens by virtue of the treaty, which gives them the rights of subjects, and that none but such as can claim the benefit of the treaty, can hold or transmit lands. We say this is the purport of the opinion, and that it was so represented here, for indeed the argument maintained by the Crown, requires the proposition to be carried thus far—requires to be contented that upon a conquest or cession, all the inhabitants continue aliens after the change of dominion, unless and until the conqueror or purchaser grants them naturalization.

But this position seems wholly untenable, for all the authorities lay it down, that upon a conquest the inhabitants ante nati as well as post nati of the conquering country, become denizens of the conquered country. It is so laid down in Colvill's case in two several parts of it; and to maintain that the conquered people become aliens to their new Sovereign, upon his accession to the dominion over them, appears extremely absurd—almost as inconsistent with common sense, as it would have been to hold English inhabitants aliens under James the first, at a time when there was even a question raised, whether the ante nati of Scotland did not become by his accession denizens of England. The Court below, it must be observed, distinctly admit, that conquest operates as a virtual naturalization. But Sir F. Norton holds without expressly stating his opinion, he proceeds upon the supposition, that without express provision in a treaty the subjects conquered are aliens.

Even if all the rest of the argument be admitted, still it cannot be denied, that the Crown may relinquish its prerogative; and, indeed, whenever the inhabitants of conquered provinces are held to obtain the right of subjects by treaty, even Sir F. Norton has no doubt of this being possible, those who hold the doctrine most rigorously must say, that the treaty is a voluntary abandonment of a right of the Crown. It evidences the will of the sovereign, to exempt the conquered territory from this branch of his prerogative. But the same will or the Sovereign may be collected from other circumstances, and the like abandonment of the prerogative be thus evidenced. The Charters, the Regulations, and the Act of Parliament, to which reference has so often been made, appear sufficient circumstances from which to collect this will of the sovereign and to prove the abandonment in the present case, and this even upon the supposition that in consequence of the prerogative being generally admitted the proof lies on those who would set up an exemption on those who would shew that the English law of forfeiture was not introduced into Calcutta rather than on those who undertake the affirmative proposition.

Upon the whole, their Lordships are of opinion, that the law incapacitating aliens from holding real property to their own use, and transmitting it by descent or devise, has never been introduced into Calcutta. There appears still less reason to hold that it has ever obtained a footing in the Mofussil, but into the additional grounds for differing from the Court below upon that part of the case, it is unnecessary to enter, as we consider that the decree must be reversed upon the part relating to the Calcutta property, and therefore can have no doubt as to pursuing the same course with the part relating to the Mofussil property.

Upon this branch of the cause, therefore, it will be necessary to reverse that part of the decree which declares, that the testator having been an alien at his decease, his lands and houses in Calcutta could not pass by his will, and that there was not evidence sufficient to determine whether or not the testator's lands and hereditaments in the mofussil could pass by his will together with the consequential directions, and then to declare, after reversing that, that all the real property of which the testator died seized within the Presidency of Fort William, whether in Calcutta or not, except in Chandernagore, passed by his will and formed part of the residue; and an enquiry must be directed as to the nature and tenure of the property at Chandernagore and the usages and laws prevailing there touching the right of an European alien to devise the same, but confining the enquiry directed by the decree to such property—that is the property at Chandernagore, and also to ascertain what part of the funds now standing to the account of the cause has arisen from the rents and profits of the property at Chandernagore and the interests of those rents and profits.—Bengal Harkaru, July 3.

THE BANK OF BENGA.—Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

LORD BROUGHAM.—This was an appeal from the Judgment of the Supreme Court of Calcutta, in an action brought by the Assignees of J. Palmer and Co. against the Bank of Bengal in which a verdict had been taken by Consent subject to the opinion of a Court on a special case.

The case stated that Palmer and Co. had been in the habit of obtaining loans from the Bank on the deposit of Company's negotiable paper as well as on the discount of their own and other securities. That in the month of November, 1829, Palmer and Co. obtained in this way six several loans from the Bank, amounting in the whole to 417,000 sicca rupees, depositing Company's paper to the amount of 460,000 sicca rupees, and giving their own promissory notes at three months' date for the sums thus advanced by the Bank. By these six promissory notes Palmer and Co. engaged to pay the several sums advanced with interest, and each note contained a further statement that so much Company's paper had been deposited for the reimbursement of the Bank at the expiration of the three months' credit, rendering to Palmer and Co. any surplus arising from such sale, and with an undertaking of Palmer and Co. to make good any deficiency, and to pay 12 per cent interest from the expiration of the credit until the debt should be discharged or the paper be sold.

The several credits expired in February 1830,—the first on the 15th of that month and the last on the 28th, and on the 4th of January, whilst the whole of the loans remained unpaid and the whole of the deposits were in the hands of the Bank unsold, Palmer and Co. were adjudged

Insolvent under the 9th of Geo. 4th, and the plaintiffs were appointed Assignees of their Estate and Effects.

At the same period, the 4th of January, the Bank held two promissory notes of Palmer and Co.'s at three months' date for 40,000 and 60,000 sicca rupees, payable, the former the 24th of January and the latter the 7th February 1830. These notes the Bank held as indorsees for value, Palmer and Co. having discounted them with the Bank in the ordinary course of business and before the first of the six loans, viz. on the 21st of October and the 4th November 1829.

None of the loans being paid by the Insolvents or their Assignees, the Bank proceeded to sell the paper deposited according to the terms of the agreements, and there remained a surplus upon the six sales of 30,176 10 8, after paying off the several loans with the interest stipulated. For this sum with the interest at 5 per cent. after the dates of the several sales the action was brought. The Bank sought to set off the sum due upon the two promissory notes which they held as indorsees for value, and which remained unpaid against the surplus of the deposits made upon the subsequent loans, and the Court, on the case reserved, being of opinion that this set off was competent to the Bank, gave Judgment for the defendants, which was entered up the 29th of August 1833, and is now brought before this Court by appeal.

The Act under which the proceedings were had upon Palmer and Co.'s Insolvency (9th Geo. 4 chap. 73) contains a provision sect. 36, similar to the 50 sect. of the English Act 6. Geo. 4th, chap. 16, touching mutual debts and credit, and although there are some words of the latter omitted, particularly those respecting "mutual debts between the parties" and those requiring the Commissioners to state the amount between them, "yet as there is a very general declaration that all such debts due and claims as may be proved and a commission of bankruptcy according to the Act of 6. Geo. 4th may also be proved in a proceeding under this act in the same manner and subject to the like deductions and provisions as in the 6. Geo. 4th, are set forth and described, it is manifest that the proceedings are entirely assimilated that the difference in the preceding portion of the section is immaterial, and that the present question is to be dealt with and disposed of exactly as if it had arisen in a proceeding in bankruptcy under the English Acts.

It is equally clear that in this case the question turns upon the right of set off given by the Statute, which extended the set off recognized by the Common law (anonymous one Modern 215 and versus two Vernon.) But for that extension it never could be contended that the Bank had a lien upon the securities deposited beyond the amount of the money advanced upon the credit of those securities, since even in the most favourable view which could be taken, that of the Bank being Palmer and Co.'s Bankers, the lien per the general balance of the customers account would, in this case, be restricted by the circumstances in which the deposit was made. This is clearly admitted in Davis versus Bowsher, 5 Term Rep. 488 where the general lien of Bankers was first distinctly ascertained. Nor can it be said that the debt due by Palmer and Co. on the promissory notes discounted had any connection with their deposit of the Securities; for that debt was contracted before those securities were deposited, and the Bank could not have had them in contemplation when it discounted the notes.

The claims of the Bank is accordingly rested upon the 50 sect. of the Bankrupt act, which is taken from the 28 section of the 5 Geo. 2d chap. 30, with such additions as were supposed necessary for enabling contingent debts to be set off since these were by the new act made proveable. Every debt or demand made proveable by the act against the estate of the bankrupt, may by this 50th sect. be set off "against such estate," that is against any debt or demand of the Bankrupt's Estate. But the former provision is retained with the addition of the said "demand" taken from 46 Geo. 3d, namely, that where mutual credit has been given by the Bankrupt and any other person, or where there are mutual debts between the Bankrupt and any other person, the Commissioners shall state the account between them and one debt or demand may be set against another, and the balance only be claimed or paid on either side.

The question then is whether or not there were mutual credits or mutual debts between the parties to the transaction now under consideration. That there was both a debt from Palmer and Co. to the Bank and a credit from the Bank to them is undeniable. The Company were both previously indebted on their notes discounted, and by the money advanced on the deposits, but that is not enough, unless either the Bank was admitted to them or they had in the Bank credit. The only question then is had or not the Company given the Bank credit before the bankruptcy within the meaning of the Act—in other words was the deposit of the negotiable paper with power to sell, and pay over the surplus in case the advance made on it, should not be repaid a credit given by the bank to the Company? If it was a credit we may further observe that it was so only to the extent of the surplus, for as far as regarded the monies advanced to secure which the deposit was made—that deposit was only in present a bailment and even in future a payment of Palmer and Co.'s debt to the Bank. The question is whether or no the deposit quoad the surplus amounted to a credit given, whether or not Palmer and Co. giving the Bank a power to possess themselves of the surplus after repaying themselves their own debt when that debt should become due, can be said to be a giving of credit to the Bank.

Now although generally speaking debt and credit are co-relative terms and A giving credit to B may seem to imply that B is indebted to A, yet it may be admitted that the introduction of the words "mutual credit" extends to the right of set off to cases where the party receiving the credit is not debtor in present to him who gives the credit, accordingly the relation contemplated by the statute has been held to be established where the debt is immediately due from the one party and only due at a future day from the other. It was so held in ex parte Prescott and Atkyns, where the mutual credit was constituted by simple contract debts presently due on the one side and a speciality debt not due on the other. Smith v. Hodson, 4 term Rep. Hankey v. Smith 3 term Rep. and many other cases affirm the same doctrine, but in none of those cases was there any uncertainty as to the party said to receive the credit becoming sooner or later debtor in present to the other, in none of them did the existence of the relation of debtor or creditor depend upon the pleasure of one party,—in all of them the party said to have given the credit had placed the other party in a situation which he himself could not alter, had given him funds of which he could not dispossess him, or which is the same thing, a power over funds which he could not revoke. The case is materially different where one of the parties has actually become indebted to the other and can only cease to be so by paying the debt; but the other has only acquired a power which may end in making him debtor, or not, according as the donor of the power pleases. A is indebted to B and B is neither actually indebted to A, nor under any liability which must needs end in his being A's debtor; but has only been intrusted with a power over A's funds to be executed at a future time if A pleases, but if A thinks proper never to be executed at all, admitting that in the event of A never revoking the power a debt will arise, the existence of that debt is de-seizable; the only certainty is, that A in order to revoke the power must do an act wholly unconnected with giving B any credit, namely discharge a debt due to B. Now it is not denied that Palmer and Co. could at any time have prevented the Bank from ever receiving the surplus, in respect of the possibility of which surplus arising, the credit is supposed to have been given by repaying the monies advanced, they could regain possession of the deposit and the power of sale was determined without any consent of the Pawnee.

Again not only did the existence of any debts at any time depend upon the depositor, but he had no such debts as could have been proved under a commission against the Pawnee. The words added "and every debt or demand hereby made proveable" to the recent act for the purpose of including contingent debts, shew that debts in order to be set off are supposed proveable, which indeed appears to follow from the nature of the case. Suppose the Bank of Bengal had been made bankrupt before selling the paper, it is clear that Palmer and Co. could not have proved against their Estate for the contingent surplus. The paper was deposited to answer a specific purpose, and if any use had been made of it, inconsistent with the terms of the deposit, the Pawnee would have committed an offence, a breach of trust, certainly a transportable offence if the Bankers Act (52 Geo. 3d) extends to Bengal.

But unless the power of sale was executed by the Pawnee (in which case he became the debtor at once) however could he said to have contracted a debt either present or contingent to the Pawnee and consequently the pawner could make nothing.

Next it must be observed, that though the question is on the statute, and though the statutory right of set off extends, the right known to the common law, yet the Common law principle of mutuality which is of the essence of set off, must prevail, and if the deposit or rather its surplus could not be set off against the demand of the pawnee, so neither shall the pawner's debt be set off against the surplus. Lord Hardwicke appears to have mainly proceeded on this view in ex parte Ackendon Atkyns. Could the Miller, he asks, have refused to deliver up the corn in an action at the Cornfactor's instance, by claiming to set off a debt due unconnected with the deposit, and vice versa, could the Cornfactor have set off the value of the corn in an action by the Miller for money lent at a former time? Holding that both questions must be answered in the negative, he considers this as decisive against the Miller's right to set off the debt antecedently due from the Donor, and Lord Mansfield, in giving the Judgment of the Court of King's Bench, some years after in Green v. Farmer, in 4 Burr. 2,324, after reading his own note of ex parte Ackendon, observes that Lord Hardwicke, though he could not construe a dealing to be within the mutual credit clause of the bankrupt act, unless it could be so construed in an action of Trover; and adds "That certainly is so." But if the same test be applied to the present case there is an end of the question. For first no one contends that had Palmer and Co. repaid the monies advanced on the deposit, the Bank could have retained the paper for their antecedent debt, which is one of the points made by Lord Hardwicke, and next had the Bank brought their action upon the notes which they held as indorsees, it is manifest that Palmer and Co. never could have set off the surplus which might arise from the sale of the paper deposited, which is the second of Lord Hardwicke's points.

No doubt the case would have been altogether different had the Bank actually sold the paper and received the surplus prior to the bankruptcy; for then they would have been debtors in that amount to Palmer and Co. and the case would have been one of mutual debts; supposing the notes discounted then due, or supposing them not yet due, it would have been a case of credit given to Palmer and Co. by them, and of debt due from them to Palmer and Co. and so clearly within the statute—this is the case of Atkinson v. Elliott, in 7 Term Rep. but is wholly different from the case at bar.

There is nothing inconsistent with what has now been advanced in this decision, or in the language used by the Court of Common Pleas in the case of Rose v. Hart, 8 Taunton 499, where the former case of Olive v. Smith, 5 Taunton 55, was reconsidered and a material qualification added to the generality of the doctrine which had there been laid down. In Cvile v. Smith, a broker had been allowed to set off a debt antecedently due from his employer against the losses recovered from the underwriters on Policies deposited in his hands. In Rose versus Hart, the Court held that such a set off is only competent to the Pawnee in cases where the thing alleged to be a giving of credit either constitutes a present cross debt or must end in one. This limitation of the case of Olive versus Smith, has in subsequent cases been approved and followed, Sampson versus Burton two Brodks. and Bing.—Rose versus Sims one Barnewall and Adolphus, and although the Court in Easum versus Cato, five Barnewall and Adolp. appeared to hold that it was enough if the transaction would most likely terminate in a debt, yet it is to be remarked that the argument went entirely upon other grounds, and the decision cannot be justly said to have relaxed, the restriction by which the Court of Common Pleas had in Rose versus Hart qualified its former opinion. If it be admitted that there can arise no right of set off in respect of mutual credit unless the dealing be at the time of the Bankruptcy such as necessarily and at all events to terminate in creating the relation of debtor and creditor, between the parties; then is the present case out of that rule and the Bank's claim of set off defeated—nor will the reversal of the judgment below be found repugnant to any of the cases except ex parte Doize and Olive versus Smith, of which the latter appears to have proceeded almost, if not altogether, upon the authority of the former, not to mention that it falls in some manner within the scope of Lord Mansfield's observation in French versus Fenn to be afterwards cited.

It is impossible to regard ex parte Doize as resting on the ground upon which the report in Atkyns places it; and although Lord Mansfield in Green versus Farmer, seems to vouch for the accuracy of that report as well as of the report in the same Book, of ex parte Ackandion, he nevertheless refers to Lord Hardwicke's statement, in the latter case, that in the former there had been some evidence of a usage, and gives it as the result of his own enquiry respecting ex parte Doize—that the Packer (the Pawnee) was by the usage in the nature of a Factor, a reference which we have made to Lord Hardwicke's original note books has confirmed this statement, that the power of usage was made and evidence adduced respecting it. From hence and from Lord Hardwicke's subsequent decision in ex parte Ackandion, as well as from what has been said both in the Common Pleas on King vs. Flint eight Faunt; and by Lord Eldon in ex parte Flint first, Swanston, it may be considered that ex parte Doize is no longer law as reported in Atkyns, and that but for a special custom giving the Pawnee a General lien, the mere deposit whether of goods or of securities for a particular purpose, as it certainly will not constitute the Pawnee, a debtor, so it will not amount to a giving of the credit at all, unless coupled with an authority given to the Pawnee of selling them, such power being given absolutely and not countermandable.

But it is equally certain that Olive versus Smith, was decided upon the assumption that ex parte Doize is a binding authority, and when we said that the language of the Court, in Rose versus Hart so materially varies and narrows the principle which had been the guide in the former decision, and that the case itself is disposed of in a way not easily reconcilable with Olive versus Smith, and in no way whatever reconcilable with the report of ex parte Doize upon which Olive versus Smith had been grounded, and that the view now taken may be reconciled with the latter and more correct or rather more authentic opinions of Lord Hardwicke and with the latter and more correct opinions of the Court of Common Pleas, there seems to be no good reason for supporting a claim which is both at variance with principle, and runs counter to a greater weight of authority, than can be produced in support of it.

With respect to the case of Parker versus Carter, it may be observed that the defendants rested their title to set off upon a lien which they claimed to have "as general agents of the Bankrupt, and the report of the case in Cooke's Bankrupt Law, 578, gives this as the ground of the decision in their favor. Gibbs, justice in Olive versus Smith, five Taunton, though on the granting of the Rule Nisi he states it (Parker versus Carter), as a case of mutual credit, yet afterwards the particulars having been enquired into seems to admit that it was a case lien p. 65, and accordingly he rests his judgment mainly upon ex parte Doize and mentions also ex parte Bayle and French versus Fenn.

Ex parte Boyle, Cooke's Bankrupt Law, 561, was the case of a Client who owed a sum to his Solicitor for work done and money lent, and who gave the Solicitor by way of loan his notes of hand to a larger amount, part of which notes were not due and not paid by him till after the Solicitor's bankruptcy. Here the notes payable to the solicitor's order at the Client's bankers were treated as a loan by the parties at the date of the bankruptcy, the lender of the notes had become liable to pay at all events the contents of them to holders chosen at the solicitor's pleasure, they being made payable to the order of the solicitor, and nothing could prevent this liability from ending in a debt from the Solicitor, to the Client, but the Solicitor himself repaying the money advanced upon them, the Client could not by any act of his own prevent his money coming into the hands of the Solicitor, or of the payee chosen by him to a fixed amount and at specified times. This case, therefore, comes clearly within the restriction imposed by the case of Rose versus Hart, on the doctrine laid down in Olive versus Smith, and the same observation applies to ex parte Wagstaff, 13 Vesey, where the credit in question arose from an acceptance of the bankrupt payable after the bankruptcy, but certainly payable then.

The case of French versus Fenn, reported in 3 Douglas and Cooke's bankrupt law, is also distinguishable from the one at bar, although it must be allowed to have gone further than any decision which preceded it, excepting ex parte Doize. But it does not appear that the Debt against which the price of the Pearls when sold was allowed to be set off, was in any part contracted before the agreement respecting the Pearls, and Lord Mansfield expressly says that Fenn "had trusted Cox (the bankrupt) with other goods which in all probability he would not have done but for the pearls being left in his (Fenn's) hands." This would make this case nearly the same with Demambry versus Metcalfe, 2 Vernon 698, where Lord Cowper relies mainly upon the debt set off, being in fact an advance made on the Pawn. Lord Mansfield in French versus Fenn, seems also to rely much on the circumstance peculiar to that case of the other two partners in the adventure (Cox and Holford) having agreed to allow Fenn interest on the money which he had advanced to pay for the pearls in the first instance; and one thing is quite clear, viz. that by the nature of the transaction the rights of each partner until sale being to an undivided third, and Fenn having the deposit for sale neither of the others could have obtained his share. Nay, both the others joining could not have obtained their shares, nor gotten the whole pearls out of the Pawnee's hands until the sale which must at once render the credit to the Pawnee certain. If it be said that Cox might have assigned his right to his share of the eventual price, minus his proportion of the purchase money (in the same way that Palmer and Co. might have assigned their right to the contingent surplus) then it must be also observed that the consideration takes the case out of the Rule laid down in Rose versus Hart, and could not stand with the decision in Rose versus Hart. It ought to be observed further that ex parte Doize was relied upon expressly by Mr. Justice Buller, in deciding French versus Fenn, both Lord Mansfield and Mr. Justice Buller, seem to have been very much influenced by what they term considerations of General Justice.

Upon the whole, then, we are of opinion that the Judgment in this case must be reversed, and that the verdict taken by consent subject to the opinion of the Court should stand, and the Poitea be delivered to the Plaintiff. The interest too must be calculated subsequent to the time up to which the verdict for interest was taken, and this must be added to the verdict. There will be no difficulty I presume in respect to the calculation of interest for the interest is specified as interest at 6 per cent.

Mr. Saire. There will be no difficulty about that my Lord.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 7.

Council office, Whitehall, Monday, 5th December, 1835.

JANNOKLE DOSS, Appellant.

THE KING ON THE PROSECUTION OF BINDERBUN DOSS

Respondent.

Copy from Mr. Gurney's short hand notes.

JUDGMENT.

MR. JUSTICE BOSANQUET.—The Appellant in this case having been convicted upon an indictment for conspiring with others at Calcutta wrongfully to cause the Prosecutor to be arrested and imprisoned without reasonable or probable cause, applied to the Supreme Court for a new trial which was refused. But the Court pursuant to the seventeenth Section of the Charter of the 26th March 1774, gave him leave to appeal from that refusal to His Majesty in Council. Upon the hearing of this Appeal three points were made—1st. That the caption or the indictment was defective for want of stating that the indictment had been found by twelve Jurors—2d. That as the Appellant, a native of Benares, had never been in Calcutta and was actually resident at Benares when the offence was committed, he was not subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court—3dly. That the evidence given at the trial was insufficient to support the conviction, or at least that upon the weakness of that evidence, and the affidavits produced in opposition to it, the Appellant was entitled to a new trial.

None of these points is not a matter for consideration on this occasion which is an appeal from a refusal to grant a new trial. The motion for a new trial was made in the Supreme Court and no judgment has been given. If the Appellant should be called upon to receive judgment, he may, if so advised, move to arrest the judgment and the Court will deal with that motion as may be thought fit.

The second point respecting the jurisdiction of the Court, is involved in the question whether the change of the Appellant having in Calcutta conspired with others for the purpose stated in the indictment was sufficiently proved. The offence with which the Appellant is charged is a misdemeanour, and if he, though resident at Benares, was privy to and procured and co-operated in a conspiracy with others who were in Calcutta, to cause the prosecutor to be wrongfully arrested there, he was guilty of that misdemeanour, and was chargeable with having committed it in Calcutta under the general jurisdiction of the Supreme Court over all persons who commit offences there. This very point was lately decided in this place upon an Appeal from Bombay in the case of Poonchaholy Moodcheer, who was indicted for uttering a forged receipt in Bombay which by the 53d Geo. 3, cap. 155, section 115, is made a misdemeanour. He was at the time when the offence was committed at a great distance from Bombay.

Two questions were argued with respect to the jurisdiction; first, whether the defendant was subject to the general and local jurisdiction of the Court; and secondly, if not, whether he was subject to the personal jurisdiction, in respect of his service rendered to the East India company. The second ground was not taken by the Advocate-General in the Court below, who had professedly put the case upon the first ground, and the Judicial Committee thought it quite unnecessary to pronounce any opinion upon the second ground, "being of opinion that the facts of the case established the point that the offence charged in the indictment was committed in Bombay." After examining the evidence at considerable length the Committee expressed their opinion, that the Jury were warranted in finding that Poonchaholy was privy to the transactions and consequently was a participator in the misdemeanour. If that was so, they proceed to say the question arises whether being a participator in this misdemeanour he could be charged with having committed the offence in Bombay. Now it has been repeatedly decided, that where a misdemeanour is completed, the offence may be charged to have been committed; a variety of authority may be found upon this subject, several of those are cases where the jurisdictions within which the different parts of the transaction occurred are of totally different kinds. Notwithstanding which the indictment has been supported in the place where no offence has been laid, such being the place in which the misdemeanour was completed. There are cases of nuisance, of libel, of fraud, of cheat, and of conspiracy. The authorities referred to were Hawkins's Pleas of the Crown Book 2, chap. 25, sec. 27; Rex. v. Johnson 7; East 65; Rex. v. Brysee 4, East 165; Rex. v. Combes 1; East's Pleas of the Crown, chap. 5, sec. 131; 1 Leach's Crown Cases 388, sec. 6. Supposing therefore it was said, that an ordinary person, whether a native of the provinces or a Portuguese or any other foreigner, had procured the offence to be committed, there is no doubt he would, under the authority of these cases, have been liable to be prosecuted for the statutable misdemeanour completed in Bombay, as a person subject to the general jurisdiction of the Recorder's Court. It was further suggested, however, in that case, that the defendant was not subject at all to the jurisdiction of the Courts of the British Government, because he was resident out of the British territories, and within the dominion of the Peishwah, an independent Prince; but whether he was or was not in the service of the East India Company, was to subject as such to the personal jurisdiction of the Court; it was said to be clear that he was employed in the Camp of the British forces then engaged in the Deccan, under the authority of the British Government, in the dominions of the

Prishwah, and he was therefore under the protection of the British laws, and consequently owed obedience to them according to the rule and maxim of law, "Proteccio trahit subjectionem et subjection trahit protectionem," and having been guilty of an offence which was committed by this procurement within the local limits of Bombay, he was indictable there as much as if he had been personally within those limits at the time, upon the same principle as Judge Johnson was indictable in Middlesex, though he was never out of Ireland. In the present case it is sufficient to say, that the Appellant was resident at Benares, which is within British Territories in India, and was consequently liable to be indicted in the Supreme Court for an offence committed in Calcutta in respect of which the British law subjects all offenders to be indicted there. The remaining question to be considered, is whether satisfactory proof has been given of the Appellant's participation in the offence. It appears by the evidence of the prosecutor Bunderbun Doss, that in the month of August (which corresponds to Strabun) in the year 1828, the respondent was brought to Calcutta upon an attachment issued upon a cross bill against him filed in the name of the Appellant, that a person named Juggernath, one of the defendants, was the Appellant's Agent at Calcutta, and that he, together with other defendants then in Calcutta, conspired to procure Bunderbun's imprisonment and detention by means of a fabricated document purporting to acknowledge a debt of 12,000 rupees due from Bunderbun to one Ramchunder, another defendant, who had absconded. The indictment was found in December 1828; in March or April following, four months before the trial, that is in the month Chyite, 1829, Bunderbun came from Benares to Calcutta, upon the account of this indictment, and did not return to Benares before the trial which took place in August 1829. To prove the Appellant's connection with this transaction in Calcutta; two witnesses were called. Munkaram Doss, the first witness, says, that about the time of Bunderbun's arrest, Jannokee called to him from the window of his cootee, and the witness went to him upstairs. Jannokee said, "I hear you are going to Calcutta with Bunderbun." I said, "yes." He said "do not go, if you do go you will be put to trouble for nothing, —he is going from hence in custody,—other complaints may then be made and he will not get his liberty." That Jannokee shewed him a letter and said, "here is a letter informing me that when he gets to Calcutta other complaints will be preferred against him," and Jannokee said "I have also written to Calcutta directing that when he reaches he shall not obtain his liberty." Gannut Doss, the 7th witness, says, that he entered Bunderbun's service last Chayte, which was March or April 1829. Jannokee called to him and said, "your Baboo is going to Calcutta, but what is the use of his going? let him take 20,000 rupees and give Rutterana (Deed of Compromise)." Bunderbun was then coming for this case pending at the Session about the 12,000 rupees. He says Bunderbun did give an answer, but the witness did not communicate it to Jannokee. If due credence be given to those two witnesses, their testimony certainly affords some evidence from which the Appellant's privity to some attempt to procure the respondents detention at Calcutta, and a desire to compromise the matter after the indictment had been found, may be inferred. But it is to be observed, that these witnesses speak to conversations only, obviously liable to be misinterpreted as well as misrepresented, and it was scarcely possible that the Appellant could anticipate the testimony to be adduced against him, so as to be prepared at the trial either to explain or contradict it by witnesses on his part; no evidence was adduced on the part of the prosecution, of his having done any act to promote the success of the particular fraud attempted. On his part, he has by his own affidavit not only denied all knowledge of the transaction, but all the conversation with either of the witnesses, and all acquaintance with them and the great improbability of their account is corroborated by the affidavits of several persons. An application to set aside a verdict of conviction, founded on affidavits made after the trial, is always to be looked upon with very great jealousy. But when the evidence, without contradiction, is of so slightly a nature as it is in this case, and the Appellant could not be expected to offer evidence in opposition to it for want of knowledge that it would be adduced against him, their Lordships are of opinion that an opportunity ought to be afforded him of laying before a Jury such evidence in his defence as he may be able to offer upon another trial.—New trial directed.

We hereby certify that the above is a correct copy from the short hand writer's notes of the judgment of the Privy Council in this case as delivered by Mr. Justice Bosanquet.

TOWN AND TRANSIT DUTIES.

We insert to day the reply from the Supreme Government, on the subject of the recent Petition of the Merchants of this Presidency, in regard to the Town and Transit Duties, praying for their abolition, and also for the adoption of measures for the improvement of the internal communications of this Presidency. It will be seen at a glance, that the cautious and deliberate procedure marked out by this document, as the best and most prudent to follow, in considering the question of the general abolition of these duties throughout India, has not been observed in regard to Bengal, where the course taken has been quite at variance with the slow and steady measures, a submission to which is inculcated on the minor Presidencies. The impolitic and vexatious effects of the Town and Transit duties, and the benefits that would result from their repeal, are readily admitted by the Supreme Government, and yet it is intimated that there is little chance of this boon being extended to Bombay and Madras for a considerable time to come, and Bombay is to be satisfied as to its own share of hardship, by the assurance that these duties are felt to be yet more vexatious and oppressive in Madras; the consolation however to be derived from contemplating the misfortunes, even of our best friends, is but small satisfaction to those who are wincing under the diversion of much of the legitimate and regular Trade of Bombay from its natural channel, in consequence of the abolition of these duties in Bengal and Agra. The Supreme Government for all India, has been charged with leaning in a variety of instances, to the local interests of that Presidency, which happens for a while to be the seat of the Supreme Authority, but in no case has this partiality been more clearly manifested, than in the immediate extension of the abolition of the transit duties to Bengal. So was the advantage that Agra had gained by the measure of Sir Charles Metcalfe (Mr. Rose, Esq. Cal. Courier.) to the injury of the rest of India, that no time was lost in placing Bengal, but Bengal only, on an equal footing, and that without waiting for any scale of substituted duties, or Reports from a Committee of Customs. Calcutta has now been in enjoyment of the boon for a space of fourteen months, and yet up to this date, as far as we are concerned, the mere consideration of the measure is all that is held out. The Supreme Government may or may not have involved themselves in some embarrassment by the steps already taken, but to stop short at the expense of Bombay and Madras, seems to require a more satisfactory exposition of state policy, than is conveyed by the well turned periods, and soft expressions, of the document now put forward.

While on the subject we cannot refrain from again noticing the time occupied in deliberations as to extending the Bonding system to Bombay. This beneficial measure is, we see by the Calcutta papers, in actual operation there.

To J. P. WILLOUGHBY, Esq.

Secretary to the Government of Bombay.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated 6th instant, forwarding the Petition of the Merchants of Bombay on the subject of the Town and Transit duties of that Presidency and the adoption of measures for the improvement of its internal Communications, and to request that you will communicate to the Petitioners the following reply.

2nd. The Governor-General of India in Council very readily admits the impolitic and vexatious effects of the Town and Transit duties, the substantial benefit which may be expected to the population from their repeal, and the probability that any loss of public income incurred in consequence would ultimately more than be replaced by improvements in the general resources of the country; but the petitioners will feel that there may be many measures even of certain ultimate advantage which may be dearly purchased at the price of immediate financial embarrassment, and will, it is hoped, admit the necessity of cautious and deliberate proceeding in changes which will affect in the three presidencies an amount of public revenue of not less than sixty lakhs of rupees. The petitioners too will be well aware that however heavily these taxes have weighed upon Bengal and yet press upon Bombay that their action is felt to be yet more vexatious and oppressive in Madras, and that in asking for equivalents the Governor-General in Council is only seeking the means of gradually extending to the third Presidency the relief which will have been afforded to the other two.

3rd. For these reasons and with these objects, it was the wish of His Lordship in Council before submitting to the Government of Bombay any measure of entire or partial repeal to have before him from the Committee of Customs (in which all the presidencies are represented) a report upon the course which it might be best and most prudent to follow. In the month of November last, he found himself enabled to take to the Government of Bombay, a proposition which he had hoped as a first step, though embracing the more important objects, might have been successfully admitted and the draft of acts, but lately received in reply, with other measures affecting the Commerce of the Port of Bombay, are under the consideration of His Lordship in Council.

4th. His Lordship in Council has equally at heart with the petitioners the improvement and extension of those communications through which encouragement may best be afforded to internal industry by opening new avenues to the markets and demands of Commerce, and he looks upon such communications when carefully and wisely planned as so generally tending to the wealth and welfare of the Empire that he is little disposed in considering them nicely to weigh the surplus on deficiency of any one particular district or presidency; but the petitioners must be well aware that the sums which for the whole of India may be prudently appropriated to public works, are far more narrow than could be wished and and that they must be cautiously apportioned.

5th. The Governor-General of India in Council has, within the limits assigned to him by superior authority, endeavored to give a just and liberal consideration to every proposition made for such improvements by the Government of Bombay, and though His Lordship in Council may doubt whether the plan of appropriating to such improvements a certain percentage upon the revenues of each Presidency is the best which can be devised, that plan has been laid before the Honorable Court by whom alone sanction can be given to it.

THE OUDE SUCCESSION—DISTURBANCE AT LUCKNOW.

We have received the following from a correspondent of our own, an officer in the Company's service, who was an eye and ear witness of almost all that passed :—

* The affairs of Oude have of late years given rise to various speculations regarding the future destiny of that kingdom. To these, however, the death of the King has for a time put a period. He died late on the evening of the 7th instant, and his uncle Nussur ud Dowlah now reigns in his stead. As the circumstances attending these changes may not be uninteresting, the following short account of them is presented.

About 11 o'clock on the evening of the 7th inst., the King, accompanied by his surgeon, proceeded to the palace, and found that his majesty had breathed his last. The body, however, being still warm, and nobody present being at all acquainted with the previous circumstances of his case, a vein was opened in the arm, but, as was anticipated, without any beneficial effect. The Resident then gave orders to his senior assistant and to the minister to have Company's sentinels from the Residency placed over those godowns in which the treasures of the state were deposited, a requisition having been previously made to the Brigadier, commanding in Oude, for 2 regiments for the better protection of the palace.

Some suspicions of a movement on the part of the Badshah Begum being entertained, a message was sent to her by the Resident, announcing the death of the King, and the call of Nusser ud Dowlah to the throne, with strict injunctions that she should not leave her abode. The minister was also desired to take every precaution against her entering the city. These arrangements having been made, the 2d assistant was sent by the Resident to Nusser ud Dowlah, to announce to him that his right to the throne had been sanctioned by the British Government, and that his attendance at the palace would be necessary as soon as possible.

About 2 o'clock on the morning of the 8th inst., the Resident went a second time to the palace for the purpose of receiving the new King, having previously sent off his two assistants to conduct him thither, and he was accordingly brought to the palace of Furredbuksh, before the party had been well assembled; but a report was made that the Badshah Begum and her troops were on their way to Furredbuksh. Captain Paton on hearing this report, proceeded to the outer gate with the view of preventing her entrance, and on reaching it found some of her troops already there, and clamorous for admission. Finding only two or three durwans to protect the gate, he attempted to reason with the insurgents outside, and to shew the folly of their attempting any thing on the part of the Begum, and as Nusser ud Dowlah was already acknowledged King by the British Government. Intent, however, on gaining admission, first one elephant, and that failing, a second, was brought to bear upon the gate, for the purpose of forcing it open, and this having been done, the troops rushed in and attacked Captain Paton with clubs, and the but ends of their muskets, till thrown down and supposed to be dead. He was then left in charge of some of the Queen's party until rescued by Captain Cowley and a party of the 35th N. I. Fortunately the insurgents had not drawn their swords on Captain Paton, and thus he escaped with some severe bruises, especially one under the left eye.

By this time the insurgents had forced the other gates and reached that of Furredbuksh, at which the Resident and his 2d assistant also attempted by persuasive measures to check their career, but in vain. All now became a scene of confusion; the King having been hurried off to a small apartment in Furredbuksh, the usurper was conveyed to the Burrahdurrie and placed on the throne. Between these two buildings there is a considerable space, and over this the Resident had to elbow his way among the armed insurgents with only an assistant. He was jostled not a little in his progress, and now and then a matchlock was fired off near his ear. After some trouble and not without danger, he reached the Burrahdurrie, where he had some conversation with the Begum, and during which he was assailed, but not injured by one of her followers. Moonah Jaun being now seated on the throne, and nothing that the Resident could say, having any effect, he attempted, and at length succeeded, in getting out of the Burrahdurrie, near which he found some of the troops from cantonments. It being now too apparent that no persuasive measures could avail, and that force must be used, the Resident accordingly desired that the guns which had just arrived from cantonment should be loaded with grape, and directed into the piazzas of the building in which the usurper was seated on the Burrahdurrie, in order that these might be cleared and the troops enabled with less risk to enter by escalade.

Unwilling, however, to cause bloodshed, he sent a message to the Begum and requested an interview in the space of a quarter of an hour; but to this some evasive answer was returned, once and again, when the Resident in the most peremptory terms announced that in fifteen minutes more the guns should open their fire. No movement being made on the part of the insurgents (nay some even had the audacity to ascribe some movement of infantry to cowardice,) on the expiration of the period granted, the order was given to fire, and three rounds of grape were discharged with the desired effect. A party of the 35th N. I. under Major Marshall succeeded in gaining access to the staircase, while others mounted the ladders, and thus the apartment where the throne stands was soon cleared of the insurgents. The troops were then ordered to cease firing, and the insurgents allowed to depart on laying down their arms. The Begum was found in a palkee with two female attendants, and immediately sent off under a guard to the Residency. The usurper too was found in some corner room of the Burrahdurrie, and also sent off under a guard.

The King was soon after found in a small room into which he had been ushered at the commencement of the fray, and where he had been guarded by a party with drawn swords. On the capture of the Begum that party withdrew without violence, and the Resident soon after joined the King, and conducted him to the throne where he and the Brigadier, as is the custom, placed the crown upon the King's head, and he ascended the throne during a salute from the guns which had just before ushered some 20 of the usurper's followers into another world. Thus, in a space of 12 hours, one King closed his eyes in death, a once adopted but latterly discarded son usurped his place, and was as quickly displaced to make way for the lawful heir to the throne.

It is to be regretted that blood was shed in this affair, but no one at all acquainted with the immediate and remote bearings of the case, could well say that the decisive step was taken too soon or persevered in too long. Hours before the Resident went to the palace, the death of the King was reported in the city, and ere mourning parties were declaring themselves, Moonah Jaun was generally regarded in the city as heir to the throne, and the Badshah Begum had written to several sirdars in whom she had confidence to come and support the young King. Of these, one who had joined her train fell in the encounter. Among the insurgents there may have been 30 killed in the assault, from 20 to 30 more or less severely wounded; of the Company's troops four sepoy were wounded.

On the morning of the 11th, the Begum and Moonah Jaun were sent off to Cawnpore under an escort, and now that the usurper is removed beyond the Ganges, it is to be hoped that party spirit may subside, and no other incident occur to create commotion.—Englishman, July 20.

KOWER KISHENATH RAI'S EDUCATION.

We insert to day a brief correspondence between the Commissioner of Bauleah and the Board of Revenue, relative to the education of the minor Kower Ki-henath Rai's education. The account Mr. Hawkins gives of the youth's progress in his studies is on the whole satisfactory, and we think that Mr. Hawkins has acted most judiciously and evincing his knowledge of human nature in releasing the lad from that severe restraint to which he had been subjected by Mr. Steer; especially when, according to law, he will soon, unfortunately too soon, be released from all legal restraint, and have the command of unbounded wealth. We have never heard exactly what may be the entire revenue derived from his landed property, but we have heard it estimated to be as much as nearly twenty lakhs per annum. He has estates in Hughli, Burdwan, Kishnaghur, and in short is one of the largest, if not the largest, landed proprietor in the Lower Provinces.

Considering the extent of power and influence for good or evil which the possession of such vast wealth must give to a man, especially in this country, and the extent of temptation to which it must expose him, we rejoice for the sake of the young man himself, and still more for that of the thousands of his countrymen, over whom his riches will inevitably give him power, that he is in a way of being instructed in a wise use of them. They enable him to prove a blessing or a curse to thousands, and we trust no opportunity has been lost of inculcating upon his mind, how deeply his own happiness is concerned in the wise application of his wealth. Among his own rich countrymen, unfortunately few examples can be cited of wise munificence; but there are some which should not be forgotten and he should be reminded, moreover, that of the far, infinitely far great number of those who have wasted their wealth and destroyed their constitutions in sensuality and debauchery, all have an excuse which he will be unable to plead, that they were never educated, never taught; that in conferring benefit on others, in promoting the improvements of our country and the moral elevation of our countrymen, we secure for ourselves a happiness, that not only far surpasses all selfish and sensual enjoyment, but which endures when the capacity for all such enjoyment is passed.

It is, indeed, melancholy to reflect on the condition of many of the natives of rank and wealth in this country. Bred entirely in the zenana, they come to the possession of their titles and enormous wealth, without one qualification which fits a man for an eminent station. They have no idea of the application of power or wealth to any purpose, not connected with their personal gratification, not of any enjoyment which is not merely animal. The course of their exempting their lives debaucheries, which too often are an utter disgrace to civilization and violate every moral law, may be summed up in the old couplet.—

They eat, drink, sleep,—What then?
Why eat, drink, and sleep again.

Their minds are effeminate, their bodies soon become emaciated, and with abundant means of not only being happy themselves, but sources of happiness to thousands, they become curses to themselves and to society. What an altered respect would India have presented now, if only 50 years ago, the heirs of great power and wealth in the country had been educated, and their minds directed to the importance of encouraging and supporting by their means those enterprises and improvements by which the resources of a country are developed. Owing to the want of education, the great mass of merely pecuniary wealth in this country, to say nothing of the unbounded resources of the soil, has been as useless to the country, as if it had never been dug out of the mine. Even now there is no such thing as building a bridge or constructing a road or a canal without the aid of Government, in other words without expending the revenues derived from the whole people, and thus taxing the poor for the accomplishment of the object; and the revenue being inadequate to the demands upon it, these sources of convenience and of augmented wealth, are of course not supplied. What a contrast does our own little island present in that respect! These are lessons which should be strongly impressed on the rising generation of India and more especially on those in the situation of the young Kower Kishenath Rai.

How much good might the Government of India have effected, how much crime and misery might they not have prevented, if they had much earlier directed their attention to the education of native youth of rank! They have missed many opportunities of this kind where there could have been no doubt of their power, and permitted native youths of rank to be educated in the zenana. We could point to several instances. We shall merely mention one, the present Nuwab of Moonshehabad. A splendid palace is nearly completed for him to reside in; but was ever an attempt made in his youth to qualify him to adorn by his virtues and intellectual qualities the station to which he is called! Never, we believe. He has been brought up in the zenana; and yet those who know him say that he might have been a shining ornament of society. It is said, that there can be no doubt of his natural capacity. He is extremely hospitable to the European community of the nation; but his mind is without resources,—and it is not very likely that his time can be occupied in any manner that is very beneficial to himself or others. The fault is not his, but that of the Government, who, when he was a minor, might have furnished his mind with moral instruction and those intellectual resources which would have been a delight to himself and have rendered him a source of elevated pleasure to others.

(No. 51)

To the Commissioner of Revenue for the Division of Bauleah. Ward's Department, 27th Jun., 1837.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated the 17th instant, No 73, with its enclosure from Mr. Forbes, and to inform you, that the Board are on the whole gratified with the account given of Kower Kishenath Roy's progress in his studies.

2. You are authorized to direct the entire discontinuance of his Persian studies. It is of much more importance that he should lay in a store of valuable knowledge than that he should acquire a smattering of a number of languages which would leave him little time for the pursuit of useful works in any one of them. The first thing to be desired is that he should learn to compose with facility both in English and Bengallee; the next that he should acquire a good knowledge of accounts in order that he may be able to manage his pecuniary affairs when he comes of age without being entirely dependent on the people about him; and lastly, that he should obtain a knowledge as extensive as possible of History, Geography and the elements of science, particularly of those parts of science which would give a proper direction to his efforts in the improvement of his estates.

Considering the great extent of Kower Kishenath Roy's real property, it is of the first importance that during the remaining three years of his minority the utmost exertion should be employed, to cultivate his mind and render him fit for the elevated station which he will be called to fill both by birth and fortune.

4. You will be pleased to direct the Collector to examine into the progress he has made in his studies at the end of this year, and to report the result in detail through you for the information of the Board; and to do the same at the end of each year till the Kower attains his majority.

5. The Board have sent the minor's tutor, Mr. Lambrick, who appears to be well qualified to fulfil his trust, most satisfactorily, but he represents that for the peculiarity of the minor's situation he finds it difficult to obtain always influence over him sufficient to induce proper application to his studies. This impediment the Board trust you will devise means to remove if not entirely at all events in an useful degree.

Sirs.—In reply to paragraph 3 of your letter No. 38 dated the 29th ultimo, I have the honor to submit a copy of a letter from the Collector of Moorsheadabad under date the 15th inst., on the subject of the education of the Minor Kower Kishennauth Roy. In addition to what Mr. Forbes says, I may add that when at Moorsheadabad on my way hither, I sent for the minor, and conversed with him in the different branches of study he was pursuing. His progress in English, which he was studying under a Mr. Lambrick, a very respectable man, was rather good, and he writes and reads Bengalee pretty fluently.

2d. Mr. Steer have put considerable restraints upon the boy in not permitting him to go out, except on particular occasions, and then confining him to his palanquin. This was done under the belief, that he was ill, and did not attend to his studies. I thought the restrictions injudicious, as the minor is 15 years of age, and in the course of 3 years will come into the possession of a very large property. The transition from rigid confinement to the uncontrolled enjoyment of this property, I considered should be avoided, it being the very way of making him run into riot and excess. I have therefore allowed him the use of his vehicles and horses, taking care that he attends to his studies.

SIR,—Replying to your letter (No. 38.) of the 31st ultimo, I have the honor to apprise you that I have reason to believe the Kower Kishennauth Roy to be tolerably attentive to his studies in which he takes considerable interest. He is, I shall say, making most progress in writing and speaking English, the acquisition of which language seems to please him; but I fancy he does not get on so well in Persian. I enclose herewith the present extent of his studies, which were conducted by a Mr. Lambrick, who is a Bengalee, and was appointed, I am informed, by the Sudder Board, during his guardianship of the minor. Mr. Lambrick is at present in Calcutta, but his place is temporarily supplied by Mr. Jones, the teacher of the Nazim College at Moorsheadabad.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

To the Bengal Chamber of Commerce.

Gent. & GENTLEMEN,—In continuation of my letter of 5th. 3d. the 17th May last, I am directed by the Right Honorable the Governor-General of India in Council to acquaint you, that a Despatch has been received from the Right Honorable the Governor in Council to Bombay, to the effect that it has been found, upon careful enquiry, that it is the opinion of the best authorities that, with reference to the season of the year, and in the absence of a sufficient supply of coals at Socotra, a Steam vessel could not be sent from Bombay, with a reasonable hope of making the voyage to Suez until after the 15th proximo.

2d. Under these circumstances, and adverting to the arrangements already concerted by him, and reported to the authorities in England, the Right Hon'ble the Governor in Council at Bombay has felt himself unable to comply with the wish of the Chamber, as expressed in your Secretary's letter of the 16th May last, for the despatch, as requested, of a Steam Vessel, to bring to India the London Mail of the 1st August from Egypt.

3d. The Governor-General of India in Council understands, from the present communication from Bombay, that a sailing vessel, the "Emily," has been sent to the Gulf for the purpose of bringing to India the London Packet of the 1st June, expected by the Governor in Council to have been forwarded by the Syrian route.

4th. The London Packet of July (and of course the Packets of any previous dates that may then still be in Egypt) will, it is expected, be brought to Bombay in the Honorable Company's brig Euphrates.

5th. It is the expectation of the Governor in Council at Bombay, that the London Packet of the 1st August will be sent by the Syrian route. In this anticipation, and if it be erroneous, it is obvious from the papers now received that no early arrangement can at present be made for bringing that packet from the Red Sea,—the Governor in Council proposes as before intimated to you to despatch a Steam Vessel to the Gulf about the 18th August.

6th. The Governor-General in Council will empower the Bombay Government to carry this intention into effect, unless information be, in the meantime, received, showing that the measure would be inexpedient.

7th. His Lordship in Council understands that, for the London Mail of September, it is proposed by the Bombay Government, as is also alluded to in my letter of May 17, to dispatch the Atlanta or the Berenice to Suez in the latter part of August.

8th. A similar approval of the intention will likewise be communicated to that Government, and as respects both despatches the Governor in Council will be particularly requested to give immediate public notice of the precise day on which the vessels will be appointed to start, so as to afford full time for letters being sent by the opportunity from all parts of India.

9th. The Chamber will remain aware that the employment of the Steam Vessels now at Bombay of the contemplated voyages, must be dependant on their not being required for other more urgent public service.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient Servant,

THE BLACK ACT.

We are informed that intelligence has been received by Lord Auckland, on the subject of the Black Act, and that its legality has received the sanction of the Company's Counsel, and the law officers of the Crown. Such is the report that has reached us, and which comes forth from such a respectable source that we can hardly permit ourselves to doubt its authenticity. But we beg leave to say, that there are as good fish in the sea, as ever came out of it; and as good Lawyers in Westminster Hall, as either Sir John Campbell, or Rolfe the Attorney, and Solicitor-General, or Serjeant Spankie, the Company's Counsel. And there is some comfort in that. As for Rolfe, nobody would give six-pence for his opinion, and as for Campbell and Spankie they are a brace of "Cany" Lawyers whose opinions may or not, have been biased by the expediency of supporting a measure involving the credit and capabilities for legislation of the Indian Government. Parliament, however, may take a different view of the Law of this Black Bantling of the Council; and as to the justice and expediency of the measure, there can be, we thank heaven, but one opinion; we hope, however, that the opinions of these "eminent hands," will be promulgated, if it be only to give the public the opportunity of kicking them to pieces

LORD AUCKLAND'S SCIENTIFIC SOIREEES.

The Scientific party at Government House yesterday evening displayed a very crowded assemblage, attracted in a great measure by the fame of Professor O'Shaughnessy's intended exhibition. The rooms, as on former occasions, were laid out with tables containing new objects of interest and curiosity, the most conspicuous among them being M. Delesert's extensive collection of fishes from the Salt-water Lake. After an agreeable promenade of half an hour employed in the inspection of these curiosities, there was a general move into the lecture room where the Professor had arranged his tables of experiments and behind them his galvanic battery à la Crove, (improved in the manner we shall presently explain) ranged on a wooden frame in four stages. Behind this stand, at the door of the veranda opening to the garden was a howitzer, intended to be fired with gas created by the battery,—formidable preparations à la Fieschi with a Governor-General en face.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy prefaced his experiments with a brief account of the improvements he had effected in the construction and arrangement of the galvanic battery, by which the power of the instrument was increased to seven times that of Daniell's and four times that of Mullins, the most efficient of the inventions which have recently attracted attention in Europe. The powers are estimated by contrasting the quantities of gas obtained in a given time by the decomposition of water; while 12 of Daniell's cups evolve 5 cubic inches, the same number of Mullins give out 10, and those constructed by Dr. O'Shaughnessy 40, in three minutes.

With respect to the arrangements, Dr. O'Shaughnessy stated that he had ascertained that the decomposing power of the battery was greatest when 12 cans were associated. On exceeding that number, the force diminishes and ultimately is altogether annihilated. But by arranging sets of 12 in tiers, all the tiers in connexion with the same pair of metal rods, the arithmetical aggregate of the force of the whole series is produced.

The Battery exhibited was composed of four tiers, each of 12 cans. The cans consisted each of 3 concentric copper cylinders with two concentric zinc cylinders interposed, the metals being separated by membrane, and each copper surface in contact with a solution of sulphate of copper, each zinc surface with a very weak solution of sal-ammoniac. The surface of copper in each vessel was 240 square inches.

The first experiment was the decomposition of water, contained in a bottle filled with a bent tube. On completing the connexion with the battery, the water was thrown into great agitation; it bubbled like a fluid in a state of rapid boiling, and produced Oxygen and Hydrogen gas at the rate of 160 inches in 3 minutes. The Professor stated that the quantity was more than sufficient to ignite lime for the purposes of practical illumination—to supply the Oxy-hydrogen blow-pipe, and in effect many other important objects; he also stated that he had no doubt that further experiments on the galvanic battery would lead to such improvements as would enable us to obtain, by the decomposition of water, both economical fuel and a moving power at least equal to that of steam to work machinery of every kind.

Other decompositions were also shown—metallic lead was obtained in crystals from a solution, and a process shown by which sulphuric acid can be quickly and cheaply prepared on a small scale, so as to be within the reach of every druggist and experimentalist, in however remote a locality he may be placed. The value of this process depends on the fact, that by means of sulphuric acid almost every other acid and a vast number of mineral and vegetable remedies may be quickly and cheaply prepared.

The next set of experiments Dr. O'Shaughnessy exhibited, were the igniting effects of this battery. Two feet of thick platinum wire suspended from the poles instantaneously became red hot—six inches of the same wire were at once melted into globules; Platinum foil was burned under water; the blades of a pair of scissors were melted in a few seconds and a large file burned rapidly, sending out a shower of deep red sparks having the regular outline of a star, with ornamented red rays and a bright white centre. The ignition of charcoal was next shown; the light produced was most intensely white, and quite lit up the marble hall purposely left nearly dark for the exhibition of this experiment.

The last effects of the battery, which were exhibited, were connected with its probable application to the driving of machinery—twenty inches of the gases evolved by water were introduced into the chamber of a model (still unfinished), were inflamed by a platinum wire led from the battery and exploded with a loud report. Dr. O'S. exhibited a cylinder and solid piston with a pump and guiding rods and some regulating apparatus by means of which he stated that the piston was ultimately urged upwards and downwards with great power and without the least noise being heard.

The last experiment of the evening was the explosion of the mixed gases contained in a 5½ inch howitzer, fitted with a stone tompon. A small charge was purposely introduced, lest the concussion might do mischief to the chandeliers; still the explosion, as might be imagined, was nearly as loud as if the gun were charged with powder, and the tompon was shot some distance over the veranda rails.—Calcutta Courier, July 12.

THIRTEENTH ANNUAL ASSEMBLY—NATIVE FEMALE SOCIETY.

TOWN HALL, WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, 1837.

About 10 A. M., the Right Reverend Daniel Wilson, D. D., took the chair, supported by the Archdeacon Dealty and the Reverends Bateman and Fisher, and on requisition from the Right Reverend Chairman, Mr. Chapman, read out a report, the great length of which we much regret precludes the possibility of our giving it here. From the few notes we hastily took we are enabled to say that the institution every where is in adequate means, and though most of the schools are being carried on by the strenuous and unexhausted efforts of the benevolent superintendents, yet the school at Allipore has been closed entirely from the want of support. A few instances were proclaimed by Mr. Chapman, by which we understood that the general antipathy to allow freedom and the benefits of education and religion to native gradually sinking. Though the grand object of the institution has met with partial discouragement from the early marriages of females, yet the females have in many instances flown from the ignorance of their parents and friends, and sought refuge at the institution. One case was mentioned in which a girl taken into some Portuguese family after the inundation of 1833, left her mistress for ill treatment, and another of a grown up girl having been sold by her parents, after being a pupil of the institution for some time, and of her having rescued herself from misery and shame by the protection afforded to her by the institution. The above and numerous other instances are very satisfactory, and we believe them very likely of producing liberality from the public, by a prudent exercise of which great good may be done. It was surprising that among the assembly not one of the respectable natives of India were seen; perhaps half a dozen streets or people, who did no more than cry wail! wail! wail! at a pretty doll, or Hairs! at some of the more curious specimens exhibited at the conclusion. We have heard several native gentlemen declaiming against illiberality on various public occasions at the Hall, but we cannot refrain from expressing our surprise at their absence from a meeting, where their presence and support might go far to make up many necessary deficiencies.

The Archdeacon, in proposing the first resolution, made a remark by which it appeared that an old woman at the head of a school which was comparatively in a more forward state than those in its vicinity, on being asked the reason of the remarkable improvement evinced by her pupils replied, that the means she had providentially been blessed with, perhaps, was the best and surest course she could assign. That the proficiency of her pupils made them advisers to their parents, and their good example emulating their neighbours, enabled her to display a larger and more efficient number of pupils than others labouring in the same vocation.

The following resolution was then given by the Archdeacon and seconded by Mr. William Aigeltinger—

"That the Report be printed and freely circulated, in order to shew the benefits to be derived from the diffusion of wholesome instruction amongst the females of India."

On the resolution being put by the Chair, it was carried nem. con.

The Reverend Mr. Bateman then said, that he had been deputed to propose a resolution, previous to doing which, he would remark that when this institution first lost the benevolent and unrestrained assistance, of Mr.

Wilson, it was thought that it would fail to progress with that improvement which Mr. Wilson had been the means of effecting, but it had since appeared, that the progress had been as great and good; that it was hardly apparent that Mr. Wilson had left it. The Reverend gentleman went on to say that it has been very satisfactory to find that the trouble and money that had been expended towards it, would be a work not for the present only, but for futurity, as a machinery that is once wound up and goes on of itself must at the end attain that result which was first sought for.

Mr. Bateman then gave the following resolution, which was seconded by the Reverend Mr. Fisher with a few appropriate remarks.

"That with the means vouchsafed, a tacit assent to the bondage of ignorance in which the female population is held; and that every Christian is bound to make their advancement the subject of prayerful exertion."

The Lord Bishop then addressed the assembly and informed them that it was very satisfactory to his feelings to observe the perseverance that is exercising for the improvement of the females of India; that he had visited some of the schools at Cawnpore, and almost every one of those mentioned in the report, and he thought it would be very gratifying to the feelings of all the friends and patrons of the institution to know, that upwards of 800 females are now receiving the benefits of religion and education. That the opposition the Brahmins offered was the very reason why the efforts of Christians should be exercised; and that it is evident that with all that has been opposed to the institution it has now acquired a stability that nothing can shake, unless indeed the present supporters were to retire at once from the field of charity and benevolence. His Lordship then made a few remarks and concluded by informing those assembled that he would be glad to accompany them below, where they could partially act up to the purpose of which they had met.

The hall below was laid out with several tables exhibiting a most beautiful collection of fancy articles, and when we say that the boutiques were the most charming, affable and interesting, we need hardly add that the prices were mere secondary considerations, as money was passed into the purse of charity with great willingness and pleasure.

The assembly was comprised of all the beauty and fashion of the day, and we think there were so many as 400 ladies and gentlemen present. The sale did not close at 2 p. m. when we left.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 13.

FREE SCHOOL EXAMINATION.

CALCUTTA, TUESDAY, JUNE 4, 1837.

The half yearly or mid-summer examination of the children of this institution, commenced at 10 a. m. this morning. Among the visitors we recognized the Lord Bishop, the Archdeacon, the Reverend Mr. Bateman, Mr. D. MacFarlane, Captain Birch and many other gentlemen.

The boys are divided into seven classes, instructed by Messrs. Lindsay, W. Kiermunder, Robert Kiermunder, and Robert Blake. The questions put by the Bishop were answered with ease and cleverness, and whether in Scripture, History, English Grammar, Geography, or Arithmetic, the pupils evinced an aptness that we have seldom seen surpassed.

The boys acquitted themselves very well, and very creditably to their masters, and the Bishop expressed his satisfaction in very appropriate and handsome terms.

The girls are under the care of Mesdames Jane Sidley, Isabella Gibson and Mrs. Keating matron. The samples of lace, marking, and straw and needle work were very pretty and extremely well executed. And in regard to their studies gave as much satisfaction as did the boys.

Mrs. Sidley then formed the infant class and made them go through a rehearsal of "this is the way we wash our face," and "this is the way we go to school" &c. We really think this plan of teaching the young ideas how to do all necessary things, excellent; and to Mrs. Sidley great praise is due for the regularity, adroitness and correctness with which her infant class did their little.

This pleasant examination concluded at about 2 p. m., when the visitors dispersed evidently quiet pleased with the effect they had just witnessed.

We are given to understand that it is a rule of this institution to apprentice the boys and girls to families and persons in business. As to the boys, from the specimens exhibited of their hand writing, and of the exercises we witnessed, we strongly recommend them as promising, useful and intelligent; and in regard to the girls, we think that families would do great justice and good to themselves by receiving them from this institution, and maintaining them would be no more expense than what a dashing ayah, or native servant generally costs. The girls will not only make good servants, but useful assistants to mothers in instructing infants in their first lessons.

THE MEDICAL COLLEGE EXAMINATION.

The distribution of prizes, given by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, to the successful candidates amongst the students of the Medical College, as announced in the Hurkaru of Wednesday, took place at the College on Thursday last, in the presence of a great number of highly respectable gentlemen, both European and Native; among whom we recognized the honorable Mr. Shakespear, Mr. Walter, Colonel Young, Dr. Wallich, Dr. Martin, Dr. D. Stewart, Dr. Strong, Nuwab Tahwer Jung, Bahadur, Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore, Rajah Radhacant Bahadur, Rajah Rajnarain Roy, Baboo Ramcomul Sein, Baboo Russomoy Dutt, Baboo Motelaul Seal, Baboo Hurhur Dutt, Baboo Duckipannunjun Mookerjee and Baboo Sibkissen Banerjee. A little after eleven o'clock the Governor-General entered the Theatre, accompanied by His Lordship's Aids-de-camps. On His Lordship taking his seat, Professor Goodeve spoke to the following effect:

The munificence of Dwarkanauth Tagore has once more enabled us to perform the agreeable task of distributing amongst our students rewards worthy of the industry and zeal they have displayed in their professional studies; and ere I proceed to offer a brief sketch of the examinations, upon the merits of which these prizes have been decided, allow me to offer to that gentleman the sincere thanks of those to whom his liberality has thus been extended. I beg to tell him on the part of our young friends, that they duly value his kindness—and in the name of all who are interested in the cause of native education I assure him, that he could not have bestowed a portion of his wealth more justly than in fostering an institution which promises to become so highly beneficial to his countrymen as the Calcutta Medical College; whether we regard this institution as the means of extending to the natives the advantages of an enlightened system of medical practice, or as an important item in the progress of that civilization which is gradually, but I trust surely, expanding its influence over the land of his birth.

The subjects of the examinations which were held for the prizes we are about to distribute, were Anatomy and Physiology, and I should mention that in addition to the gifts of Dwarkanauth Tagore, the gold and silver medals presented by the Committee of Public Instruction were likewise awarded.

The first trial took place on Thursday the 13th April. That occasion served a two-fold purpose; in the first place it formed a test of the general progress made by the whole class, and in the second it enabled the Professors to select from amongst the pupils the most distinguished, as candidates for the prize examination.

With this view several questions were proposed which could not fail to prove the diligence and abilities of the whole body of students. The subjects chosen embraced a very wide field. The first questions related to the anatomy of the pelvis, a description of which includes almost every species of structure to be found in the body. To comprehend this part of anatomy requires a knowledge of bones, muscles, vessels, nerves and viscera; whilst to afford an accurate account of the relative position of the contents of the pelvic cavity, embraces some very important matters regarding surgical anatomy.

The second question related to the course of the femoral artery, and in a surgical point of view was one of the great consequence. The Physiological question also presented much interest. The function of digestion, upon the due regulation of which so much of our health and comfort depends, was selected for this portion of the examination, because it is a subject respecting which more accurate information has been given and more important facts have been furnished, than upon almost any other function of the body. It was chosen in preference to one of a more theoretical character as better suited to a general examination. Upon all these points the answers were very satisfactory,—some of them were almost faultless, displaying a thorough knowledge of the subjects in all their details: a few indeed were vague and meagre, and one or two decidedly bad; but regarded as a whole we have the utmost reason to be content. I do not hesitate to say that the replies could not have been surpassed by any class of medical students in Europe, and the result of the examination proved most convincingly the excellent capacity of our students. It showed that their zeal and industry had in no wise failed, whilst to the Professors it afforded the gratifying conclusion that the method of instruction adopted had been well chosen,—that their labors had not been in vain. Pleasing, however, as the result of this part of the proceeding was, the practical examination held two days afterwards was still more satisfactory. The written replies might have been the effect of the memory; the most excellent anatomical answer might have been the product of one who knew nothing of the subject he treated except by rote. But this could not be objected to the examination of the succeeding Saturday (the 16th.) An intimate personal acquaintance with all that the student was called upon to demonstrate on that occasion, could alone bear him through the trial with success. I should delight to indulge my feelings by detailing the triumphant results of this portion of the examination. I would fain speak as it deserves of the admirable manner in which the various questions proposed were handled by a large portion of the class; but it is better to be silent; many and powerful reasons compel me, though reluctantly, to pass over this subject with a briefer notice than I should wish. The candidates chosen on this occasion to contend finally for the prize, were 20 in number.

The prize examination commenced on the 16th. They were conducted as before. The first day was completed in answering written queries; the second was a further test of the practical knowledge of the candidates. The principal subjects chosen for the first day were the anatomy of the heart and the Physiology of the circulation together with the Surgical anatomy of the carotid artery. The Physiological question in this instance was very difficult to treat; it opened a much wider field for theoretical speculation than the subject of the previous examination. It taxed severely the ingenuity and clearness of comprehension of the students to explain some of the disputed points with reference to the subject before them. The greater portion of them, however, succeeded in their task to our entire satisfaction. They appear to have understood completely the nature of the question under consideration, and for the most part they gave excellent explanations of the various phenomena, to be observed in the function, regarding whose operations they were required to display their knowledge.

A few of these papers deserve especial notice. That of Raj Krishna Day had one fault only. It did not comprehend so many points as were found in some of the replies to the same queries by others, but the superiority of all he did write convinced the examiners that his omissions were not the result of ignorance. If the author had entered more fully into the subject upon which he wrote, we could not doubt that he would have been equally excellent in all.

Isaerchunder Gangoolie's paper was most correct, the physiology clear and comprehensive, and it did not contain a single error worth relating.

Samachurn Dutt's is the third on the list. It is the most elaborate of the whole, deserving the warmest eulogiums; but it contains one or two Anatomical errors; he describes the vena azygos as terminating in the left auricle, and he says that the pulmonary veins are furnished with valves; yet the rest of the paper was so admirable, displaying so thorough an acquaintance with the subject treated of, that the examiners could hardly conceive these errors to be aught but inadvertencies.

Punchum Shreemony, Ummachurn Set, Isaerchunder Dutt and Ramnarain Doss, take the 2d rank in the list, and with them stands Mr. Hemming. In the papers of these young men we do not meet any decided error but they have faults of omission: they are not so diffuse upon some points as might be desired.

The remaining papers were for the most part highly creditable to the authors, but all presented errors of some description, though few of great consequence; many of them, perhaps, were merely inadvertencies, as stated afterwards by some of the students; but the examining committee could of course be guided only by what they read: the good intentions of the writers could not weigh with them, for aught, as ample time was given to all to compose and correct their essays before delivering them to the Secretary. It was really a matter of no small difficulty to select from amongst these the third rank of prize candidates—six were however finally chosen.

The practical examination was equally satisfactory upon this occasion as upon the former. I repeat to say that in this department nearly all were so equal that it would have been no easy task to adjudge prizes of different value to the candidates, if the portion of the contest alone had been the test of proficiency.

The small prize reserved for students of one year's standing, was awarded to Paramchand Set, the infinite superiority of whose replies could admit of no hesitation in selecting him from amongst his fellow classmates. Although some of the answers given by the latter were very creditable, they would not bear comparison with those furnished by the student in question, I should not omit to mention that the trial for this prize was founded upon questions of a nature somewhat less difficult than those given to the senior students, but the principles upon which the examination was conducted were precisely similar.

The result of these examinations, is in every respect honorable to the students. It is a source of unalloyed gratification to the Professors, and it must afford to the world a most convincing proof of the ultimate utility of this institution. The pleasure we experienced in witnessing the effects of a mode of study till now unknown in these lands, may well be conceived by those who know the peculiar circumstances in which the Calcutta Medical College is placed as regards the study of practical anatomy. That the prejudices of ages should in six short months have been overthrown and the iron bonds of a most debasing and mischievous superstition have been thus suddenly burst asunder by a few simple youths, aided only by the force of a superior education, was indeed a spectacle worthy to behold. It called forth the most unqualified admiration and excited the most triumphant feelings in our breasts. We felt that the great obstacle to the advancement of the institution under our charge was surmounted and that the objects for which the College was established were even now fulfilled. It was impossible to doubt of future success when we beheld the progress we had already made.

It only remains for me to offer on behalf of my colleagues and the students our respectful acknowledgments for the honor your Lordship has conferred upon us by your presence here to-day. We appreciate fully this mark of your approbation; and we should indeed be deficient in gratitude did we not feel deeply the warm interest you have so constantly evinced towards the institution to which we belong. With the proud consciousness of such encouragement we can never relax in our exertions to fulfill the duties assigned to us. We pledge ourselves that the cause in which we are engaged shall not be lost whilst we have power to support its interests and strength to labor in its behalf.

The Governor-General then handed prizes and certificates, according to their respective merits, to the following students, whose names were called one after another by Professor Goodeve.

THEATRICALS.

On Friday evening, the Antiquary, for the benefit of the Secretary, was ill performed to an ill-attended house. This clumsiest and dullest of the dramatic versions of the Waverley Novels, struck us as weary, stale, and flat in the extreme, and we much fear that the unprofitable speculation will, and has by this time made itself equally and in the same degree manifest to the perceptions of the Secretary. This we must regret, but it excites no surprise in us, as we only wonder what on earth could have induced one of the Secretary's pretensions to tart, to suppose a moment that such a thing as this play could go down with the public, even with a decent caste, as it was the very band of amateurs who rallied round the Secretary for the occasion and in pure good nature transformed themselves from captains bold into walking gentlemen or sticks: even they appeared ashamed of their position, and evinced the strongest disposition to turn their backs on the audience and flee,—delivering themselves, moreover, of the observations suggested by their forlorn state, in subdued tones with head and eye averted, and apparently seeking for consolation or encouragement from some friends or supporters in the wing or side scenes. It was truly a painful exhibition to the lookers on, and in as much as it was impossible to ascertain the precise nature of their distresses, they "not being audible in the gallery," a good natured and indulgent audience, was prevented from coming to their assistance, by bestowing that applause, which it is customary to extend to similar situations of distress and embarrassment. The worthy Jonathan Oldbuck himself, betook himself to his ancient custom, of late more honoured in the breach than the observance—that of making "damnable faces," and the effect of these contortions of the facial muscles, was very much assisted by the lampblack and brick dust, with which he had decorated his phiz. We have heard of Antiquaries with visages begrimed with snuff, but our Jonathan evidently delighted in soot, he was emphatically Jonathan with the smutty face. He moreover vociferated occasionally like one possessed, or as it gout were "playing the devil" with his great toe. With these trifling drawbacks, and the total absence of that quiet causticity of tone, and sarcasm of phrase and manner, peculiar to the Monkbarons of Sir Walter, the part, for any thing that we know, may have been well performed by the Secretary. Caxon was well dressed, and the Gabeilunze, was considered as a good performance. But Caxon should get rid of his habit of imitating movements of the goose on the gridiron, or the bear on hot irons, and learn to stand on his nether end like a Christian, and to us it appeared that Ldie Ochiltree, was too impetuous, too voluble, and not sufficiently dry or sarcastic. This was however the most successfully performed part of the evening. Of the ladies, of whom there were five or six, we thought Mrs Tonson looked and played the part of Miss Macintyre prettily; and there was a manifest improvement in histrionic lore exhibited by Mrs. Davis as Jenny Rutherford.

Mrs. Chester sang some songs, and was in one or two instances endorsed by the gods, with whom she promises to become a prodigious favorite. The said gods were rather noisy, at which we were not surprised; for sooth to say there was but little to amuse them.

The rushing in of the tide was very well represented, and does infinite credit to all parties concerned in getting up this strife of the waters. We had almost forgot to mention the representative of the Earl of Glenallan. This amateur will make what is called a very good heavy business man; we recommend him to the special notice of the managers.

We had the gratification of witnessing the performances at the Theatre on Friday evening and are heartily glad of an opportunity of congratulating the amateurs on their success, the audience upon the rational entertainment provided for them, and the officers upon the fortunate issue of this new method of drawing off attention from the grog shop. The performances (before an audience of 7 or 800 persons) consisted of The Affair of Honour, Cherry Bounce, and the Village Lawyer. In the former, two practised amateurs from the commissioned branch of the Artillery played Major Lamhey and Cap'tain Carnage in a style to excite our hope that they will favor the visitors of Chowringhee by occasionally appearing. A Mrs. Ely, dubbed "Madame Vestris" for the nonce, made her debut as Madame de Tourville, and was most favourably received. She has a good figure, and a pretty face,—added to which high qualifications, her voice is clear and her self-possession undeniable. Cherry Bounce brought out two or three very good actors (Messrs. Johnson, Carlyle and Skeaf,) but one of them exhibited an unpardonable dependence on the prompter. The Village Lawyer was not quite so well sustained as the other pieces. Skeaf made a very excellent Snerl, and the Shamefaced of True was creditable to his talents, but Comyns who played Scout was sadly imperfect in the words of the part, and failed to embody successfully the various attributes of that exceedingly impudent personage, the village barrister. We suspect that C's avocations as stage manager, &c leave him no time to study the characters which he assigns himself.

Major General Brown, C. B., late commandant of the Artillery, who arrived from Benares the other day, was present at the performance. On his entrance, the men welcomed the worthy veteran with three loud cheers.—Englishman, July 31.

MEETING OF THE PROPRIETORS OF THE CHOWRINGHEE THEATRE.

There was a numerous attendance of proprietors and managers at the meeting at the Town Hall this morning. Mr. Mannuk in the chair. At the commencement of the meeting some remarks were made regarding the publication of the proceedings, and Mr. H. M. Parker being appealed to said the theatre was a private affair—"But," said Mr. Trower, "the proceedings of the last meeting having appeared in the newspapers, it is right that the managers' reply should have the like publicity." And the meeting unanimously concurred with Mr. Trower. The reply of the managers to the report of the committee of three was then read by Mr.

William Young. It described the report as an unfaithful chronicle of the past history of the theatre, a distorted view of its present condition, and an exceedingly unsafe guide with reference to future operations;—containing grave reflections on the origin, progress, and actual pressure of that incubus—the debt,—learned disquisitions on the extravagance of estimates long since converted into deburements,—solemn observations on managerial silver-gilt ornaments—the whole may be summed up in four words, gross, inaccurate management throughout. The committee had gone into subjects quite extraneous to the purpose for which they were formed and the report abounded in error and fallacies. As to the amount of Rs. 42 per manum for managers' breakfast, it was an enormous exaggeration, other charges having been jumbled together and placed under that inviting head. The managers had called for information from the secretary, enquiries had reduced the charge 48 per cent., further enquiries had ascertained the real average to be Rs. 18 per month, thus showing the managers guilty of only one-third of the extravagance imputed to them. But this was not all, the report charged "the managers eating and drinking,"—the word drinking having been unnecessarily pressed, and likely to enlist the Temperance Society against them. The reply noticed and explained various disbursements referred to in the report. Time, however, urges the reporter to be brief. The reply concluded by expressing the opinion of the managers, that any expectation of profit from an amateur theatre must be purely imaginative. Mr. William Prinsep then addressed the meeting and explained various items, which had occasioned the cost of the repairs to exceed the estimate. Mr. James Prinsep also added a few words as to the cost of the roof, Rs. 3,600, whereas the cost of an ordinary roof would have amounted to Rs. 10,000. Mr. J. P. Grant in reply, declared that the sub-committee in making their report had not the least intention to say a word of blame against the gentlemen who were so kind as to superintend the repairs. Mr. W. Prinsep referred to the words more money expended on repairs than necessary. These in his opinion were censoriously applied. Much discussion followed, but the point was ultimately disposed of by a suggestion from Mr. H. M. Parker, that the interpretation of the committee on their own words should be admitted. Mr. J. P. Grant then proceeded to comment on the sarcastic tone of the reply. As to the report "abounding in error," the managers had only been able to point out one in the matter of charges, for breakfasts, and this, he asserted, was occasioned by the incomplete manner in which the information was given by the person to whom the manager had entrusted the keeping of the accounts. The reply said this was a specimen of the inaccuracy of the report. He denied that the report was inaccurate. He had indeed thought before the reply was read that a few errors might have crept into the report, but now when one only had been detected and taking into consideration the spirit displayed by the late managers,—"Several voices, 'Late managers!'"—Well, he would not dwell upon that.—But taking into consideration the spirit in which the reply was drawn up, and the fact that one error only had been detected, the assumption was that the managers could find no more, and, therefore, the proprietors must take the remainder of the report as correct. He adverted to the tenacity with which the managers clung to office,—they had in their extremity applied to the proprietors and expressed their willingness to resign, "but now that they had done the proprietors out of Rs. 50 per share, and got some money in the bank they were desirous to continue in office." Mr. Trower declared the managers had never relinquished office. Mr. H. M. Parker referred to the proceedings of the two preceding meetings. He thought those proceedings had not been in conformity with the ninth clause of their charter, and that new managers could not be legally appointed without a notice given in conformity to the provision therein contained.

Mr. W. P. Grant alluded to the tone of the managers' reply. He thought the committee of three had been most scurvily treated by the managers. Mr. C. R. Prinsep, on the contrary, thought the reply a very amusing piece of poetry and romance; he had looked into it and found no scurviness at the bottom. But to the point; did the proprietors come there for mere child's play, for such he contended it would be if they rescinded the resolution of the 17th of June? Mr. W. Young proposed a resolution which went to annul the resolutions of the former meeting. Mr. J. P. Grant appealed to the chairman's sense and impartiality, if at this adjourned meeting a resolution at variance with former resolution could be put. Colonel Young said he was unwell and unable to attend the former meeting. Mr. W. Young was also prevented from attending the former meeting. Mr. J. P. Grant did not think the indisposition of Colonel Young and Mr. W. Young ought to have prevented the meeting of the 17th June. Colonel Young said there had not been sufficient notice of the intention of that meeting to displace the managers. Had he been aware of such intention, he would have been brought down, like Chatham, on his couch rather than allow the measure to pass unopposed. After much further discussion, Mr. W. Young withdrew his resolution, and a requisition was immediately signed for a meeting on Saturday next to take into consideration the proceeding of the meeting of the 17th June.—Oriental Observer, July 8.

The noisy question about the management of the Theatre was settled very amicably to day at a meeting of proprietors called for the purpose by a little mutual concession. The radical party, who had done their endeavors to turn out the managers, for multitudinous misdemeanors in the matter of badges and breakfasts, &c. &c. most handsomely assured them to-day that they entertained for them the very highest possible respect, and only taxed them with the mis-management in a Pickwickian sense. All they wanted was, that the duties of the management should be separately undertaken by persons who would make it their particular business to look after them, and if the existing board of management would constitute a sub-committee of three upon this principle, there was not the least wish to deprive them of their honors. The Conservatives met this overture by recording a vote, that the managers be directed to sub-divide their duties and be held each individually responsible for the performance of the same, the sub-division to be determined in the committee of managers; observing, however, that there would be more work than any three persons having other occupations could satisfactorily perform, there being at least six distinct departments to be looked after. It being therefore agreed that no reduction should take place at present, the vacancy created by Mr. Holroyd, who tendered his resignation, was filled up by adding Mr. J. P. Grant to the committee:—and it was resolved not to let the Theatre except for single nights.

With regard to the debt, it is agreed to let it stand over, upon an arrangement providing for the interest upon it, and to prevent any increase of the amount.—Calcutta Courier, July 8.

MEETING OF THE PARISHIONERS OF THE ARMENIAN CHURCH.

We have to correct a part of the statement sent to us, as appeared in our paper of the 10th instant. The meeting of the 8th inst., we understand, was in the first place, an adjourned one, of the 6th inst. In the second place, the latter was convened by the usual printed circular in the Armenian language, under the hand of Mr. Carrapiet Jacob, the warden and premier commissary of the Armenian Churches of Calcutta and Chinsurah—that in consequence of a melancholy circumstance in his family—(serious illness of his aged parent,) he had made up his mind voluntarily to resign the honorary duties entrusted to his care by his nation at large. In this meeting of the 5th, the Church warden appeared in propria persona, to deliver charge, but as there was some delay in appointing the successorship of the office, he proceeded publicly to deliver charge to the Chairman of the meeting—producing the cash account—handing over the balance, and the funds in Government Securities, which were seen by all, examined minutely, and found correct, to have improved (beside other acquisitions to the Church by subscription, the long-talked-of chairs, benches and pews, introduced during his wardenship, &c. &c.) He then asked, in very humiliating terms, the permission of the meeting, and retired (about a couple of hours ere it broke up) amidst the una voce (as it is termed) warm thanks, and regret of all present—clergy as well as laity, who in respect stood up at his quitting the table. It appears by the minutes subsequently recorded, that a successor to Mr. Carrapiet Jacob remained undecided that evening, consequently the meeting was adjourned to the 8th inst. and we are enabled to lay a verbatim extract from the proceedings recorded, the translation of which runs thus—“Imprimis, in the room of Mr. Carrapiet Jacob, who resigned the duties of Church Wardenship, Mr. Manuk Malcum Manuk is elected Church Warden until 31st Decr. 1838, &c., &c.” We regret that a communication, under the anonymous signature of “A.” crept into our columns of the 6th inst.—with a heading “an extraordinary meeting”—has given vent to a “mirable diction”—“the silences and whispers” ironically hinted at, to have resigned at the meeting, cannot be mistaken; that they were expressive of the deep regret, the meeting felt, if not “A.” himself, at the sad event, and the deprivation of the zealous services, by the untimely resignation, which we understand is fully recorded by the select vestry in their circular minute book, when that functionary tendered his resignation; which he had to repeat more than once, ere the Committee against their wish, and sorrowfully, were obliged for his impertinence, to accept it. “A.” could satisfy himself of this by perusing it at the vestry room; it runs from 26 to 32 pages of the book. If “A.” is one of the community, he might at least have read the printed circular, which is received by every Armenian inhabitant in Calcutta, ere he gave way to such unmeaning scribble, which infers that the resignation “seems to have been in consequence of encroaching much on his other engagements” and garbles the duties to mere “acting manager.” We have been further assured, that the meeting of the 5th was conducted with due decorum and solemnity, as the occasion required, Mr. G. Appar in the chair; and if “A.” was not devoid of the feeling of those present, it would not have appeared to him at all “extraordinary,” as he heads his unique production. And we cannot help repeating our regret, to have in a hurry given space to such communication and the article, without authentication.—Calcutta Courier, July 17.

AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATION MEETING.

The meeting took place to-day and was respectably attended—there appeared to be about thirty persons in the room when the business commenced, though the number fell off towards the conclusion.

The several Resolutions carried at the Meeting were all fully discussed, but, from the desultory nature of the conversation that prevailed, we cannot give a detailed account of what transpired. All the parties present appeared agreed as to the desirableness of the undertaking, and resolved to support it. The Resolutions themselves convey a pretty good idea of the order in which the business was discussed. We were sorry to learn that Colonel Stuart who came forward to establish the Association, wished to withdraw from the management, now that it was founded, as he could not without some inconvenience take an active share in the business: the Meeting however were unanimous in expressing a hope that he would be prevailed on to continue in the Committee—accordingly his name is still retained and another Gentleman of considerable mercantile experience has been added to the Committee.

A list of the Shareholders was on the table, and we were glad to find the names of gentlemen of high respectability in it—the Meeting recommended the publication of the list of Shareholders: 69 shares were subscribed for, and several persons have engaged their passage in the first ship. It was mentioned at the meeting, that one gentleman had applied for both the Foap Stern Cabins; but as the appropriation of the best accommodation by one person would cause much dissatisfaction, it was thought that his request could not be acceded to, but as the first applicant he should have his choice of the two cabins, and as many other side cabins as he might require.

We are glad to see, that the present undertaking has been so warmly supported, as we are convinced that many benefits to both countries will flow from it, and as we heartily approve of the scheme, we cordially recommend it to public support.

It was mentioned at the meeting that many persons who had not taken shares were desirous of giving donations; but as the scheme is not of a nature to admit of free gifts being accepted, it was recommended to the Committee, in the event of donations being pressed on it, to form a separate fund to be administered to by the Committee towards paying the passage of respectable and deserving persons, too poor to proceed to Australia by their own means.

UNION BANK MEETING.

FRIDAY, JULY 14, 1837.

General half-yearly Meeting, made special for the purpose of considering the requisitions of 30 proprietors for a Charter.

CAPTAIN VINT, in the Chair.

Read the Secretary's Report on the state of the Bank for the half year, ending 30th June, 1837.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

OF THE OPERATIONS OF THE UNION BANK FROM 1ST JANUARY TO 30TH JUNE, 1837.

The usual half yearly report which is now to be laid before you, will be found to bear the same prosperous character with those which have been submitted of late years.

The actual gain from all realizations during the six months now expired, amount to Company's rupees 1,41,153-3-6, which is at the rate of a minute fraction about 13 per cent. per annum on the capital stock. When to this are added the undivided Co.'s Rs. 17,054-10-4, of last half year, you have a total disposable fund of Co.'s Rs. 1,58,207-13-10, equal to the rate of Co.'s Rs. 14-10 per cent. per annum, out of which you will proceed to make such an immediate dividend as may seem expedient. You will remember that the resolutions of April and May last, for adding one-third to the former Bank capital, by subscriptions from the old shareholders, only facilitated this operation, by allowing proprietors to reckon in part of their subscription the amount (whatever it might turn out to be) of this June dividend. It becomes necessary, therefore, to show distinctly the entire amount of divisible funds now available. If you determine to divide 14 per cent. or nearly the whole Bank profit—

The sum so divided will be Co.'s Rs.	1,51,200	0	0
Leaving undivided a reserve fund of	7,007	13	10
The dividend on each full share will be	189	0	0
Ditto on ditto Supply, third ditto ..	63	0	0

If you divide 12 per cent. or..... 1,29,600 0 0

The undivided surplus remains.... 28,607 13 10

Dividend on each full share 162 0 0

Ditto ditto Supply, third..... 54 0 0

If you divide 10 per cent. or.... 1,08,000 0 0

Remains undivided..... 50,207 13 10

Dividend on each full share.... 135 0 0

Ditto ditto Supply, third..... 45 0 0

As soon as this question of the present dividend is determined, we shall proceed to adjust our stock subscription accounts with the proprietors now in India, whether for squaring up the differences on their old stock or subscribing for their privilege of new, in cash or promissory notes, under the resolutions of May, at 8 per cent. interest from 30th June. Till then any exact enumeration of those who have or have not qualified for new stock by paying up on the old, or of those who have or have not claimed their privilege, would be premature. Your directors will close the lists as soon as possible and put to competition any share not taken up. But as a point of general interest it may here be noticed, that apparently there will be none such to sell, saving always absentees, who have an extended period of option. Of Co.'s Rs. 2,40,000 required to square up the entire old stock, above three-fourths, or Co.'s Rs. 1,87,666 have been received in cash, and Co.'s Rs. 52,334 remain to be adjusted on the present dividends. Of Co.'s Rs. 800,000 required subscriptions for new stock in three instalments each of Company's Rs. 2,66,666-10-8 due on the 31st August, October and December next, Co.'s Rs. 3,70,000 have been already anticipated in cash payments, being nearly half of the whole, 4,30,986.

The Bank Note circulation has kept pretty nearly within the same extremes as indicated in last report. These were then, Co.'s Rs. 7,05,000 and Co.'s Rs. 3,23,000. They have now ranged from 7,43,000 to 3,38,000, with a daily average on the six months of Co.'s Rs. 5,06,035. The new Company-ropes Notes have arrived in the Parsee; they will almost immediately pass into circulation, and it is satisfactory to find that their estimated cost of at least £1,000 dwindles down to one third, or Co.'s Rs. 3,200 only.

I conclude this report by adverting, perhaps for the last time, to the large item so long standing against the Bank in our accounts as "DEPENDENCIES." This sum, originally amounting to Rs. Rs. 2,72,201-4-10, represented all the losses and bad debts of the Bank from the first. It was stated to you at the last half-yearly Meeting that this sum had been reduced by gradual realizations to Co.'s Rs. 1,75,127-12-11 while in the mean time a fund had accumulated from undivided reserves sufficient to cover this remnant of Dependencies. The present state of this account will appear at one view by the following extract from the Trustees' account now on the Table.

Total accumulation of profits, exclusive of past dividends up to 30th June 1837.....	Co.'s Rs.	3,26,802	15	10
Amount remaining of dependencies.....		1,68,595	2	0
Surplus Fund now available being at the rate Co.'s Rs. 14-10 per cent. per annum on the capital.....		1,58,207	13	10

The item of dependencies may thus, for the present, be considered as absolutely extinguished. There is still a small expectancy which will be brought to credit, of our general profits in future as realized, I refer to the long pending "DEPENDENCY," of Ramtunno Doss's Estate; and I am happy to report that our Trustees have at length, by amicable arrangement with the family, obtained undisputed possession of the joint property. This they are preparing forthwith to sell and to divide the one-third portion of Gopey Mohun Doss (our debtor) rateably among the creditors.

J. YOUNG, Secretary.

Union Bank, 14th July, 1837.

It was proposed by Mr. Macmahon, and seconded by Mr. Dickens, and carried unanimously.

Resolution 1st.—That this Report is approved by the Meeting, and that it be published in the newspapers.

Proposed by Mr. Bruce, Chairman of the Directors, and seconded by Mr. Stirling, and carried unanimously.

Resolution 2nd.—That a half-yearly dividend at the rate of 14 per cent. per annum, or Co.'s Rs. 189 for each Full Share and Co.'s Rs. 69 for each Supplementary third share, be now declared.

Proposed by Mr. W. R. Young and seconded by Mr. Dickens, and carried unanimously.

Resolution 3d.—That the temporary nominations during the last half year by the Directors of Mr. W. F. Fergusson to officiate in the absence of Mr. James Fergusson, and of Mr. S. R. Crawford, in the room of Mr. K. B. Mackenzie, be confirmed.

Resolution 4th.—That in the room of Messrs. Bruce, Fergusson, Maclean and Rustomjee Cowjee, who go out by rotation, the following gentlemen be appointed Directors of the Bank—namely, Messrs. Storm, Cullen Cragg, and T. Holroyd, new Directors.

The foregoing matters having been disposed of, the Secretary called attention to the object of the special requisition signed by a number of Proprietors, to take into consideration the expediency of an application to this Government for a Charter. After reading the requisition, the Secretary read the former correspondence with Government on this subject, viz, a letter to Mr. Secretary Bushby of the 1st September 1831—another of the 30th August 1833, written in consequence of getting no reply from the Court to whom the question had been referred, and finally a letter from Mr. Secretary Prinsep of the 22d September 1834, annexing an extract from the Court's letter of the 16th April, 1834, which briefly stated that the Court would not accede to the request.

Mr. Dickens asked whether it is more consonant with the terms of the requisition that the Directors should submit a proposition respecting the charter. Colonel Young said that it was understood by them that they had submitted the proposition; and that it was now open for any one to move any resolution founded on it, and Mr. Dickens then moved.

Resolution 5th.—That it be referred to the Directors assisted by a Committee composed of the following member T. Dickens and J. Young, to take the necessary steps to obtain a Charter or Act of Incorporation from Government for the following purposes:—

1st.—To enable the Bank to sue and be sued by its Secretary, to take conveyances and hold all property in his name.

2d.—To limit the responsibility of the Bank to the amount of its paid up capital.

3d.—That it be an instruction to the Directors and the Committee to offer as a condition of obtaining, a Charter, that the amount of notes of the Bank payable on demand, shall not exceed 2-3ds. of the capital, and said in moving it that he should explain his grounds as clearly as he was able.

He considered the charter for the purpose of suing and being sued by the Secretary, and for limiting responsibility to the amount of paid up capital desirable, because there was a class of persons who were at present deterred by the want of it from becoming proprietors of the Bank. These persons were afraid they might become liable in their own estates, in case the Bank become indebted. The case could not arise unless the Bank lost its whole capital; but even then it was in reality a delusion, for any creditor to suppose he had recourse to the partners of the Bank individually. In theory of law it was so: in practice the right was useless, and one that no man of the last sense or knowledge of the matter would avail himself of. It was true a creditor has a right to sue any of the partners of the Bank for the debts of the whole,—equally true that such partner when sued, has a right to call upon the creditor to make all the other partners parties to the suit, in order that they may be made to contribute rateably. We had now 201 partners and we should certainly soon have a much more numerous body, and by our constitution may have 3,200. If any man supposed that in filing a suit for an account against say 2,000 partners, he was likely to get it before the final accounts at the day of judgment, be laboured under a mistake which, the sooner it was corrected the better. In reality and plain truth, the limit of the capital paid up was the limit of the practical responsibility. While on the one hand the shares of the Bank were somewhat discredited by the fears of persons who dreaded nominal responsibility, they were perhaps accredited with as little reason by the notion that prevailed with another class, that liability of the partners in their private estates increased the capital. The amount of capital subscribed was a real limitation of responsibility, and as the whole was a paid up capital it was light and just in principle it should be so. Although in our commercial land in no way but by a legislative act, could a body of partners limit their responsibility, that was not so in other countries. On the continent, in France, Belgium, Holland, &c., an association that gave due notice of the amount of its capital, and that it would not be liable in gross for more, was held to give notice to all the world not to give it credit for more, and could and did limit its responsibility. The Union Bank does not want any more credit than it has and deserves. Our issues do not average more than an eighth of our paid up capital, and nearly the whole of that or this invested in Government securities, bullion and private paper, must be utterly worthless, before we could lose more than our capital,—a supposition that may be at once dismissed as impossible.

Respecting the convenience of suing and being sued by the Secretary, there could be but one opinion and that need not be further dwelt upon. Respecting the limitation of responsibility to the amount of paid up capital, he would make but one more remark. We went to ask for it offering guarantees. It was his own opinion and that of the Directors, he believed, that we ought to agree to limit the issues of notes payable on demand to 2-3ds of the paid up capital, which rendered a loss of the whole capital impossible, as every body must see. It had never been known that a Joint Stock Company, with a paid up capital, and trading on no other had lost the whole of it, and the Union Bank had not only a paid up capital but restricted issues, a feature that distinguished his proposition favorably from all others. The Bank of Bengal had probably a circulation of notes payable on demand to double its capital; the Bank of England to three or four times the amount. The Union Bank neither asked the Government to receive its notes nor accredit its issues; but it was willing itself to accredit them by a guarantee that they should not only represent credit, but cash or in equivalent securities.

Proposed by Mr. Parker seconded by Mr. McMahon. Resolution 6th.—That the Proprietors be recommended to the Directors to increase the salary of the present Secretary to Rs. 1,600 per mensem, and to add Rs. 100 per mensem to the salary of the present Accountant, the increase to commence from the 1st July 1877. Carried unanimously.

Thanks were then offered to the Chairman and the meeting broke up.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 15.

CALCUTTA LAUDABLE SOCIETY MEETING.

The Half Yearly Meeting of the Laudable Society was held this day—Mr. Longueville Clarke in the chair. The usual Statements being produced on behalf of the Directors and read, it appeared that the risks outstanding on the 30th ultimo, amounted to 98½ shares on 411 lives, and that the state of the funds on that date was as follows:

Total	Rs.	8,02,842
Deduct eventual dividend at 2,000 Rs. per share (to complete 6000) on 127½ shares lapsed on thirty-eight lives,	Rs.	2,55,000

Sa. Rs. 5,47,842

The subscriptions realized or under realization this month for the current half year, added Rs. 223,705 to the above balance, less Rs. 28,000 amount of the regulated advance on 7 shares lapsed since the 1st of July.

The following is a statement of the number of lapses since the commencement of the present Society.

The Meeting was very well attended, it being known that Mr. Greenlaw's plan would be brought under discussion. The following is a copy of the Resolutions:

"1st Resolution.—Moved by J. Smith, seconded by L. A. Avietick, and carried unanimously—

That the Accounts and Statements for the last-half year now submitted to the meeting, be passed as correct and satisfactory. Carried nem con.

2d Resolution.—Moved by Mr. George Hill seconded by Mr. F. T. Fergusson, and carried unanimously—

That the Secretary be directed to publish the Abstract of the Funds, and Accounts of the Society now laid before the Meeting, for the information of Subscribers. Carried nem con.

3d Resolution.—Moved by Dr. Macpherson, seconded by Mr. G. Hill

That Mr. Greenlaw be requested to prepare a Statement of his plan, which shall be printed by the Directors and circulated among the Shareholders, for the purpose of being taken into consideration at the next half-yearly Meeting, and that the non-resident Subscribers be requested to forward their votes and opinions in writing to the Secretary under the 34th Rule.

Amendment moved by Mr. W. Peters, that after the words "Mr. Greenlaw" the following words be inserted, "or other shareholders."

Negated, being only supported by Mr. Wm. Fergusson.

Original Resolution then carried nem con."

After the second Resolution, Mr. Greenlaw said a few words in explanation of the motives which had induced him to propose a scheme to improve the stability of the Society by the establishment of a Guarantee Fund. The old practice had been at each renewal to reserve 10 per cent on the amount of the accumulated fund, and transfer it as a bonus to the new Society. In drawing up the rules of the present Society, however, no such provision nor any substitute for it had been made, and in consequence any surplus that might exist at the end of the term, namely, on the 31st December 1839, after paying up the 6,000 Rs. fixed as the entire sum to which the holders of lapsed policies were entitled per share, would be the absolute property of the then existing holders of policies on current lives, and be liable to immediate distribution among them. This Mr. Greenlaw considered a very unsafe position, and it was admitted to have been an oversight. He would therefore suggest that, of the surplus at the determination of the present Society, a certain portion should be devoted to current purposes, to meet the extra risk occasioned by the transfer of the policies of the late Supplementary Laudable when the two Societies were united, which caused the risks upon a single life, in some instances to exceed the new limits; that a per centage should also be transferred as formerly, and the remainder be rateably (according to the premiums they shall have paid) credited in account to the existing subscribers, but not paid to them, except, in each case, the excess beyond 6 per cent. on the outstanding risk of the party. But under this plan the amount so credited is to be the subscribers' absolute property claimable when his policy lapses. Those who withdraw from the Society, however, are to forfeit a portion—say one half, for the benefit of the rest. The general features of the plan had received the approbation of the Directors.

Mr. William Fergusson admitted the propriety of some plan of this sort to secure the stability of the Institution in a future association, but thought it would be unjust to appropriate the large expected surplus of 4,000 Rs. per share otherwise than among the holders of lapsed policies; and therefore that the Meeting for receiving the votes upon this scheme should take place at some period before the next half-yearly premiums became due, as he believed there were many who subscribed to the Laudable on the faith of that appropriation. He moved an amendment accordingly, but withdrew it on explanation that a shorter period would be insufficient to give the necessary publicity and draw attention to the plan.

It seems to us that, in fixing a maximum to be paid on each lapsed policy, the principle was established from the first to give any surplus to the current policy holders, and consequently those who subscribe under the impression stated by Mr. Fergusson, do so under a delusion.

The object of Mr. Pater's Amendment was to give opportunity for circulating a scheme he had drawn up, which was based on the principle of distribution among lapsed policies, being in fact a renewal of the old plan of the Laudable. Upon which Mr. Greenlaw observed that, in that case, he would himself withdraw from the Society. After this point had been discussed, Mr. Greenlaw mentioned the subject of Arracan risks, and put it to the Meeting whether it would be right to subject officers going there on duty, to any increased premiums, no such difference or exception being made when they were ordered into the field. The Meeting determined to act on the liberal principle and to make no extra charge in any case upon current policies on account of the parties proceeding to Arracan.—Calcutta Courier, July 26.

We have been told that in reporting the proceedings at the Meeting of the Laudable Society, we misrepresented the views of Mr. Wm. Fergusson:—that that gentleman did not contend that the surplus at the close of the present Society on the 31st December 1839, should of right be distributed among the holders of lapsed policies, but agreed with Mr. Greenlaw, that it belonged to the then existing Subscribers. His apprehension was, that Mr. Greenlaw's scheme of a locked up reverse fund would deprive them of this right, and therefore he thought it but fair to give the Subscribers opportunity to consider the effect of the proposition before another half year's premium should become due, that, if the proposition were adopted by a majority, the dissentients might withdraw if they pleased,—it being within his own knowledge that some policies were now kept up in the Laudable merely on account of the valuable interest arising from this expected surplus. When Mr. Greenlaw's plan shall be laid before the public in detail, we hope it will be found sufficiently to preserve this valuable interest in the existing policy holders, although the fund shall not be distributable till a more distant date. But we are of opinion with Mr. Fergusson and some others, that the fact of the surplus being now so much larger than was expected when it was resolved at the outset to leave the question open for a time, whether the value of a lapsed policy should be fixed at 6,000 or 7,000 Rs. is a strong argument for rescinding the subsequent resolution which fixed it at 6,000 only, and for raising the amount to 7,000 rupees, or rather for promising a contingent increase to that extent supposing the present prosperous state of the funds to continue to the end of the term; for in that case there will be surplus enough for a guarantee fund after paying the lapsed policies at this rate, and all interests will thus participate in the prosperity of the institution.—Ibid, July 28.

CALCUTTA DOCKING COMPANY.

The first general half-yearly meeting of the Calcutta Docking Company, held at the office of the Secretary, on Tuesday, the 25th July, 1837.

First half-yearly report of the proceedings of the Calcutta Docking Company, from 1st January to 30th June 1837.

The committee have the pleasure to lay before the proprietors their first report of proceedings, and are happy to be able to show that the association has fully answered the expectation of the proprietors, even with every disadvantage attendant upon the starting a new and extensive concern, bare of stock and with hands entirely new to the business.

On the 20th December 1836, the upper Howrah Dock was purchased of Captain Currie for Co.'s Rs. 2,00,000 and on the 30th December 1836, the Kidderpore Docks were purchased at Auction for Sa. Rs. 3,41,000 at Co's Rs. 3,63,733-5-4.

The two lower Howrah Docks have likewise been hired of Messrs. Carr, Tagore and Co. at Co.'s Rs. 1,565 per month, equivalent to interest on Rs. Co. 2,03,000, at 8 per cent. per annum (being the amount due for them to the assignees of Barretto and Sons) upon the condition stated in their letter dated 29th April 1837.

It will be for the proprietors to determine at the expiration of that time, namely, by the beginning of March, whether or not they will purchase the Docks from Messrs. C. T. and Co. for the sum of two lacs of rupees; in case of refusal Messrs. C. T. and Co. will have the right of retaining possession and disposing of them in any other manner they may please.

In the meantime the committee think they have seriously benefited the association by preventing these Docks from coming into General competition against it.

The Steam engine and Engine-house at Kidderpore, for pumping out the Docks, commenced by Mr. Kyd, has been completed at an expense of about Co.'s Rs. 2,000, which outlay, however, it will presently be shown, to be a considerable economy to the association, in comparison with the old plan of pumping out by the means of coolies.

The house at Kidderpore, which was in a miserable state of repair, has been also thoroughly repaired and improved, and it may now be considered valuable property that will always yield a good monthly rent from its position and comfortable accommodations. It is now let for 300 rupees per month.

In conformity with the resolution of the last general meeting, a sale to Government has been effected of a part of the ground at Kidderpore at the East end of the premises, it has not yet been measured, but it is estimated to realize about 75,000 Rs. there has been some delay in consequence of a doubt as to the validity of the title, but it has been agreed to give an indemnity bond, which will settle the business in a very short time.

There has likewise been much complication in the title from the executors of Mr. Kyd to this association, but by reducing the purchase money 10,000 Rs. all these difficulties have been waived on the part of the attorney for the association.

The title deeds are now very forward, and will be executed in a few days, and the whole interests of the association are vested in the three trustees named in the deed of copartnership.

ABSTRACT No. 1 - SCHEDULE No. 2 — The committee have now to report the income and expense of the association. For the total amount of repairs to vessels and the building of different boats, &c. The bills of the association amount to Co.'s Rs. 2,64,477 3 30 and the estimated profit on the same is Co.'s Rs. 96,867, as will be seen by a reference to schedule No. 3.

SCHEDULES Nos. 4, 5 AND 6. — The expenses of establishment for the last six months amount to Co.'s Rs. 47,832 10 as per schedule No. 3, added to which are Co.'s Rs. 6,000 for certain repairs and alterations alluded to in the above report, and the amount of interest paid upon the part of the purchase money of the Docks.

Thus within the term of six months, the net earnings to the association have amounted to Co.'s Rs. 49,231 5, upon a very fair proportion of work. The estimated amount of commission upon the ship on the stocks at Kidderpore, now nearly completed, may be considered as the amount that will be due by her owners. There are likewise several boats and other work on hand for Government which do not so properly come into this half year's report of progress.

SCHEDULES Nos. 7 AND 8 — The Docks were sold without their stores and tools, entirely bare of stock, the committee have been obliged therefore to purchase at the auctions held on the premises at the time of delivering over stores and tools to the amount of about Co.'s Rs. 15,000, in addition to which they have had to lay in a stock of timber, iron, coals and other materials which they have been able to do at such rates as will no doubt eventually yield considerable profit in their retail appropriation. The rough value of the balance of stock on the 30th June amounts to about Co.'s Rs. 1,02,398.

It is not considered necessary to take stock formally and particularly at the several yards more than once a year.

The value of the property in hand this day amounts to 6,12,632 8 10.

By schedule No. 10, the proprietors will perceive, what proportion has been paid up and what amount remains due upon each of the Dock purchases, but it is necessary to explain that the claimants by mortgage upon Mr. Kyd's estate, are willing to allow to lie over 1,25,000 Rs. for the term of 2 or 5 years at 8 per cent interest, taking a first mortgage from this association. The executors are willing to take their security secondary to them for the balance of the purchase money payable by the instalments agreed upon.

In the uncertainty of what the business of the association might afford to pay remuneration to the secretary it was not finally determined whether he should draw fixed salary or by commission on the gross receipts. The proprietors will determine now that the deed of copartnership may be filled up in regard to this point, but the committee consider that the secretary's estimate No. 6 of 2,000 rupees per month, including all office charges and assistants, is not too much.

The deed of copartnership lies on the table for signature by the proprietors.

The number of shares taken are 474. The amount paid up in cash and promissory notes being rupees 2,35,800. There remain 81 shares in default, which it is believed will now be immediately paid up, since the deed of partnership is settled, and this report will prove that both property and profits are good and sufficient to satisfy all those who were in any doubt of the success of the association.

The committee lay upon the table a statement of their cash account, presenting a balance in favor of the association when the outstanding bills have been recovered and the subscribed shares paid up, of rupees 22,185-2-4.

Gibbon	Agricultural Committee and Committee of Papers To remain as now constituted

Moved by Dr. Strong, Seconded by Col. Rehling and unanimously resolved. That the above Committee be confirmed, and that the Secretary be directed to circulate the lists, soliciting the members appointed to give the Society the benefit of their assistance when called for.

The President drew attention, to a memorandum from the Secretary, proposing to increase his assistant's salary from 100 to 150 rupees per month, on the ground of greatly enhanced labor, and with reference to his intelligence and constant attendance.

The Secretary begged to explain, that Mr. Blechyn-den had never hinted at an increase, but Mr. Bell considered him deserving of more.

Resolved—Nem Con. That the assistant's salary be increased to 150 rupees.

Read the proceedings of the Assam silk committee, which simply embodied two resolutions, to write to Captain Jenkins for a larger sample, with cocoons in the different stages, and to send the silk received to Professor O. Shaughnessy for report.

Read a note from Messrs. Cantor and Co. informing the Secy. that they held 500 rupees at the disposal of the Society, from Captain Jenkins for a premium to encourage the cullm, &c. of Atia silk, and mending it off the cocoon.

The Secretary was directed to receive the amount.

Read the proceeding of the Agricultural Committee held on the 29th June, reporting favorably of the canes and cotton in the Society's nursery, and proposing that the Secretary should make application to Dr. Stevenson of Lucknow and Captain Brown at Jubbulpore, for supplies of Otahete sugar-cane, further that he should apply to Messrs. Adam, Scott and Co. for their assistance to secure some Tinnevely and Seychelles cotton seeds.

The Secretary brought forward a motion seconded by H. Walter, Esq., with a view to encourage the importation of Otahete cane, for distribution throughout India, viz.

"That a premium of 500 Rs. be awarded to any commander or other person who may import from the Mauritius 500 full grown full length Otahete canes in a regaining condition, not later than the 31st January 1883.

2. That 250 rupees be given for 250 ditto ditto canes.

3. That the gold medal and a premium of 1,000 rupees be awarded to any cultivator who can exhibit 100 Bengal beegahs of Otahete sugar-cane on or before the 1st January 1883, each plant to be four feet apart, and to be planted in the West India plan, not in ridges but square holes, with some further conditions, regarding the purchase by the Society of the produce.

Proposed by Dr. Strong, seconded by Mr. Willis, that the Secretary's suggestions be handed over to the sugar committee for consideration and report at next meeting.

In connexion with this question Mr. Willis submitted an extract of a letter just received from a correspondent at Mauritius, stating the difficulty he experienced in that island to procure canes for exportation to India, owing to a little jealousy on the part of the planters, mentioning at the same time, that the Otahete cane was nearly exhausted (Query what has become of it?) and hinting, that to Britain we ought to look for supplies.

The Secretary informed the meeting, that in consequence of a heavy incurrence of postage demanded upon magistrates' returns of grain forwarded to the Society, under the instructions of Government, he had, by direction of the Committee, applied to the Post Master General, for a return of postage on the grounds that the despatches were superscribed, "on service", and further that he had since his address to the Post Master General returned several expensive parcels of Persian returns pending the reference.

The Post Master General in reply, states his inability to meet the Society's wishes, on the plea that this Society is not a public body, and that the several Collectors and Magistrates must have superscribed their despatches inadvertently on service.

Read a letter from Dr. D. Stewart, Secretary to the Statistical Committee, offering to arrange in a tabular form the returns of grain received from the different Collectors by the Agricultural Society.

The President proposed, and it was resolved, that the Secretary do place himself in communication with Dr. Stewart, on the subject of these returns, and if necessary submit in application to Government on the question of postage.

Sir Edward Ryan presented to the Society, a paper containing "observations on the Culture of hops" recently received by Sir Henry Kane, from a practical farmer in England, together with an extract of a letter which accompanied the "observations." Sir Henry Kane's attention to the subject, was arrested, when His Excellency arrived in the Upper Provinces, and he immediately wrote to a gentleman in England for a supply of seed. This not being obtainable, (not being used time), a box containing plants was despatched to Sir Henry, on the General Kyd, and as that vessel has arrived some time, we may soon hope to hear the result of the Government of sending live plants.

It is satisfactory to note that Sir H. Kane's opinion of the climate of Upper India being well adapted to the growth and maturity of the hop, is seconded by Dr. Campbell of Nipal, who has very recently applied to the Secretary to endeavour to procure him some seed, and there are few more capable from actual observation, to give an opinion on this matter than Dr. Campbell.

Proposed by Dr. Wallich seconded by Mr. Bell, that the thanks of the meeting be offered to Sir Henry Kane, for the fresh mark of his zealous co-operation to advance the views of the Society, and that the paper presented by the President, be published in the 5th volume of the Society's Transactions.

Read a letter from the President of the Royal Horticultural Society of Paris, dated 20th January 1837, to the address of the President of this Society, presenting a copy of transactions for the year 1836, expressive of the lively interest felt by that institution in the success of our endeavors to improve the resources of India, and as the objects of both are the same the Society of Paris, hopes to enjoy uninterrupted friendship with that of Calcutta in prosecuting enquiry into the avenues of Horticulture and Floriculture. Sir Edward Ryan engaged to reply to the President's very courteous and flattering communication.

Read a letter from W. Blundell, Esq., dated Moulmein, 13th June, to the address of Sir E. Ryan. Speaks in rather desponding terms of his cotton plantations owing to an unusual fall of rain. Mr. Blundell does not opine favorably of the Pernambuco cotton, he admits that in point of quality it is all that can be desired, but the produce is small and Mr. B. thinks will not answer as a source of commercial profit.

Mr. Blundell speaks of the caoutchouc as likely to become a valuable export, the surrounding jungles, in reference to sundry experiments made by Dr. Helfer on the juices of a variety of trees and creepers. Mr. B. alludes also to Potash as likely to form an additional item of some importance.

From Dr. Helfer to the Secretary, dated Moulmein, 12th June, sending a box containing a variety of specimens of caoutchouc, and one of gamboge, procured from the jungles, accompanied by remarks on each sample.

Resolved, that Dr. Helfer's letter and specimens be submitted to the committee appointed to report upon caoutchouc, &c.

From H. H. Macnaghten, Esq., Chief Secretary to the Governor of India, dated 19th June, annexing copy of a letter from the Chief Secretary to the Governor of Madras, dated 30th ult., together with copies of circular letters from Dr. R. Wight, of Madras, respecting the improvement of the cultivation, &c., of the different staple products of India.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 7th July, presenting to the society a pamphlet on the cultivation of Cotton, by Dr. Lush of Bombay.

Read the following extract of a letter from Earl Fitz William to Dr. Wallich, dated 13th February, 1837.

"When you and your friends did me the unexpected honor of entrusting to my unworthy hands, their petition for equality of trade, I certainly did not expect to see that object accomplished with the rapidity and success that has astonished us. But we are now governed upon principles which enable the Government to grapple with difficulties which would never have been overcome by a less popular system. It was done without any acclamation on the part of the West Indians, who, instead of being ruined, have been benefited to an extraordinary degree by the emancipation of the slaves, and are therefore able to bear a competition at which they would previously have started."

Capt. Jenkins desires to be informed why the yellow stick lac of Beerbloom, sells for a higher price than the purple stick lac of Sum and Fegu, and the dark red of caoutchouc, sent round by Capt. Jenkins.

Assam and Sylhet, also, whether the insect is cultivated, or gathered in the wild state, in Beerbloom. Capt. Jenkins wishes to know why the depth of colour should lessen the price, and if any way affects the quality of the lac when converted into shell lac.

Perhaps some member can answer these questions.

From Mr. A. Millet, of Entally, to the Secretary, dated 8th July, enclosing for the consideration of the society a prospectus of a joint-association for the cultivation of musk-melons.

The Secretary was directed to intimate that such schemes did not come within the compass of the Society's intentions.

From J. W. Grant, Esq., Export Warehousekeeper, to the Secretary, dated 17th June, calling for information respecting the disposal of cotton and tobacco seed imported from England, in 1830, by order of the Court of Directors.

The Secretary had rendered an account of disposal.

From Lieut. W. Munro, Secretary and Manager of the Bangalore Society, now designated the "Myavre Branch Agricultural and Horticultural Society, to the Secretary, dated 24th May, enclosing a most interesting summary of their transactions, from the beginning of their very short, but most successful career, and returning thanks for the amount of aid contributed by this Society in the way of seeds, &c.

From H. Walters, Esq., to the Secretary, dated 7th July, enclosing an extract from the Englishman relating to the latest commercial intelligence from England. The writer of the article enters at great length, upon the advantage that would accrue to India, by a well directed mode of attracting the application of capital and skill to some of our neglected staples, as sugar, coffee, tobacco, &c.

From A. Ronald, Esq., of Dunearee, dated 8th June, furnishing replies with reference to the eastern part of the district of Cooruckpore, to the queries conveyed in the Society's circular of the 31st March last.

From Major J. D. Syers, dated Cuttack, 22d June advising the despatch through Messrs. Livingston, Syers and Co., for the opinion of the Society, samples of Cabool, Persian, and Virginia tobacco and Pemian cotton, being the produce of the Branch Society's garden.

These samples were ordered to be made over to the respective Committees, when received by the Secretary.

From C. K. Robison, Esq., dated 20th June, enclosing a note from Mr. James Prinsap, forwarding four silver medals, for the inspection of the Society, value including workmanship 18 Rs. each, which had been paid by the Secretary to Mr. Robison.

From Dr. Gordon, of Ambilah, dated 21st May, to Mr. D. W. H. Speed. Mr. Speed submitted this letter, to show the utility of the Society in exciting a spirit of enquiry, and as leading to the opening of new resources. Dr. Gordon was led by the proceedings published in the papers, to give his attention to silk and from the instructions contained in Mr. Speed's paper on the culture of silk, has now, although before perfect stranger to the art, completely succeeded in introducing silk into a district, where it had never been seen.

From Professor O'Shaughnessy, to Dr. Wallich, dated 10th July, reporting favorably of some specimens of caoutchouc, sent round by Capt. Jenkins.

From W. C. Crane, Esq., dated 6th July, presenting some specimens of the Sea Island cotton grown at Singapore.

From the same, dated 11th July, noticing in the sealed premiums offered for staples, what in his opinion is an inconsistency.

Proposed by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Storm and Resolved, that a new member should only be entitled to such part of the transactions, as may be published after his admission, and that all preceding parts, or volumes, if required, be paid for at the retail price.

Proposed by Mr. Stirling, seconded by Mr. Cracroft, and Resolved. That the Secretary be requested to open a correspondence with Professor Royle, on all questions regarding caoutchouc, which may come from time to time before the Society.

Proposed by Mr. N. Alexander, seconded by Mr. Storm and Resolved. That a show of fruit and vegetables be held on or about the 1st June, 1838, and that rewards be given in the same manner, as at the show in the cold weather.

Proposed by Mr. Cracroft, seconded by Mr. G. A. Prinsep, that an exhibition take place early in August next, with a view to encourage the growth of indigenous vegetables by giving small moneyed premiums.

N. B. This proposition is necessarily referred to the Agricultural Committee, as nothing is stated regarding the scale of premiums.

From Rajah Kalle Krishna, dated 17th June, presenting some seed of the arhar aboll, together with a short description of the best mode and time of sowing it.

From Col. Stacy, dated Allyghur, 3d June, advising the despatch of some cotton, pumpkin and early cauliflower seed, also some cotton of the cone-shaped cotton plant.

From Major Moore dated Hyderabad Residency, 15th June, promising to forward some grafts of the tree from which their apples grow, so as to reach Calcutta by October next, and desiring some to be given to Mr. Storm.

From Messrs. Adam, Scott and Co, in reply to the Secretary's request, promising to procure some Tannevelly, &c. cotton seed.

From Mr. J. W. Masters, dated 11th July, forwarding 10 sars of Upland Georgia cotton seed, and 4 of New Orleans ditto, ditto, the produce of the Society's nursery.

A very valuable French Work on the cultivation of the orange, with plates, was presented to the Society by W. L. Ferguson, Esq.

The thanks of the meeting were ordered to be offered for the foregoing contributions.

JOHN BELL, Secretary

BENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND MEETING.

A quarterly general meeting of subscribers to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund was held at the house of the Secretary, at 1 o'clock P. M., on Monday the 10th of July, 1837.

On the motion of Mr. Surgeon F. Corbyn, seconded by Mr. J. Sawers, member of the Medical Board Mr. T. Smith, officiating member of the Medical Board was called to the chair, when the Secretary read the following report.

Drafts have accordingly been received from the paymasters of Agra, Benares, Cawnpore, Merat Presidency, and Raipootnah divisions and by the collectors of Baisore, Hoogly, Cuttack, Birun, Rangpore, Behar, and Beerbhoom, and the Resident Councillor of Singapore and the Resident of Nepal, amounting in all to Company's rupees 13,389, 57 being the collections of the subscriptions for the month of May last, and for arrears of subscriptions collected in that month. Each draft is accompanied by a list, specifying the name and rank of the subscribers, the amount collected, time of payment, and for what month paid. By this plan the committee will be enabled to ascertain at any time the total amount of their funds, the payments made within a given period, and the defaulters, if any, in their monthly subscription. But its whole utility will depend upon the regularity with which the Paymasters, Collectors, and other officers receiving money on account of the fund, remit its amount and attend to the preparation of the statements which ought to accompany it.

"The votes on the several questions submitted to the subscribers have been received, with the following result."

On the proposal by Messrs. Raleigh and Hope, that it be submitted to the subscribers as a conditional amendment to the regulations, particularly XXIV. XXXIII, and XXXIV. 'That in case the Hon'ble Court of Directors grant to the medical service the boon for which they have memorialized, subscribers to the fund may retire from the service without prejudicing their claim to the annuity, after having served the reduced period specified by the court as entitling them to pension.' The votes are found to be :

Majority in favor of the proposition, 148

which being more than a majority of two-thirds of those who voted, it is by the provisions of article 38 of the Fund Deed, legally carried, and the subscribers are requested to alter their copies of that document accordingly.

On the proposition by Mr. C. Campbell and other medical officers of the Sirhind Division, that rule XXXII of the present Fund Deed shall be considered applicable only to members of the Medical Board, subscribers to the fund for a less period than (10) ten years calculating from the commencement of the fund in 1833, to the date of their accepting an annuity; but that all members of the Board, subscribers to the fund for a period of (10) ten years or upwards, whatever their period of service in the Board may be shall agreeably to the regulations fully participate in all the benefits of the fund; and Mr. Sawyer's amendment "that article 32 of the Fund Deed be rescinded." the votes are found to be :

For the proposition	21
Against	109
Majority against the proposition	88
For the amendment	65
Against ditto	99
Majority against the amendment	24

Both the proposition and the amendment having been lost, article 32 of the Deed remains unaltered.

The matter of Mr. Mercer's arrears of salary has also been decided by the subscribers, the following is the result.

18 subscribers voted for Co.'s Rs. 100 per month.
2 do..... do	125.
8 do..... do	150.
6 do..... do	200.
90 do..... do	250.
11 do..... do	300.
1 do..... do	2000 rs. don.
1 do..... do	Sa. Rs. 100pr. men.
1 do..... do	Sa. Rs. 300pr. men.

Four subscribers have left the amount to the Committee of Management; six others have voted that the salary be paid during the time the Fund was in operation but not during its being in abeyance, and two have stated that they decline to vote.

"A large majority therefore are in favour of Mr. Mercer's claim being admitted for Co.'s Rs. 6,274-3-5.

"Several propositions for altering the regulations have been offered during the quarter, but the committee having objected to them on grounds which they trust will be satisfactory to the proposers, it is needless to dwell upon them. But, two propositions have been received from Mr. Superintending Surgeon S. Ludlow, and other officers, subscribers to the fund, stationed at Agra, to which your attention is requested.

"The first proposition runs as follows :

"Proposed that Regulation XXIII. of the fund deed be thus modified, viz. To expunge the concluding clause or to accept double such annuity as the sum of his subscriptions and other sums of money which he may have paid into the said fund, together with compound interest thereon as aforesaid, may be sufficient to procure, according to the rate contained in the table of rates herein before contained. And to substitute the following words :

"Or to accept an annuity of £150, together with such additional annuity as the sum of his subscriptions and other sums of money which he has paid or may pay into the said fund, together with compound interest thereon as aforesaid, may be sufficient to procure, according to the rate contained in the table of rates herein before contained. Provided always the aggregate amount of such annuity do not exceed the aforesaid sum of £300 (except in such cases as may come under our 2d proposition, should it be adopted) "and provided also that no sum or sums of money once paid into the said fund be afterwards withdrawn therefrom."

"This proposition is supported by the consideration that many Subscribers are prevented from retiring, by not having funds to pay up the half value of the annuity; and, therefore, that "the Medical Retiring Fund, as at present constituted, does not entirely suit the circumstances of the persons for whose benefit it was designed; that proposition, if carried, will make no real difference to the pecuniary interests of the fund, and that "the step of one class of men is equal in value to that of the other, and ought in justice and policy to be purchased at an equal price; unless it can be satisfactorily shown that to do so would involve a serious loss to the Fund :

"The second of Mr. Ludlow's proposition is,

"That in the event of two or more of the six annual premium annuities of £150 with the authorized purchasable addition not being accepted, the whole or any parts of the funds applicable to such unaccepted annuities shall be appropriated to the purpose of providing one or more increased premium annuities of £200 each to be offered to all Superintending Surgeons actually in India who shall resign the service on or before the 31st October 1833, and subsequently to such Superintending Surgeons only as may have held that rank not more than five years, together with such additional annuity as the sum subscribed by each of such Superintending Surgeons and other sums of money which each may have paid or may pay into the said fund, with compound interest thereon may be sufficient to procure : provided always that such aggregate annuity do not exceed the sum of £400, and provided also, that no sum or sums of money once paid into the said funds be withdrawn therefrom.

"Or supposing the first proposition herewith submitted be rejected, the following would then be our second :

PROPOSED NEW REGULATION.

That in the event of two or more of the six annual annuities of £300 not being accepted, the whole or any part of the fund is applicable to such unaccepted annuities be appropriated to the purpose of providing one or more augmented annuities of £400 each to be offered to superintending surgeons actually in India at the time who shall resign the service on or before the 31st October, 1838, and subsequently to such superintending surgeons only as may have held that rank not more than 3 years on condition of their fulfilling, with regard to this augmented annuity, all such terms as are required by the regulations from the acceptors of the smaller annuities of £300 each.

"In favour of this proposition it is urged,—that it is feared the pension will prove too small to tempt the higher grades, to resign their lucrative situations, it will generally be accepted by surgeons (probably young ones) and the scheme will turn out to be a pension Fund to assistant surgeons only. That unless we can tempt more superintending surgeons to quit the service than would do so if no such Fund existed, the super surgeons will scarcely gain a step. That the great object should be to prevent superintending surgeons from remaining more than a few years in that grade, and thus to give all ranks a reasonable prospect of enjoying for a time the almost only lucrative situation our service holds out; for the Board is at too great a distance to be generally contemplated by the juniors.' That 'the major of a regiment receives more money for his step than any one junior in rank; first, because he causes greater promotion by his resignation, and secondly because he gives up a more valuable appointment. Why may not superintending surgeons be brought out on a similar principle? If it be asked, why we do not extend this to members of the Board! The answer is that their steps would cost more money than the promotion caused by their resignation would compensate. At present our Fund really pays much more for the surgeon's step than it does for that of the superintending surgeon, although the one vacates an appointment of 700, and the other one of nearly 2000 rupees; for the sum, which is required to procure an annuity of £300 for a man of 40 years of age would very nearly purchase an annuity of £400 for one of 55, the average age of our superintending surgeons.

"Against this proposition the committee object in the most decided manner,—that it is founded on assuming, what is not the fact, that there now are, and in future will be, more annuities to give than will be taken; than the senior subscribers will not retire from the service, without a larger sum to induce them to do so than that now given, and that promotion will be accelerated by its being adopted. On the first point the committee have to observe, that three annuities have been accepted of the Fund offered; they have reason to believe other annuities will be taken by subscribers on furlough: and that at no distant period there will not be a surplus annuity to dispose of. That the proposition contemplates the disposal of the surplus annuities at the end of every year instead of carrying them over according to article 22 of the Fund Deed; which says 'and in the event of all or any of the said annuities shall stand over until the following year unless accepted in the mean time, they shall again be offered as above mentioned, together with the six annuities for the said following year; and so on in like manner every succeeding year;' such violation of the article being a breach of faith towards those who entered the Fund with the expectation of being able by means of the annuities which may from time to time lie over to retire, at an early period; and an act of injustice to all who may at any time to come, wish, or be compelled by sickness, to retire at the end of their 17 years of service.

"The next point assumed, that the senior subscribers will not retire without a larger sum than that now given admits of refutation by the fact, that one superintending surgeon has already retired on the present annuity; another has signified his intention of doing so; and two more, now in England, are expected to retire rather than return to India.

"With regard to the acceleration of promotion, the committee are of opinion, that promotion so far from being accelerated by the proposition being carried would be retarded thereby. As it will be necessary to obtain the sanction of the Hon'ble Court of Directors such a material alteration of the regulations, they have approved of; and two years will probably be consumed in obtaining that sanction (even should it be given at all); it may reasonably be expected those superintending surgeons and senior surgeons who now intend to retire if this proposition is not carried, will in case it is, after their minds, and remain in the hope of getting a higher annuity. Those superintending surgeons, who want the higher annuity, will hang on from the year in which there may be no surplus annuities, in the hope of there being such the next year, or the year after that as it may be. The senior surgeons too, will be induced to remain in the hope of getting a higher annuity when superintending surgeons, as well as the allowances of that rank in the mean time. By the proposition being made to apply only to superintending surgeons now in India, promotion must be further retarded by its inducing those now on furlough to return to this country, in the hope of an additional £100 a year; a clause which appears to the committee equally impolitic and unjust. By further restricting it to those superintending surgeons who may retire before the 31st of October 1836, it would be a dead letter; for as above observed, the sanction of the Court of Directors could not be obtained to it before that period. In short the committee are convinced, that the proposition, so far from inducing men to retire, would rather induce them to stay.

"With reference to other points mooted in the preamble to the Agra propositions; the committee are of opinion, that Mr. Ludlow and the other proposers overvalue the retirement of a superintending surgeon, and that the comparison of officers of that rank with the major of a regiment is an erroneous one. In the case of the latter, those pay most who benefit most but here the youngest assistant surgeon on the list would pay more, reckoning risk of lapse of life, &c. than the senior surgeon, and with and all but certainty of never obtaining the least good, for what he shall pay. The Major's is a Regimental step; the superintending surgeon's a line one.

"The committee also cannot agree with Mr. Ludlow and his associates in thinking that under the present regulations 'the scheme will turn out to be a promotion fund to assistant surgeons only.' On the contrary, they believe it to be equally fair to all classes of subscribers; when the difference of subscription, and promotion and option of immediate benefit from the annuity are duly considered.

"Having thus shewn that the proposition in question will be detrimental to the interest of the Fund and calculated to injure even those, who at first sight, it would seem to serve, the committee leave the matter in the hands of this meeting; to be dealt with as you think most for the interest of the general body of subscribers; not forgetting that it is for the real interest of every individual in the Fund, that its regulations be equally just to all.

The amount of receipts during the past quarter cannot be ascertained until the whole of the statements of payments shall have been received at the treasury. The expenditure during the same period is as follows. For salary and office establishment of the Secretary..... 750 0 0

"In the above, the amount of 6 months' subscriptions does not include those of subscribers on furlough; nor any part of the arrears which remain to be paid up; and on the other hand, he sum to be paid by Mr. Munro is taken at the maximum of the table of rates; that gentleman not having yet sent in the affidavit of age.

"By calculating in this manner, the committee can safely recommend, that in addition to the two annuities of 1833, yet unaccepted, there be declared, one more of that year (making with those before granted and declared, 6 of 1833,) and four of 1834. Seven annuities in all are therefore now declared, viz., three of 1833, and four of 1834; of which those of the former year are to be first disposed of."

"In conclusion the committee are happy to state the continued and increasing prosperity of the institution. Those members of the service who at first held back are daily seeking to enter it. The arrears are being paid in a manner more than equal to the most sanguine expectations that could have been entertained. When subscribers are prepared to pay up their value of the annuity, promotion will be greatly accelerated. And at no distant period every object of the fund will be most amply fulfilled. But to secure these benefits, it will be necessary to proceed with caution; to avoid any step not founded on experience; and to see the working of our rules before we venture to alter them."

The two propositions submitted by Mr. Superintending Surgeon S. Ludlow, and other subscribers to the fund, stationed at Agra, together with the letter to the Secretary's address, and the remarks which accompanied the proposition, were read, and discussed by the meeting.

Proposed by Assistant Surgeon, H. H. Goodeve, M. D., seconded by Assistant Surgeon A. Bryce, M. D., "that the report of the Committee of Management be confirmed and adopted by this meeting." Unanimously agreed to.

The first of the propositions submitted by Mr. Superintending Surgeon S. Ludlow and others was then read, when it was proposed by Assistant Surgeon A. Bryce, M. D., seconded by Mr. Assistant Surgeon E. W. W. Raleigh, "that the proposition now read, be disapproved of by this meeting." Carried by a majority of 11 to 3.

The second of the above mentioned Agra propositions was then read: when it was proposed by Assist. Surg. H. H. Goodeve, M. D., seconded by Mr. Assistant Surgeon J. McCosh, "that the proposition now read be disapproved of by this meeting." Carried by a majority of 14 to 1.

Proposed by Mr. Raleigh, seconded by Mr. Garden. —That in consequence of the great inconveniences and expence incurred by submitting propositions for altering the existing rules of the Medical Retiring Fund, most of which propositions are at variance with each other, and all suited only to individual interest,—it be earnestly recommended by this meeting to the service, that they do not risk the stability of the institution, by voting for any alteration of its fundamental rules, established on four years' mature consideration of the medical service at large on the most authentic calculations; and sanctioned by the Honorable Court of Directors, until the expiration of such reasonable time as may enable them to ascertain the applicability of those rules to the object of the Fund. Carried by 11 to 3.

Thanks were then voted to the Chairman.

MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY'S MEETING.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta, held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, 1st July, 1837.

Letters from the following gentlemen were read.

From R. White, Esq. Assistant Surgeon, Bombay establishment, stating his desire to withdraw from the list of members on account of the expence of postage of the Society's publication.

From Alex Duncan, Esq., Surgeon Bombay, to the same effect.

W. Sealy, Esq., Assistant Surgeon, Bengal, was proposed as a member by Dr. McClelland, seconded by Dr. Cantor.

The following communications were presented.

1st. A case of aneurism of the aorta, by W. A. Green, Esq., of Howrah. The patient was a sailor, 44 years of age, who came into the Seaman's Hospital on the 1st of June last. He complained of pain in the chest with cough, his countenance was haggard and pale, and Mr. Green suspected at first that the patient was affected with phthisis. He was treated with purgatives and expectorants, and leeches were applied to his chest; he was subsequently bled on the 4th of June, and vomited blood in a stream and before assistance could be afforded he was a corpse.

Upon examination, an extensive aneurism of the aorta was discovered. The enlargement commenced almost immediately after the origin of the vessel from the heart, and it extended to the descending aorta. The sac pressed so effectually upon the spine that the bodies of two of the dorsal vertebrae were partially absorbed. Between the aneurism and the œsophagus, a communication existed through which the fatal hæmorrhage had taken place.

The edge of this opening was black and irregular, as though it had been produced by sloughing. The whole membrane of the aorta for many inches was atheromatous. The heart was hypertrophied in the left-ventricle, the lungs presented traces of inflammatory action and were largely tuberculated. It is a singular circumstance that this patient was employed in his ordinary labor without complaining of sickness until within a week of his decease, although the enormous aneurism which destroyed him must have been months in the course of formation.

2nd. A case of diseased gall bladder, by Dr. D. Stewart.

The patient in this instance was a delicate female, who for 7 or 8 years previous to her death, had been suffered to possess an abdominal tumor of considerable size, swelling had been distinctly perceptible in the right hypochondriac and iliac regions, having all the character of a tumor, but causing little or no inconvenience to the patient. She finally died of phthisis and chronic bronchitis. Upon dissection of the abdomen, the suspected tumor was discovered to be an enormously enlarged gall bladder, which projected for some inches below the inferior edge of the liver. The bag was filled with a colorless fluid pronounced by professor O'Shaughnessy to be pure mucus without a single trace of bile in its composition. A small round gall stone was impacted in the entrance of the cystic duct, which latter canal was quite impervious. The hepatic duct communicated freely with the duodenum, and was considerably enlarged in diameter.

Both these cases were illustrated by preparation beautifully prepared by Mr. Evans for the Medical College.

3. An account of the fever now prevailing in the neighbourhood of Delhi, by Mr. Serrell, presented by the Medical Board.

The following papers were then read and discussed.

Dr. Macnab's further account of Scurvy at Mynpoorie.

Mr. Taylor's case of Phlegmasia Dolens in a male subject.

SUPREME COURT.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1837.

McKellar v. A. C. Barwell.

Mr. Advocate General moved that this cause, which had been struck off yesterday, be restored to the Board. The learned counsel stated that the cause had been struck off in consequence of the non-attendance of Mr. Shaw, a material witness. The attorney for the plaintiff, under the impression that Mr. Shaw had been regularly served with a subpoena, wrote to that gentleman on Tuesday, informing him that the trial would take place that day, and requesting his attendance in Court. Mr. Shaw replied that he had not been served with a subpoena, and as he had an engagement at the other end of the town, he could not attend at the Court-house. Under these circumstances, as plaintiff's attorney was under the impression that the subpoena had been regularly served, the learned Counsel submitted the Court would order the cause to be restored to the board.

The court made the order. Three day's notice to be given to defendant's attorney.

In the matter of Aurelia Sarah Gego.

Mr. Clarke moved for a writ of habeas corpus calling on Alexander Gego to bring up the body of Aurelia Sarah Gego. The learned counsel moved on the affidavits of the mother and brother of Mrs. Gego, which set forth, that, in June last, in consequence of ill-treatment she, Mrs. Gego, had left her husband's house and gone to reside with the deponents; that on the 28th of June last, Mr. Gego, accompanied by several European sailors, forcibly entered deponent's house, carried off his wife, and confined her in the house of one Camille, where, as deponents swore, they believed her life was in danger.

The Court.—Take your writ.

Marcartoon Joseph v. Aratoon Jacob Joseph.

This was an action brought by Mrs. Joseph, an Armenian lady, to recover back from her son, the defendant, the amount of four promissory notes granted at various periods from the date of the first in 1832. Further details are not of interest.—Englishman, July 6.

FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1837.

WOMACHURN DOSS AND OTHERS v. RAUSMONEY DOSSIEE, WIDOW OF RAJCHUNDER DOSS, AND OTHERS.

We publish the judgment of the Court in this case. Rajchunder Doss is the person who built the ghaut on the Strand called, no one knows why, the Governor-General's Ghaut. He died in June last, leaving about 40 lakhs worth of property, and the present suit is brought by his nephews, the son and representatives of his two brothers, against his widow, for an account, and we believe a partition and division of the property on the ground of the whole property being joint, &c. The case of the widow is that the whole of the property is self-acquired either by Rajchunder, her husband, or by Putram Doss his father. The proceeding now before the Court comes on for consideration upon the plea of the defendants to the bill of the complainants in abatement of the suit. The plea is in substance that the claim of the complainants has been already disposed of and decided against by a decree of a Provincial Court, confirmed by a decree of the Sudder Dewanne Adamiat, which plea is supported by short answer in subsidium of the plea, to the purpose, that there was no joinder between the complainants and defendants since the decree of the Sudder Court, which we have stated was pleaded, that is since the year 1816, when the decree was confirmed by the Sudder.

The plea was argued on Monday last before the Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Malkin, Mr. Justice Grant being absent from indisposition.

Counsel for the complainants. Prinsep, Cochrane and Barwell. For the defendants. Advocate-General Clarke, Leith and Grant.

The Chief Justice this-day delivered the judgment of the Court, on the plea.

The learned judge stated the facts in the bill, which stated a joinder, that the property was worth about 40 lacs and consisted of real and personal property, prayed an account and partition, &c. The plea of the decree in the Mofussil Court, was a plea to the whole bill. In the suit in the Mofussil Court, one of the defendants alone appeared and put in an answer, the other defendant, Ramtonoo Doss, did not appear, either personally or by vakeel.

The learned Judge then on several technical grounds decided that the plea must be overruled.

The defendants have since obtained two months time to put in their answer? Plea overruled with costs.

RIX V. MALAY PRISONERS — (brought up from the Straits by H. M. S. Wolfe.)

This being the last day of Term.

Mr. Justice Grant, delivered the sentence of the Court in the above case. The Learned Judge addressed the Advocate-General, as counsel deputed by Government to conduct the prosecution, and Mr. Clarke and Mr. Osborne, as counsel who had kindly undertaken the defence of the prisoners. Having called the attention of the above-named learned Counsel to the case in question, the learned Judge said he would give the grounds, upon which the Court had determined to inflict a mitigated punishment on the prisoners, and also would assign the reasons which had caused the delay between the conviction of the prisoners, and the passing sentence upon them, and as the Counsel who acted for the defence, will now attend to the law of the Judgment as about to be stated by the Court, the learned judge intimated that an interpretation of the law and reasons contained in the judgment, need not be made to the prisoners. The jury had found the prisoners guilty on the second, and on all the subsequent counts, in the indictment. And the counsel for the prisoners had abandoned their intention to move in arrest of judgment. The learned judge then stated, we believe, that he had no doubt but that as the evidence stood, the piracy was proved, and that there was nothing to support the objection started by the counsel for the prisoners, that the Cochin Chinese, to which nation the people belonged whose vessel had been captured by the Malays, were not at war with the people to whom the prisoners must be construed to belong. He also thought that there was no evidence to show that the party of Malays in question, were of a nation whose custom and habit was robbery; a people described as a people guiltless latrones sunt, nihil homines civiles sunt. It was under these circumstances that the learned judges had considered whether the jus gentium was to be construed as strictly against the nations in the Straits, the habits of these people considered, as against the offenders belonging to more civilized communities; in other words, whether the common interpretation put generally by all nations on the jus gentium, was to obtain in the present instance. And in order to determine this point, the learned judges all agreed, that the situation, condition, &c. of the barbarous states to which the prisoners might be considered to belong, should be enquired into the Governor-General in Council accordingly that these enquiries should be made; and those enquiries are now before the Court. From the result of these enquiries it would appear, that there is no reason to believe, that these little states in the Straits of Malacca, recognize or sanction any private confederates of their subjects to commit acts of piracy; but whether there be connivance between the states and its subjects, or what is the punishment inflicted, or whether any be inflicted, rests upon conjecture. There is nothing in evidence to lead to any knowledge of the state to which the prisoners belong; they were, however, found near Pulo Tingy, and on being pursued fled to that island, and in the absence of evidence to the contrary they must be held to belong to Pulo Tingy. Now upon enquiry it appears that this island is in the territories of the Rajah of Johore, with whom and this Government there is a treaty. There was no ground for concluding, that any war subsisted between Johore and Cochin China, at the time of the Commission of the act of piracy. On the other hand there is sufficient presumption that this piracy, and all others are disclaimed generally through the small states in the Straits of Malacca, and in one of them, an edict has been promulgated punishing the offence with death. Robberies on the seas, by persons of these nations, must be considered, therefore, on the footing on which it is placed by writers on natural and international law; it is therefore the duty of all good members of a civilized state, to apprehend pirates and sea robbers. The petition put in by the counsel for the prisoners has had its influence upon us in mitigating the sentence. All that could be urged in their favour has been ingeniously brought to the notice of the judges, but there is one fallacy which runs through the position, which is an attempt to draw a distinction between the law of nations, as to the regulating the conduct of states and communities one towards another, and the law of nature. Now with reference to this view, and consideration of the application of the law of nature, and the law of nations, in the instance to which it is particularly applied in the present case, the law of nations, is nothing but the law of nature, common to all mankind, there is no such thing as a state (civitas) of robbers.

The reasons for mitigating the sentence we are about to pronounce are: Lapse of time, the suspense and anxiety the prisoners have undergone; the partial good effects likely to be the result of their execution; the greatly diminished effect consequent on it, if now ordered to be carried with effect in the Straits. The inutility of it as a warning to future offenders, inasmuch as there is now by act of Parliament, a Court of competent authority constituted to try their offences on the spot, (Court of Admiralty at Penang and Singapore). And from the steps now taken by Government, the petty states, have been brought to an acknowledgement of the law of nature common to all men, and a repudiation of piracy. The Sentence of the Court, therefore, is that judgment of death be recorded against the prisoners, and that they be transported to the Eastern Coast of the Bay of Bengal, to the Southward of the Gulf of Martaban, for the period of their natural lives.

Chief Justice—I may as well mention, that a whore which has not been cited at the bar, and which certainly could not be cited by the counsel for the prisoners, with almost similar facts, quite similar as to the amount and the nature of the crime committed, was tried in this Court in the year 1804, present Sir John Anstruther, Chief Justice, Sir John Royds, and Sir Henry Russell, Puisne Justices.

The men were convicted, and the capital sentence was carried into effect. I was led to the case by a note in Mr. Clarke's compilation of the rules and orders.

The case was the KING on the prosecution of — versus RADEAT ORANG, SEIROGH and RESSET ORANG, called Jasey.

N. B. The able and learned judgment of Mr. Justice Grant, is of course not done justice to, in any degree in the report, but generally, our report will, we believe, be found correct.

SITTINGS AFTER NOON, JUNE 13, 1837.

SHAIK ABDOL SALAAM, v. HYAM ISAAC.

The Advocate General with whom was Mr. Leith for plaintiff stated that this was an action of Trover for a promissory note, obtained by the defendant under the circumstances detailed in the evidence.

A witness proved the jurisdiction and a demand on and refusal by the defendant to deliver up the note; and the case made by the plaintiff was that the note came to the hands of the defendant as the Agent of the plaintiff.

Mr. Prinsep, with whom was Mr. Sandes, addressed the Court for the defendant, and contended that upon the plaintiffs own evidence it appeared that the note came to the hands of the defendant under the act and by the authority of the plaintiff and that in point of fact the plaintiff had not such a possession in the note as to enable him to recover in trover.

This Mr. Prinsep stated he submitted this as a ground of non-suit.

Chief Justice. — You had better go into your case Mr. Prinsep.

Mr. Prinsep then continued his address, and opened the case of the defendant, which, as detailed by the evidence, amounted to this; that there were some unsettled accounts between the plaintiff and defendant upon the settlement of which depended the question as to the right of the plaintiff, to the possession either legal or actual of the promissory note for which the action was brought.

The Court after hearing the evidence, on behalf of the defendant, recommended a reference of all matters in difference between the parties; the question of costs was also referred to the arbitrator. This amounts to what in England is termed withdrawing a juror.

N. B. — This case lasted three hours and a half, and altogether ended in a reference. It ought not to have lasted 10 minutes. The action was trover, for a promissory note. It was necessary to prove that such a note as described in the plaint was made, and in existence. The defendant had received no notice to produce the note and the note being in the hands of the defendant, the plaintiff consequently could not have proved its existence, and must have been non-suited, but the counsel for the defendant was magnanimous, and did not avail himself of this advantage.

ARCHIBALD CAMERON & ELIZABETH MORAN — WIDOW, &c. Esparte.

This action was brought on the money counts, against the defendant as executrix of her husband.

Proof of Probate granted to defendant was put in and also 2 letters were put in constituting admissions by the widow of debts due by the estate. — Verdict for plaintiff.

PROUDHONACOMAR TAGORE v. HUBHONACOMAR TAGORE.

Mr. Clarke, on the cause being called on, moved to put off trial on account of the absence of a material witness.

Chief Justice. You must pay costs of the day and the case must be put at the bottom of the Board.

JOHN CORNELIUS v. ALEXANDER HENRY SIM.

On the case being called on, Mr. Advocate General, moved to put off trial on the ground of the absence of a material witness. The witnesses in question was subpoenaed by both parties, by the plaintiff for the 13th July, by the defendant for the 14th, which latter subpoena was assigned by the learned counsel as a sufficient cause, to account for his absence.

Chief Justice. — I do not see that at all; the case must be placed at the bottom of the Board, the other side consenting.

OUSELEY AND OTHERS v. DWARKANATH TAGORE.

This was a demurrer of the plaintiff to the plea of the defendant. On being called on, it was directed to be put at the bottom of the Plea Board by consent.

HAJI RAJEEB ALLE v. MUSBOOM SIRCAR.

When this cause was called on, Mr. Advocate General stated, that in consequence of the rapid disposal of the cases which preceded it in the board, witnesses were not in attendance, nor was he prepared himself.

The Court, directed the cause, under the circumstances, to stand over till to-morrow, as it was in some measure a surprise upon the parties.

The Chief Justice intimated that upon it becoming essential to strike out causes already set down in the board for trial, the attorneys in such cases, must put in motion papers to that effect, in order that the Clerk of the Papers might amend the board, and give notice to the attorneys in the other cases, which stood lower down in the board.

SITTINGS AFTER TERM, FRIDAY, JULY 14, 1837.

HADJI RAJEEB ALLE v. MUSBOOM SIRCAR.

Mr. Cochrane, with whom was Mr. Leith, for plaintiff, stated, that this was an action on the money counts for the sum of re. 3,046-15, due by the defendant, and according to his own admissions, as found by certain arbitrators, to whom the mutual demands of plaintiff and defendant had been referred. The plaintiff called three or four witnesses, who had acted as arbitrators, and the admissions by the defendant of sums due to the plaintiff made before them were proved. The award was put in.

Mr. Advocate General, with whom was Mr. Clarke after submitting three grounds of non-suit, which the Court over-ruled, submitted to a verdict. Verdict for plaintiff ss. rs. 2,046-15.

SURROOPCHUNDER V. GUMBANARAIN SING.

This was issues directed out of Chancery to try certain facts elicited at the hearing in Equity. These issues occupied the Court during the rest of the day and will in all probability last all to-morrow.

MONDAY, JULY 17, 1837.

SURROOPCHUNDER SIRCAR CHOWDRY V. SUMBOOCHUNDER SING

This day Mr. Advocate General made a lengthy and able reply upon the whole evidence adduced on both sides in these issues, which have occupied the Court during Friday, Saturday and this-day.

The Chief Justice said, that in some cases when issues were tried, the Court was in the habit of stating the reasons for its finding. In this case, however, it was the opinion of the judges that such a course was not expedient. They found a verdict generally for the defendant, but not on the strength of the defendant's case, but on the weakness and improbability of that of the plaintiff. The case was one involving assuredly gross fraud and perjury on one side, and perhaps, as Mr. Justice Malkin suggested, upon both sides, and the alibi set up by the defendant the Court did not believe. Moreover, they thought it right to intimate, that this sort of defence resorted to by the defendant on this occasion, ought to be and would be in future discouraged by the Court, and on this ground that it was setting up on the trial of the issues as a ground of defence, matters not put in issue or brought forward on the pleading or interrogatories in the equity suit, from out of which the trial of the issues in question had arisen. Verdict for Defendant.

The Court then proceeded with the sittings board.

Amongst the causes expected to come on in the Supreme Court during the Sittings after Term, or during the Term after Sittings (we forget which it is) is one of some importance to the mercantile community. Our readers will remember that the bark Rebecca went ashore about two months ago, and that Mr. Wetherell, who happened to be in that quarter, had the charge of the vessel made over to him by the commander. It is said that Mr. Wetherell has saved upwards of a lakh of rupees worth of property, on which he claims the usual salvage. The consignees, however, resist the claim, and demand the delivery of the property. Mr. Wetherell refuses to deliver the goods and the upshot is an action of trover.

TUESDAY, JULY 18, 1837.

ONE ON THE DEMISE OF KHOODY DASER RANLOLL MOOKERJEE AND OTHERS V. HURLOLL MOOKERJEE.

In this case a rule nisi had been obtained to postpone the trial on the ground of the absence of material witnesses. But the Court after hearing the Advocate General, Mr. Prinscp, and Mr. Clarke, discharged the rule non est. The action was brought for the recovery of eight cottages of land with appurtenances in Benaulah-gully.

T. Dickens, Esq., was sworn in to day Accountant and Master in Equity, in the room of A. Dobbs Esq., who has proceeded on leave to the Cape of Good Hope, on a sick certificate.

The Judge, in his address to the Grand Jury, said, that he was sorry, to say that their duties in this session would be very laborious, as the Calendar was heavy and some of the charges serious. He was sorry to observe that there were no less than 4 cases of murder, and 2 other cases of a very singular nature calling for his remarks thereon to the Grand Jury. The first of these cases was that of a young man named Chinnery, who is charged with stealing some article of a trifling value. It is attempted to be shown that these articles were thrust into Chinnery's palkee when he was intoxicated, and he took them away in a frolic. It will depend on the jury on the evidence before them, to decide whether the prisoner had committed a deliberate theft or had been penetrating what he conceived to be a frolic. The second singular case was that of a person named Moodoooodun Banneira, who was charged with having in his possession a promissory note of Government, and having forged the name of one Parbatty Churn Moolerjee on the said note. In this case, the judge remarked the note had only been found in the prisoner's hands, and there was no evidence of his having been detected in the commission of the forgery, and during the long period which had intervened from the time the crime was committed to that of the note being discovered in the prisoner's possession, it might possibly have passed into many hands, therefore, perhaps, it would be very difficult to fix the crime laid to the prisoner's charge on him. The judge then proceeded to notice the cases of murder, and detailed and remarked on three of them. The first was that of a person named Peibix, who is charged with having aided, abetted and comforted another individual named Buxoo, who had murdered a Sikh merchant named Oojagur in the latter end of February. Against this individual there is no evidence to implicate him with the crime for which he stands charged, except his own confessions, which were made first on the 11th day of February 1837, and which are now complete. In his confessions this prisoner charges Buxoo, and another person, against both of whom an indictment no doubt will be prepared when they are found, with being the persons who had committed this murder. These confessions were voluntary, without fear or hope of reward, and it will be for the jury to consider what motive the prisoner could have had to accuse himself and implicate two other persons, if they imagine him to have had any. He then read from a law book passages for the jury's information regarding the law of self confession and accusation made by prisoners in any case. The next case noticed by the judge was of Sheo Bhurram and Harnishchunder, for having at Churuckdanga, about five months ago, killed and murdered a woman named Radha Beebee, and for having stolen 16 gold choories from her person. In this case it appears certain articles were found in the possession of one of the prisoners, identified to be the property of the deceased. The prisoner on being questioned respecting the manner in which he became possessed of the property, named two other persons who had delivered this property to him. One of them, Sumbonath, is not yet in custody, but the other is apprehended, and there will be two indictments against him, one jointly with this prisoner for having stolen property belonging to the deceased, which was found in his possession, and the other for being concerned in the murder of the said Radha Beebee. The last case the judge brought to the notice of the Grand Jury, was that of Abassee Khanum, who stands charged with the murder of a female slave of hers named Roheeman. This case, the Judge said, had already appeared, attracted considerable public notice. The prisoner is charged with having caused the death of the deceased by beating her severely. He charged the Jury to divest their minds of the verdict at the Coroner's Court, and to examine into the evidence minutely to ascertain whether the deceased died from the effect of the mal treatment it has been alleged she received from the hands of the prisoner in this case, or from any other disorder, and if from mal-treatment, whether they think from the evidence that this mal treatment was inflicted on her by prisoner in this case. He then commented on the law of murder, and said that even if any person labored under any bodily disease which may not be fatal at the time, and the mal treatment, such as wounding or beating the person so indisposed, had been inflicted on the person to such a degree as to cause or accelerate death the person inflicting this injury was guilty of murder, but if it was shown that owing to bad medical treatment the death of the deceased was accelerated, which wounds might have been cured if proper medical treatment had been administered to the deceased, then, in that case, the person who might have inflicted these injuries, even though the wounds might by turning into gangrenes have caused death, yet the inflictor of these wounds would only be guilty of manslaughter. He then said that the law permitted in some cases a master or a mistress to chastise their servants on provocation for neglect of duty and for disobedience of orders, and if the punishment was slight and of a nature not in itself exceeding what is generally often inflicted by masters in this country on their servants, yet if death ensued, the inflictor of the punishment would be guilty only of manslaughter, but if the punishment was violent and inflicted with any deadly or heavy wounding weapon, then the crime would be that of murder. In this case the institution with which the prisoner is said to have chastised the deceased, is sworn to be a heavy instrument, but it will depend on the jury to decide whether it is a weapon in itself of that nature that beating a person with it would cause death. That another point to be considered was whether the prisoner inflicted this punishment as stated in the evidence, with an intention to punish the deceased, or whether she did it from malice, and in this case, to him it appeared, that there was an absence of all malice or design or assignable motive to suppose the prisoner inflicted the punishment on the deceased with a premeditated intention of causing her death. The last point for the Jury to consider was whether the punishment was inflicted in a fit of anger on great provocation, or without adequate cause and deliberately. If the latter, it would greatly aggravate the offence and constitute the crime of murder. In conclusion the Judge charged the Jury, that as this case had already, from its probable consequences, attracted great public notice, and many versions of the case had already, been bruited about, to divest their minds from whatever they might have heard about it out of the Court, and to confine their finding solely to

The evidence which may be legally brought before them in this Court. After this, the Judge said he had nothing further to remark to them, and told them, that they were at liberty to go and examine the bills which may be brought before them during this Session.

After the Grand Jury had retired, the Judge told the gentlemen who were summonsed on the Petit Jury, that they were at liberty to go where they pleased to-day, but they must attend the Court again to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

After this the Court broke up for to-day and was adjourned till 11 o'clock A. M. to-morrow.

N. B. The presiding Judge, we are sorry to say, spoke the above speech so very low, that many words were inaudible where our reporter sat; we therefore cannot, as in former cases, give the Judge's speech to the Grand Jury entire, but we trust we have given briefly the substance of it from what our reporter could hear.

28TH JULY, 1837.

True bills were found to-day against Radamohun Sing, for burglary; Debnarain Roy and Roopchund, for burglary; E. Chinnery, for larceny; W Daile, for larceny; Attaram alias Rogon, for larceny; Gopal cooper and Warris coolie, for larceny; Gourbux Singh and Gunga-deen Durwan, for theft.

Independently of the cases which the Calendar exhibits, there are three private prosecutions, viz :

The traversed case of T. Fergusson, the assault case against Perroux and another, and an assault case of Bourkey, the tailor, against Guest, the tailor.—Bengul Hurkara, July 29.

FRIDAY, JULY 28, 1837.

Before Sir B. Malkin, Knight.

William Daile was tried for stealing, while at Diamond Harbour, on board the ship George the Fourth, on the 10th July last, ten gallons of rum, the property of J. Nicholson.

Nathaniel Davis, sworn.—Said, he is a seaman on board the ship George the Fourth, and knows the prisoner, who was a quarter-master on board that ship, which was about three weeks ago lying at Diamond Harbour. The prisoner was on board of her at that time. He left the ship seventeen days ago. Recollects, that at about the hour of half-past six on a Monday, a heavy shower came on, the defendant came out on the fore-castle and saw the prisoner with a broom stick in his hands attempting to wrench of the lock of the rum cask which was on the poop abaft, near the mizen mast. He could not succeed and then he, with either an iron spike or some such instrument, wrenched of the lock, and then tried to put in a tott or can, but not succeeding with it he along a smaller can and then drew out rum sufficient to fill a bucket, and handed it forward, and then filled another bucket; but as the chief mate ordered the awnings to be furled, the prisoner fearing a discovery, passed it under the masts on the poop, and then for fear of discovery he poured it over the awnings. If deponent had got some of this rum he would have drunk it, but as he did not get it he could not have drunk it. No sailor ever refuses to drink rum, or things like that, when he can get it. Mr. Wallis was the officer whose watch was then on deck. Deponent recollects no other. Each of the buckets might have held two and a half gallons. Prisoner was abaft the mizen mast at the time, and deponent at the fore-castle, near the cat's-head. The Sunday after this affair occurred deponent gave information of it. Deponent did not consider his life would be safe if he gave the information before. It was in a conversation at the deponent's mess, when they had taken a glass of grog extra and were talking of it, that this deponent said he had seen the prisoner take the liquor. Woodruff, another quarter master, whose watch was supposed to have been at the time when this rum was discovered to have been abstracted, hearing this conversation, went and gave information of it to the chief officer. J. Gowan has said to this witness, that he likewise saw the prisoner steal the rum: he was standing at that time at the fore-castle by the deponent. Deponent saw W Perry, a seaman, on the poop at the time the rum was abstracted. Deponent saw an officer besides midshipman Wallis, but prisoner could not recognize him because he did not come towards the side where deponent was.

John Gowan, sworn.—He is a seaman on board the ship George the Fourth. On Monday the 10th, at about half-past six o'clock, deponent saw from the starboard side of the fore-castle, the prisoner on the poop. Did not see the last witness on the fore-castle, as it was raining at the time. There was a parcel of dukey dogs (a term used by this deponent to designate native lascars,) there. Saw the prisoner draw and fill a bucket of rum from a cask on the poop: he drew it with a can, and it was raining at the time. Deponent did not see any body else on the poop, and does not know who was the officer on the watch at the time.

Alfred Ward, the chief officer of the George the Fourth, sworn:—Says the ship's company is riotous. Knows the prisoner, but cannot say what countryman he is, although deponent shipped him. By looking at him deponent cannot say what countryman he is. The name of the person who has written the prisoner's articles deponent believes is Mr. Down—he is in London. Believes the prisoner's professed signature to be in Mr. Down's writing. Prisoner left the ship either on a Wednesday or Thursday, about 15 or 16 days ago. The Monday previous to this the ship's steward reported that some body had broken the lock of the rum cask, and deponent ordered him to put on another lock. The steward is a trust-worthy man. The officers on the watch were deponent and Mr. Wallis the midshipman. It was a wet and rainy evening. The awnings are always furled every evening, between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock. Deponent never saw the prisoner either drunk or insolent, or neglectful of his duty, from the day on which the prisoner was taken on board till the day he left the ship. On this charge being preferred, the prisoner the day after refused to work. The lock was discovered broken on a Monday, the man refused to work on the Sunday next, and come on shore without Captain Rayner's permission on the Wednesday following.

Capt. Rayner sworn.—Deponent is the captain of the ship George the Fourth; the ship is the property of Mr. J. Nicholson, of Finchchurch-street, and the rum belonged to him. This is the first voyage the prisoner has sailed with deponent. Does not know what countryman the prisoner is; but his country must be mentioned in the articles. Prisoner was never drunk on board the ship, but was very impertinent. The agreement showed that the prisoner was an Englishman.

The prisoner remarked, that he thought it very strange that the first witness should take such very particular notice of him, when Mr. McLeod, the cooper, was on the poop at about half-past five, and wished to make a attempt to draw the liquor. Prisoner added that the first witness was bribed by the Captain, who had brought this charge against him, because he had left the ship; and because he would not take 6 rs. to the pound and went to defend the cause of seven of his messmates, whom Capt. Rayner had brought up before the police authorities. If prisoner had taken a bucket of rum from the poop down along the waist, could not Mr. Wallis, the officer on watch at the time, see him? Besides, Capt. Rayner swore at the police-office that the rum was stolen at 4½ o'clock, and now he says it was 6½ o'clock. Prisoner called Mr. Wallis as his witness.

Mr. Wallis sworn.—Says it was his watch on the day and time this rum is stated to have been stolen. The prisoner was the only person on deck. Saw during the time a bucket pass forward, but could not say what was in it. A man called Carey passed it forward. Only saw one bucket pass. Did not see prisoner take any bucket forward on that day, nor did he see the prisoner in any other place than the poop during his watch.

T. Wallis, ship's Steward, sworn.—Deponent had charge of the liquor case in the ship, and gave Mr. Ward information of the lock being wrenched off on Monday afternoon. At about 1 o'clock, when deponent went to draw the grog it was then all right, and at half past seven, when deponent went to draw the liquor again, then he saw that the lock of the cask had been wrenched off, and deponent then gave information to the chief officer, who ordered him to put on a new lock, and deponent did so. Did not notice whether the prisoner was drunk or not at the time. Deponent did not gauge the cask when he discovered the lock was off.

J. Arnott said, that on the Sunday previous to this discovery, he was with the prisoner. Went on shore and bought 6 bottles of brandy from the Doctor's woman, and drank 4 and kept by 3; but no rum was brought that day into their mess.

Here the Judge addressed the Jurymen and said, that as the ship is lying in the jurisdiction of the Zilla of 24-Pergunnahs, they must first be satisfied that the prisoner is a British subject, before they can bring him under the jurisdiction of this Court; if they are satisfied of this, then they can, if they think the evidence sufficient, convict the prisoner. Here he detailed the evidence in particular, and left the case with the Jury.

The Jury returned a verdict of Not Guilty.

True bills were found against Luckynath, Abbas Fuzil, Peer Mullick, and Shake Boodoo, for larceny; Sumbhoochunder sing, for perjury; Neelah and Gopal Sing, for burglary; Peerbux, for murder; and Buzoo, for theft.—Bengal Hurkuru, July 31.

INSOLVENT COURT.

SATURDAY, JULY 8, 1837.

The affairs of the late firm of Fergusson and Co., and the application of the assignees of Mr. David Clarke to be allowed to prove for a sum of six lakhs, again, came before the court this day. The Advocate General and Mr. Leith noticed an application by Mr. Clarke for a statement of the affairs of the insolvents at the termination of the commercial year 1828. That statement they now produced, and Mr. T. H. Gardiner was examined as to several items therein contained. It set forth a debt due from Messrs. Le Marchand and Warden, of about six lakhs of rupees, opposite to which was a marginal note in the hand writing of Mr. John Smith, stating, in substance, that with good luck the debt may be recovered, but nothing was to be allowed for it at that time. The witness deposed that no part of this amount had ever been recovered, and the like facts attended debts to the amount of Rs. 1,90,000 due by Mr. Patrick. Opposite to another amount Mr. Smith had written, should be recovered in time, with a little good luck. Mr. Gardiner deposed, that James Scott and Co., in 1828, were indebted to the late firm about fourteen lakhs, and that in 1829 they were indebted twenty four lakhs. The marginal note in Mr. Smith's hand writing was "must all depend on the success of Gloucester." The statement admitted a deficiency of assets in 1828, to meet the debts due by the concern to the amount of twenty-four-lakhs of rupees; subjoined to the statement is a note, in the hand writing of Mr. W. F. Clarke, written after the death of Mr. Smith, admitting that in strictness the estate of the latter was not entitled to any thing, but as a declaration to that effect would bring the firm into discredit, he proposed that three and a half lakhs should be allowed to pay legacies. Mr. J. P. Mackillingen and Mr. W. F. Fergusson, were examined at great length, but the reporter is not able to give their depositions with accuracy in consequence of the absence of the books and complicated nature of the accounts to which they spoke. Both gentlemen expressed their belief (that is their belief in 1827), that the firm was in a solvent state at the time. At half past two when the reporter left the court, the examination was still going on without a prospect of the court giving a decision this day.—Oriental Observer, July 8.

CORONER'S COURT.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, 1837.

A coroner's jury was this day assembled at the coroner's residence for the purpose of investigating into the cause of the death of a girl aged about nine years, of the name of Roheemun. A little after five the coroner and the jury proceeded to the native hospital at Chandra-where the body of the deceased was lying, to inspect the same; which being done, the following proceedings took place at the hospital.

Khaunumjee, sworn.—I am a widow and live at Calingah at present. I have seen the corpse lying in this hospital, in company with the jury. I know the deceased while living, her name was Roheemun. The deceased was a slave girl; she was purchased. She was brought from an inundated country by her mother, who sold her to the wife of Mirza Munde. The name of Mirza Munde's wife is Abbass Khanum. I was in the service of Abbass Khanum when she made the purchase. The transaction took place in my presence. My occupation was that of a child's ayah. The deceased was then five or six year old; she acknowledged the woman that sold her to be her mother. The deceased seemed to be well pleased at the change. I don't recollect what money was paid for the deceased. I did not see this money paid; but I was aware of the transaction as I was passing in and out of the room at the time. The deceased had ever since lived in the family as a child belonging to it. I am still in the service, but left the house of the mistress, on leave, in consequence of the death of my grand daughter, about a month ago. My mistress gave me leave for forty days, the usual term of mourning with us Mussulmans. The mistress is now at Amratullah near the Greek Church. I did not go to see her since I took leave. I did not come here of my own accord, but was brought by the police. I heard the death of the deceased yesterday at 4 o'clock. The name Roheemun was given to the deceased by the mistress. At the time of her purchase deceased had a Bengallee name which I don't recollect. Deceased was not exactly a slave, she was brought up like a child. The mother of the deceased was a Hindoo. I am sure she had a different name at that time. There are four female servants in the family besides myself. I don't know their names, I know their occupations; viz. a wet-nurse, two ayahs and a cook woman. There are three male servants, two cafrees and a musliman boy. The cafrees are named Bilal and Amber, and the musliman boy Syed. The deceased was not allowed to get out of the zenana; she never went out of it, to my knowledge. When I said that the deceased was a slave girl, I meant that she was an adopted child in the family. The name of Bebee Abbass Khanum's husband is Mirza Munde, and he is a merchant. The deceased was in perfect health when I took leave. The deceased was regular in her attendance to her work. She was sent to my house the day before yesterday; she was taken there by Bilal and Syed in a palanquin. No body else accompanied her. They said she was sick and desired me to try to cure her. They said that they had taken her to my house by order of Abbass Khanum, but without the knowledge of her husband. They left her in my house. I examined the deceased and found her hands were swollen, and sores on the back of her head and hands. She had a sore also on one of her shoulders. She had a violent purging. I rubbed her body with turpentine, and to the sores I applied some lamp-oil with gunney burnt into ashes. The deceased remained in my house one night. Yesterday the boy and a woman came to my house again and proposed to take the girl away; and I told them that they may do so. They said that they were desired to take her to the mistress's. They put her in a palanquin and took her away. During her stay in my house, she complained of pain, and called for water frequently during the night. She had the purging on her for ten or twelve days previously. As to the sore on the head, she told me that it was produced by lice; and those on the back of the hands by scratching. She did not express any apprehension that she would die. She told me that she had the sores for ten or twelve days.

Dr. Robert Henry Bain, sworn.—I am Police Surgeon, I have examined the body of a native girl named Roheemun, aged about nine, which was lying in the Chandy hospital and pointed out to me by Gopal bearer. The body was rather emaciated with a large puffy tumour on the forehead and a number of sloughing ulcers upon the head, body and extremities; namely, one on the back of the head measuring two inches in circumference, one on the left side of the head and another on its upper part about half the size of the first, and about the size of a six pence on the left arm, two on the forearm, and the back of both the hands were entirely bare of the integuments with the muscles and tendons exposed. A ulcer of the size of a six pence was also seen on the left leg, just below the knee; and another, on the right leg, measuring about one and a half inches in circumference. Most of those sloughing ulcers had a circular but ragged appearance. There was a number of blue marks also upon the head, body and extremities. I opened the head, chest and abdomen. The puffy tumour on the head measured four inches in circumference, and contained some thin dark pus. The brain was healthy, so were all the organs contained in the chest and abdomen, but they appeared pale and exsanguined. I consider the death to have been occasioned by the sloughing of the integuments and the sloughing ulcer. I entertain no doubt. The ulcers might have been produced by bruises or burning. There was no fracture on any part.

It was about half past seven o'clock, and there being no other witness present the inquest was adjourned till two o'clock the next day.

JULY 13, 1837.

The jury met at the appointed hour, and sat till about four o'clock without any progress of the proceedings for the absence of witnesses. We learnt that this case was also under the investigation of C. K. Robinson, Esq., magistrate, and that that gentleman refused sending the witnesses, till he had done with them. The coroner now dismissed the jury stating that he intended to see the chief justice, on the subject of this collision between himself and the magistrate; he requested the gentlemen of the jury to attend at 5 o'clock p. m. the day following.

About a quarter of an hour after, the jurymen being all present, the coroner stated that he had waited on the chief justice, and the consequence was that the witnesses were now in attendance. He (the coroner) trusted that such a thing will not occur in future, so long as he continued in the office of coroner; or he would be driven to the necessity of exercising the authority he possessed of compelling the attendance of parties as witnesses before his Court. The following proceedings then took place.

Mr. Peter O' Brien, first assistant in the Calcutta native hospital, sworn. Roheemun, the deceased, was admitted into the hospital on the 11th July at 2 o'clock p. m. She had a swelling on the left side of her forehead, sores or ulcers on the back part of her head, the left shoulder and a mortified point on the left. An ulcer above the elbow and another above the left wrist. The integuments of the back of each hand from the knuckles to the wrist were in a state of mortification. She had ulcers on the hip and knee. She expired at half past ten a. m. on the 12th.

Bilal, sworn. I am a boy belonging to the house of Mirza Munde and live in Amratullah Gully. I know the deceased, who was slave girl to Mirza Munde's wife. I was in the Mirza's service when she was brought in. My mistress gave her the name of Roheemun, but I don't know what her name was before that. I took the deceased to the house of Abbass Khanum-jee, in company with an ayah and Syed. I went of my own accord and was not desired to do so. I went seven days ago. I was ordered by the mistress to take the deceased to Khaunum-jee's, and I heard the order given. The mistress directed Syed to desire Khaunum-jee to try to cure the deceased; she handed five rupees at the same time to Syed, to be given to Khaunum-jee, for defraying medicine expenses. The deceased was beaten with a pestle. She had sores on the back of her hands, head, one of her shoulders and the hip. These were produced in consequence of the beating. I saw the beating. The deceased was beaten by the mistress whose name is Abbess Khaunum. She was sent to Khaunum-jee's four days after the beating; and remained there three or four days, when the mistress sent Syed and a dye for her—not the same woman that went the first day. This dye resides at Chinsurah. I heard that the mistress gave orders to take the deceased to Chinsurah from the circumstance of a message sent by Khaunum-jee that she was dangerously ill. I heard about the message from Syed. Deceased was to be taken to Chinsurah for the purpose of curing her. The dye was not in the house at the time that the conversation about the message took place between me and Syed; she came in soon after. The dye and Syed then went to fetch the deceased from Khaunum-jee's. The mistress and I accompanied them. The mistress has been displeased with me for the last three years. When we got to Khaunum-jee's, Syed procured a palanquin; and a woman named Khosh-kuddum, taking the deceased in her arms, placed her in the vehicle. Syed put a cloth or a purdah round the palanquin. On going past the Police Office I told the bearers to go there, and on their refusing to do so, I abused them, when they obeyed me I spoke to no chokeedar. At the Police Office I saw Mr. McCann and showed him the deceased. On my proceeding to the Police Office, Syed and the dye fled; but they did not say any thing to me, nor did they desire the bearers not to go there. The bearers ran away also. The sores on the body of the deceased I have mentioned, were produced by beating on three several days. On the first day that the deceased was beat, was for her having stolen and drank a portion of some sheerunjuhbeen that was prepared for the master. I detected her in the act, in a room where there was no body else present; I abused her for her conduct. As I was going to wash the cup out of which she had drank, the mistress noticed it in my hand; and on questioning me about it, I told her what I had seen. The mistress then sent for the deceased, and pointing to the cup, asked her what was in it. The deceased said that she felt ill at stomach, and had taken a little sheerunjuhbeen with warm water to promote vomiting. The mistress said "why did not you ask for it." The deceased answered, "if I had done so, you would not have given it to me." The mistress replied "when did you ever ask that I refused." The deceased rejoined, "I thought you would not have given it to me, I therefore stole it. On this the mistress got angry and kicked her on the belly. She had shoes on. The blow was such that the girl fell in consequence. The mistress then called for a rattan, but finding no one brought it to her, she took up the pestle of a mortar; and desired the deceased to put her hands flat on the ground, one after another, and struck on the backs thereof, with it. She struck two blows on each hand. (Mr. McCann was here asked by the coroner if the pestle in question was brought, when he answered in the negative.) Nothing further occurred that day. The deceased did cry and the mistress bid her be silent. The pestle was about half a cubit in length, and of the usual shape, with a knob at each end. The mistress held it at the middle and struck the deceased with the thin end of it. The blows were given straight up and down. The mistress appeared to me to be very angry. It was about eight o'clock in the morning. The Chinsurah dye was present, Syed was also present, I now recollect. About ten or eleven o'clock that day, the mistress ordered the deceased to bring a chelimchy, but being weary, she could not bring it, but brought a smaller one. The deceased was in the habit of lifting a large chelimchy every day, but on that day she could not because he said she felt pain in her hands. After the small chelimchy was brought the deceased was desired to pour water out of it; but being unable to do so, the mistress kicked her and she fell. The kick was a slight one. She fell because she was weak; she was naturally weakly. This last kick was not given in such an angry manner as the first. Nothing further took place that day, nor the day following; but the next day, the deceased not having swept the room and cleaned the chelimchy, the mistress asked her why she did not, when she answered that her hands were painful. On this the mistress took up a knife, such as is used in chopping bones, called "hougda," and struck her with the back of it on one of the shoulders. She was struck only one blow, and it was slight one; it drew blood. The mistress then left the deceased and nothing further transpired that day. The next morning, the mistress desired the deceased to fetch the chelimchy, and on her not doing it, she took up a rattan which was lying hard by, and struck her with it twice or thrice about the body. The rattan was a small one, and the blows from it were not very severe. She then took up a piece of wood something like the shape of a ruler, of a white colour, and about a cubit in length, which was brought in by children to play with; with this she struck one blow on the head of the deceased which caused blood to issue. The wood was of the thickness of my two thumbs and a finger. The deceased did attempt to lift up the chelimchy, but she could not. The mistress again beat her twice with the rattan. The deceased then managed to place the chelimchy upon her arm, and pouring water out of it assisted the mistress in washing her mouth. Nothing further occurred that day. On the night of the same day, the mistress desired the house dye to apply turmeric and chunam pounded together and warmed, to the hands which were swollen. Three or four days after the deceased was sent to Khaunum-jee's house. The blow with the chopper was slight. On the third day of the beating, when the deceased said she could not bring the chelimchy, the mistress thought she was shamming, and made use of expressions to that effect: she said, "you are pretending." The mistress beat the deceased by way of correcting one or two blows whenever she found her negligent. I never saw the mistress beat her without a cause. The deceased was never before beaten in such a manner as to fall sick. Whenever the deceased did her work properly, the mistress treated her kindly. The mistress paid every attention to the deceased during her illness, but finding her not recover sent her to Khaunum-jee's. On the second day of the beating were present, the house dye, Syed and myself; and on the third day, the house dye, two ayahs, and myself. Deceased used to be well fed always, except when she misbehaved, when the quantity of her food was curtailed. Whenever the mistress found the deceased really ill, she treated her kindly and slackened her work. On one occasion she was burnt accidentally, when the mistress did her best to relieve her. On the day following the first beating the deceased brought the chelimchy and astava, one article at a time; and nothing occurred that day.

In answer to Dr. Bain.—The deceased did complain of a pain in her hands. On the third day of the beating, she was feverish and laid about the house. If she was ordered to do anything, she got up for a moment, then laid down again. Before the application of the turmeric and chunam, the hands were very much swollen. She was subject to attacks of fever occasionally,—say, once in two or three months. When the deceased was taken into the service, she was labouring under the disorder of spleen. She was cured of that disease about four months after; but she continued to have fever and ague occasionally. She was sickly for the first year of her service, but was quite well the year following.

In answer to the Foreman.—During the three years that the mistress has been displeased with me, she did not beat me at any time: she showed her displeasure only by not supplying me with shoes, clothes, &c. The cause of her displeasure was that I attended upon the master and not upon her.

The Coroner here remarked that the statements of the witness were not of a nature to warrant the conclusion that he was actuated by malice towards his mistress.

An iron pestle being put into the hands of the witness, he said that the one used in beating the deceased was not quite so long but about the same weight.

The pestle was in the same room where the deceased was beaten.

The jury broke up precisely at nine, to meet again at three in the afternoon to-morrow.

JULY 15, 1837.

Belau's examination continued.—(Having been a few minutes too late we have missed a small portion here.) This is the pestle with which the deceased was struck; it had no sugar on then. (Witness here described the force and manner in which the blows were inflicted.) The deceased did complain of a pain, but not to me. The kick she received at eleven o'clock on the first day of the beating was slight. On the day following I saw a swelling on her hands; and the day after that the mistress gave her a slight tap on the shoulder with the bougda. I noticed the swelling on the hands to increase daily. On the third day, she was beaten, first with a rattan on different parts of the body, two, three, or four times, and then with a piece of wood. I saw the mistress strike her only one blow with a piece of wood, when I left the place and went to the cookroom. On my return, I saw her strike the deceased with the rattan again. After the mistress struck with the piece of wood one blow on the head of the deceased, she threw it away, and desired her to pour water, when I again went to the cook-room. This blow did draw blood. After the last beating with the rattan, no further beating took place. I saw the deceased several times in the course of that day. The mistress observed the swelling by her going about, with her hand extended. I heard the dye ordered to apply chunam and huldee, and saw the application afterwards on her hands. This application was made the day after the first beating for the first time. I did not mention this before, because I was not questioned about it. On the evening of the third day of the beating, the chunam and huldee were applied again, by the order of the mistress. About eight o'clock at night, the first application of chunam and huldee was made. The mistress must have observed the swelling in the day time, but I believe, that thinking that she did not feel so much pain as she affected, she did not give orders to apply the composition till night. It was applied only to the hands. After the last beating she continued in the house for two or three days. I saw the deceased on the morning of the day that she was removed to Khaunum-jee's, and observed the sores on the back of her hands, as also those on the shoulder and the head. I saw no other sores that day. Three days after the application of the chunam and huldee the skin burst, and the swellings turned into sores. To the sores on the shoulder, head and the hip, some leaves beaten up into a paste, were applied. I observed only one sore on the head, but there might have been more which I did not notice. I saw when the wound on the head was inflicted and that there was a sore. The plaster of leaves had fallen off when the deceased was removed to Khaunum-jee's. I can't tell what state the sore on the head was then in, I saw only flies about it. When brought to the police, I saw a sore on the forehead and another on the hip, neither of which I had observed before. I then noticed two or three sores on the head and a slight one under the hip, as also a swelling on the forehead. These I did not see when the deceased was at the mistress's.

In answer to a jurymen.—I never saw or heard of any other girl being beaten by the mistress. I did not observe any more sores than those I have described. The swelling on the hands were burst after the application of the chunam and huldee the second time. I did not see Khaunum-jee do any thing to the deceased. Khaunum-jee had been about one month in her own house when the deceased was sent thither.

In answer to another jurymen. When we took the deceased to Khaunum-jee's, Syed told her to try to cure her; and if she died to bury her. I took the deceased to the Police because the mistress ill-treated me for the last three years, by denying me the common necessities of life, such as clothes, shoes, &c., and I was put to many shifts to procure them. Ten days before the occurrence the deceased was in perfect health. I took the deceased to the police with the view to obtain justice, both for her and myself we being both slaves. The mistress stinted me in clothes, shoes, washing, barber's expence and in food too; and the deceased was treated in the same manner. Sometimes we got these things and sometimes not. I say the same thing now that I did last night. The deceased was sometimes treated kindly and sometimes otherwise. The latter was the case when the mistress found her negligent.

Khash Kuddum sworn. I am a married woman, and I consider it disrespectful to my husband to mention his name. (The thanadar of the division here stepped forward and said it was Fukeera.) I am a neighbour to Khaunum-jee's, and was at her house when the deceased was removed from thence. The deceased remained at Khaunum-jee's house for two days. I saw the deceased had sores but did not examine her.

Khaunum-jee examined again.—The deceased was brought to my house of an afternoon, and I examined her body the next morning. She had a sore on the back part of the head, and one on the shoulder. There were sores on both the wrists and rattan marks on the sides. The sore on the back part of the head appeared to be in a sloughing state, and so did those on the wrists. I rubbed turpentine oil only on the body, and not the sores. She remained only two nights with me.

The Coroner here observed that there was a material difference between the number given by the old woman (Khaunum-jee) and that by Dr. Bain. He was afraid that by rubbing the body of the deceased with turpentine, excepting the sores described by her, she must have caused the others.

Syed.—I am a slave. (Mr. McCann observed that the witness was a prisoner, when the Coroner said that no body could hold the witness a prisoner without a warrant, and asked Mr. McCann if he had one. An answer in the negative being returned to the query, witness was sworn.) I was directed to accompany a palanqueen with an ayah who went inside of it; but I don't know if any body else was in it. I did not see the ayah come out of the palanqueen. The palanqueen was placed close to the door of Khaunum-jee's but. About four days after, I was ordered by the mistress to take the palanqueen to Khaunum-jee's, which I did. I did not see the ayah there this time, but I saw Rohoomus. I have not seen the mistress for the last three months. I have been told that I was getting too old to remain in the panana any longer.

Meerun.—I am a widow and reside at Tautullah. I am in the employ of Miras Mendee, as an attendant upon his children. I knew the deceased; I saw her about eight or ten days ago. About that time I heard from Belaul that she was sent to Khaunum-jes to be cured of a purging she was labouring under; she had also a fever and deceased spleen. The deceased had swollen wrists, and the swellings from the application of huldee and chunam turned into sores. One morning I had others observed Belaul tie the hands of the deceased and suspend her up with a rope and I went away and left her hanging. Belaul did this because the deceased stole something. The Coroner sent for a rope for the witness to explain the manner in which the deceased was tied up. A servant brought one immediately, and it being shewn to the witness, she stated it was the identical one that she spoke of as having been used in tying the deceased.

The Coroner to the servant. Where did you get it?

The servant. It is your well-rope, Sir! (a laugh.)

Witness. This rope is much like the one I speak of. Belaul pulled her up with both his hands. The next time I saw the deceased, she had chunam and huldee on her wrists which were applied in consequence of her having been tied up. I did not mention the circumstance to the mistress, but I hear the dye did it; when the mistress ordered huldee and chunam to be applied. Belaul was not punished.

The Coroner bid the witness go away, as a person unworthy of giving evidence. He had cautioned her in regard to the statements she made to no purpose.

Dr. Bain, examined again. I have heard the evidence of Belaul and the manner described by him in which the blows were inflicted on the wrists. If I saw them given, I am certain they would not lead to the death of a girl of the age of the deceased. (Here the Doctor stated the number of wounds on the body of the deceased and the number of days they must have been in existence.) I am certainly of opinion that death would not ensue to a person of her age by the beating described by Belaul; and assuming that death followed from the beating, I would then attribute the extent of the sloughing to mismanagement of the remedies employed, irritability of the constitution, or neglect of the sores.

The inquest was adjourned till Tuesday afternoon, the 18th of July.

JULY 18, 1837.

The Coroner and the Jury resumed the proceedings at the appointed hour.

Dr. Raleigh, first Assistant-Surgeon, General Hospital, sworn.—I wish to ask a few questions of Belaul, respecting the health of the deceased for the last two years, and the month previous to her death.

Belaul, in answer to Dr. Raleigh. For the last of the two years that she lived with the mistress, deceased was stout and healthy, and so she was during the month previous to her death. I did not observe any remedies applied to her left side for the spleen; no gools nor any other native remedies resorted to for that disease.

Dr. Bain, in answer to Dr. Raleigh.—There was no exsiccated appearance in the deceased. The spleen had the natural appearance, there being no enlargement of it.

Mr. O'Brien, in answer to Dr. Raleigh. I re-opened the body of the deceased after Doctor Bain, for my own satisfaction, to see whether there was an enlargement of the spleen. I found it was the case. The spleen was about eight inches in length.

Dr. Raleigh observed here that the admission made by Mr. O'Brien was of great importance. The smallest ulcer, when the constitution is in that state, is liable to sloughing to a great extent. He, the Doctor, gave an instance of a boy, who had an enlargement of the spleen and being troubled with a small scab on the lower lip, the whole of it sloughed away in a few days. Sores ending thus, frequently prove fatal. The whole of the sore on the deceased having assumed a sloughing disposition, I should infer that the injury inflicted on the body was not the immediate cause of death; but in consequence of the diseased state of the constitution the sores took to sloughing eventually. In a healthy body the sore would not have taken place.

The Coroner then summed up the evidence of the different witnesses to the gentlemen of the Jury; explained the difference the law made between manslaughter and murder, citing many cases that bore upon the one before them; after which the Jury retired and held a consultation for about two hours when they returned a verdict of MURDER.

Abbassee Khaunum, it would not be out of place to mention, is the wife of a very respectable, nay one of the first, Mogul merchants in Calcutta. The case has in consequence excited a great sensation amongst the Mogul and Arab communities of this town, many of whom have been present at the Coroner's Court during the whole of the inquest. Abbassee Khaunum is in custody.

TUESDAY, JULY 23, 1837.

Before C. B. Greenlaw, Esq.

Sedee Ibrahim was tried for slaying Sedee Noobin and Mussonut Nurgeez.

II. Peirv, constable, examined, said, that the warrant was addressed to him and Mr. Kaskell, directing them to summons a Jury to inquire into the death of Nobin and Nergez, and he, by virtue of that writ, summoned J. T. Mathews to attend at the Coroner's Court at about 1 o'clock p. m. to day, and on the summons being served on Mr. Mathews, he replied very good. Deponent likewise served M. F. Patton, an assistant at the Exchange office, at the Custom House, at about 3 o'clock p. m., since which time this deponent has seen him at the Court and desired him to attend soon, or else he would be handed up to the Court, and Mr. Patton replied "very well, I am coming."

Mr. Kaskell said, he had not served several persons whose summonses were given to him to serve, but he said that Mr. Sweedland had been served by him. The Coroner said that it is very strange that this deponent had just been mentioned as not served. The Coroner remarked that it is very strange that the public will not know that the printed list of the Jurymen published at the Military Orphan Press is an official document, and parties whose names may be wrongfully inserted, are to inform the printer of it before the expiration of the month of May, and here had come the close of July, and now Mr. Talkert and others say that their names are wrong.

R. W. Bain said, that he is not quite sure whether the prisoner will survive or not.

The Coroner said to Mr. McCann, that he is sorry to make a complaint against Mr. Kaskell, but he certainly has not done his duty in this case, for out of 36 jury summonses issued not a sufficient number have been served to form a jury.

Mr. Staunton asked whether it is requisite for the jury to inspect the bodies collectively or could the present jurymen inspect them now, and the new jurymen afterwards. The Coroner said, it is requisite that all the jury and the Coroner be present at once and inspect the bodies collectively.

After this the Coroner said that he was sorry to say that the Jury must be put off for that day, as they had not mustered a sufficient number? but he purposed to them to fix any time the next day, after 1 o'clock P.M., to meet, taking their own recognizances for 1,000 rupees each to appear, when he hoped to be able to complete the Jury list, and he said he would hand up the names of the absentees to the Supreme Court.

The Jurymen acknowledged themselves bound for 1,000 rupees to the King for their appearance the next day, and fixed 2 o'clock.

The Inquest was then postponed till 2 o'clock P. M., the next day.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 26, 1837.

Chootoo Khan, sworn, deposed, that he resides at Puttuldanga, in Colloctollah. He knew Nurgez, she was his tenant. Deponent on Monday last, the 24th instant, came to his house and heard a squabbling going on in the room of Nurgez. She perceiving him called him and requested deponent to take charge of her goods as she intended going out. When deponent entered her room, he perceived two men in it, one of whom is now dead and deponent does not know his name, the other, who is living, deponent has heard is called Ibrahim. Deponent has seen the bodies of Nurgez and the other Seddee at the Police Hospital. Seddee Ibrahim is still living.

R. W. Bain, deposed, that he has examined the body of Nurgez, a female who was admitted into the Police Hospital, and who was attended on by Professor O'Shaughnessy: she was admitted on the 23d instant. Here the deponent detailed the wounds on the body, and said, that in his opinion the wound in the abdomen particularly, but all the wounds, were conducive to her death. Deponent likewise deposed that he had examined the body of Seddee Nobin, who was admitted into the Hospital on the 24th instant, and was attended on by Professor O'Shaughnessy and Dr. Goodeve: the man died on the 25th instant. The deponent detailed the wounds and attributed the death to the wounds in the abdomen.

Chootoo's examination continued. The parties who are dead were wounded by a knife—deponent knows the knife and identifies it. The man who is living deponent has seen often before, at Nurgez's house: he used to live with her, but Nurgez always paid the rents. Nurgez has been deponent's tenant for 5 months, and when she hired the house she came alone, which was the first time deponent saw her. On deponent's asking her who she was, she said that she was the mistress of a person who had gone on a voyage. Deponent told her that if she conducted herself with propriety he would permit her to stay in his house, otherwise not, as respectable persons lived there. She did not say when she expected her protector back. She was an African woman. Deponent supposes that the deceased woman was about 30 or 40 years of age. The man she described as her protector, returned to Calcutta about 2 days ago. Deponent thus learnt the circumstances. One evening, when he returned home, he heard that a man was in the woman's house, and on inquiring of her who he was, she replied "this is the man whose mistress I am." Deponent being a servant did not interfere with the affair or enquire into the names of his tenants; all that he cared for, was that his rent was paid to him and no disturbance made by the tenants. Up to the period of the day on which he saw these two men at the woman's house, he never saw any person, except the man whom she said was her protector, visit her. When the female told deponent that she was going away, deponent told her to shut the door and the goods would no doubt be safe; and at that time the two men and the female were all altercation. They were speaking in a language which this deponent could not understand, and they began to push and shove each other. Deponent remonstrated with them, but as they did not mind him, deponent sent a person to give information at the Thana. After this the deponent went into his house to get his clothes, intending to go to his master's house and give information of the riot at the thana, which was on the road. On his coming out of the house deponent observed the man who is dead, running out of Nurgez's room to the front of the deponent's compound, saying that he was wounded. Blood was trickling down his body and he fell senseless from the hemorrhage. After this the female ran out of her room and into deponent's room. Ibrahim followed her, and when she entered the deponent's room, caught hold of her and struck her with a knife. On receiving the blow she screamed out, and on hearing her scream deponent went to the door of the room, calling out to Ameer, khansama, one of his neighbours, saying, "come and help me there is a man murdering a woman in my house." Hearing deponent's voice Ameer came running to assist, and when Ameer joined deponent they entered the room and perceived Ibrahim, aim a blow at Nurgez. They then went cautiously towards Ibrahim, desiring him to desist, and suddenly held his hand; but he assumed a threatening attitude and began making passes with the knife at them. This alarmed them, and they having no weapons to defend themselves, forewent their hold. Deponent then left Ameer to guard and watch Ibrahim, and went himself to the thana to give information, and the thana people came armed and apprehended the prisoner and took all parties to the thana. The prisoner for these last two months lived with the woman. They used sometimes to dispute and have trifling altercations regarding money matters. The prisoner and the deceased were of African extraction. Besides this woman, some bricklayers lived in one of deponent's huts as tenants. The females and children of the deponent were in the room into which Nurgez fled for shelter, followed by the prisoner. Seeing him the females and children all ran out frightened, therefore they could not have seen the blows struck by the prisoner. The hut of Nurgez has a compound opening on the street; deponent's hut is at the back of that hut and has a compound separate. Deponent has rented the land from Baboo Madob Dutt and built huts on it which he has let out to tenants.

In this stage of the proceedings a long, desultory enquiry took place at the request of the foreman of the Jury, who wished to ascertain the position of the huts of the deponent and Nurgez, the deceased,—and the Coroner, from the description of the deponent, drew a sketch of the two huts in order to ascertain whether deponent could perceive plainly what occurred within. Deponent stated he distinctly saw what occurred in the hut. In Nurgez's transit from her hut to the deponent's hut, she did not appear to be wounded, nor did any conversation pass between her and the prisoner, who was pursuing her. When the prisoner followed the woman into deponent's hut, he was not wounded.

Ameer, khansama, deposed, that he is a neighbour of Chootoo, khansama. Deponent was taking his siesta at 3 o'clock P. M., on Monday last, when he was awakened by the noise of some person bawling out in the direction of Chootoo Khan's hut. Deponent on hearing the noise, ran towards Chootoo's hut, and on arriving there Chootoo said that a female had run into his hut for refuge, and a man was maltreating her. Deponent then looked into the hut and perceived a woman sitting in the hut, and perceived a man stooping over her and stabbing her with a knife, which she was endeavouring to ward off. Deponent said to Chootoo that they had better secure him otherwise he might commit some further mischief: they then went to secure the prisoner, who frowned on them and threatened them with the knife. Seeing this deponent went to his house to see if he could get a stick, with which he could, by striking the prisoner on the hand, knock the knife out of it,—and despatched the first witness to go to the thana to give information and have the prisoner arrested. Not finding a stick suited to his purpose, deponent returned to the spot desiring his son to search for a stick for him. On his return to Chootoo's hut, deponent perceived the prisoner come out of it with the knife in his hand, frowning on the deponent. Deponent hid himself, and after this the prisoner looked towards the deponent, muttered something in his native dialect and then stabbed himself with the knife. The prisoner then went into the wounded woman's room, and deponent came out and peeped into the hut where the prisoner went, and found him sitting in the room in a leaning posture and bleeding. Deponent then went into Chootoo's hut, and not perceiving the woman on the spot where she had been stabbed, searched for her and found her hid in a corner. Shortly after this the thana people came and arrested the prisoner. They then went towards the hut of Chootoo Khan and called the woman by her name and she came out. She then had her bowels protruding from a wound in her abdomen. Deponent does not recollect her name. Deponent has occasionally seen some Africans, both men and women, at the female's hut, but does not know any of them. Deponent did not understand the language the parties spoke in, as they were all Africans. This deponent called the prisoner Ismail, whilst the first witness called him Ibrahim.

The Jury remarked that this deponent said that more than one man visited the deceased female, whereas the first witness had sworn that none but the prisoner visited her. The Coroner said that the former witness, as he had his character at stake for renting his house to irregular people, no doubt concealed the truth: besides, he has said that he was generally out.

Boodoo, Naib of Puttuldanga, sworn, said, that being informed that three Africans, one woman and two men, were quarrelling in his division, he went out and on reaching the Police Hospital perceived an African wounded in the belly lying at the Hospital door and a crowd around him. The spectators on seeing Boodoo informed him that there were two more persons wounded in Chootoo Khan's hut. On hearing this, deponent went down the lane to Chootoo's house and perceived the woman, wounded in her belly, lying hid under a bed in Chootoo's room. Her bowels were protruding out of the wound; and deponent then, by information received on the subject, went to the other hut which the female had entreated and there perceived another African sitting, leaning on his hands and wounded; a knife was lying by him. Deponent then sent word to the thanadar of Coolootollah, and the peons advised deponent to send the wounded persons to the Police Hospital. Deponent then asked the wounded man who had wounded him. He replied "Seddee Nobin has wounded me, and I have likewise wounded him." Deponent did not enter the hut for fear the man might do him some harm. The prisoner then laid himself down on his side. Shortly after the Police Apothecary came and said "where is the knife." Deponent replied he could not tell. On this, the Doctor ordered the window of the room to be opened and then the knife was found by him lying near the prisoner's right hand covered with blood. After this all the three persons were taken to the Police Hospital. The prisoner on being questioned, said his name was Ibrahim; and the woman said her name was Nurgez. In the hurry and the confusion of the moment, deponent forgot to ask the other witness his name. Only one knife was found on the premises, and no other, although deponent searched closely. Deponent had no conversation with the other prisoner. Prisoner likewise acknowledged that he had in his anger wounded the woman. This occurred at about 3 o'clock p. m. on Monday last.

Chootoo Khan recalled. Nurgez, when she said to the deponent that she was going, said that she was going with these two men; but she did not say where she was going or for what period, nor did deponent question her on this subject. Deponent did not know the cause of the quarrel between the parties. When the wounded man ran out he had no weapon in his hands; he ran out crying hapray, hapray. Deponent, when he first went to the house, did not perceive any weapon in the hands of any of the parties.

Tahally, Thanadar of Coolootollah, sworn, stated, that on Monday the 24th inst., deponent hearing from a peon that three persons had been murdered in his division, went towards the Police Hospital, and saw a man lying bathed in blood at the Hospital door, surrounded by a crowd of people, who said to deponent that two more persons were wounded in the lane. Deponent went unto the spot indicated and perceived in Nurgez's room a man drenched in blood and the Naib, Boodoo, hearing that a woman was lying wounded in Chootoo's room, deponent went there and perceived Nurgez lying wounded with her feet under a cot in the room. Deponent enquired the names of all the three persons on their way to the Police Hospital. The man who is dead, said his name was Nobin; the woman who is dead said her name was Nurgez, and the man who is living said he was named Ibrahim. Nurgez said in the prisoner's presence—but the prisoner did not distinctly hear on account of the crowd and noise,—that Ibrahim had wounded her; and Ibrahim likewise on being questioned, said that the woman was his mistress and he had wounded her and Nobin, but assigned no reason for the act. Nobin likewise said in a faint noise, that Ibrahim had wounded him.

Jumeer coolie, a young lad, sworn, said that he is the servant of Amee, khansamah. Deponent knew Nurgez. Occasionally on passing her door he observed many persons visiting her. He on the eve of the 24th instant, perceived an African aim some blows at Nurgez. Who can clearly distinguish Africans, from one another? Perhaps if he were to see the man who struck Nurgez, he would know him. He cannot say whether the blows took effect or not.

The Coroner said, that there was a great deal said about the dying declaration of the parties, which cannot be now put in as evidence, because he had not the power to do so—such declarations must be sent direct to the Supreme Court. Dying declarations are generally supposed to have more truth in them than statements on oaths; but this is attributable solely to the persons making them, being impressed with the firm belief that they are shortly to appear before God, to answer for their conduct to him. Whether the woman ever had the conviction on her mind that she would shortly die, does not appear perfectly manifest; and what was their belief regarding a God and a future state, is not known to the Jury; besides, such declarations should always be taken in the presence of the prisoner.

After this, the evidence was read to the witnesses previous to their signing it, to enable them to make any alteration that might be at variance with what they had stated. During the process the foreman asked whether they could not be charged to give their verdict, and let the reading and signing be done afterwards. The Coroner replied they could not, as it was on this evidence signed by these witnesses, that he must charge the Jury, and record their verdict, and in case any of these witnesses die, he would be sworn to the correctness of the deposition. He then reverted to the importance of his office compared with the Magistrates', which latter, he said, was merely ministerial, and the Judge could on sufficient grounds discharge a prisoner committed by a Magistrate, because it was merely his simple opinion, and he is not supposed to enter into both sides of the case always. Whereas the Coroner's functions are both judicial and ministerial, and he is supposed to take up both sides of the question, in order to get at the exact truth,—and as he is assisted by a Jury, the Judge is bound to try a person committed by him.

After the witnesses had admitted the correctness of their depositions, and signed them, the Coroner addressed the Jury, recapitulating the evidence. He said that there was no doubt that the two deceased parties had died from wounds inflicted on their bodies; the evidence of Dr. Bain clearly proves the circumstance. He then said, the next point for the Jury to consider, was who inflicted the wounds, and whether, if inflicted by a third party, that party was justifiable or not; whether if not, the crime committed by that party was manslaughter or murder, defining the law in each case. He then stated, that there was direct proof of murder against the prisoner, as far as regards the woman; but with respect to the man, there was only circumstantial evidence; but, the Coroner remarked, that he was sorry to say, that in such cases persons are often obliged to depend on such evidence, to elicit the facts of the case.

The Jury, after a short consultation, returned a verdict of murder against Ibrahim in both cases.

BEFORE MESSRS. W. BRADDON AND F. C. SMITH.

Nabob Muzaffer Ool Moolk Mazumut Odd Dowlah Syet Mahomed Ally Khan Bahadoor Hussamut Jung, Appellant.

Negarara Begum alais Behaw Bagum and others, Respondents.

Claimant Ram Cowar Chunder.

Appellants Vakeel Moonshy Hussain Ally.

Respondents Vakeel, Moonshy Aumeenudden Mahomed, Moonshy Dadar Bux Khan and Ram Praun Roy.

Claimants Vakeel B.boo Bungebee Buleen, appealed, from the decision of Zillah Court of 24-pergunnahs.

The Plaints for the execution of and realization of 1,14,000 Rupees, as awarded by the arbitration.

The appellant was the original plaintiff in the case, and complained in the Zillah Court of 24-pergunnahs, stating in his plaint, that Nabob Soult Jung, the husband of Negarara Begum, and the father of the other defendants; and Nabob Musher Jung, the father of the plaintiff, were both the sons of Nabob Delawur Jung, deceased. After the death of Nabob Musher Jung Bahadoor, Nabob Delawur Jung, the ancestor of the litigating parties, by a deed of gift dated the 22d Assen B. S. 1236, bestowed to the plaintiff the village of Chipoor, and the adjoining garden called Elliot's garden, and his other landed property adjoining thereto; and after putting this plaintiff in possession of the property specified in this deed of gift, Nabob Delawur Jung died in the month of Agiroon 1227 B. S. Subsequent to this a dispute arose between this plaintiff and Nabob Soult Jung, regarding the possession of their ancestral estates, and a plaint was filed regarding the respective claims in the Zillah Court of the suburbs of Calcutta, and that Court, decided this case by the 6th Regulation of Government of the year 1813 A. D. After the case had run its tour of all the minor Courts, it was on the 16th July 1823 A. D. decided in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut in this plaintiff's favour, ordering Nabob Soult Jung to complain in the provincial Court of appeal at Calcutta for the recognition of any rights of his that he may consider to have been annihilated by this decision of the Sudder Court; and he in conformity with this order of the Sudder Court, complained to be put in possession of his share of his ancestral property as awarded to him by this Sudder Decree in the Equity side of the Provincial Court of Appeal at Calcutta; and this case on the 9th February 1826 A. D., was decided according to the tenor of a compromise entered into between the parties, in compliance with an arbitration award of their mutual friends, in which compromise and arbitrated bond and award; dated the 7th February 1826, the following conditions were specially inserted, that Nabob Soult Jung was to pay all the expenses attending the marriage ceremony of Nabob Hussain Jung, son of Nabob Jaffer Jung, with the sister of Nabob Soult Jung, and in consideration of his so doing, Nabob Hussain Jung was to resign to Nabob Soult Jung the possession of the village of Chipoor and the other landed property which formed the matter in this litigation; and Nabob Hussain Jung, in consideration of his forgoing his claims to these villages, was to receive a dwelling house with requisite furniture and a specified sum of ready money from Nabob Soult Jung. Besides these, there were some minor disputed points adjusted in this compromise bond, and in virtue of this agreement between the litigating parties, Nabob Soult Jung remained in undisturbed possession of the village of Chipore and the other landed property, the subject of this litigation. After this decision of the provincial Court, based on the aforesaid contract, Nabob Soult Jung, for upwards of 7 years, procrastinated complying with its provisions under various frivolous pretences, and on the 20th of the month of Bhadhoor 1239 B. S. he departed this life without consummating the marriage ceremony of his sister and Nabob Jaffer Jung. Therefore this plaintiff now begs to represent in this his plaint, that he had never unconditionally resigned his rights to the village of Chipore, Elliot's Garden and the other property which his grand father Nabob Delawur Jung bestowed to him by a deed of gift, and which said property was affirmed in his favor by a decretal order of the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, dated the 16th July 1823 A. D., and maintained this plaintiff in his possession; and although Nabob Soult Jung, in dissatisfaction to this order, did file a plaint in the provincial Court of appeal at Calcutta, and that case was decided in conformity to the conditions of a compromise bond by the tenor of which this plaintiff did resign and put him, Nabob Soult Jung, in possession of the village of Chipore and the property forming the grounds of this present action; yet, as the said Nabob Soulut Jung never conformed to or fulfilled his part of the stipulations of the said bond to the period of his demise, this plaintiff consequently considers that his rights to the possession of the said village of Chitpore, as decreed in his favor by the Sudder Court, has not been annihilated by any subsequent act of his; for the terms of the abovementioned bond having been declined compliance with by Nabob Soulut Jung, one of the contracting parties, the whole bond has thus been rendered null and void. Viewing the matter in this light, he now sues these defendants, the heirs and representatives of Nabob Soulut Jung, to be reinstated in the possession of the village of Chitpore and other lands, of which he delivered possession to Nabob Soulut Jung in contemplation of his acting up to the specifications of the bond on his part.

The defendants in their reply, stated, that they had been prepared to fulfil their terms of contract, by giving the sister of Nabob Soulut Jung in marriage to the son of Nabob Hosain Jung; but the latter declined to abide by the stipulations of the bond and consummate the marriage ceremony after the parties on the part of the Uncle had been put to a considerable expense in its preparation, and they put in the depositions of Mr. C. Trower and of Mr. H. T. Prinsep, and a certificate of the late Mr. Andrew Sterling, together with the compromised bond, dated February 1826, to uphold their case.

Kawur Ram Chunder, the heir of Rajah Oudwunt Sing, likewise put in a claim, stating that he had obtained a decree in the Sudder Court against the Nabob of Chitpore, and that he prayed the Court that their decision in this case may not affect his rights established on that decree.

On the 24th of Feby. 1824, Mr. H. Moore, the Zillah Judge, decided the case in favor of the defendants, on a plea that they were willing to abide by the tenor of the compromise bond, and had been put to a considerable expense for that purpose; but that the plaintiff was the first to depart from it. Against the decision this appellant appealed to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, where the case was prematurely heard on the 28th February 1837 by Mr. W. Braddon, one of the Judges of that Court, who, after a careful and minute investigation into the evidence and documents connected with this case, decided that it is apparent that the respondents had not fulfilled their terms of their bond with this appellant, as they had married the sister of Nabob Soulut Jung to another individual, and not the son of the appellant, as they compacted by the terms of their bond to do. Further, it does not appear reasonable to suppose that this appellant, after he had made so great a sacrifice as to resign his rights to the possession of property to the extent specified in Nabob Delawur Jung's gift to him, after it had been affirmed in his favor by a decree of the Sudder Court, with the sole intent and purpose to get his son married to the sister of Nabob Soulut Jung, the latter paying all the expenses of this marriage ceremony, that he would have declined conforming to its terms; for he, it appears, had already put Nabob Soulut Jung in possession of this litigated property; therefore, after he had done this he had every thing to gain on the remaining unfulfilled terms of the contract, if they were acted upon, and nothing to lose; and although the testimonies of Mr. C. Trower and H. T. Prinsep, and the certificate of Mr. A. Sterling, deceased, tend to show that the respondents borrowed a considerable sum of money for the ostensible purpose of defraying the expenses of this marriage ceremony, yet, there is no evidence to show that this money so raised was actually expended on that account, or that these respondents showed a readiness on their part to fulfill their stipulations of the bond; but the unwillingness of this appellant to abide by its tenor had disabled them from so doing; on the contrary, it appears manifest to this Court, that although Nabob Soulut Jung was repeatedly applied to, to fulfil his conditions of the bond he never disacknowledged it but always under various pretences evaded its fulfilment; therefore there is a strong circumstantial suspicion arising to show, that Nabob Soulut Jung had made this compromise bond a pretext to dispossess this appellant of his ancestral property, and at the time he executed the bond, he never contemplated fulfilling a single iota of its conditions. Arriving at its decision from these premises, the court is of opinion that as Nabob Soulut Jung, up to the period of his demise, never complied with the terms of this bond, it is null and void, and the original right of this appellant, as approved in his favor by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut on the 16th July 1823 A. D., in conforming to the deed of gift executed by his grandfather in his favor regarding this litigated property, has been in no wise retracted, and as decreed in his favor by this Court of the 16th July 1823. Therefore this Court orders, that the decision of the Zillah Court of the 24th February 1837 be reversed, and the compromise bond, as executed by this appellant and Nabob Soulut Jung, be declared null and void, and that this appellant be reinstated in possession of the property which is the subject of this plaint, and respondent pay all the costs of this suit and refund the rents for the time they have held possession of these lands to this appellant, with interest thereon. Further, as the vakeels of the litigating parties in the Zillah Court have put many useless questions to the witnesses examined in this case, it is ordered that the respondent's vakeel in the Zillah, be paid 50 rupees, and the appellant's vakeel there be paid 20 rupees. In conclusion it is ordered, that this decision of this Court is to have no effect in any wise on the decree of this Court which was passed prior to the institution of this appeal in favor of Rajah Oudwunt Sing, the father of Rawur Ramchander Sing, the claimant in this case. The case was then referred to another Judge for coincidence of opinion, and it was finally heard by Mr. F. C. Smith, a Judge of this Court, in May 1837, who coincided in the opinion of Mr. Braddon on it, and confirmed his order respecting its disposal.—Bengal Hurkara, July 1.

JUNE 3, 1837.

Before J. R. Hutchinson, Esq., Officiating Judge.

Fyze Allee and Ahmed Allee, Appellants; Calychurn Mitter, Respondent. Mooushy Hussien Allee, Appellant's vakeel; Mooshy Mahomed Hamif and Nilmony Bonerjea, Respondent's vakeel.

Plaint for rs. 1,154 for the value of 164 biggahs of ground situated in Zillah Ilavally, being less by this quantity from the quantity stated to be. The respondent was the original plaintiff in the Zillah Court, and stated in his plaint that the appellants who were the original defendants had negotiated with him for the sale of a piece of ground defining its boundaries and describing it to be situated on the main road, in the vicinity of the city of Calcutta, and containing 408 biggahs of ground. Calychurn being on the look out for lands similar to the description given of this ground by the defendants, sent a person to inspect the land offered him for sale, and on the report of this person finding the bargain to be advantageous, he bargained for and purchased this land for the sum of sicca rupees 7,000; but when he went to take possession of it, he found its situation to be very remote from Calcutta, and although the boundaries corresponded with the sellers' detail of them, yet the land did not actually contain 164 biggahs, nor was it situated on a main road so as to be converted into a profitable building speculation, as described by the sellers at the time of negotiating for its sale to the plaintiff; therefore he prayed the Court that the defendants be ordered to refund the money they had received for the sale of this land from the complainant, and the sale be cancelled, it being in his opinion a fraudulent transaction, if not; at any rate to refund him 1,154 rs. the price of the deficiency of the quantity of the land sold, which was 164 biggahs less. The sellers in their reply pleaded, that the sale was as per pottah, it being the practice in this country to sell lands as per pottah, be they more or less; therefore if the land did not correspond in quantity with what was mentioned in the pottah, they were blameless. Further, the boundaries answering to the sellers' description of them showed that the land sold and made over to the buyer, is the same land which he purchased of the sellers, and if after purchasing it the plaintiff is dissatisfied with his bargain, they are not bound to refund the purchase money and cancel the sale, for if the purchaser had any doubts regarding the locality of the land he ought to have, previous to purchasing it, personally inspected it and not trusted to the report of another individual.

This case was tried in the Zillah Court on the 4th September 1830, when the Zillah Judge considering the sale to be fraudulent, and that the sellers had used deception in the bargain, decreed the case in the plaintiff's favour.

The appellants being dissatisfied with the award of the Zillah Court, appealed against it to the Court of Appeal, for the division of Calcutta, where the case was primarily heard before Mr. C. R. Martin, who not coinciding in opinion with the Zillah Judge, wrote his dissenting opinion and sent the case for final order to another Judge of that court, but before the judgment of another Judge could be passed on the merits of the case, the Court of Appeal for the division of Calcutta was abolished, and the proceedings, together with the other documents of that Court, forwarded to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut at Calcutta.

The case was first taken up in the Sudder Court on the 12th March 1835, by E. J. Harrington, Esq., one of the Judges of the Sudder Court, who ordered that an Aumeen be sent by the Zillah Court to investigate on the spot and send in his report to the Sudder Court through the Zillah Judge on these points, viz., whether the land actually contains 408 biggahs as specified in the bill of sale from the appellants to the respondents, or less, and if less whether the deficiency is so much as 164 biggahs, as stated in the respondents' plaint in the Zillah, and what is the value of it at the rate the respondent paid for the whole lot.

The case was then taken for coincidence of opinion to H. Shakespear, Esq., another Judge of the Sudder Court, who coincided in opinion with Mr. Harrington on hearing the case on the 14th July 1835; and after Mr. Shakespear's promotion from the Sudder, the case was taken up by Mr. Stockwell, another Judge of the same Court, who coincided with Mr. Harrington and Mr. Shakespear, and postponed the case for the Aumeen's report.

After the Aumeen's report had been received through the Zillah Court at the Sudder Court, the case was taken up by Mr. W. Money, another Judge of the Sudder Court, who issued an order for the Zillah Judge to forward by application to the Collector of Zillah 24 Pergunnahs, the papers in his office relating to this land to the Sudder Court, and postponed the case till their receipt at the Sudder.

Ultimately, subsequent to the receipt of the papers from the Collector's office, the case was heard finally by J. F. M. Reid, Esq., Judge of the Sudder Court, on the 25th June 1837, who, after minutely examining the documents filed in this case and carefully investigating its merits, reversed the decision of the Zillah Court and gave his award that as the land has been sold by the appellants to the respondents as per pottah, be the same more or less, the respondent cannot, if the land is by actual measurement found to be less than the quantity described in the pottah, either maintain a right to cancel the sale and receive back the purchase money or sue at the saleable price of the whole land for the deficiency thus arising, for if the land exceeded as lands sometimes do the quantity mentioned in the pottah, he would be equally entitled to hold it without paying any further consideration for the surplus. The appeal was then affirmed, and the Zillah decision reversed. This award of Mr. J. F. Reid, which reversed the Zillah decision was subsequently, on the 21st June, confirmed by Mr. J. R. Hutchinson, another Judge of the Sudder Court.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 14, made oath on the 31st December of the same year to his possessing no other property, than that specified in his petition.

3. The above property was sold for the sum of 14 annas, as reported by the moonsiff on the 30th January 1834; but the plaintiff having represented that the defendant possessed other property, he was not released, and subsequently, on the 25th February, he gave in a list of property belonging to the prisoner other than that specified in this petition, and having established that fact to the satisfaction of the judge, the following order was on the 5th February 1835, passed by him.

"That the prisoner do remain in jail in execution of the decree so long as the plaintiff shall pay his diet allowance, and on his release that he be tried for perjury."

4. This order having come under the notice, of the Nizamut Adawlut, the court on the 27th May last directed, that if the prisoner had been guilty of perjury, 3d August.....1836. he should be at once committed for trial, which was accordingly done on the 26th July last, and the trial was held before me on the dates noted in the margin.

5. The facts established against the prisoner in my judgment are two; first, that at the time he swore to he truth of his petition, he possessed property in debts due to him as specified in the margin, to the amount of Rs. Rs. 1748, which was not included in his statement of property; and secondly, that he likewise at the same period held in pledge, a silver paun box, which he also omitted to insert.

By Edward Fred. Col-
lor, serjeant, S. Rs. 29 8
Ditto ditto.: „ 145 0

6. The first fact is established by the admission of the prisoner before the sudder ameen on the 9th January 1835, as proved by the evidence of the witnesses named in the margin, and corroborated by the production of the acknowledgments themselves.

7. The second fact is established by the evidence of Luchmun Mistry, witness, who swears to having pledged the said silver paun box to the prisoner for the sum of 20 rupees, 4 of which up to this hour remain unpaid, and by that of Razee-ul-bulk the Mohurir of the moon-siff, by whom the box was sold for 25 rupees, after having been held under attachment, and without any claimant appearing for a period of nearly one year.

8. The futwa of the law officer convicts the prisoner and declares him liable to Fazeer on the first account, but acquits him of the second.

9. In the conviction I concur, though from the acquittal I dissent, on the ground, that I consider the property of the prisoner in the silver box to be established, and that in omitting to insert the same in the petition to the truth of which he made oath, he is guilty of perjury.

10. Concurring as I do in the futwa of conviction on the first count, I should not have troubled the court with this reference, did I not entertain a legal doubt on the point, whether the omission of an insolvent debtor to insert in his schedule the amount of debt owing to himself can be considered as amounting to the crime of perjury.

11. Holding then this doubt on the legality of the conviction in the first count, and the moovee having given in a futwa of acquittal in the second, I have the honor to submit the papers of the case for the consideration and orders of the court.

12. With reference to all the circumstances of the case, the sentence I propose to pass upon the prisoner is that of Tusheer and 3 years' imprisonment with labor in irons.

I have the honor to be,

Sir, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) H. M. PIGOV, Commissioner of Circuit.

JUNE 10. 1837.

(Before Mr. J. R. Hutchinson.)

Referred by Commissioner of Circuit Assam. Changloo, Prosecutor, versus Modon and Badang, Prisoners.

CHARGE DACOITY WITH MURDER.

The offence in which this trial originated, occurred as long back as December 1827, and prisoners, of whom Modon was one, were arrested and committed for trial, but they all effected their escape. Another individual, Herdur, implicated in the offence, was subsequently arrested in November 1828, and was brought to trial, found guilty and executed in 1830; this prisoner Modon was re-apprehended in April 1836, and the prisoner Badung was arrested in October 1836, on the suspicion that he was the same individual of that name who had effected his escape with Modon as before mentioned.

The prosecutor Chengloo, on the 11th February 1828, deposed before the Magistrate of Lower Assam to the occurrence of the dacoity, as detailed in the 4th paragraph of the Officiating Magistrate's letter, in which three of the inmates of his house, Angoriah, King and Telpor were wounded, and the two first died of the wounds inflicted on them.

The prisoner Modon, on the present trial, was recognized by the prosecutor, and five of the witnesses, as being the same individual who had been before arrested, and by two of the witnesses, as the person who, in their previous depositions in 1828, had been charged by them with having been one of the dacoits and one of the individuals who inflicted the wounds on Angoriah and King. Another witness, who originally recognized the prisoner as one of the accomplices in the dacoity, was too ill to give his evidence on the present trial.

The prisoner Modon has invariably pleaded not guilty, but acknowledged that he made his escape with other prisoners whilst under confinement on a charge of dacoity with murder, and that he had also before his escape been sentenced to imprisonment on a charge of cattle stealing.

The panchaet and the officiating Magistrate, on a full consideration of all the evidence before them were of an opinion, that the prisoner Modon is guilty and the Magistrate considered him deserving of a capital sentence.

The Commissioner fully concurred in the verdict of the Panchaet and saw no extenuating circumstances in his favor, he therefore recommended that he be sentenced to death.

The prisoner Badung has been acquitted of this charge.

This case was tried in the Nizamut Court before Mr. R. J. Hutchinson, on the 10th June, 1837, who after having fully investigated and considered the proceedings held on the trial of Modon and Badung, concurred with the Commissioner in convicting the prisoner Modon, of the crime of dacoity and murder, and sentence him to be imprisoned with labor for life in the jail at Ahpore. —Bengal Hurkara, July 18.

SUDDER BOARD OF REVENUE.

Before the Junior Member Mr. Henry Walters.

A representation in Persian, on the subject of the Imambara at Hoggly, from Syed Keramat Ali, was submitted and considered. We have endeavoured to give, through the assistance of a friend well versed in the language, a correct and literal translation of this document, as the case itself and the precedent it involves are of considerable importance.

Syed Kuramat Ali, the intelligent companion of Captain Conolly in his overland journey from Persia, was lately appointed Mootawullee of the Houghly Wuzf, but previous to his accepting the emolument of his new and responsible office, he studied carefully the will and all the papers connected with the property, and finding in his opinion that the terms of the testator's endowment were by no means accordant with the existing arrangements, he addressed the Board, requesting a clear understanding of his future position before he accepted the appointment. The order of Mr. Commissioner Walters, however, leaves the question still undecided; and we believe, the matter has been referred to the Government of Bengal either by the Board or by the party himself.

Copy of a Letter dated 4th May 1837, addressed by Syed Kuramat Ali to the Local Agents immediately on his arrival at Calcutta.

In the service of the august and dignified gentlemen, the Local Agents, Buhadoor, may whose magnificence continues for ever, be submitted—that they will be good enough to forward the accompanying address, after retaining a copy of the same, to the gentlemen of the Sudder Board of Revenue. May your future days be prosperous for ever!

Copy of a Letter addressed to the gentlemen of the Sudder Board of Revenue, and enclosed in the above, bearing the same date as the above.

In the service of the august and dignified gentlemen, of the Sudder Board of Revenue, may whose magnificence and glory continue for ever!

This well wisher, agreeably to your suggestion, and letter, dated 8th January, has been appointed and raised to the office of the Tuoleut or Superintendency of the Imambarah, endowed in Wuqf by Hajee Mohsun, deceased, in Zillah Hooglee. As from the words "Tuoleut" and "Mootwillee" it was to be understood that the same (Tuoleut) must be in accordance to the canons of the Shea Sect of the 12 Imams, and in conformity to the conditions set forth in the Wuqf by the Wuqf, I accept of the place; I therefore request to know whether the Tuoleut is to be agreeably to the canons of the Shea Sect of the 12 Imams, and the conditions set forth in the Wuqf by the Waqif, or how; kindly inform this well wisher on the subject. May your days be of command for ever.

Copy of Purwanah of the Local Agents returning the Letter addressed to the Board.

High and eminent of rank, Syud Kuramut Uli, Mootwillee of the Imambarah Hoogly; may you continue in health. The letter of the high in rank, dated 4th May of the present year, with a letter directed to the celebrated gentlemen of towering altitude of the Suddur Board, requesting the same to be forwarded to the presence of those gentlemen has been read. As the style of the address to the celebrated gentlemen of high dignity of the Suddur Board is considered remote (unbecoming) from the dignity of those dignified gentlemen, under this circumstance the original address written by the high in rank is returned with this Purwanah; and it is hereby written that if it be the determined intention of the high in rank that this very letter should be presented to the presence of those gentlemen, it shall be done so; otherwise, in lieu thereof, you should submit, agreeably to usage, a Petition written in a plain style, that the same might be submitted to the presence of those gentlemen.

Dated 8th May, 1837.

Copy of a Letter which was sent by the Syud on the 10th of May, to the Gentlemen of the Suddur Board of Revenue, with the Letter which was returned and Copy of the Purwanah.

In the service of the heavenly eminence, gentlemen of high dignity, who in sublimity are like Jupiter, and whose residence is the Empyrean Heaven; whose Porter is Dara (Darius) and whose Watchman is Alexander, who are emblems of Kings, gentlemen of the Suddur Board of Revenue Buhadoor. May their magnificence, power glory and dignity continue. It is submitted, that the suggestion and Purwanah having the mandate of fate, dated the 9th January of the present year, appointing him to the Tuoleut of the Imambarah of Hajee Mohsun deceased, situated in Zela Hoogly, reached this well-wisher and conferred high honors on him; and previous to which the eminent Mr. Smith, Buhadoor, had addressed a letter to Colonel Alves, Buhadoor, acting Superintendent at Ajmere, who agreeably to its contents inquired of this well wisher through Captain Trevelyan, whether he was of the Shea Sect, or not, and if he were a Shea, whether he would accept of the Tuoleut of the Imambarah aforementioned, and in the event of his accepting he would receive a ninth share from the Wuqf. This well-wisher having some acquaintance with the affairs of the Imambarah when he was in Calcutta, and having likewise taken a personal cursory survey of them, and being satisfied from Mr. Smith Buhadoor's letter to the Resident Buhadoor that the Tuoleut was in the hands of the Ruling Power and was conducted according to the tenets of the faith of the Shea Sect of the 12 Imams and in direct conformity to the conditions provided in the Wuqf by the Waqif, he hesitated not in the acceptance of the office made to him—because to serve the cause of Religion, and perform the requisites of one's own faith, and do good to the followers of that faith are acts held in universal esteem both in this world and in the next. For this act of kindness, benevolence and protection conferred on me by that Heavenly canopy, of which the holding string is the Galaxy, the most excellent of the nobles of the most elevated dignity, the Ruler of the Kingdom of Hindoostan, the special Counsellor of the King of the Court of the 7th Heaven—England—the worthy Nawab, the Right Honorable the Governor-General Sahib, Bahadoor—may whose power and greatness continue for ever! I am thankful and grateful, and have raised my hands in prayers for the reason that an insignificant being like myself should be raised to such high and eminent office. When I reached Hooglee, I found the whole of the affairs of the Wuqf of the Imambarah, all its receipts and disbursements in the utmost state of confusion and ruin, the Rules of the faith of the 12th Imams violated, and the intention of the Wuqf disregarded to a most lamentable degree—the profession of the Shea faith, the Syuds, the indulgent, and the leaders of Shea worship all suspended, dismissed and degraded and in their room the money of the Imambarah transferred to the houses of English gentlemen, to Hindoos and to Soonees.

As in the Shea Religion, and in the humble opinion of this well wisher, an unjust and unjustifiable encroachment of the property of others—especially property consecrated for Religious purposes, (which is regarded as the very blood of the people) exposes one to the punishment of that divine, omnipotent avenger of wrongs, and to the responsibility with the governing power, who has raised this well wisher from the dust of humiliation; he consulted Reg. XIX dated 14th Dec. 1819, and with a pure mind and sincere heart he represented in a concise manner for the good of the Government the consequences of things, under a full conviction that when the wise gentlemen, conversant in Persian literature, would dwell upon the subject they would add to the honor and confidence which they had already conferred upon this well wisher, and forward his representation to the address of the noble gentlemen, inclosed in a letter to the Local Agents of this Zela, dated the 4th May, of the present year—requesting that the said representation should be sent to the service of the heavenly dignity after retaining a copy of it. In reply this well wisher received a Purwanah, dated 10th of this month—a copy of which, together with the original representation, is herewith submitted—with a request that he might be favoured with an early answer. But should your novel selves feel any hesitation on the subject, he solicits that the whole of the papers be laid before the Nuwab, the Governor-General in Council, Buhadoor—may whose magnificence last for ever! that the same being duly read and fully considered, this well wisher be spared the wrath of that divine omnipotent avenger of wrongs; and the responsibility to this great Government of Heavenly power, and pray for its eternal prosperity, and he feels a confident hope that in consideration of the honor you yourselves have conferred, you will not permit such Purwanahs to be sent to him, for this well wisher at any time has not rendered himself deserving of such addresses. Further, may the days of affluence and sway continue to shine from the horizon of glory and magnificence!

(Note by the Translator.)*

The exception taken to the style of address, which is of the kind observed between man and man, and by no means irrelevant to the style adopted between one Officer of the Government and another Officer, is scarcely tenable—when we come to consider the style in which the Suddur Ancients are required to address the Judges, and the Judges to them. The Ecclesiastical office, which a Mootwillee holds, always entitles him to high respect in the scale of society; and if he should maintain the dignity due to the Office he fills, he by no means departs from his right line of duty, provided he adopts Case of the Imambarah of the Mirsh Sullahooddeen Mohammed Khan, deceased, granted as an Appropriation by Hajee Mohammed Mouhsin, deceased.

"Whatever I have gathered from rumour and report merely as a well wisher of the Surker (Government) I herein record.

A true Copy of the Deed of Appropriation.

I, Hajee Mohammed Mohsun, son of Hajee Fyzoolah, son of Aga Fuzloollah, Inhabitant of Bunder Hooglee, in the full possession of all my senses and faculties, with my own free will and accord, do make the following correct and legal Declaration, That the Zumeendaree of Purgunah Qismut Suedpore, &c. appendant to Zilah Jussur, and Pargunah Sonbhal, also appendant to the Zilah aforesaid, and one House situated in Hooglee, (known and distinguished as Imambarah) and Imambazar, and Hat (Market) also situated in Hooglee, and all the goods and chattels appertaining to the Imambarah agreeably to a separate list; the whole of which have devolved on me by inheritance, and of which the proprietary possession I enjoy up to the present time, as I have no children, nor grand children, nor other relatives, who would become my legal Heirs;—and as I have full wish and desire to keep up and continue the usages and charitable expenditures (Muram-o-Ukhrajat-i-husneh) of the Fateha, &c. of the Huzruts (on whom be blessings and rewards) which have been the established practice of this family, I therefore hereby bequeath, purely for the sake of God, the whole the language of respect consistent with the language in which he writes. If an Officer of inferior public rank were to address the Board, (I mean an European Officer), he would not adopt the style of petition, but rather the style common in correspondence. The Mootwallee being asked to address a Petition, is in effect to degrade him in the high responsible Office he fills. Petitions are only addressed to the Court which represents the person of Royalty or the ruling power. The natives, it is true, have been accustomed from reasons of policy and the fear of being put out of their situations to address Petitions. This manner of writing was in the first instance adopted by them of their own accord, but subsequently the gentlemen in authority claimed it as a right and in a manner extorted it; but in the present instance we should think a Mootwallee holding the Title of a Benefice of no small consideration, ranks in point of respectability and dignity with any of the Officers of Government, and from the nature of his Ecclesiastical appointment, should always be looked upon with such reverence as is paid to a Clergyman of our Churches. Meer Kuramat Ali's aiming at this respectability, which is justly due to his rank, should rather be encouraged than deprecated. The Amil of a Province or the Nazim of Government in the time when the Delhi Emperors flourished, was, we presume, similarly addressed by one holding the charge of a Benefice. The Emperors themselves were never wanting in paying the respect due to the rank of a Mootwallee. An Urzee from the Mootwallee and a Purwanah from the Board carry with them such marks of low servility, that we think it were better to abolish the system altogether, both as regards the dignity and honor which is due, and by consent established in civilized society between man and man, as well as that consideration of policy which directs the conciliation of the affections of the people; for if their Religious Dignitaries are not held in the veneration their office entitles them to, a worse insult could not be aimed at them. And as we regard the character of our own Church Dignitaries, the spirit of toleration in Religion, as well as considerations of State Policy, requires that we should not lose sight of paying equal respect to the Dignitaries of other Religions, of the above Property, with all its rights, immunities and privileges, whole and entire, little or much, in it, with it, or from it, and whatever (by way of appendage) might arise from it, relate or belong to it—as a permanent appropriation for the following expenditures;—and have hereby appointed Rojib Uli Khan, son of Sheikh Mohammed Sabiq, and Shakur Uli Khan, son of Ahmud Khan, who have been tried and approved by me as possessing understanding, knowledge, religion and probity. Mootwallees (procurators or superintendents) of the said Wuqf or appropriation, which I have given in trust to the above two individuals,—that aiding and assisting each other they might consult, advise and agree together in the joint management of the business of the said appropriation, in manner as follows; that the aforesaid Mootwallees, after paying the Revenues of the Government, shall divide the remaining produce of the Muhals aforesaid into nine shares, of which three shares they shall disburse in the observance of the *Fateha of Huzrat Syud-i-Kayunat (head of the creation) the last of the prophets, and of the sinless Imams (on all of whom be the blessings and peace of God);—and in the expenditures appertaining to the Ushra of Mohurrum-ool-hurram (10 days of the sacred Mohurrum), and all other blessed days of feasts and festivals;—and in the repairs of the Imambarah and Monuments. Two shares the Mootwallees in equal proportion shall appropriate to themselves for their own expenses,—and four shares shall be disbursed in the payment of the servants of the establishment, and of those whose names are inserted in the separate list signed and sealed by me. In regard the daily expenses, monthly stipends of the stipendiaries, respectable men peendas and other persons who at this present moment stand appointed, Mootwallees aforesaid, after me, have full power to retain, abolish or discharge, as it may appear to them most fit and expedient. I have publicly committed the appropriation to the charge of the two abovenamed individuals. In the event of a Mootwallee finding himself unable to conduct the business of the appropriation he may appoint any one whom he may think deserving, as a Mootwallee to act in his behalf. For the above reasons this document is given in writing this 19th day of Bysakh, in the year of Hijree 1221, corresponding with the Bengal year 1213, that whenever it be required may prove a legal Deed.

This Document is written on Stamp Paper with the attestation of witnesses and bears on its face an inscription in English. Notwithstanding their own writing, and the existence of Regulation XIX relative to Wuqfs, inconsistencies have taken place in the construction of this Deed of Appropriation. I have consequently endeavoured to canvass the whole subject of dispute point by point.

1st cause of dispute.—According to what persuasion is this Wuqf made? Is it according to the sect of the Sunnnee, or the sect of the Sheea Usnea Ushureyeh (followers of the 12 Imams), or any other persuasion? From the following words of the *Wuqf*namah (Deed of Appropriation) "Ushra of Mohurrum-ool-hurram, sinless Imams, upon whom be blessings and rewards—Imambarah, &c." it is clear that the Wuqf is bequeathed according to the Sheea sect of the 12 Imams, because to no other persuasion would these words and rules apply. The great incontestable proof is the "usages and charitable expenditures of this family," by the word family, the family of the Sheea, the followers of the 12 Imams, in general is meant, and not any one particular family, or any one single individual, for the tenor of the text can only lead to this interpretation, otherwise the words will convey no meaning at all. From this it clearly appears that these usages and charitable expenditures in the shape of Wuqf must also have existed anterior to the time of the Wuqf (Donor of Wuqf) and the bequest of the former Testators to the legatees must have been made for the continuance of the same;—and this conclusion is fully borne out by the allegations of old people, and the words “Imambazar and Imambarah” themselves. The Donor of the appropriation having no children, grand children or other legal heirs who would continue and carry on the established usages and charitable expenditures of the family, as practised of old, and fearing that the same might fall into the hands of others—that is to say, into the hands of bad people or people of other religions; and the established usages and practices, as they had descended and come down to him might fall into disuse, made the Wuqf in question, because had he children, grand children or other relatives they would have respected and observed the usages and practices of the family. The strongest argument of all in the case of the Wuqf, that himself and his predecessors were of the sect of the 12 Imams, and that the Imambara aforesaid, the Tuazeeadaree in it, and the continuance of the established usages, did come down from the time of Aga Mootuhur, or Morshad Uli Khan, or from time anterior to them, would be, the knowledge which we acquire by succession, the knowledge that is divulged to us, and the knowledge of the habits and customs of the people. Hence, under these circumstances it appears, that the Wuqf aforesaid is according to the sect of the 12 Imams; and it does not belong to the partisans of any other religion to interfere in it.

2nd ground of argument—Whether increase of revenue in appropriated property resulting from a Putnee settlement, &c., belongs to the appropriation, or has the Government a right to it? These words of the text—that “the whole of the above property, with all its rights, immunities and privileges, whole and entire, little and much, in it, with it, or from it, and whatever (by way of appendage) might arise from it, or relate or belong to it” fully argue that such increase appertains to the appropriation and to those who are inclined to view the subject impartially and justly these very proper words—“and whatever (by way of appendage) might arise from it, or relate or belong to it” will be a demonstrative proof. If an objection be raised that formerly the revenues of the Wuqf Mahals were small, and that their increase was entirely owing to our exertions, the answer to it is this—that if a small property (as in effect it really is, with reference to what it was before—for some of the Muozas have been taken away) can be given in Wuqf, where is the hindrance of a large property being likewise given in Wuqf. The utmost that could be said in your favour is, that you are entitled to the reward of your labour,—but is it not enough that you have already profited by the increased revenue—and (let me ask) where lies the merit, if you should raise a benefit, and appropriate that benefit to yourself?

3rd.—The grand point in dispute between the English gentlemen and others, and the Sheas, is this that the English gentlemen and others have interpreted the word Husnah in the sentence “Murasam wo Musarif-i-Husnah” in its literal sense, as meaning good works in general—and from which they have understood, the instruction of the English language, &c., which (it must be recollected) confers no benefit whatever on the Shea religion—an interpretation, however, of this kind cannot be admitted, for various reasons. First. That the word “Husnah”, of which the plural is Husnat, does not obtain among the Mussulmans, whether learned or the common people; its literal meaning, its use being always restricted to its spiritual sense—that it to say, to its logical bearing; in which sense and bearing it means virtue, and such works as arise from virtue, and is opposed to the words Shuneeah and Shaneest or Hootin-s-qorbeh (vice and vices—good and evil.) The Soonees sect likewise on the use of this word put the same theological construction. Second. These words of the Text, “Fatahas &c., of the Huzruts (on whom be blessings and rewards) which have been the established practice of this family”—and “purely for the sake of God” and “following expenditures” go to strengthen the argument of the Sheas, and oppose the arguments set forth by the English gentlemen. Third. In the “usages and charitable expenditures of this family” at any time, or by any interpretation, the English language, was not, has not been, and cannot be understood. Fourth. Should the English gentlemen say—that by knowing the English language—a language fraught with knowledge and science—a strong presumption arises that in time good will accrue to the religion and sect of the Sheas:—the reply would be—that agreeably to the Canons of Islamism and the law of reason—near and nearer the thing that is most near to us, should first be considered, and after which another—(uluqub-uluqub-ul-ulum son ul ulum) that is to say, that our first care should be to obtain that which is immediately necessary for us:—for example—if a person were hungry and naked and without a dwelling, first of all he should be fed, then clothed, and after that supplied with other requisites. It is fully clear that the English language can be neither necessary nor of importance to the natives of India, much less can it be required for the sect and religion of the Sheas,—since there is nothing in that language concerning the Mahomedan faith. Fifth. In instructing the Hindoos and men of other religions in the English language, no benefit can arise to the religion and sect of the Sheas, nor can the soul of the Wuqf have his salvation through it. Sixth. It is with every religion, considered as an act of piety, to translate the doctrines of that religion from one language into another for the purpose of adorning the minds of the commonalty and people of different languages; and for this purpose large sums are given to learned and religious men and spent in building places for religious worship and devotion,—(for example—children who are not made Christians (baptized) are not buried in the burying ground of the Christians) under this reason, if as an act of piety certain sentences were read on the tomb of a Moosulman in another language, of what benefit will such reading be to that Moosulman as regards his own faith? Seventh. As the number of Sheas in India was small, and they had no King of their own faith, every person of the Shea sect, as it is the custom with all religions, according to circumstances, used to leave, and does leave, something in Wuqf and otherwise spend for the continuance and good of his religion and for his own redemption and salvation, and notwithstanding the enmity between the Sheas and the Soonees, which is proverbially known all over the world, and the King and most of his Nobles being of the Soonees sect, yet no one ever interfered with the Imambaras. And, if in this prosperous age,—when for peace and protection the Sheas have taken up their residence in this country, and follow the practices of their religion, and have their Imambaras, and observe with tranquility the ceremonies of their Tuazeeas, the English are to interfere in their Wuqfs, they will necessarily take alarm and become suspicious, and will tarnish the good name of this Government (of eternal duration) in distant countries with the most awful recollections! Eighth. The Hindoos have spent, and do spend in Wuqfs, lacs of rupees in every town and city in support of their idols and deities; and although idolatry is execrated in every religion, yet never have the English gentlemen interfered, nor do they interfere, with their Wuqfs. Had the English interfered in their Wuqfs the Sheas would have remained silent and patient. Ninth. As tracts of land distinguished either by their species, or by their class, whether in the mineral vegetable or animal creation, have no resemblance to one another, so the people of India being of a dull habit, and placed at the distance of East and West, it is very difficult for them to acquire the English language;—and is such not the case with the English gentlemen? who although born in a cold climate with much physical and parental strength and able to endure the fatigue of pain and labour, and standing in great need of the Hindoe, and the reading and writing of the Persian, yet they cannot learn them; far less are they able to hold a conversation for they cannot convey one single idea in them fluently or idiomatically. The English can certainly derive one advantage by the Natives learning the English language, that they, the Natives, will then be able to assist the English gentlemen in their civil business, and by copying and writing depositions will render their task easy to them. But as to what the English gentlemen expect—that by the Natives acquiring the English language they will be able to translate the same into their own language, and will become scientific, affluent and powerful men, it is indeed a mistaken notion; for to arrive at this point is a task of great difficulty indeed. It is not so? When we consider that for centuries back they are studying the Persian and the Arabic languages, and notwithstanding their neighbourhood, they know it but partially and imperfectly. Then again have they been able to acquire any notion of those European arts and sciences which for years have been exposed to their view, although there are not men wanting in riches—such as the Muhajuns, Rajahs, Nuwabs, &c.? Tenth. It is to be presumed that a course of not less than 20 years, might capacitate the native minds to acquire the English language, as it is to be seen in those individuals who are for such length of time taught that language in the Madrasah, and are really not able to translate anything to English, or even to read it fluently. Eleventh. On the other hand if works of arts and sciences were translated from English into the current languages of India and read by the people, there is no doubt in a short time the benefit of such course or study would become obvious, as the Science of Medicine which used formerly to be translated into the Oordoo tongue, but is now discontinued. Twelfth. The money that is now laid out in the instruction of the English language, if the same, or even less were spent in bringing up translation of scientific works from English, and the natives instructed in them in their own language, the benefit arising from such experiment would soon be seen; while such translations would not be subject to a double expense and labour. But if any one chuses to study at his own expense any language and to build a Madrasah, he of course is at liberty to do so. Thirteenth. But if the tuition of the English has been determined upon by the illumined and illustrious minds of the English gentlemen as an indispensable course, there are various other sources to be resorted to instead of infringing upon the sacred rights of the Wuqfs of the people. There are Rajahs, Newabs, Khans and others in great number who are enjoying extensive stipends of lacs of rupees; if the allowances of those folks were a little reduced, according to their respective conditions, and the same spent in the instruction of the English language, there is not an individual who could say aught against such reduction—especially as these Newabs, Rajahs, &c., carry on a course of expences the most extravagant; compared to which the cultivation of the English language would by far be preferable. Fourteenth. If it be determined that from the Wuqf of the Imambarah (of course by the command of the governing power) a Madrasah should be established of the kind there is; why should the Soonees (who are the oppressors of the Sheas, and consider their lives and properties as lawful spoils; and of whose acts of aggressions and oppressions in imprisoning and killing the Sheas and committing other enormities on them, as a reprobis in every ear) obtain a preference of admission into the Persian and Arabic Madrasah, while two Sheas only are entertained on small allowances—and those two not, because they are Sheas, but by mere chance only. I ask, why the Sheas are thus debarred and excluded from the institution? Fifteenth. Why are the children and youths of the Sheas of Hooghlee and the people attached to the Imambarah, for whose particular benefit the Wuqf was conferred, debarred from every branch of study—particularly the Arabic and the Persian? The reason is this; that for these children a separate teacher is required, that in going to the Madrasah (which is at some distance,) and in their eating and drinking, &c., they may not suffer inconvenience—and then it is required, that their teachers should first of all teach them the elements of their religion, otherwise their parents will not consent to their being sent to the Madrasah for instruction, as in effect is the case. Sixteenth. These youths should be encouraged: instead of which the applications of some among them, who had really acquired sufficient knowledge for teaching, for admission into the Madrasah, were neglected and laid aside, and Soonees, who had interest were admitted; this at once broke the spirit of their youthful minds—Moulvee Meer Oulad Hoosyn, a teacher of old standing and the leader of the worship, with whom the Sheas of Hooghlee were pleased, and the acknowledgement of whose merit and learning there was but one opinion, seeing the confusion and derangement which the aspect of the things had assumed and finding no prospects of promotion, actually resigned his place in disgust and went away. Seventeenth. As the Moosulmans of India both of the middling and lower class—particularly those of the Shea sect, are distressed in circumstances, they for the purpose of study resort to small and large towns, and many among them by living with other men and teaching their children for some trifling return, obtain their livelihood and prosecute their studies. The Moulvees of Hindoostan are of this description of people. And as the teachers of the Hooghlee Madrasah were aware of this circumstance, each of the head teachers took to the practice of entertaining and lodging in his house 20 of the students, and looked to their allowances as a great boon. In fact every one of the teachers began to adopt this plan of lodging students according to his circumstances; and about 20 of them were also admitted, under the name of Moosafurs (travellers) into the Moosafur Khanah of the Imambarah, although this Moosafur Khanah (or travellers' resting place) was not under the Imambarah, that is to say, it did not fall within the superintendency of the Mootwallah,—as is the case with the Shufa Khana or hospital; and if this was not done no Moosulman student would appear. The teachers aim at popularity, that it may be spoken of them what good people they are that they give bread to the students. They are also on the look out, that a vacancy of a teachership may occur; and always fearful lest a Shea should come in, they cause the students to apply and offer the services of 4 persons to become assistant teachers for the vacated appointment of 60 rupees! They also contemplate and wish, that the allowances of some of the Soonee students, who have enjoyed the same for 7 years and upwards, might continue to them; and that those of the Sheas, who are orphan and young, might be discontinued. Under these circumstances therefore, it is highly desirable that first of all provision should be made for the due maintenance of the pupils—(as the Wuqf's intention was to secure the welfare of his own sect)—and after this is accomplished, teachers should be appointed. Eighteenth. In Hindoostan the number of Sheas has been and is small, and many among them have taken to a pious ascetic life. Praise be to God that in the time of this Government of eternal duration, it is known in every country that in cities where the Sheas could never congregate for the performance of divine service (Nuzar-i-Jome), or could openly observe the ceremonies of the Tazara (as in Dehlee and other places)—in this prosperous age they are happily engaged in promulgating the tenets of their religion with contentment of mind and security—and for this grace in their religion, they are grateful to the Government. This act of toleration commands the gratitude of all—whether Hindoos or Moosulmans,—for now no longer does the power of the Hindoos prevail over the Moosulmans (as is the case in the Panjab and other countries)—nor that of the Moosulmans over the Hindoos—nor yet the Soonees dominant over the Sheas (as is the case in Tonk and other countries). It is indeed for such reasons that in countries where the sway of the English does not extend, still the people of those places are anxious for the English Government,—and when in distant countries mention is made of these acts (of benevolence and toleration) the people rise into ecstasies and admiration exclaiming "Bravo! Bravo! these people cannot be men, they are angels!" The people of this country are ignorant men, they do not understand the idea of eminence and sublimity, hence it is much to be feared that if their hopes were crushed, they might raise their voice of complaint to London and to other distant countries. The Soonees and the Hindoos too will take alarm, saying, that when the hind of rapine is stretched and laid upon the Wuqf rights of the Sheas, what is there to restrain them from pouncing upon our Wuqfs too?—and in this thought, alas! their hearts will be broken!" Let me ask, what would be preferable?—whether the people should engender in their minds a grateful feeling for this Government—or that they should entertain feelings of disgust and malevolence towards it? Highcouth. As teachers have been appointed in the English College, and liberal allowances have been made to them, and some of them attend to the business of instruction 3 hours only, the people are led into a belief that until such time as the Indians are enlightened (or benefited) (which perhaps they may never be) the object of the English is only the pilloage of their own countrymen from the Imambarah (or the Wuqf property).

4th Cause of Dispute.—Let us now consider—who is best deserving of the office of the superintendency? undoubtedly he whom the Wuqf had appointed Mootwallee, and this Mootwallee cannot be dismissed, excepting he is negligent, careless, or corrupt in the management of the Wuqf property. As the Wuqf made the superintendency (of the Wuqf property) generally, among the Shea sect, and entrusted the charge to special Mootwallees, with power of transfer to others of their appointment, these alone therefore can transfer to other special Mootwallees, but in the event of death previous to transference, their sons have the preference of appointment to all others, provided they possess talents fitted for the management, and are men of moral good character—that is to say, they are not negligent, careless or corrupt in the management of the Wuqf property,—and after the consideration of the claims of these, others should be selected. From the 15th paragraph of a letter of the Local Agents, dated 20th January 1836, to the address of the late Mootwallees, it appears, that in consequence of corruption in the late Mootwallees, the Government, as a matter of sheer necessity, took the management of the property into their own hands. In this case the Government becomes entitled to the 2 shares (reserved for the Mootwallees) and should claim the same; but this will be in contravention to Regulation XIX. the Rules of which the Government themselves have laid down, and it will likewise be opposed to the intention of the Waqf who made the Wuqf for the good of his own sect. Far be it from just rulers that they should not perform the pledge they have given, and for the violation of their pledge should seek for pretences.

It is with the Shea religion, as it is with every other religion, to employ in Wuqf such people as are of the religion of that Wuqf, as it is done in all countries, for people of other religions are not acquainted with that particular worship of that religion, and they also are reluctant to join in such worship because it would tend to destroy the effects of their own religion as they consider the Wuqf of a different religion as acquired and in the light of escheated houses and property obtained by violence—and it is likewise in the nature of man, for every one to desire to promote the welfare of his own nation—for such a person (of a contrary faith) would wish to do every thing as far as possible for the advantage of his own sect. This circumstance will likewise tend to injure the cause of the Wuqf, as it really is the case now; for out of three shares Rs 5020 are fixed for the annual expenditure of Mohurram Muqad and Muwuzzun, from this 5,020 Rs. 100 is for 27 Mujlis or assemblies in the year, and in the Mosafir Khana only 5 Mosafurs are accounted for, and in the room of 20 others, are students; and there are many other cases of this kind—and as the Government are of themselves not able to act, it is necessary that a Moosulman deputy be employed under the orders of the local agents, who in consequence of being a Hindu and for the consideration of his pay (which too is unknown, whether he shall share the 9th share of 20,000 or from the 5020 Rs. as it has been elicited that it is to be 9th share from 20,000, and from the jealousy of the English), he shall not have courage to represent matters according to facts, and by this means too, the business will be in a state of derangement. Kings too, excepting in war, never violated the rights of Wuqf property, beyond taking the fixed revenue. Yet, it is becoming in the Government to prevent corruption in Mootwallees, and to see that the Wuqf is administered agreeably to the intention of the Wuqf, and this only for the reason, that it is the duty of kings to afford relief to the people, and to prevent them from stealing, &c. and to cause oppressors to redress the wrongs of the oppressed. Doing this they are entitled to our praise. But if there should be any hesitation, they might in this case take the reward of their labour. They also can bring back things to their original state. Besides such interference, any other act is opposed to the honor of a righteous King.

The 5th Cause of Dispute.—Can the Mootwallee in the 4 shares out of 9 shares use his discretion? It does not belong to the Mootwallee to take any thing from it either for himself or his dependents, nor is he justified to incur any expense which may stand opposed to the intention of the Waqf. Even the Waqf himself, after he has made the Wuqf, cannot act in a contrary manner to the Wuqf, excepting in case of death or change of religion, or improper conduct, in such case other qualified persons should be appointed according to the intention of the Wuqf, and such other things only he can do as would lead to the well being of the Sheas, especially those of Hooglee and their religion on the principle ul ugrub fil ugrub nul uhum son ul uhum. Besides acting thus, he has no other power. Should I be required to give my opinion on the receipts and disbursements and deranged state of the Imambarah, and the entertainment and discharge of men and amiah, &c., and the prevention of corruption, I shall do so in a full and ample manner.

SATURDAY, 1ST JULY, 1837.

SECTION WRITERS—10 ANNAS FOR A THOUSAND WORDS !!!

Pursuant to an advertisement that appeared in this morning's Hurkaru, the Secretary was favored with, we believe, more than 150 applications, both verbal and written, from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m., and it is supposed that twice the number will be added to the list of applicants by Monday afternoon.

The scene was a very amusing one throughout, as we shall suppose the Secretary deeply engaged in expounding to a Special Deputy Collector the Provisions of Regulation III of 1828, when the Naib jemadar intrudes with "Tomkins sahib ayah hai kadabund." "Oone kaha" replied the Secretary, evidently a little vexed at the interruption.

Mr. Tomkins, on being shewn into the Board Room, first walked to the space behind the Secretary's table and after making three hasty bows, suddenly discovered that the Secretary's face was the other way, then as suddenly picked up a silk waterproof and hastening round to the space in front made a bow, and while in the act of bowing, the Secretary handed him a side of foolscap saying write a half-side on that, put down your name, place of residence, the school in which you were educated, and the manner in which you have been employed since you left school. "Sare!" was the reply, with a long drawl, as poor Tomkins did not hear half of what was said, and understood much less. The requisition was then conveyed to him in simpler language, and with a little explanation, Mr. Tomkins seated himself on a chair; but the scene here again became remarkable. The first thing Mr.
Tomkins did after being seated, was to take out a Rodgers' patent, then placed a quill in a right line with the tip of his nose over his thumb, and after having wasted a Government quill almost to a stump, commenced the business of endition. The first half sheet of foolscap was abandoned with "To the Adeesional Secretaries to Suddar Board," and showing that under some blotting paper, the other half sheet was taken, but abandoned also at the word Revenue, and we believe a few sheets of x. v. z. c. was wasted before Mr. Tomkins' indictment was prepared to his satisfaction.

The next applicant announced was Mr. Vaidkin's we will suppose. This gentleman's strut put us in mind of a valet de chambre, habillé à la mode, advancing up an ally to greet a femme de chambre standing at her master's gate. He was dressed in a brown-cloth stock coat, black hoseymares, coloured silk stockings, buff waistcoat, and a pair of collars projecting to the distance of nearly four inches from his chin, over a regimental stock; but the bubble of hubdashery burst, as in making his bow, he drew his left foot backwards, and nearly tumbled over Mr. Tomkins's feet. A few minutes after him came about a dozen Ramdoses, as many Ghoses, and about five dozens of Narrains. At 3 p. m. the Board table was surrounded not by the learned members of the Board cognating and debating over the fate of some delinquent Deputy Collector, defalcations, or the more important matter of disposing of unfortunate lakirajdars, but by Messrs. Tomkins, Simpkins, and Jimkins, and natives of the shaver caste, and all the other castes. The Secretary in-tead of every now and then offering a wise suggestion to the members, repeated the words, "very well, you may go to-day and I will send for you when necessary," then came the bows and salam, and we are uncertain if it will not be necessary for the Board to draw a contingent bill for a new mat for the Board Room, numerous injurious scrapings having been inflicted on the pie-ent mat. One of the native applicants, less learned than the rest, took the liberty of asking information in the following words:—"Bery hell, Master, take leave to-day. I cum tummurro?" "No, Sir, I shall send for you should you be wanted," replied the Secretary.

At about 4½ p. m. the incumbent section writers underwent trial, among whom were only two, whose answers are worth noting.

"What's your name?" asked the Secretary.

"James," replied the examinant.

"You write the best hand in the office." James's countenance brightened up at this; but poor, unfortunate man, his bliss was not of long duration, as he was requested to write a half side also in the presence of the Secretary.

James made his pen with great composure, but the awful moments were those during which he was engaged in transcription; as we observed James's left eye watching the movements of the Secretary, while with the assistance of the other, he went through his task as well as he could, and then handed it to the Secretary; who after minutely examining the turns, twists, and flourishes turned coolly round, and said, "Why, you write very badly." James trembled, all animation was gone. "Is there another person in the office of your name?" "No-o-o-l-r-r-r, hem!" "How is it then, that you write so badly now?" "Be-cause, Sir, I feel one kind before my employers." "Very well, you may go," said the Secretary, and Mr. James was sooner down the flight of steps and on the third floor, than was ever attempted or done in so short a time by any of his office mates.

"What's your name, Sir?" said the Secretary to a lad of about sixteen.

"Tucker, Tucker, Sir."

"Can you write a good hand?"

"O yes, pretty good, Sir."

"Well, copy that (handing him a paper.)"

Tucker did not seem to feel the presence, as in a very few minutes he was on his legs, and handed the paper to the Secretary saying, "It's done, Sir."

"This is very bad writing; cannot you do any thing else?" (meaning we suppose, if Tucker could not obtain any other employment.)

"O yes, anything, Sir,—I am a reader to the Bumminers."

"Do you know grammar?" enquired the Secretary.

"Yes, a little," replied Tucker.

"What part of speech is in?"

"A preposition, Sir."

"What is reply?"

"A substantive, Sir."

Here ended Tucker's examination—the clock struck five, and we left the Board.—Bengal Hurkaru, July 5.

To the Commissioner of Revenue for the Division of Settlement. Sir,—I am directed to transmit for your information and guidance, copy of a letter from the Commissioner of Jessore, and of the Board's orders in reply of this date, explaining in what cases parties who have protested against the new assessment of their tenures are to be held responsible for the difference between the new and old rate until the last settlement shall have been confirmed or modified by competent authority.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

Sudder Board of Revenue. }
Fort William, June 2, 1837, }

No. 221.

To the Additional Secretary, Sudder Board of Revenue, Fort William.

Sir,—The Sudder Board of Revenue having in their instructions Miscellaneous Provincial Department issued to Mr. Grant on the 27th No. 231. February 1835, No 114, reiterated on the 25th April 1836, in reply to a reference made by me on the 26th January 1836. No. 43, expressed their opinion to the effect that parties in Pergunnah Bagroogomedpore, who may have protested against the new assessment of their respective tenures, cannot be held responsible for the difference between the new and old rate until their appeals shall have been disposed of, and the last settlement have been confirmed by competent authority, I request to be informed, whether this rule is to be held applicable to all cases of ryotwar settlement, or to that of pergunnah Bagroogomedpore alone, which, as the Board know, is not a resumed mahal, but a purchase made by government.

2. Clause 3, Sec. 4, Reg. 111, 1832, certainly authorises a collector immediately to carry his decision into execution by attaching and assessing the land unless security for the payment of the revenue, which may immediately be assessed thereon, be tendered by the applicant; but I do not understand that action to convey authority to the collector, after attachment, in case of an financing the rents in a ryotwar, on the under-tenants or actual cultivators to enforce prior to the confirmation of the settlement, the payment of such increased amount from those tenants who may urge objections to the payment and prefer appeals, not against right of governments to the rents of the mehal, but against the amount of rent which under those rights the settling officer may assess upon their respective tenures.

3. I certainly considered the rule as one applicable to ryotwar settlements in general, and directed the officiating Commissioner of Soonderbunds to act in conformity thereto in the case of the resumed mehal Tashkholla under settlement, and to which in consequence of the number of dependant tenures which had been upset, and of consequent objections urged, I considered the rule peculiarly applicable.

4. Subsequent consideration having induced me to doubt how far the Board might hold the above rule to be applicable to ryotwar settlements or mehals resumed under Regulation II. of 1819, and III. of 1828, I have the honor to submit the point for the consideration and orders of the Board, and solicit to be favored with their early instructions upon the subject.

I have, &c,

No.—

To the Commissioner of Revenue for the Division of Jessore.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated 19th ultimo, asking whether the order passed by the board in the case of pergunnah Bagroogomelpore, "that parties who have protested against the new assessment of their respective tenures he held responsible for the difference between the new and old rate until the last settlement shall have been confirmed by competent authority, is or is not to be held applicable to all cases of Ryotwar settlement.

2nd. In reply the Board direct me to say, that the above rule is to be observed in all cases in which the settlement is found with the Kudeem Khood Kasht ryots. Those ryots generally possess rights in the soil, and they could not be superseded by any other person until their objections to the new settlement have been heard and decided upon, without manifest hardship. The case of ordinary leaseholders is quite different; and if they do not agree to the terms proposed, an engagement may be taken from the ryots or any other persons.

I have, &c.

No. 49.

CIRCULARS.

To the Commissioners of Revenue for the Division of Settlements.

Sir,—I am directed to transmit for your information and guidance copy of a letter from the Commissioner of Jessore, and of the Board's orders in reply of this date, explaining in what cases parties who have protested against the new assessment of their tenures are to be held responsible for the difference between the new and old rate until the last settlement shall have been confirmed or modified by competent authority.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

(Signed) C. E. TRAVELMAN,

Additional Secretary.

Sudder Board of Revenue, Fort William, 2d June 1837.

To the Additional Secretary to the Sudder Board of Revenue, Fort William.

Miscellaneous Revenue Department, No. 231.

Sir,—The Sudder Board of Revenue having in their instructions issued to Mr. Grant on the 27th February 1835, No. 114, reiterated on the 25th April 1836, in reply to a reference made by me on the 26th January 1836, No. 45, expressed their opinion to the effect, that parties in Pergunnah Bazar Gomudpore, who may have protested against the new assessment of their respective tenures, cannot be held responsible for the difference between the new and old rate, until their appeals shall have been disposed of, and the last settlements have been confirmed by competent authority, I request to be informed whether this rule is to be held applicable to all cases of ryotwar settlement, or to that of Pergunnah Bazar Gomudpore alone, which, as the Board know, is not a resumed Mehal but a purchase made by Government.

2. Clause III. Section 4. Regulation III. 1828, certainly authorizes a collector immediately to carry his decision into execution, by attaching and assessing the land, unless security for the payment of the revenue, which may ultimately be assessed thereon, be tendered by the appellants, but I do not understand that section to convey authority to the Collector, after attachment in the case of his enhancing the rents in a ryotwar, on the under tenants, or actual cultivators, to enforce, prior to the confirmation of the settlement, the payment of such increased amount from those tenants, who may urge objections to the payment, and prefer appeals, not against the Right of Government to the rent of which under those rights, the settling officer may assess upon their respective tenures.

3. I certainly consider the rule, as one applicable to ryotwar settlements in general, and directed the officiating Commissioner of Sunderbunds, to act in conformity thereto, in the case of the resumed mehals Tashkholla under settlement, and to which in consequence of the number of dependant tenures which had been upset and of consequent objections urged, I consider the rule peculiarly applicable.

4. Subsequent consideration having induced me to doubt how far the Board might hold the above rule to be applicable to ryotwar settlements on Mehals resumed under Regulation II. of 1819, and III. of 1828, I have the honor to submit the point for the consideration and orders of the board, and solicit to be favored with their early instructions upon the subject.

I have the honor to be, sir,

Your most obedient servant,

To the Commissioner of Revenue for the Division of Jessore

Settlements.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 19th ultimo, asking whether the order passed by the Board in the case of Pergunnah " Bazar Gomdapore, that parties, who have protested against the new assessment of their respective tenures be held responsible for the difference between the new and old rate, until the last settlement shall have been confirmed by competent authority," is or is not to be held applicable to all cases of ryotwar settlement?

2d. In reply the Board direct me to say, that the above rule is to be observed in all cases in which the settlement is formed with the Kudeen Khoud Kash ryuts. These ryuts generally possess rights in the soil and they could not be superseded by any other person until their objections to the new settlements have been heard, and decided upon, without manifest hardship. The case of ordinary house holders is quite different, and if they do not agree to the terms proposed, an engagement may be taken from the ryuts or any other persons.

The following letter circulated by order of the Sudder Board of Revenue, for the information of all the officers subordinate to them.

(Signed) C. E. TREVELYAN, Additional Secy.

The 10th June 1837.

To the Commissioner of Revenue for the Division of Cuttack.

Sir,—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 4th ultimo, with the enclosed copies of correspondence with Mr. Special Deputy Collector Crawford, and to state in reply as follows.

2d. The Board are of opinion that you may legally call upon a Special Deputy Collector to furnish you with any information necessary to enable you to form your own judgment as to the sufficiency, and validity of the grounds assigned by the collector for considering the lands exempt from assessment. Without this power you could not properly fulfil the duty entrusted to you of appealing to the Special Commissioner those cases, in which the claims of Government may appear to you to have been improperly set aside.

3d. The Board, however, conceive it to be utterly beyond your authority to direct a revision of a Special Deputy Collector's decrees, the existence of such a power would be manifestly unjust, unless the holders of rent free Tenures, had a corresponding guardian of their interests vested with similar authority, to direct a revision of decrees given against them, and the attempt to add to the severity of the resumption laws by the introduction of such a plan of proceeding, would be highly objectionable and unexpedient.

4th. The year allowed for appealing, dates from the receipt of the record of the case by the local Commissioner, but it is within the discretion of the Special Commissioner to allow a prolongation, on sufficient reason being shewn. In the Patna case referred to by Mr. Crawford, the year had expired pending a reference back to the resumption Officer; the Special Commissioner would not hear of this plea, and rejected the appeal, not because such a reference had been made back to the resumption Officer, but because the year of appeal had expired. It will therefore be incumbent on you on receipt of a resumption Officer's proceedings, to review them without loss of time, that in case you find it necessary to call for any further information, the case may be completed, and the appeal preferred (if it be proper to appeal) within the year, or the Special Commissioner be applied to, to grant a further period for performing the appeal beyond the year.

5th. The Sudder Board fully admit, that with the exception pointed out, Special Deputy Collectors are in every respect as completely subject to your controul, as any other Collectors or Deputy Collectors.

Sir,—A case in appeal having been recently decided by the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut against the Revenue Authorities, principally on the ground that a pottah had not been granted to nor a kubooleut received from the parties, from whom julkur revenue on a khas mehal was demanded.—I am directed by the Sudder Board of Revenue to request that you will impress on your subordinates the necessity of granting pottahs, and taken kubooleuts on all occasions of letting out lands or fisheries on the part of Government, and that they will be held responsible for any deviation from these orders, and for all loss that may be incurred in consequence not taking the prescribed written engagement in all cases of letting, or farming lands or fisheries under sanction of a superior.

CONSULTATION, TUESDAY, 30TH MAY, 1837.

REFUND TO LAKHIRAJDAR BY THE COLLECTOR OF HOOGHLY.

Mr. Commissioner Lowes, of Moorshedabad, on the 29th April last, in acknowledging the Board's communication of the 11th of that month, with its enclosure from Mr. Accountant Dorin, on the subject of an apparent excess in a refund made to one Mahdeb Dutt, a Lakhirajdar, by the Collector of Hooghly,—submitted copy of an explanation furnished by that officer from a perusal of which (Mr. Lowes presumed) the Board would be satisfied that the discrepancy noticed by the accountant, did not arise from any error in the Collector's office.

Mr. Collector Belli said, that from the letter of the Accountant appended to the Sudder Board's, it appeared that the accountant raised the question upon 27 rupees only, with the exception, that he was certified of the credit on the books of the Hooghly Collectorate, of the residue of the sum exhibited in the Collector's detailed statement, prepared at his own requisition. The Collector submitted copies of the Seeha and Challans which he hoped would remove all doubts on the subject.

The twenty-seven rupees were realized in three different items as per the following entries, entered in the Seeha books of this office.

Seeha Book, pages 4 and 6, dated 16th April 1836, received through Gomaun Singh, being the interest for Chur Gungapershadpore, due from Mahdub Dutt,	1	0	10
Seeha Book, page 10, dated 16th April, 1836, received through Gomaun Singh, being the interest of Chur Gungapershadpore, due from Mahdub Dutt,	0	3	10
	1	4	0
or Company's Rupees	1	5	4
Seeha Book, page 5, dated 25th August, 1836, received through Gomaun Singh, being the revenue of Chur Gungapershadpore, due from Mahdub Dutt,	25	10	8

With adverting to the accountant's concluding paragraph, the Collector was not sure of comprehending the scope of his remark, if the accountant inferred, that the Collector denominated as a refund the money disbursed on that occasion, on account of interest and costs of suit; the Collector observed that he must certainly have expressed himself indistinctly, or inadvertently; as he had no such intention, he might, however, perhaps be permitted to observe, that what is paid on the score of interest, can hardly be deemed an absolute loss, for, (said the Collector) if interest be calculated for the use of the money during its employment by Government, it had been liquidated upon fair terms. The Collector trusted that the matter was made sufficiently clear to enable the Board to pass the bill speedily.

The Collector took the opportunity of suggesting the expediency of prohibiting refunds of the above character being made before previously consulting with the accountant of the Revenue Department, and obtaining the prescribed audit, for there appeared to be something hard upon the Collector, that the should be bound to obey promptly the Special Commissioner's orders, and at the same time to be held exclusively responsible for the disbursement. Any delay that ensues by carrying the business through the several departments involves the sole disadvantage of some additional item as interest, but that no fairness should be sustained, rather than the Collector should be endangered by a responsibility, he has no option to accept, or reject. By way of elucidation, and as not altogether irrelevant, the Collector mentioned, that at that moment the Civil Auditor had kept him out of 26 rupees 10 annas and 4 pie, for three months, as in his estimation excess fees paid to the Government pleader at the Court of the Special Commissioner for the division of Moorshedabad, and he was unable to have the matter settled, although the Special Commissioner, whom the Collector addressed about it, declared, in his opinion, that the Collector's construction of the scale laid down in the extract, which accompanied the Sudder Board's letter No. 10, of the 5th Feb. 1830, is correct, and that the Civil Auditor had miscalculated erroneously; nor could the Collector forget, whilst on the subject, what a fearful liability the Board's Circular No. 2, of the 9th January last, throws the Collector into by giving him to understand that he will be made personally responsible for all sums standing in the inefficient balance. Should (in the opinion of the Board) there have been any unreasonable delay on his part, in getting it through the prescribed audit.

No. 90.

To J. BOWES, Esq., Commissioner of Revenue for the Division of Moorshedabad.

Miscellaneous Department.

Sir.—The Sudder Board of Revenue, having reconsidered the subject of your letter dated 21st January last, direct me to inform you that Commissioners are authorized to direct payment for sums awarded by decrees against Government, without reference to the Sudder Board, and that consequently, it was your duty to cheque the item of rupees 3,150-10-8, in the Collector of Hooghly's Contingent Bill for December last, being the amount of a refund to Mahdub Dutt, and pass it, or not, as you might consider fit, leaving any party dissatisfied with your proceedings, to appeal to superior authority.

2d. You are therefore requested to deal with the case in question on your own authority.

CONSULTATION, TUESDAY, 30TH MAY, 1837.

NOWARRAH AND KHULSA MEHALS, DACCA.

Mr. Commissioner E. M. Gordon, on the 6th May last, submitted the following question for the consideration of the Sudder Board.

It constantly happens, that the objection urged against the measurement and assessment of alleged Nowarraah Mehals, in Zillah Dacca by the Deputy Collector, is to this effect. The land laid claim to, the Zemindar says, is not a Nowarraah Mehal, but forms a part of his Khulsa or permanently settled lands. What Mr. Gordon wishes to know is, whether when the Deputy Collector in such cases decides the land to be properly assessable, an appeal lies to the Special Commissioner, or to the local commissioner?

For the adjudication of the above class of cases, the Sudder Board, in the 11th paragraph of their letter No. 86, dated the 17th June 1834, lay it down, that Regulation VII. of 1822, Regulation IX. of 1825, and Regulation IX. of 1833 "Arm the Deputy Collector with abundant power for the vindication of the just claims of the state."

Mr. Gordon respectfully submits, that the question of jurisdiction does not appear to him to be altogether simple and clear.

Regulation VII. of 1822 is by no means remarkable for its clearness. It is doubtful to Mr. Gordon, if the Deputy Collector decide in favor of assessing a given portion of land under the above enactment, whether the local Commissioner has any jurisdiction; and 2ndly, whether his power extends beyond a summary investigation.

If the Deputy Collector acts under Regulation IX. of 1825, it seems to Mr. Gordon, that an appeal lies to the Special Commissioner.

In Mr. Gordon's opinion the Sudder Board would act wisely by ordering all questions of the kind he has alluded to, to be finally awarded by the Special Commissioner. Mr. Gordon finds his time fully occupied in attending to the claims of current business. His investigation of such cases, must necessarily be, more or less of a summary kind. From his decision (supposing him to have jurisdiction at all) an appeal is open to the civil court, and the expense, uncertainty, and delay attendant upon this mode of adjudication are very great.

To E. M. Gordon, Esq., Commissioner of Revenue, for the division of Dacca.

Miscellaneous.

Sir,—In reply to your letter dated the 16th instant, I am directed to state, that in this instance, the question is between the Government Khass Mehals, and the neighbouring Malgozarry lands belonging to the Zemindars holding under the permanent settlement.

The appeal in such cases, therefore, closely lies to the local, and not to the Special Commissioner; and you are requested immediately to attend to, and to investigate, with the utmost attention, all allegations that the land measured by Amcena belongs of right to the Khulsa Mehals, as directed in the 11th Paragraph of the Board's orders, dated the 17th June, 1834.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient and humble Servant.

as to whether the Neemuck Sayer Mehals are in future to be farmed agreeably to the Fausully, the Bengallee, or the Commercial year, and whether or not the leases of such as will expire with the current year 1244, or September next, should be advertized from September 1837 to 30th April 1838, and thence forwarded annually from the 1st of May.

CONSULTATION, TUESDAY, 6TH JUNE, 1837.

APOCH SINGH VERSUS MR. J. HENDERSON, INDIGO PLANTER, MONGHYR.

Mr. J. Henderson, of Lipwonee Factory near Monghyr, on the 12th January 1836, addressed Mr. Officiating Deputy Collector A. Lang, acknowledging receipt of his letter of the 6th of January of the same year, and in reply referred Mr. Lang to his letter of the 19th October 1835, respectfully soliciting that copy of Mr. Deputy Collector Pringle's Roobocarry in the case alluded to might be furnished, to enable him to lay the whole proceedings before the Governor-General in Council, and apprehending that such personal application should be deemed informal, his mookthar presented two formal petitions for such copy of the roobocarry as the record of the court will testify. To the time of writing the letter, however, his application had been refused, or at any rate not granted.

Mr. Henderson informed the Sudder Board through Mr. Lang, that he had since been legally advised not to refund the damages awarded to him by Mr. Deputy Collector Pringle, on the ground that the whole proceeding, which have since followed thereon, are most irregular and illegal, and contrary to the Regulation of Government on which the case was founded.

Before adopting ulterior measures against him, Mr. Henderson craved the Board of Revenue to revise the whole case, with the Regulation alluded to, particularly sections XV. and XVIII. wherein it is expressly enacted, that in all summary suits for revenue, the decision of the Judge or Collector is not applicable.

On the merits of the case Mr. Henderson also leaves to offer a remark for the Board's consideration.

Can (says Mr. Henderson) a British subject be dragged like a felon to a Mofussil Court, or jail, for a civil debt not due by him, without redress, such redress being granted in the first instance in the terms of the regulations, or laws of Government, but now withdrawn or refused by the Board of Revenue?

Is no solatium (asks Mr. Henderson) due to the aggrieved party, for such an illegal act? It is because (Mr. Henderson observed) he was legally advised in the affirmative, that he solicited the Board of Revenue to review the whole case before proceeding to an extremity against him.

If the Board conceive (Mr. Henderson went on to observe) the damages awarded to be excessive, that does not imply that no damages are due, and had the Board been pleased to modify and assess the same, he would have acquiesced.

Mr. Lang forwarded Mr. Henderson's communication to Mr. Commissioner Harding, of the Bhaugulpore division, and the latter gentleman in forwarding both to the Board said, that he had authorized Mr. Lang to furnish a copy of the proceedings required by Mr. Henderson, and concluded by observing that it was quite clear Mr. Henderson had no intention to refund the large sum so unjustifiably awarded to him by Mr. Pringle, unless compelled to do so.

The Board not having come to a decision on this case, Mr. Harding, on the 10th February last, again called the Board's attention to the subject in consequence of a petition having been presented to him by Apoch Singh.

No. 117.

To C. Harding, Esq., Officiating Commissioner of Revenue for the Division of Bhaugulpore.

Sir,—With reference to the letters from your office No. 140, 26th Jan'y, 1836, noted in the margin, relating to the appeal of Apoch Singh and others, from a decision against them under Regulation VIII. of 1830, I am directed by the Sudder Board of Revenue to communicate as follows.

2. It appears to the Board on a reconsideration of the circumstances of the case, that the orders issued on the 14th September 1835, reversing the award of the Deputy Collector of Monghyr, and directing Mr. Henderson to refund, were not within their competency. The petitioners must consequently be referred to the Civil Court for their remedy.

3. The time for appealing is indeed gone by; but you will explain to the parties that they have good grounds to shew why they failed to institute a regular suit in proper time, and may file a copy of the correspondence which has passed on the subject in proof of the cause of delay, and which if they apply for in the prescribed manner you will grant.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your most obedient humble servant,

Sudder Board of Revenue, the 6th June, 1837.

CONSULTATION—TUESDAY, 6th JUNE, 1837.

ORDERS OF THE BOARD ON THE EMBEZZLEMENTS IN THE MIDNAPORE TREASURY.

No. 99.

To H. RICKETTS, Esq., Commissioner of Revenue for the Division of Calcutta.

Miscellaneous Department.

Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 24 ultimo, No. 911, with its enclosures relative to the frauds and embezzlements in the Midnapore Collectorate, I am desired by the Sudder Board of Revenue to state as follows:—

2d. It appears that the Collector reports having enquired into the monthly Treasury accounts from the 1st May, 1835, to 29th June, 1836, into the inefficient balance account from 1821 and into the deposit account from 1827-8 to 1832-3.

3d. The first embezzlement referred to in the 4th paragraph of your letter, is stated to have occurred during the Treasury ship of Madonsooden Paul, and the others under Kishen Mohun Chowdree; but in this, and in all the subsequent items of embezzlement in which culpability is apparent, the Board desire to have it distinctly shewn, who was the Collector, and who was the Sherishtadar at the time of its occurrence.

4th. With respect to the Pensions, rupees 266-10-8, and rupees 16, mentioned in the 4th and 5th paragraphs, the Board request that you will issue orders for the prosecution, or otherwise of the fraudulent party as you deem expedient on a further enquiry; but it is to be presumed, that it is not as stated "pension paid twice," but pensions paid once, and charged twice; a view of the case which is supported by the subsequent explanation of its being an embezzlement, and that it has been the case of the Company's rupees 266-10-8 recovered from the Treasurer, the Collector adding, moreover, that that officer's brother would be committed to the Sessions to take his trial. The Board, however, conceive that the statement made is defective, since, if the brother be committed as a party to the crime, the Treasurer should also be committed to the Sessions as a principal, if alive, and discoverable, or if not it should be so stated.

5th. The rupees 1187 of illegal batta which has been recovered, should be carried to the credit of the parties from whom it has been wrongfully extorted, and which cannot be matter of much difficulty, as all the parties must have been discovered, and all particulars ascertained, before the fact could have been established of the illegal levy of batta of the defined extent. At the same time they observe, that the illegal exaction of batta, is as criminal as the embezzlement of a pension, and would equally, if established, require committal for trial at the Sessions. Yet the Collector does not advert to such a measure as in contemplation. Fuller information therefore, should be required as the collector has been far too brief on his marks on this point.

6th. Regarding the rupees 8741-6-1/2 mentioned in your 74 paragraph, the board require further report both for their information and that of the Government, which they request you will call for in detail from the collector, for if, as stated, the amount consists of sums passed by the civil auditor and accountant, which have been regularly due, and bona fide paid to the parties entitled to them, the treasurer not having entered receipts in his receipt book, is a blamable omission and nothing more. It appears, however, from the note on this item, receipts were taken and forwarded to the accountant, and the collector should explain why, before making a report, he did not ascertain from the parties, whose signatures are affixed to these receipts, whether the signatures attached to them were spurious or genuine. The same remarks as to the necessity for further information, apply also to the sums enumerated in your 8th, 9th, and 10th paragraphs, regarding which the collectors report is very incomplete; and the Board request, therefore, that you will require a full and circumstantial report to be furnished of these amounts, detailing the full particulars of each item of which they are informed, and stating who were the collector and sherishtadar at the time of their occurrence, and whether any of the omrah directly or indirectly participated in the embezzlements and malpractice, and if so why they are not dismissed or suspended.

7th. With respect to the amount rupees 254-9-9½ in the last mentioned paragraph, I am directed to say that you ought to have made the collector fully explain before you reported on it. In this single case the responsibility of the collector who was in charge of the effect at the time the malversation occurred, is adverted to; whereas it should have been pointed out in each case, whether or not the collector is responsible, and in like manner with regard to the sherishtadar. In this instance it is not stated to whom siccas were issued instead of Company's rupees, nor how it happened that all other sums which were paid from the treasury, between the 26th October, and 19th March, except the small amount, were correctly discharged in Company's rupees, as that circumstance would prove wilfulness on the part of the treasurer, and is more necessary to look to them, allowing the treasurer to plead that he received no orders from Mr. Staniforth. Should he have paid away any sums in company's rupees during that period, he is self convicted of falsehood.

8th. The Board are happy to find that the rupees 379-2-6 mentioned in your 11th paragraph, have been recovered in full.

9th. Paragraph 12th of your letter, refers to rupees 564-15-9 as sums ordered but not credited, and requires further and more particular report, when the investigation shall have been complete, the present report being altogether premature. The Board with reference to the extract appended to your letter now under reply, beg to refer you to their Circular No. 27 of the 27th August 1832, on the subject which furnishes a much more efficient check than the one proposed by you. And they therefore request that you will ascertain and report whether the orders therein laid down have been attended to in the several offices subordinate to you, and if not, that you will require the reason of their being neglected.

10th. The Board approve of Mr. Bayley's being employed thoroughly to investigate the inefficient balance account, and they expect he will do justice to this enquiry, having a favorable opinion of his ability and industry.

11th. The system alluded to in paragraph 14 of your letter now under reply, has been discovered to prevail in the 24 Pergannahs, and other collectorates, and the omrah can, and will only attempt to carry money paid by one landholder to the credit of another, when the collector is inert and inefficient. It is not as Mr. Donnelly supposes, the zemindars not taking dukhallas only, which forms a fund of this nature, it arises from the collector's not knowing what is going on in his office, not having any one individual there who cares to give him information, not being easily accessible to all representations that may be offered to him, and not being well known as indisposed to shelter native officers who are accused with any semblance of truth from immediate enquiry. If the Collector have deservedly a reputation for these good qualities, no such frauds will be successfully practised by his native officers, for if attempted they will be immediately known, and enquired into, and the consciousness of the certainty of such a result, will do more to deter from dishonesty, than any thing else that can be devised. The Board concur with you in opinion that it would possibly not be attended with any beneficial result adequate to repay the cost and trouble, were the Collector's suggestion to be acted upon. Should, however, any zemindar petition to the effect that revenue paid by him has been credited to another, an enquiry must of course be made upon the petitions.

12th. The Board observe, that what you state in the 15th paragraph of your letter is not clearly reconcilable with your own representations on the subject in the succeeding paragraph; neither is it in accordance with the Collector's statement. The state of the accounts as exhibited in the paragraphs 5 to 7 of the Collector's report, urgently demands the most full and particular scrutiny, no less to discover the circumstances of each fraudulent transaction for the redress of the wronged, and preventing the recurrence of a similar evil, than to bring the offenders who may be convicted to punishment.

13th. The Board consider that in examining the accounts the merely contrasting Chuhians and Dechillas can do little good. The Collector must have the Tongees, Jumma Wasil Bakars, Seerhs and Kutteans and interest accounts daily collected and compared, and he should be allowed the extra establishment he solicits for the purpose, with the aid of which there is little doubt of the accounts being thoroughly examined in a much shorter period than he anticipates.

14th. The Board observe that the Collector has appointed Puddoo Lachun (the individual you recommended to be employed in tracing the frauds in the office) as Sherishtadar, and this native gentleman should be informed that his continuance in office, will depend on his zealously exerting himself to expose all the imperfections which his intelligence and experience will enable him to do, provided the inclination keep pace with the ability. At the same time no exertions will avail should any native remain in the office, who has been concerned directly or indirectly or is dependent on any one so concerned with the preparation of the Collector's accounts during any part of the period that these malpractices have prevailed. If any individual remain in office whose interest it is to frustrate enquiry, every impediment that he can contrive will be put in force to delay or prevent the scrutiny, and the Board are desirous, therefore, that you should give the Collector a carte blanche to suspend immediately any officer he may be desirous of removing.

15th. The Collector states, that if he be considered admissible to place the accounts of the "Tehsil Duffar" in a healthy state, "they must be examined from the close of 1236 to the close of 1242, and that for this purpose an extra establishment of 10 accountants at 10 rupees per month, with a superintendent at 25, will be necessary for one year, "even to complete a summary enquiry." In the 19th paragraph of your letter, you express yourself averse to the undertaking for reasons stated, and do not think it would tend to any satisfactory result. Previous to deciding on the point, the Board would wish to be put in possession of the result of the further enquiries ordered by yourself and those now directed, especially on the items referred to in paragraphs 15, 17 and 18 of your report, and paragraph 6 of Mr. Donnelly's, which require a thorough sifting, not of course omitting the item of 11,037 entered as due in the Office Towjee of 1238 and 39 and omitted in that of 1240.

16th. The character of the government is implicated as often as its officers allow such frauds as these now under review with their long train of gross injustice to oppress and harass the people, and too great indignation cannot be evinced at such perversions of power, nor too much anxiety displayed to correct and redress them as well as to prevent them in future. If it were otherwise, the people would deservedly consider our government as indifferent to official respectability, as those individuals who perpetrate such offences. These considerations, therefore, the Board hope will have the due weight in inducing you to use your best exertions, and to instruct the Collector most strictly to procure full, complete and circumstantial statements of all these items of embezzlement so as to enable government to visit the culpable parties with the punishment due to their offences, and to do full and ample justice to such as have suffered by their perpetration.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obdt. servt.

CONSULTATION, — TUESDAY, 6th JUNE, 1837.

CIRCULAR NO. 48, CONSTRUCTION OF SECTION XIII: REGULATION II OF 1819.

To the Commissioner of Revenue for the Division of
Miscellaneous Department,

Sir, — I am directed to forward for the information and guidance of yourself, and all your subordinates, copies of correspondence as per margin, connected with the construction by

2d. You and your subordinates will observe that the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal enjoins the necessity for great care, regularity and tenderness of proceeding being observed in the enforcement of the orders now promulgated, in order that wilful contumacy may alone be subjected to so heavy a penalty, as the law in question imposes.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your obedient Servant,

Sudder Board of Revenue, Fort William, 6th June, 1837.

To R. D. MANGLES, Esq.

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

Revenue Department, Fort William.

Miscellaneous Department.

Sir, — Under instructions from the Sudder Board of Revenue, I have the honor to forward for submission to the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal the accompanying letter and enclosures from the Commissioner of Patna No. 114, dated 30th May last.

2d. The case to which the Commissioner refers is that of certain petitioners, proprietors of Mouza Ruheempore, Rowneeah Pergunnah Shahapore munner, Zillah Patna, and of a resumed Deara Durveshpore, in the same district. The liability of the Deara to assessment has, it appears, been under investigation, according to Regulation II of 1819 ever since February 1826, and the result after a delay of eight years, has been a decision in favor of Government, passed on the 7th February 1834. Pending the investigation, the Deara was, it seems, attached apparently under Section XIII of the Regulation quoted and the attachment continued till the termination of the suit, the proceeds being credited to Government in the Collector's Office under the head of profit and loss.

3d. Previous to the decision of this suit under Regulation II of 1819, the petitioners failed to pay the Revenue of Mouzah Ruheempore, upon which a balance had accumulated amounting with interest and penalty on the 18th January 1834, to rupees 1,518-4-18 3, this default, was wilful on the part of the petitioners, and was justified by them on the ground of a balance at their credits in the Collector's Treasury on account of collections, in the attached Deara.

4th. The Collector of Patna sold Mouzah Ruheempore for the realization of its balance, and the sale was annulled by Mr. Commissioner Cuthbert. The suit under Regulation II of 1819 having been decided, it is now necessary to balance accounts with the petitioners to pay to them their due on account of the Collectors in the Deara during the attachment, and to adjust at the same time the balance due to Government. For this end, which involves the payment of money credited to government, the sanction is required of the Right Honorable the Governor of Bengal.

5th. The Commissioner, proceeding apparently upon the assumption, that the Collectors in the Deara, should have been paid to the petitioners, or credited to them in their revenue for Ruheempore at the time they demanded it, has transmitted an account in which interest and penalty appear both for and against government, and a balance is thus made out against government of Rs 1,237-5-12-3, he has recommended at the same time that interest and penalty should be raised on both sides, and the amount adjusted on the principal sum; that is to say, from Government to petitioners on account of collections in the Deara from 1236 to 1241

Fussilee..... 1,997-8-10

From petitioners to Government amount of Revenue of Ruheempore up to Poss 1241 1,516

Balance due to petitioners..... 481-8-10

6th. The opinion of the Board on this case is as follows:

7th. That considering the long delay in the investigation of the suit under Regulation II, 1819, a delay owing only to the fault of the revenue authorities, and but for the occurrence of which the balance of collections in the attached Deara would have been much sooner payable to the petitioners, and that the balance of Ruheempore might in such case not have occurred at all. It is much to be regretted that this sale should have ever taken place, and that such sale (since annulled) though not absolutely illegal, was harsh and inconsiderate in a high degree.

8th. That the petitioners were nevertheless not justified by law, in withholding the Revenue in Ruheempore upon the ground of the attachment of the Deara. That attachment, and the consequent loss of interest on collections in the Deara, were legal penalties for non-production of papers. The petitioner would not claim, and the collector could not make adjustment of the account of collections, and refund of proceeds until after the termination of the suit, and not even then without the sanction of high authority. By consequence the Government, on the one hand, is entitled under the rules then existing to interest and penalty on this arrear,* and the petitioners on the other, can not have any title to interest, not to speak of penalty on the amount of collections in the Deara.

Section 13, Regulation 11, 1819.

the account of collections, and refund of proceeds until after the termination of the suit, and not even then without the sanction of high authority. By consequence the Government, on the one hand, is entitled under the rules then existing to interest and penalty on this arrear,* and the petitioners on the other, can not have any title to interest, not to speak of penalty on the amount of collections in the Deara.

6th. Considering, however, the hardships imposed upon the petitioners by the long delay in the disposal of the suit under Regulation 11, 1819, and the omission on the part of the Collector to notice as he ought to have done their repeated applications on the subject, the Board are inclined to recommend that the adjustment be made by charging interest (without penalty) on both sides of the account as follows ;

Due from Government to petitioners as amount of net collections on account of attachment Para. from 1236 to 1241 F.S. with interest at 12 per Cent.	2,857 7 6 3½
Due from petitioners to Govt. as arrear of Revenue in Mouzah Ruheempore from 1236 to 1241 F.S. with interest 12 per cent.	1,998 5 10
Balance due to petitioners	859 1 16 3¼

10th. They accordingly solicit the sanction of the Right Honorable the Governor to an adjustment upon this principle.

11th. I am directed to take this opportunity of observing that no orders of Government are extant on the subject of the refund of collections (after decision of suits) in lands attached under Section 13 Regulation 11, 1819. When this severe law was enacted, the Board of Revenue consisted of several members, and as it appears to them to be much too arbitrary and unpopular an authority to be vested in a single Commissioner, they respectfully recommended that its exercise in future be prohibited by the Governor of Bengal unless after reference to, and under the express Sanction of this Board.

I have &c.

Sudder Board of Revenue, Fort William, 20th Aug. 1836.

To F. J. HALLIDAY, Esq.,
Secretary, Sudder Board of Revenue,

Revenue.

SIR,—I am directed by the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 20th instant, with its enclosures, and to communicate as follows in reply.

2d. It appears to His Lordship that both the Commissioner of Patna and the Board have put a construction upon Section 13, Regulation 11. of 1819, as affecting the case of the proprietors of the Deara Durveshpore, which that enactment will not bear. He gathers from this law, as quoted in the margin*, that it was the

*The Board of Revenue, or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, shall be competent to direct the lands

to be immediately attached, and the rents collected on account of Government, in the same manner as if the lands were the property of Government. In such case, however, it shall still be the duty of the collector to make a full inquiry into the title of the holder of the lands, and to transmit his proceedings to the Board, who will decide whether the lands shall be deemed permanently liable to assessment.

to be immediately attached, and the temporary assessment already realized under the attachment.

3d. If this view of the law be correct, the proprietors of Durveshpore can have no claim on the score of right, other than to that consideration to which they may appear to be equitably entitled on account of the extreme length of the period during which the Deara was held under attachment pending the suit under Regulation 11. of 1819, unless, indeed, it can be shewn, (which has not yet been attempted, the landholders having stood their plea of right) that there was any undue harshness in the original attachment. The Board will be pleased to make enquiries upon this point, and also whether with reference to the admission of the Collector stated in paragraph 2 of Mr. Commissioner Money's report of the 30th of May last, the proprietors of the Deara, ever, and if ever, at what time, offered to produce the papers on the default of delivery of which the lands were attached, or whether they at any period, stated any sufficient cause for their non-production.

4th. If the recusancy were wilful, and persevered in, the proprietors have only their own obstinate defiance of the law to blame for the attachment of the Deara, though it is true the punishment thus inflicted has been rendered more severe by the delay in the adjudication of the case. On the other hand, it must be borne in mind, that (the eventual decree being in favor of the claim of Government to assess) if they had complied in 1828 with the lawful requisition of the Collector, they would have held the land free of revenue to the 7th of August 1834. Unless it can be shewn that the attachment ought not, in equity and reason to have been made, the Government cannot be bound by considerations of that nature to bear men harmless from the consequences of their own contempt of the law. From the information at present before him, it appears to the Governor that the parties in question, have deliberately run their chance of eventually obtaining the Deara free of assessment (in consequence of the absence of proof on the part of Government from the withheld papers) against the loss which attachment would inflict upon them, and, if so, they can have no just cause to complain of the result.

See Section 11, Regulation 11. 1819, as regard alluvial lands.

Deara free of assessment (in consequence of the absence of proof on the part of Government from the withheld papers) against the loss which attachment would inflict upon them, and, if so, they can have no just cause to complain of the result.

5th. Still, if any case can be made out for the proprietors of the Deara on the ground of indulgence, the Governor will be prepared to give it his favorable consideration, not only because the tardy decision of the suit has deprived the parties of the advantages which they would otherwise have derived from Malikanah, &c. and, probably, of the six months' grace given in ordinary cases of Resumption, but because both intention of the Legislature which framed it, that the collections made from the lands during the period of attachment should belong absolutely to Government, and that whether the Board's or thereafter Civil Court's decision might be in favor of, or against the claim of Government to assessment. This construction of the passage, underlined in the annexed extract, is borne out by the manner in which the term "humanity" is used at the latter end of the Clause, in implied antithesis, as it appears to the Governor, to the temporary assessment already realized under the attachment.

between the 7th of Febry. 1834 when the decree of Resumption was passed, and the 7th of August of the same year, when it became subject to the payment of Revenue.

the proprietor even speaking of the right of the claimants to demand interest, &c. upon the amount of such collections, in the event of Government exacting the same upon the balances due from the permanently settled estate of the same persons.

6th. With reference to the remark at the commencement of paragraph 11 of your letter, that "no orders of Government are extant on the subject of the refund of collections (after decision of suit) in the lands attached under Section 13, Regulation 11, of 1819," I am instructed to request that the Board will report whether such refunds have ever been made under the orders of the late or present Board of Commissioners, or by the Collectors themselves.

7th. The Governor does not think it desirable to deprive the Commissioners of Revenue of the discretionary power which they possess under the law above cited, as representatives of the late Board of Revenue. It can only be exercised upon the report of a subordinate officer, in whose haste or harshness, if such be, the Commissioner is not likely to participate.

8th. The enclosures of your letter are herewith returned; copies having been kept for record.

I am, &c.

To R. D. MANGLES, Esq.

Secretary to the Government of Bengal,

Revenue Department, Fort William.

Miscellaneous Department.

Sir,—I am directed by the Sudder Board of Revenue to forward for the consideration of the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal the accompanying letter No. 251. A. of the 5th November last, written by the Commissioner of Patna in answer to a call made upon him by the Board in consequence of your communications, No. 1224, of the 30th August.

2d. His Lordship will observe from Mr. Tucker's present communication, that after the first call upon the proprietors to produce their title deeds which took place on the 23d February 1826, a delay was suffered by the Collector of three years, that at the conclusion of the period, the lands were suddenly attached; and that after the attachment another interregnum occurred of no less than five years.

3d. Now these facts leave the Board nearly certain that the proceedings adverted to were directed not by the Collector, but by his Omlah for their particular purposes. For it is not possible to suppose that the European functionary, if he had been aware of the issue of the first notice, would not have followed it up with punctuality, instead of allowing the case to be neglected for three years, and still less can it be imagined, that the Collector, if cognizant of attachment, would have committed such injustice as is involved in the subsequent delay of five years.

5th. The non-production, therefore, of the documents by the proprietors, cannot be looked upon as an act of contumacy, it was the natural result of their acknowledgment of the Omlah's influence, and their utter uncertainty as to what might or might not ensue in the case. The proprietors, it is to be inferred, were from first to last the prey of the Omlah, and they could not believe that there was any serious, or at least any immediate intention to investigate and decide the suit.

5th. To visit, therefore, with such penalties as are involved in the construction suggested by your letter, an omission so caused, would in the judgment of the Board, be in the highest degree harsh, and inadvisable, and had even every step of the Collector's proceedings been in the strictest sense regular and legal, the Board would most strongly have urged the claim of the Proprietors to consideration. But it will be seen from the report, that so far from being regular and legal, the proceedings of the Collector in the whole matter of the attachment, were irregular and at variance with the clause upon which they are said to be founded, and as such clause cannot in the opinion of the Board be too strictly construed, the proprietors are, they think, fully entitled to all the benefit which the Collector's infringement of the law can give them.

*It is also to be observed, that the Collector omitted to legalize the attachment, whatever might be its effects since he did not apply for and obtain the sanction of the Commissioner of Revenue.

in other words, they are entitled of right, under any construction of the law, (because they would assuredly find it with interest in a Court of Justice) to the refund with interest, of all collections since the attachment, and the Board respectfully recommend that this refund be made without loss of time.

6th. As the Board are not as yet in possession of materials to enable them to answer the query contained in your 6th paragraph, the present address would have concluded with the above recommendation, but for construction of clause 1st Section 13, Regulation 11 1819, suggested, rather than made on the 2d and following paragraphs of your letter of the 30th August, and upon which the Board imply that their opinion is demanded.

7th. Section 7 to 14 of Regulation II of 1819, treat of the measures to be resorted to by collectors for enforcing the production and authentication of documents, title deeds, or accounts; and of obtaining all other such information necessary for the decision of the first as proprietors, occupiers, and managers, are alone able to furnish; and the sections quoted, form accordingly a connected chain of law, applicable to the different classes of occupiers or managers, and to various degrees of urgency or contumacy.

First. The Collector may summon the proprietor (or claimant) of the land with its accounts, and may examine on oath the putwarees, gomastas, or other agents with their accounts.

Second. If the latter should neglect the summons, or falsify the accounts, or give false evidence regarding them, the Collector may punish by imprisonment in jail until the accounts may be produced, or he may commit for forgery or perjury.

Third. If the proprietor (or claimant) refuse or neglect to furnish the accounts, and information required of him as above, the collector, with the sanction of the Commissioner) may attach the estate and make collections in it on the part of, i. e. through, the officers of Government so long as it remains under attachment. But as he is now in possession of information regarding assets, boundaries, demands, and payments, and other particulars, for want of which he has resorted to attachment, it is provided that he shall proceed to complete his inquiry (the means being now within his reach) and decide whether the land be liable to permanent assessment or not.

Fourth. It may happen that information is needed, beyond what mere occupation of the lands can give opportunity of acquiring. Accordingly, the Regulation goes on to enact, that should the proprietors contumaciously (a word now first used) continue to withhold any particular documents required of him, the Commissioner may fine him daily, till such documents are produced, but this fine must not be realized without the consent of Government.

Fifth. Should the zemindar openly resist the authority of the Revenue Officers, the Commissioner may fine him to the extent of Rs. 500 on his own authority, but not more, without the consent of Government.

8th. Thus, as it appears to the Board, the mode of obtaining such necessary information regarding assets, rents, extents, under tenures, boundaries, and similar particulars as may be refused by the proprietor, is declared to be attachable, which by placing the Collector in the same relation to the Mhar as that lately held by the proprietor, enables him to obtain local information without the proprietors intervention, while the production of title deeds, the authentication of past accounts, and other requisites of a like kind, are to be enforced by fine and imprisonment. The law, therefore, of these sections has two distinct parts or heads, which to be correctly construed, require to be separately considered.

9th. This being the Board's view of the law, taken as a whole in connection with its object, they cannot concur in the construction of a part of it (Clause I, Sec. 13) which is suggested in your letter.

The following is the clause.

"If the holder of any lands in regard to which the collector shall have been authorized by the Board of Revenue or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, to institute the inquiry described by Section 7 of this Regulation, shall refuse or neglect to furnish the accounts relating to such lands within the period specified in the collector's requisition, the Board of Revenue, or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, shall be competent to direct the lands to be immediately attached; and the rents collected on account of Government, in the same manner as if the lands were the property of Government. In such cases, however, it shall still be the duty of the collector to make a full enquiry into the title of the holder of the lands and to transmit his proceedings to the Board, who will decide whether the lands shall be deemed permanently liable to assessment."

10. Now the words "and the rents collected on account of Government in the same manner as if the lands were the property of Government," can only mean that the rents are to be collected as in khas mehals by the direct agency of the officers of Government; it cannot be mentioned in the absence of express and direct declaration to that effect, that the rents are to be carried to the credit of Government as a forfeiture. For,

First. This would be subjecting the same person for the same offence to two distinct penalties or fines, viz. to a fine or forfeiture to the extent of the whole assets of his estate for an indefinite number of years; and also to a fine of a certain sum per day, an intension which it is impossible to attribute to the legislature.

Second. The attachment may be ordered and the assets realized and credited to any extent by the mere authority of the Commissioner. But the daily fine, though it may be imposed by the Commissioner, cannot be realized save by the authority of Government, so that the Commissioner would have, under such a construction as that now in question, authority in himself without higher reference—to fine a zemindar any number of thousands of rupees per annum for any number of years for a given offence, and at the same time, and for the same, or a similar offence, be unable to realize a fine of ten rupees, without the consent of the Governor-General, a conclusion which the Board submit could not have been in the contemplation of the Legislature.

Thirdly.—Under the above construction a Commissioner would have authority to punish an offence, however contumacious, and often involuntary, by the imposition of a fine amounting to any number of thousand of rupees as above noted. Yet when the offence becomes more certain, and obvious and open, and wilful, and urgent, he cannot impose a fine of a higher amount than rupees 500, which also, in the opinion of the Board, could not have been intended by the Legislature.

11th. In short the very strictness and caution with which the penal parts of the enactment are limited, the extent of fine laid down, the reference to the highest authority necessitated, all forbid the idea that the attachment clause had ever the purpose now attributed to it. Can it be supposed that less restriction would have been imposed on the Revenue officers in such a clause so construed, than in a mere matter of fine.

12. His Lordship has remarked the antithesis between the expressed words "permanent assessment" and the supposed temporary assessment of the Mehal. The Board cannot acknowledge the antithesis: the very object of the attachment is the speedy decision of the case, and by consequence either the restoration of the land to the owner, or its permanent assessment. The collector should immediately, if possible, on the attachment enquire into, and decide the suit. If the title be found good, he restores it in fact to the owner, if bad, he assesses it permanently. This is the intent of the law which never contemplated delay, or at least never encouraged it. Under neither mode of decision is there in the Board's opinion any room for temporary assessment, or for the supposition of a temporary assessment: the law merely contemplating a very limited attachment of a specific purpose.

13. Were it not, indeed, for the words "and the rents" collected on account of Government, the construction in question to rest upon with those words it has an apparent support. For the meaning of this clause must like that of all legal enactments be deduced not from an isolated word or sentence, but the entire context, and the whole law must be read together, before a construction can be made upon any part of it. The law could not, in defiance of equity, require a double satisfaction; yet if the contested interpretation be upheld, a double, nay a treble satisfaction would be demanded for the same offence or omission. Again, had no specific penalties been appropriated to the given offence, they might have been inferred with some show of justice, from the wording of the act; but a thing expressed in law, does away with a tacit admission to the same purport. The law does not say that the collections are to be restored to the owner's nor does it specifically state that it is to belong to Government. It is, therefore, inferred that they are to be forfeited as a penalty for the owner's offence. But the same law prescribes a distinct penalty for that offence, the inference is consequently annihilated.

14th. As the Board construe the law, an individual might ~~and~~ ^{periculo} refuse to furnish either the information or papers required; and subject his estate to attachment as the means which would at the same time enable the collector to obtain the intelligence withheld, and divest the proprietor of all opportunity of injuring the interest which Government would possess in the estate, in the event of its being ultimately declared liable to assessment; even this degree of coercion, when it is considered that it is to compel an individual to produce proof, hostile to his own interests; can only find justification in the difficulties of the case, and the peculiar jurisdiction exercised, and is not at all analogous to common judicial proceedings.

15th. Under any circumstances, however, the Board would deeply regret to see such heavy penalty inflicted by inference, and individual private rights forfeited by implication; there is, to say the least of it, great room for doubt and of that doubt, the party liable to suffer, should have all the benefit.

16th. Taking all these circumstances into consideration, the Board are decidedly of opinion, that the intent of the law, was merely to place the Collector in possession of the Mohal for a fine, and thereby give him facility in the investigation of the case, and also to prevent on the part of the proprietor, or claimant, practices tending to the deterioration, sequestration, or alienation of the land pending the decision of the suit. That the collections were always to be refunded after termination of the proceedings, and that the occupants to keep possession for a period of six months after the decision in compliance with circular order 22d February, 1831, they entertain no doubt and they therefore solicit His Lordship to reconsider this subject before a final construction is made.

Revenue.

Sir,—In continuation of my letter No. 250 of the 21st February, and in reply of yours of the 2d of January last, I am directed by the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal, to forward to you for the purpose of its being laid before the Board, the accompanying copy of the correspondence with the Court of Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, as noted in the margin*.

* To Register Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, dated 24th January, 1837.

From ditto ditto 10 March 1837.

2nd. His Lordship has given that attention to your letter above cited, which is justly due to the ability with which the opinions of the Board have been stated; but the purport of Sec. 13, Regulation 11. of 1819, still appears to him to be so plain by that indicated in my letter of the 30th of August last, that he is unable to yield his assent to the argument urged by them in contravention of that opinion. The Board will observe that the majority of the Sudder Court concur in the view taken by the Governor to this extent, "that if the attached lands be finally adjudged liable to assessment, Government are entitled to the mesne profits during attachment, but they hold on the other hand that if the lands be declared exempt from public assessment, the proprietors have a just claim against Government for the mesne profits which accrued whilst the lands were under the charge of the Revenue authorities.

3d. His Lordship is willing that this construction should regulate the practice in all future cases. The Board will not fail to impress upon all subordinate officers, the necessity for great care, regularity and tenderness of proceeding in order that wilful contumacy may alone be subjected to so heavy a penalty as the law in question imposes.

NOTE BY MR. D. C. SMYTH.

The question referred by Government, is simply whether in cases where a final decision may be in favor of the right of Government, to assess lands attached, and also where lands so attached, may be eventually decreed not liable to assessment, the mesne profits, pending the attachment, belong under Section 13, Regulation II. 1819, to Government, or to the proprietors.

On a full consideration of the subject, I am of opinion, provided the attachment be legally made, that in cases where the final decision, may be in favor of Government, it rests, entirely with the Right Honourable the Governor, to pass such orders, regarding the mesne profits pending the attachment as he may deem proper.

In cases again, where the lands may be eventually pronounced by the final decision of the Revenue Authorities not liable to assessment, I am of opinion, that in justice, equity, and good conscience, the proprietors are entitled when the attachment is removed, to have a full and fair account rendered to them by the Collector, of all receipts and disbursements, during the period of attachment, and that the mesne profits of the estate should be paid to them.

Without examining the papers, it is not possible to say whether in this case, the attachment was or was not legally made, and whether the proprietors of Durveshpore have been the victims of a conspiracy on the part of the Omrah, as is supposed by the Board, or whether, the infliction of the prescribed penalty by Government would be harsh or unadvisable, are points on which I conceive, this Court are not called upon to give any opinion.

NOTE BY MR. W. BRADDON.

Whether lands attached under the provisions of clause 1, Section 13, Regulation II, of 1819, be eventually adjudged to be liable to assessment or otherwise, I conceive that the collections during the period of attachment do not belong absolutely to Government. Had it been so intended surely it would have been stated in plain and explicit terms that the collections would become forfeited to the state. It may also be presumed that the order of the Board would have been declared subject to the confirmation of Government as we find it laid down in clause 3, of the same section, that the Board are not competent in such cases to levy any fine (however small) they may impose upon a proprietor or farmer of land for neglecting or refusing to attend the Collector, or to furnish any documents or accounts required by that authority, until it is confirmed by Government. It seems to me that the words "on account of Government" in the clause in question, mean no more than "on the part of Government." That I am not singular in this opinion is evident from the Persian versions of the clause, the part of which bearing upon the point may be rendered in English "the Board of Revenue or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, shall be competent to direct the attachment of the lands and appointment of a person to make the collections on the part of Government in the same manner as collections of other lands the property of Government are made."

I lay little or rather no stress at all upon the use of the word "permanently" at the latter end of the clause, as when rent free lands are adjudged to be liable to assessment they necessarily become permanently so liable, and as section 21, Regulation II, of 1819, was in force, the Board of Revenue or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, could not legally declare lands liable to assessment without having before them the proceedings of the Collector after he had completed his enquiry, and recorded his opinion as to the liability of the lands to assessment or otherwise.

NOTE BY MR. W. MONEY.

I concur with Mr. Smyth. Nothing to my mind, can be more clear than that part of clause I, section 13, regulation II, of 1819, which says that the "Board shall be competent to direct the lands to be immediately attached," and the rent collected on account of Government, in the same manner as if the lands were the property of Government, and I am decidedly of opinion that, when the final decision has been passed in favor of Government, the rents which may have been collected during the previous period of attachment, belong absolutely to the state.

I am confirmed in this interpretation of the clause in question by the consideration of the fact, that Regulation II of 1829, cancels section 19: Regulation XIX and section 14: Regulation XXXVII of 1793, which disallowed the claim of Government to any part of the Collections made from rent-free lands previous to the date of the first decree, adjudging them subject to the payment of Revenue.

It appears to me that the Sudder Board of Revenue are quite in error when they observe in paragraph 10 of the letters of Government of the 2d ultimo, with reference to clauses I and II, section 13, that "it cannot be maintained in the absence of express and direct, declaration to that effect, that the rents are to be carried" to the credit of Government, for this would be subjecting the same person for the same offence, to two distinct penalties or fines, viz. to a fine or forfeiture to the extent of the whole assets of the estate for an indefinite number of years, and also to a fine of a certain sum per day." Now it appears to me that the intention of the Legislature was evidently to give the Board the option of proceeding either under clause I or III, but not of proceeding under both at the same time. If the Board preferred imposing upon the party a fine under clause III, then they must abstain from acting under the first clause, and vice versa.

NOTE BY MR. S. R. HUTCHINSON.

The question at issue is whether the provisions of clause I section 13 Regulation II of 1819 give to the state the absolute right to confiscate and appropriate the collections, made from lands attached in consequence of the holder having refused or neglected to furnish the account required by the Revenue authorities.

According to my view of the law in question, the terms of the clause quoted do not establish this right, and I am disposed with Mr. Braddon in thinking that the words which give rise to the present reference, namely, on account of Government, in the same manner as if the lands were the property of Government only, mean that the revenue shall be managed on the part of Government, or in other words by khas Tehseel pending the investigation; for if the tenure be subsequently declared valid, it would be manifestly unjust to deprive the holder of the income for so inconsiderable an offence. The word permanently in the last line of the clause, has reference solely to the final liability to assessment or otherwise, cannot be cited as furnishing an argument in support of the Government to the intermediate collections.

My reasons for arriving at the above conclusion are founded first on the total absence of any explicit enactment, or provision, declaratory of the absolute right of the state to the so-made collections, and second on general analogy and the express tenor and spirit of our penal laws, neither of which warrant the infliction of such a heavy and unequal penalty for so inconsiderable an offence.

* Note In one case of attachment the collections may be one rupee per annum, in another one thousand, and the offence is not greater in the one, than in the other.

Had it been the intention of the Legislature to assert an absolute right to such Collections, the law would, or ought to have been explicit or specific on the subject. I maintain that its silence establishes the constructions, that is such intention was entertained, and bars any claim on the part of Government founded on the assumed right. Moreover, the Persian version of the particular law, only lays it down that the collections shall be made on the part of the Government; now as there is no assertion of right to these collections in this version to which only the natives can refer, it follows that the defaulter could not have contemplated the extent and nature of the penalty denounced, if the construction now put on that clause by Government be the correct one.

Further, the Regulation II of 1819 no where provides for withdrawal of attachment and the return of collections at any intermediate stage of the proceedings; but as the cause of attachment was the non-obedience of the requisition of the revenue authorities. I think, in the absence of any rule to the contrary, the attaching authority is competent both to withdraw attachment, and render an account of the collections on the defaulter's appearing and shewing satisfactory cause for his neglect; as the tenure of invalids; is only declared liable to assessment after the final decision of the Revenue authorities by clause II section 21 of the same Regulation, the terms of clause III of XIII bear me out in this as the daily fine imposed under it, is only until the default is supplied.

It further appears to me that the Sudder Board have mistaken the true meaning of the clauses I and III of Section 13, quoted, in applying their provisions indiscriminately to one and the same case, and hence inferring that the law demanded a double penalty for one offence, whereas, in my opinion, the provisions of clause I, apply to one class, namely, holders of a tenure, while those of the III relate to proprietors and farmers whom the Revenue authorities may summon under sections X and XI of the same Regulation.

(Signed) I. R. HUTCHINSON.

February 20, 1837.

NOTE BY MR. F. C. SMITH.

In my opinion the provision of section 13 Regulation II of 1819, namely the attachment of lands, and the imposition of daily fines, are intended to compel the holders and other proprietors of lands suspected to have possession rent free on invalid tenures, to produce the deeds by which they possess their lands, and consequently if they compel the Government or Revenue authorities who possess the power of enforcing those provisions, to this extremity, the rents, collected according to this section become forfeited to Government, whether the title of the holders be on enquiry ascertained to be valid or invalid. The imposition of double penalties is not, I conceive, inconsistent with the usual penal provisions of the Regulation; for besides other examples, interest and penalty in cases of arrears of Revenue are exacted from defaulters, and they both prove in their nature and in their effects fines to Government.

In the present case, the attachment of the lands in question, not having been sanctioned by competent superior authority, was clearly illegal, and the rents collected under this illegal attachment, belong to the holder of the said lands, without reference to the validity of the deeds. I take it to be only consonant with justice and equity to consider the proprietor of a land tenure, supposed to be rent free on illegal tenure, to be the lawful owner of it, and entitled to the rents or proceeds, till proved not to be the legal owner. If the contrary view be taken, then the Government must be entitled to the mesne profit of such estate aborigine before and after the attachment; and as the claims of Government are not barred by the lapse of time, the Government must be considered in that case rightful claimants of the mesne profit, from the commencement of the holder's illegal possession: a claim too monstrous to be seriously made, I imagine, and impracticable if entertained.

Bengal Hurkaru, July 21.]

Our attention has been arrested by a correspondence this morning in the Hurkaru between the Board of Revenue and Government, which has recently been circulated for the information and guidance of the Commissioners. The subject of it is a reference from the Board in August, last year, for instructions as to the adjustment of an account with certain zemindars, owners of two estates, one of which had been sold for arrears of revenue under circumstances not only of great hardship, but, by admission of the Board, much injustice:—

"2d. The case to which the Commissioner refers, is that of certain petitioners, proprietors of Mouza Ruheempore, Rowneeah, Pergunnah Shahapore, Zillah Patna, and of a resumed Deara Durveshpore, in the same district. The liability of the Deara, to assessment has, it appears, been under investigation, according to Regulation II. of 1819, ever since February 1826, and the result, after a delay of eight years, has been a decision in favor of Government, passed on the 7th February 1834. Pending the investigation, the Deara was, it seems, attached apparently under Section XIII. of the Regulation quoted and the attachment continued till the termination of the suit, the proceeds being credited to Government in the Collector's Office under the head of profit and loss.

"3d. Previous to the decision of this suit under Regulation II. of 1819, the petitioner failed to pay the Revenue of Mouza Ruheempore, upon which a balance had accumulated, amounting with interest and penalty on the 18th January 1834, to rupees 1,518-4-18-3. This default was wilful on the part of the petitioners, and was justified by them on the ground of a balance at their credits in the Collector's Treasury on account of collections in the attached Deara.

"4th. The Collector of Patna sold Mouza Ruheempore for the realization of its balance, and the sale was annulled by Mr. Commissioner Cuthbert. The suit under Regulation II. of 1819, having been decided, it is now necessary to balance accounts with the petitioners, to pay to them their due on account of the collectios in the Deara during the attachment, and to adjust at the same time the balance due to Government. For this end, which involves the payment of money credited to Government, the sanction is required of the Right Hon'ble the Governor of Bengal."

In the statements which follow, the Board acknowledge that the amount in arrear for which the proprietors of Ruheempore were in default, was less than the balance due to them on account of the collections upon their estate under attachment, whether the account be adjusted upon the Commissioner's principle, or upon a different principle recommended by themselves; and consequently that the Ruheempore Mouza ought not to have been sold at all. Nevertheless, instead of suggesting an indemnity to the poor zemindars who had in their opinion been wrongfully sold out, their chary liberality was confined to a suggestion to remit the penalty on the arrears of Ruheempore and to charge and allow interest on both accounts:

"6th. The opinion of the Board on this case is as follows.

"7th. That considering the long delay in the investigation of the suit under Regulation II. 1819, a delay owing only to the fault on the revenue authorities, and but for the occurrence of which the balance of collection in the attached Deara would have been much sooner payable to the petitioners, and that the balance of Ruheempore might in such case not have occurred at all. It is much to be regretted that this sale should have ever taken place, and that such sale (since annulled) though not absolutely illegal, was harsh and inconsiderate in a high degree.

"8th. That the petitioners were nevertheless not justified by law, in withholding the revenue in Ruheempore upon the ground of the attachment of the Deara. That attachment, and the consequent loss of interest on collections in the Deara, were legal penalties for non production of papers. The could not make adjustment of the account of collections, and refund of proceeds until after the termination of the suit, and not even then without the sanction of high authority. In consequence the Government, on the one hand, is entitled under the rules then existing to interest and penalty on this arrear,* and the petitioners on the other, cannot have any title to interest, not to speak of penalty on the amount of collections in the Deara.

* It was of date previous to the Circular Orders of 24th February, 1835.

"9th. Considering, however, the hardships imposed upon that petitioner by the long delay in the disposal of the suit, under Regulation II. 1819, and the omission on the part of the Collector to notice as he ought to have done their repeated applications on the subject, the Board are inclined to recommend that the adjustment be made by charging interest (without penalty) on both sides of the account."

In the reply of Mr. Secretary Mangles, a desire is expressed, "if any case can be made out for the proprietors of the Deara on the ground of indulgence," to give it favorable consideration:

"Not only because the tardy decision of the suit has deprived the parties of the advantages which they would otherwise have derived from Malikanah, &c. and, probably, of the six months' grace given in ordinary cases of Resumption, but because both they and the Local Revenue authorities appear to have considered the attachment as nothing more than collection of the rents by Government, for the eventual benefit of the proprietors, Mr. Commissioner Tucker, even speaking of the right of the claimants to demand interest, &c. upon the amount of such collections, in the event of Government exacting the same upon the balances due from the permanently settled estate of the same persons."

But the Board are informed that the Governor of Bengal puts an interpretation very different from theirs upon the clause relative to attachments in the regulation cited at the end of their letter:

"2d. It appears to His Lordship that both the Commissioners of Patna and the Board have put a construction upon Section 13, Regulation II of 1819, as affecting the case of the proprietors of the Deara Durveshpore, which that enactment will not bear. He gathers from this law,

"The Board of Revenue, or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, shall be competent to direct the lands to be immediately attached, and the rents collected on account of Government, in the same manner as if the lands were the property of Government. In such case, however, it shall still be the duty of the Collector to make a full inquiry into the title of the holder of the lands, and to transmit his proceedings to the Board, who will decide whether the lands shall be deemed permanently liable to assessment."

as quoted in the margin", that it was the intention of the Legislature which framed it, that the collections made from the lands during the period of attachment should belong absolutely to Government, and that whether the Board's or thereafter Civil Court's decision might be in favor of, or against the claim of Government to assessment. This construction of the passage, unlinked in the annexed extract, is borne out by the manner in which the term "humanity" is used at the latter end of the Clause, in implied antithesis, as it appears to the Governor, to the temporary assessment already realized under the attachment.

To this the Board replied in a long letter, bearing the signature of Mr. Halliday as their Secretary, in which they ventured to point out the inconsistency of the new construction put upon the words referred to, with other penalties named in the same Regulation, and also the enormous disproportion of such a penalty as the absolute forfeiture of all the rents and profits of an estate under attachment, to the offence of refusing information of the production of title deeds. That the only motive for giving collectors the power of attachment was clearly as a means "for enforcing the production and authentication of documents, title deeds and accounts, and of obtaining all other such information necessary for the decision of the first, as proprietors, occupiers and managers, are alone able to furnish." That, moreover, the interpretation given in the letter of Government would inflict a severe punishment upon the petitioners in this case for the negligence of the Government functionaries in protracting the decision of their case, and consequently the attachment of the Deara for a long period of years, which delay, there was every reason to believe, had been owing to improper influence of the Amloh, while the knowledge of that influence was in some measure a justification for the refusal of the petitioners to produce their papers. The Board sum up their objections in the following paragraphs:

"8th. Thus it appears to the Board, the mode of obtaining such necessary information regarding assets, rents, extents, under tenures, boundaries, and similar particulars as may be refused by the proprietor is declared to be attachable, which by placing the Collector in the same relation to the Mhal as that lately held by the proprietor, enables him to obtain local information without the proprietor's intervention, while the production of title deeds, the authentication of past accounts, and other requisites of a like kind, are to be enforced by fine and imprisonment. The law, therefore, of these sections has two distinct parts or heads, which to be correctly construed require to be separately considered.

"9th. This being the Board's view of the law, taken as a whole in connection with its avowed object, they cannot concur in the construction of a part of it (Clause I, Section 13) which is suggested in your letter.

"The following is the Clause.

"If the holder of any lands in regard to which the Collector shall have been authorized by the Board of Revenue or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, to institute the inquiry described by Section 7 of this Regulation, shall refuse or neglect to furnish the accounts relating to such lands within the period specified in the Collector's requisition, the Board of Revenue, or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, shall be competent to direct the lands to be immediately attached, and the rents collected on account of Government, in the same manner as if the lands were the property of Government. In such cases, however, it shall still be the duty of the Collector to make a full enquiry into the title of the holder of the lands and to transmit his proceedings to the Board, who will decide whether the lands shall be deemed permanently liable to assessment.

"10th. Now the words "and the rent collected on account of Government in the same manner as if the lands were the property of Government," can only mean that the rents are to be collected as in khas mehals by the direct agency of the officers of Government; it cannot be mentioned in the absence of express and direct declaration to that effect, that the rents are to be carried to the credit of Government as a forfeitue. For,

First. This would be subjecting the same person for the same offence to two distinct penalties or fines, viz, to a fine or forfeitue to the extent of the whole assets of his estate for an indefinite number of years; and also to a fine of a certain sum per day, an intention which it is impossible to attribute to the Legislature.

Second. The attachment may be ordered and the assets realized and credited to any extent by the mere authority of the Commissioner. But the daily fine, though it may be imposed by the Commissioner, cannot be realized save by the authority of Government, so that the Commissioner would have, under such a construction as that now in question, authority in himself without higher reference—to fine a zemindar any number of thousands of rupees per annum for any number of years for a given offence, and at the same time, and for the same, or a similar offence, be unable to realize a fine of ten rupees, without the consent of the Governor-General, a conclusion which the Board submit could not have been in the contemplation of the Legislature.

Third. Under the above construction a Commissioner would have authority to punish an offence, however contemptuous, and often involuntary, by the imposition of a fine, amounting to any number of thousands of rupees as above noted. Yet when the offence becomes more certain, and obvious and open, and wilful, and urgent, he cannot impose a fine of a higher amount than rupees 500, which also in the opinion of the Board could not have been intended by the Legislature,

"11th. In short the very strictness and caution with which the penal parts of the enactment are limited, the extent of fine laid down, the reference to the highest authority necessitated, all forbid the idea that the attachment clause had ever the purpose now attributed to it. Can it be supposed that less restriction would have been imposed on the Revenue officers in such a clause so construed, than in a mere matter of fine?

The next document published is a letter from Mr. Secretary Mangles, dated 11th April last, complimenting the Board upon "the ability" with which its opinions had been stated, but telling them, nevertheless, that the purport of Sec. 12, Reg. 11, of 1819, still appeared to his Lordship to be so plainly that indicated in his (the Secretary's) former letter, that his Lordship was unable to yield his assent to the arguments urged by them in contravention of that opinion. And further, that his Lordship's view of the matter was supported by a majority of the Sudder Judges to whom the point had been referred, to this extent "that if the attached lands be finally adjudged liable to assessment, Government are entitled to the mesne profits during attachment; but they hold, on the other hand, that if the lands be declared exempt from public assessment, the proprietors have a just claim against Government for the mesne profits which accrued whilst the lands were under the charge of the Revenue authorities."

The letter of reference to the Sudder Judges, the official answer, and the several opinions of the Judges follow in due order. The gentlemen learned in Regulation law, do not appear to have found the point quite "so plain" as the above quoted letter reporting their opinions would lead us to believe. The majority in favor of his Lordship's construction of the Clause was the smallest possible, namely, three to two, those who concurred with him to the limited extent stated being Mr. D. C. Smyth, Mr. Rattray, and Mr. Hutchinson; Mr. Braddon and Mr. F. C. Smith being entirely of the Board's opinion. We subjoin that of Mr. Braddon:

"Whether lands attached under the provisions of clause I, Section 13, Regulation 11, of 1819, be eventually adjudged to be liable to assessment or otherwise, I conceive that the collections during the period of attachment do not belong absolutely to Government. Had it been so intended surely it would have been stated in plain and explicit terms that the collections would become forfeited to the State. It may also be presumed that the order of the Board would have been declared subject to the confirmation of Government as we find it laid down in Clause 3 of the same Section, that the Board are not competent in such cases to levy any fine (however small) they may impose upon a proprietor or farmer of land for neglecting or refusing to attend the Collector, or to furnish any documents or accounts required by that authority, until it is confirmed by Government. It seems to me that the words 'on account of Government' in the clause in question, means no more than 'on the part of Government.' That I am not singular in this opinion is evident from the Persian version of the clause, the part of which bearing upon the point may be rendered in English 'the Board of Revenue or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, shall be competent to direct the attachment of the lands and appointment of a person to make the collections on the part of Government in the same manner as collections of other lands the property of Government are made.'

"May little or rather no stress at all upon the use of the word 'permanently' at the latter end of the clause, as when rent-free lands are adjudged to be liable to assessment they necessarily become permanently so liable, and as Section 21, Regulation II, of 1819, was in force, the Board of Revenue or other authority exercising the powers of that Board, could not legally declare lands liable to assessment without having before them proceedings of the Collector after he had completed his enquiry, and recorded his opinion as to the liability of the lands to assessment or otherwise.

(Signed) W. BRADDOCK.

16th February, 1837."

By this decision of a majority of the Sudder Judge the Board are instructed to regulate the practice in all future cases. But the question of justice is blinked altogether. A penalty repudiated by the Board as flagrant unjust, is ordered to be enforced hereafter because it is declared to be the law—there is nothing said about altering the law to make it what it ought to be.—Calcutta Courier, July 21.

CONSULTATION, TUESDAY, 13TH JUNE, 1837.

CHARGES AGAINST THE OMLAH OF THE COLLECTORATE OF TIRHOOT.

Mr. Officiating Commissioner Brown, of Bhaugulpore, on the 12th May last, forwarded to the Board original petitions and copies of the instructions which had been at several times addressed to the Collector of Tirhoot, touching the charges which have at several times been thrown out against the native Omlah of that district.

Mr. Harding, Mr. Brown's predecessor, on the 18th of January last, called Mr. Collector Wilkinson's attention to orders passed by him on the above petition, and Mr. Harding considered it his duty to acquaint the Collector, that the Omlah attached to his office are universally spoken of in the most unfavorable manner not only by a few disreputable characters generally attached to all public offices, but by all classes in different parts of the districts.

It also appeared that on the 6th of February last, Mr. Harding, in reply to a letter from the Collector, in which he informed Mr. Harding of his having suspended a notification for the attendance of the writer of the petition with proof in support of his assertions against the Omlah of the Collectorate. Mr. Harding observed that the remaining portion of the Collector's letter required some explanation and observations, which Mr. Harding most readily made, in the hope, that he would encourage the Collector to co-operate cordially in the adoption of some measures calculated to expose the truth or falsehood of the different petitions, which had from time to time been presented, and in order to remove or confine the very general opinion which prevails of the principal Omlah having for some time past exercised a most undue influence in the performance of the duty as connected with the offices to which they are respectively attached.

Mr. Harding observed, that the notification the Collector had issued was "all very well, pro forma," but the Collector should be aware from the experience he has had of the native character, that it will be unattended with any good result, for no one who dislikes wasps (says Mr. Harding) would in his senses thrust his hand into a wasp's nest. The object of Mr. Harding's former and present communication, was to impress upon the Collector, the necessity of holding that kind of intercourse with the respectable zamindars of the district, as would convince them that the native officers have not the power, they are supposed to possess, and that the Collector is most ready and willing, to afford redress to all well founded complaints which may be preferred against the Omlah until the impression had been made, and that a public notification would have the opposite effect to that which it was intended to have produced.

Mr. Harding observed, that it was for obvious reasons desirable, that the European functionary presiding at the head of an important office, should himself be the person to institute enquiry respecting complaints against his own immediate subordinates, and that it is only when he was weak enough to identify himself with his Omlah, and fails or omits to exercise a vigilant and wholesome control over their official acts, that the interposition of higher authority becomes necessary.

Mr. Harding said, that he had not been long in his present situation before he became acquainted with the general unfavorable estimation in which the Collector's Omlah were held, and Mr. Harding was not altogether unwilling to believe that the allegations against them, were the result of disappointments, and much exaggerated; experience, however, had convinced Mr. Harding that so much dissatisfaction could not exist without some good cause for it, and if the Collector would make enquiries with an earnest desire to elicit the truth from independent individuals, Europeans or natives, Mr. Harding did not doubt, but that the Collector would discover that the complaints preferred, had something more solid to support them, than mere rumour.

Mr. Harding concluded by observing, that legal proof was not absolutely necessary for the removal of a native ministerial officer from his situation, although indispensable to substantiate in a Court of Justice any specific charge of corruption, or other offence punishable under the Regulations, and that the Collector might rest assured, that Mr. Harding's successor, who was soon expected, would not fail to afford the Collector every support in his endeavours to remove the existing odium attached to the principal native officers under his controul.

Miscellaneous Department.

SIR,—The Sudder Board of Revenue having had before them your letter, No. 1,110, dated the 12th ultimo, direct me to observe, that they have read with much satisfaction on your predecessor's letter to the Collector of Tirhoot, of the 6th February last, and entirely concur in the sentiments therein expressed. They remark, however, that it is not sufficient for a Commissioner to point out to his subordinate the course which ought to be pursued in a case like that under reference. Sensible of the responsibility which must attach to him if entertaining a wrong opinion of the unworthiness of the Collector's Omlah, he contents himself with expressing his displeasure, and bidding the Collector make enquiries; he must watch the Collector's proceedings, and if convinced of their insufficiency, set on foot measures promising better results, otherwise it is obvious, that the delinquents will but receive encouragement, from impunity, to go to greater lengths of corruption.

2d. The Board request that you will take the opportunity of your next visit to Tirhoot to make very strict enquiry into the complaints that have been preferred, and into the causes which have brought the Omlah of that district into such dispute, and that you will also roughly investigate all cases of misconduct on their part which may be brought to your notice, by petition or otherwise, and in conclusion they direct me to that they feel persuaded that their anxiety for the credit of the public service is not greater than your own, and that they anticipate from your exertions, every reform that is required in the Tirhoot Collector's office.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obdt. servant.

PURCHASE OF A MEHAL ON ACCOUNT OF GOVERNMENT, — DUNAJPORE.

Mr. Commissioner Hawkins, of Bauleah, on the 9th May 1837, reported the purchase of a Mehal on account of Government, viz. Mongah Dhuragee Pergunnah Hangore, Zillah Dunajpore, the Sudder Jumina of which is 638 rupees. It was sold for a balance of rupees 225-13-9½ and purchased on account of Government for 201 rupees. The Records of the Collector's office shew a Rughba of Beegahs 1054-14½ besides Minbau 119 beegahs 2 biswas lakhiraj; but it is impossible to say what may be the probable assets of the Mehal without inquiry. The Mehal is locally situated within the Deputy Collectros of Bagrah; and Mr. Hawkins requested the sanction of the Board to its transfer from the Rent Roll of Dunajpore, to that of Bograh.

To J. Hawkins, Esq., Commissioner of Revenue for the division of Bauleah

Miscellaneous.

Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 9th ultimo, No. 116, reporting the purchase on account of Government of Mouzah Dhurajee, &c. Pergunnah Khangore in the district of Dunajpore for rupees 201, and requesting authority to transfer the estate to the rent roll of the Booghrah Deputy Collectorate, I am desired by the Sudder Board of Revenue to observe, that the facts of the large quantity of land stated to appertain to the estate, the small amount of the Sudder Jumina, and the trifling amount of the purchase money, warrant the apprehension, that fraudulent alienations of land have been made; by neighbouring proprietors, and the estate purposely thrown on the hands of Government.

2. The Board, therefore, consider, that until its real circumstances are ascertained, it would be highly unadvisable to make the proposed transfer.

3. An uncovenanted Deputy Collector, would, in the Board's opinion, be well employed, in taking charge of such an estate under the clear understanding, that the manner in which he should discharge this duty, would be made the test of his fitness for office.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obdt. and humble servt,

COGNIZANCE OF DAKHIL KHARIJ SUITS.

Mr. Officiating Comisioner G. F. Brown, of Bhaugulpore, on the 22d of May last, submitted, for the consideration and orders of the Board, copy of letter from Mr. Special Deputy Collector Travers, relative to the propriety of Dakhil Kharij suits being cognizable by him.

Mr. Travers was impressed with the idea that the investigation and decision of those cases naturally belong, to his jurisdiction in preference to any other. In the Commissioner's opinion, the duty appertains to the collectors of revenue alone.

The special deputy collectors appeared to Mr. Brown to have no legal control or right of interference in any way with the Register of mutations; though, where individuals may apply to for Dakhil Kharij to a collector of revenue, and it turns out on enquiry that the property is a rent free tenure, it is of course the duty of that functionary to certify the case to the resumption officer, with a view to its being brought on his file; but it would still remain the province of the collector, and not of the resumption officer, to order the Dakhil Kharij or otherwise.

The case which gave occasion to this reference relates to the Mehal of Jhunowra alias Gopaulpoor, which was decreed in favor of Government by Mr. Travers on the 18th September 1836.

A person named Deveepershaud, who had purchased an eight anna share, applied to have his name, entered as malick of half the mehal; this was ordered to be done by Mr. Travers, on the 7th January last, though Deveepershaud's claim was denied and opposed by the opposite party. An appeal was in consequence preferred to the Commissioner.

Mr. Travers on being called upon to explain under what authority he interfered in the matter, stated that the letter of the law, was defined in clause 11, section 2, regulation 111 of 1120, pointed out his office as the most fit place for adjudicating suits of this nature, and requested that the point should be referred to the Board of Revenue for final settlement.

Mr. Brown concluded by observing that the mehal having been decreed in favor of Government four months previously, it was to all intents and purposes no longer a Lakhiraj tenure, which made Mr. Travers's interference still more unaccountable; but Mr. Brown wished to have the decision of the Board on the general question, as to whether a special deputy collector is under any circumstances justified in directing any alteration in the Register of Permutations.

Miscellaneous Department.

Sir,—The Sudder Board having had before them your letter No. 1222, of the 22d ultimo, direct me to inform you that they concur with you in opinion, that in no case whatever has a special deputy collector any right to deal with Dakhil Kharij cases.

"2. I am directed to aid that you might, with the greatest facility, and therefore ought to have communicated your sentiments on this subject to Mr. Special Deputy Collector Travers in an English letter instead of a Persian roobocarrée. You are requested to furnish a translation in English of your roobocarrée, in order that it may be brought together with these orders in the English proceedings of the Board.

JURISDICTION OF THE SPECIAL DEPUTY COLLECTORS IN CONNECTION WITH DAKHIL KHARIJ SUITS.

Mr. G. F. Brown, officiating commissioner of revenue, Bhaungulpore division, applied to the Board, in his letter (No 1222) of the 22d May last, for their decision on a question relating to the jurisdiction of the special deputy collectors, under the following circumstance :

From a letter (No. 49 of the 10th April last,) from Mr. Special Deputy Collector Travers, to the commissioner, in question, it appeared that Mr. Travers is impressed with the idea that the investigation and decision of Dakhil Kharij cases naturally belongs to his jurisdiction in preference to any other. In the opinion of the commissioner, however, the duty appertains to the collectors of revenue alone. He observes, in his communication to the Board as follows :

3. " The special deputy collectors appear to me to have no legal control or right of interference in any way with the register of mutations ; though where individuals may apply for Dakhil Kharij to a collector of revenue, and it turns out on enquiry that the property is a rent free tenure, it is of course the duty of that functionary to certify the case to the resumption officer, with a view to its being brought on his file ; but it would still remain the province of the collector, and not of the resumption officer, to order the Dakhil Kharij or otherwise."

4. " The case which has given occasion to this reference relates to the mehal of Jhunowra alias Gopaulpoor, which was decreed in favor of Government by Mr. Travers on the 8th September 1836. A person named Deveepurshad, who had purchased an eight-anna share, applied to have his name entered as malik of half the mehal. This was ordered to be done by Mr. Travers, on the 7th of January last, though Deveepurshad's claim was denied and opposed by the opposite party. An appeal was in consequence preferred to me."

5. " Mr. Travers on being called upon to explain under what authority he interfered in the matter, states, that the letter of the law, as defined in clause II, section 2, regulation II of 1828, point out his office, as the most fit place for adjudicating suits of this nature ; and requests that the points be referred to the Board of Revenue for final settlements."

It will not escape observation, that the mehal having been decreed in favor of Government, for four months previously, it was to all intents and purposes, no longer a lakhraj tenure, which makes Mr. Travers' interference still more unaccountable ; but I wish to have the decision of the Board on the general question, as to whether a special deputy collector is under any circumstances justified in directing any alteration in the register of permutations."—Englishman, July 12.

LOCAL ENQUIRIES REGARDING LAKHIRAJ LANDS, JESSORE.

Mr. Special Deputy Collector Lowth, of Jessore, on the 24th of April last wrote to Mr. Commissioner Pigou, regarding local enquiries as to Lakhiraj lands. Mr. Lowth was of opinion, that they should be confined entirely to the ascertainment of boundaries and localities, and to mapping and measuring of lands under investigation. He thought also, that this local enquiry defined and confined as above, should never take place, until the land of which it is the subject, has been brought upon the file for judicial trial under Regulation II. of 1819, and never without a special order for enquiries from the resumption officer. Mr. Lowth was aware, that to make preliminary enquiries previous to the bringing a case on the file is emphatically his duty, and his only, and that it is one which he can never with propriety delegate to a subordinate. These being his views, it was only necessary to add in answer to the query contained in the Board's letter of the 23th ultimo, that the duties upon which he proposes to employ Deputy Collectors and Amceens under them, are those of ascertaining localities and boundaries, measuring and mapping lands after they have been brought on the file, and while the investigation under Regulation II. 1819, is proceeding. With respect to the order in which resumption duties should be carried on, Mr. Lowth thought to state his intentions which are as follows :

He proposed first to get rid of the existing file, made over to him by his predecessors.

Next to enter upon Lakhiraj cases involving tenures of more than 200 beegahs (Government Standard.)

Thirdly. To investigate alluvial cases and churs.

Fourthly. To take up Towfeer, as far as it may be found to exist.

Lastly. To complete the round of his duties by disposing of such of the small cases, if Lakhiraj, as being under 100 beegahs, and not included in the limits of a decennially settled estate, may be subject to investigation under the laws in force.

Mr. Lowth also took the opportunity of requesting instructions on a certain point, which appeared to him of very great importance. He considers that the search for Lakhiraj lands, should be conducted by examination of the Registers and Taidads in the office of the Registry of deeds, and the records of the Civil Court and the Collectorship gene ally. It is possible, says Mr. Lowth, that this search in any given district may be totally unsuccessful. There may be no Registers and no Taidads, and the records of the Courts and Collectors' offices may, on enquiry, furnish no information ; was (asked Mr. Lowth) he, under such circumstances, if they should arise, to receive information of the existence of Lakhiraj lands from Guindahs, and other interested, or disinterested persons ? or, to send out, or go out to seek for such lands in the Mofussil, or was he to refrain altogether from further enquiry ? He put the foregoing queries, to obtain authoritative instructions from the Board, and in the meantime expressed his own general opinion, that no Mofussil search be made by resumption officers or their native subordinates, when records and documents fail, as a general system of search through native subordinates, will always be converted by those agents into a means of oppression and extortion, and what is termed personal search by the resumption officer, must, Mr. Lowth feared, in every case, be in a great measure, a search by native officers under his name.

In a former letter Mr. Lowth stated, that it would be necessary to appoint two native Deputy Collectors with efficient measuring establishments for that Division; however, as the first part of the season is now passed, he suggested the employment at present of one native Deputy Collector with an establishment consisting of three ameens on 15 rupees per mensem each; six rupengeers, and three peons at 4 rupees each per mensem: also, should it be necessary to increase the establishment hereafter, a further reference would be submitted.

Towfeer lands, Mr. Lowth considered to be such, as are comprised in bheels and jheel, which were at the time of the decennial settlement full of water, and have since dried up, so as to allow of cultivation, the same not having been included in the decennial settlement; also any other lands, excepting chure and lakhiraj, not included in the decennial settlement, come under this head or in few words lands in excess of those for which the decennial settlement was concluded.

To place in a clear light Mr. Lowth's views on the subject of the difficulties he would have to contend with, in the event of this being obliged to visit in person the lands mentioned in any Taidads, amounting perhaps to 200 beegahs scattered through half a dozen villages, and distributed through as many pergunnahs, Mr. Lowth forwarded translations of two Taidads. No investigations connected with Lakhiraj's lands have been conducted (observe! Mr. Lowth), through the Police darogahs: since the date of his receiving charge of his office, neither have any perwannahs for enquiries respecting other lands been issued, save two about some chur lands. Mr. Lowth finding in many cases, however, that instructions had been sent to the Police Darogahs according to the orders of the Collector prior to Mr. Lowth joining the station, to which no answers had been received, Mr. Lowth issued other Perwannahs calling for the information originally required.

Mr. Commissioner Pigou, in forwarding Mr. Lowth's communication, solicited the authority of the Board for the modification submitted by Mr. Lowth for the reasons assigned by him.

Mr. Secretary Trevelyan, under the direction of the Board, communicated the following observations and orders to Mr. Pigou.

That the modification proposed of Mr. Lowth's establishment, has been sanctioned.

Mr. Trevelyan, observed, that no particular orders appeared necessary on the first seven paragraphs of Mr. Lowth's letter, with reference especially to the instructions (since issued) contained in the Board's circular of the 16th ultimo. Mr. Lowth was cautioned against giving credence to uncorroborated information received from goindahs, and not to act on such information till it is confirmed from other credible sources. The Commissioner has been requested to submit, after communicating with Mr. Lowth, a nomination roll of a Deputy Collector under Regulation IX of 1819, to be employed under that gentleman, and that the Commissioner should at the same time recommend such subordinate measuring establishment, as he may consider necessary, and that no unnecessary delay should take place in adopting the above measures.

With regard to the bheels or jheels referred to by Mr. Lowth, Mr. Trevelyan observed, that the Board thought that if they were, at the time of the decennial settlement, included as jukler in permanently settled estates, the alteration of their condition allowing of cultivation will not render them liable to assessment. From Mr. Lowth's explanations Mr. Trevelyan observed, that Mr. Lowth seemed to be of opinion that he is at liberty to resume any number of parcels of land amounting in the aggregate to more than 100 beegahs, if they be all included in one Taidad. But that the Board thought that he should be informed that the point for consideration, is whether the lands claimed to be held under one sunnud or grant (whether situate in one or more villages) exceed a hundred beegahs. It was not apparent from the Taidads, translations of which had been submitted, whether the several parcels of land are held under one, or so many separate grants. In the former case, the Board declared them all resumable; but if the latter be the case, it is to be observed, that there are only two parcels which the Special Deputy Collector can proceed against, viz, 151 beegahs in Bhunponathpore, and 101 beegahs (a Bheel) in Pergunnah Suleenabad. The preceding remarks will, it was hoped by the Board, enable Mr. Lowth to act without injury to established private rights, and with due discrimination of circumstances.

The Board hoped it was unnecessary to repeat their injunction against the employment of Police darogahs, if in Revenue matters, and that Mr. Lowth should be instructed to cancel the orders issued by him, if he has not already received reports in conformity to his Pergunnahs referred to by him.

ALLIPORE COURT.

ALLIPORE, FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 1837.

Before J. H. Patton, Esq., Magistrate.

TUMULTUOUS ASSAULT ATTENDED WITH MURDER AND WOUNDING.

Rojjoo Sirdar, Ookeel, and six other persons, were charged thisday with having been principal and accessories in a tumultuous assault, and with having murdered one villager, and severely wounded two others.

About twenty witnesses were examined on the charge, which was fully corroborated, and the Magistrate committed the assailants to take their trial at the ensuing sessions at Allipore.

In this case a fact of some interest came forward. The Magistrate a short time ago had Ookeel before him on another, but a minor charge, which after proof caused vakerl to be sentenced to pay a fine or to be imprisoned for a certain time. Under the new rule Ookeel lost no time in placing his appeal before the Judge, and pending a reference of some proceedings, prayed to be released on bail. The application was granted, and Ookeel returned forthwith to the village, where he had not been long when his fondness for broiling brought him to the present dilemma, not free in any respect from the first charge.

In the above cases we have proof of the mischief of liberty offenders committed, or sentenced by the Magistrate, pending appeals, and we believe it not the first instance of the kind. We have for better than twelve month watched the proceedings of the Magistrate, and it would be manifest injustice to withhold praise, that nothing less than his vigilance and indomitable exertions to bring offenders to immediate punishment, has placed the 24-Pergunnahs in state of quiescence formerly unknown. In further proof of our assertion we may add, that gang robberies are becoming extinct, and serious native affrays as rare as the former. In the neighbouring zillahs we have daily reports of the most daring depredations and even in the city, the amount of crime far exceeds the 24-Pergunnahs. We are therefore of opinion that in all cases of appeal delinquents should not be allowed to bail; but on the contrary, that the appeals should be investigated with the strictest scrutiny, and all subsequent evidence, if available, should be rejected on the ground of their not having been produced during the investigation by the Magistrate.

The zillah, we again repeat, is now as peaceable as ever it could be, and recommend it should not be laid open to disturbances to the great detriment of the peace, welfare, and prosperity of its numerous inhabitants.

FRIDAY THE 14TH JULY, 1837.—TRIAL FOR MANSLAUGHTER.

(Before W. Cracroft, Esq., Sessions Judge)

KATEE DEWA, PROSECUTRIX, versus JOHN KIERNANDER.

The judge some days ago, by circular, summoned several of the residents of the 24-purgunnahs to form a jury for this trial. It was thought that the benefits of trial by jury was held in its true estimation, as it ought to be, particularly to East-Indian Mussulites; but we were surprised at seeing only refusals. All the Christians, save Mr. Mathews, a British subject, made some excuse to avoid the summons.

At 11, A. M. the judge opened the sessions, and on the Mahomedan law officer having taken his seat, Mr. Kiernander was brought to the bar attended by his legal adviser, Mr. R. Dias. An objection was taken by Mr. Dias on behalf of the prisoner to his being tried by the Mahomedan Code, in support of which Mr. Dias cited section V. Regulation VI. of 1832, and prayed that the services of the Mahomedan law officer should be dispensed with. The judge immediately assented, and the Mouvie retired. There was some difficulty in obtaining a jury; the judge, however, got a Mr. Chiu, who, with Mr. Mathews, answered as assessors under clause III. section 3 of the above mentioned Regulation.

Katee Dewah, widow of Tonoo Poramanek, deceased, having been duly sworn, charged the prisoner at the bar with having some time in the month of Assaur last, killed her husband, Tonoo Poramanek, by violent treatment, and that she was informed of it by Sheestadur, boatman.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Cabil, manjee, being duly sworn, deposed, that he has no connection with either the prosecutrix or the prisoner. In Jato last, on a Saturday noon, witness was conveying the prisoner in a boat to Kedegree: witness and twelve men, Gour, Mijoo Matabader, Chota Matabdee, Jeitee, Meetno, Gournath (sick) and Tonoo, deceased. At night the boat was anchored at place called Rungatalla. Stopped there all that night, and proceeded on in the morning, and at a place called Gorramarra, the flood came on, and the boat was anchored there, when the crew cooked and eat their victuals. Two ships were in sight, and the prisoner desired to be put on board one of the ships. The deceased replied that his orders were to put the prisoner on an Europe ship at Kedegree, and declined putting the prisoner on board of one of the ships in sight. The prisoner asked the deceased, if he, the prisoner, was to be guided by the orders of the deceased, and on this the prisoner kicked and fisted the deceased. The deceased immediately seemed faint and fell on the deck of the vessel. The deceased began bleeding, and the boat proceeded to Kedegree. There was a ship at Kedegree, with an officer on board, whom the prisoner went and visited. Witness asked the prisoner if he would go on board the Europe ship, or on shore, and on his mentioning the latter, they proceeded to Gungza Creek, and after anchoring, Mijoo, daree, accompanied the prisoner on shore to the house of a Mr. Paul. Witness with Gour, Matabdee, and Lalmahorred, went to Kedegree bazar, and having made purchases, witness sent the other three companions to the boat, and proceeded to the prisoner, to ask him if he would go on board; but the prisoner said he would not go on board that night. Witness then returned to the bazar and while smoking there, Gour, Mijoo, and the prisoner's Khansamah came and informed witness, that Tonoo daree had died; it was then between 10 and 11 P. M. When witness first went on shore, he left Tonoo lying on the fore part of the boat in a senseless state, and not able to speak. There were no marks on the body of Tonoo, but there were black marks on his face, caused by the blows he had received. Tonoo was kicked by the prisoner under the ribs; does not recollect on which side. No one gave the deceased any assistance or water from the time he was struck to the time of his death. It was about 8 or 9 P. M. when witness went on shore to the bazar. The men were rowing and how could they assist Tonoo. There was no fire on board from noon to 8 p. m. and none of the men smoked. Witness was seated and smoking with Mr. Paul's servants in their bansa, near Mr. Paul's house. One man was seated with witness, his name is Gour. Nobody washed the blood from the deceased's mouth. Last saw the blood on the following morning in the place where Tonoo fell after the beating. There was blood still on his face.

Cross examined by Mr. Dias.—At 4 p. m. of the following morning, witness reported the death of Tonoo to the Superintendent, and the Superintendent told witness it was false and struck him. The Superintendent was at the time of the report at Diamond Harbour. A boat rowed from Kedgerree to Diamond Harbour in one hour. The body was thrown overboard by the orders of Mr. Iveson. On the evening of the report Mr. Iveson took the body on board a ship, and after having it examined by a Doctor had some conversation in English. Witness went on shore, and that night Mr. Iveson went for witness, on shore, and desired witness to have the body thrown overboard. Witness said he could not do so, as the deceased had relations. Mr. Iveson's cook and bearer then threw the body overboard. Did not tell Iveson that the man died of cholera. Mr. Paul's house and the bazar are close together. Witness was aft holding the rudder when the deceased was first struck. As the prisoner wished to put the boat under weigh, witness went aft and stood by the rudder. There is a ladder proceeding to the cabin of the boat; does not recollect how many steps it has, and does not know the height of the roof of the cabin. About five or six kicks were given by the prisoner on the body of the deceased; cannot say how many blows were struck. The man was assaulted on the fore part of the boat.

Mautanbder, of age 30 years, boat man, deposed. Has no connection with either the prosecutrix or the prisoner. At about noon, at a place called Gorramarrab, while the boat was at anchor there, a vessel was passing up. The serjeant (prisoner) desired to be put on board that vessel. Tonoo Poramanek declined doing so, saying he was desired to put the serjeant on the ship at Kedgerree. The prisoner asked Tonoo, if he (the prisoner) was to be guided by the orders of the deceased, and then struck him. Tonoo said that he was ordered to put him on an English ship. Tonoo was struck before the mast. Blows were struck, and kicks with shoes on. About 4 or 5 blows and as many kicks. The kicks and blows were promiscuously inflicted on different parts of the body. After getting the beating, Tonoo went and laid himself in the cabin of the boat, after which the boat was put under weigh and proceeded to Kedgerree where there was another English ship lying with an officer on board. The prisoner desired to be carried on board that vessel; he then visited the other officer, and then returned to the boat which was pulled into the creek, and on anchoring, the prisoner landed and was accompanied by witness, Mijjoo Lallaha, and Gour, to Mr. Paul's house. The manjee went to the bazar, and having made purchases, sent witness and the other men on board, and the manjee staid on shore. When witness and the men returned on board, Tonoo said he felt a suffocation in his throat, and he was about to die, and desired witness to take him on deck. Witness then brought him from the cabin on deck. Tonoo then laid on deck, and after some time witness desired Sheestedhur to see how Tonoo was, and Sheestedhur said Tonoo is dead. Mijjoo and Gour then went on shore to report the death of Tonoo to the prisoner. Neither the manjee nor prisoner returned to the boat that night. On the following morning they both came on board. The prisoner desired us to board a vessel lying in the stream. We did so and the prisoner gave the men a letter and desired them to leave it at the Telegraph. On the return of the boat the prisoner was taken on board, and the boat proceeded to Diamond

Harbour. The manjee then went to the Superintendent and informed him of the death of Tonoo. The manjee returned to the boat. No body entered the cabin all that day. The serjeant was inside with Tonoo. Tonoo was asleep, and the prisoner was lying on the couch. Witness put him no question. The prisoner's khansamah was on top of the boat, and went into the cabin when called in and took Tonoo out of the cabin. The deceased bled from the mouth and nose, and after his death, he also bled, and the blood fell on deck.

Cross examined by Mr. Dias.—The report was made to the Superintendent at 4 p. m. of the following day. All the men went on shore to dry the sail, leaving the prisoner and his servant on board; it was then 11 A. M. Four men, Mijjoo, Lalla, Jaite, and Meettoo were on shore, facing the boat.

Sheestedhur boatman deposed, that the prisoner struck Tonoo several blows and kicks, which caused Tonoo to bleed. Tonoo was lying down. Two vessels, inward bound, approached; the prisoner requested to be put on board of one of those vessels. Tonoo told prisoner he would not do so, but would put him on board the vessel at Kedgerree. The boat proceeded on to Kedgerree, and the prisoner was put on board of a vessel. There, the prisoner then returned and went on shore, saying he was going to dine at Mr. Paul's and on landing took Mijjoo and Gour with him. The manjee also went with the prisoner. The manjee went to the bazar and returned a short time after, and after the crew had eaten their victuals about 10 or 11 p. m., Tonoo said "I am being suffocated," and desired to be taken out of the cabin; he was brought out to the middle of the deck and laid down, where he expired. A little while after, Gour, the Khansamah, and Mijjo went to report the death of Tonoo to the prisoner. The prisoner did not come on board that night nor did the manjee. Tonoo, after the beating, crept into the cabin. No assistance or water was given to Tonoo, as he did not ask for any. Tonoo was a dandee and not the manjee of the boat.

Cabin manjee recalled.—Never saw the two ships that were coming up, nor did he know their names. Never saw the ship before that he was taking the prisoner to Kedgerree. The ship at Kedgerree was at anchor. Heard that the ship was at Kedgerree. Did not authorize Tonoo to refuse the prisoner's orders. Never saw Mr. Kiernauder before the occasion above referred to.

Sheestedhur, recalled and cross-examined by Mr. Dias.—The body was examined by a Doctor at Diamond Harbour, and by another Doctor at Kedgerree, whose names the witness did not know. The Doctor spoke something in English which witness did not understand.

William John Fadda, Surgeon of the Bark George the Fourth, deposed. Saw the body of a native boatman on board a Custom House boat, on or about the 10th or 11th of June last, at 9 A. M. Saw nothing on the body to lead the witness to have supposed that the man died any other than a natural death. Observed an effusion of blood from the mouth, nose and ears. It is generally the case in instances of sudden death by apoplexy, particularly after death. The body was in a very decomposed state, and there was froth and bubbles of air from the nostrils, shewing the decomposition of the body, and formation of gas. There was not the least mark of violence or even a scratch on the body or face, as in that respect the body was very particularly examined. Did not open the body from its decomposition, but had the body been otherwise, it would have been opened. The body being very offensive, witness ordered it to be thrown over board. From the appearance of the pupils of the eye, the cause was attributed by me to pressure on the brain from apoplexy or effusion of blood. If death had been caused by a beating the mark of some of the blows must have appeared. Took a candle and witness passed his hand carefully over every part of the head and neck, and could discover nothing attributable to external violence. In cases of apoplexy the head first becomes putrid, which prevented an internal examination.

Mr. Dias declined cross-examining this witness. Thomas George Iverson, Superintendent of Customs at Diamond Harbour, in the service of Government deposed. On the morning of the 10th of June last, the Abercrombie Robinson was reported by Semaphore at Kedgee. Mr. Kiernander, the prisoner at the bar, was dispatched on duty to that vessel, in Mr. Kirby's boat, employed by witness on behalf of Government. Gave Kiernander the necessary letters to the commanding officer and directed him to proceed forthwith, which he attended to most promptly. Heard nothing more from Mr. Kiernander till the boat returned about 4 in the evening of the 13th instant, while witness was at dinner and Mr. Apothecary Beatson with him. The manjie of the boat who has given evidence in this case, reported that a man had died from three days illness, and added that on the 10th the deceased had taken some rice and vomited, after which he was taken with cholera and died. Witness was a little annoyed at the manjie keeping away so long, desired him to return to his boat, and witness said he would go and have the body examined. Dark hours intervening at the time, witness delayed the examination about half an hour, but sent Mr. Beatson, steward and apothecary of His Majesty's 96th Regiment, now at Chinsurah, to examine and report if the deceased had died a natural death, or from any other cause. Mr. Beatson did so, but as a further precaution witness took the body to the George the Fourth and had it examined by Dr. Faddis, who immediately after examining it desired it should be thrown over board in consequence of its decomposed state. Had the body retained till the following day to give the relations an opportunity of seeing it, but they not appearing, witness then had it thrown into the river it being quite impossible to keep it any longer. Witness asked the manjie why information had not been given of the state of the man's health before the boat left, but received no satisfactory answer, but that he had been ill three days and had done no work. The boatmen were bound to obey Mr. Kiernander, and he was perfectly justified in hailing all vessels until he reached the one he was posted to, as he would have been personally responsible to the Board of Customs for carrying my orders into effect and the crew were not at all justified in disobeying his injunctions. The manjie said nothing about the subject of the present trial, nor did he after a subsequent trip. Witness should have known nothing of it, had not the Collector desired witness to enquire into the cause of the death of Tonoo, reported to have died of a beating inflicted on him by the prisoner.

The witness was here proceeding to relate the nature of the Collector's report and something he had heard from a Mr. George Kirby, when Mr. Dias submitted that the witness was going into hearsay evidence, inadmissible in such a case. Mr. Dias also took a legal objection to Mr. Kirby being allowed to depose, as from Kirby's examination before the Magistrate, he, Kirby, said certain things from hearsay only.

The Court allowed the objections taken by Mr. Dias. George Kirby, Post Master at Diamond Harbour, was informed that a man had died on board his boat which was at the beach near Mr. Iverson's house. Witness saw Messrs. Iverson and Beatson proceeding, as he believed, in his boat to have the body examined by the Surgeon of the ship George the Fourth.

Joseph Charles Hutchinson, assistant Superintendent of Semaphore and Post Master at Kedgee, deposed. Some time last month Mr. Kiernander came to witness at Kedgee, and asked for refreshments, and requested witness to Semaphore for relief for him as he complained of fever, and witness had a faint recollection, that the prisoner added, either that a man was dead, or in a dying state on board his boat. Witness desired Mr. Kiernander to write to witness to signalize for relief, and having received a note from him to that effect, witness made the required signal. Mr. Dias declined cross-examining the last three witnesses and the Court adjourned at 6 p.m.

Saturday, July 15, 1837.

The Judge and the two assessors having taken their seats, the Court opened at 11 a.m., and Mr. Kiernander having been placed at the bar, the following witnesses were called.

Nujjon, boatman, deposed. In Jaito last Mr. Superintendent Iverson desired Cabil the manjie of the boat to which witness belonged, to convey the prisoner to an English ship at Kedgee, and accordingly on a Saturday in the afternoon, the prisoner was taken on board the boat, which proceeded as far as a place called Runga-fulla where it anchored for the night. The anchor was weighed again at 4 a.m., of the following morning, when the boat proceeded as far as Gorramareah where it was anchored in consequence of the flood tide having come on; the men consequently went on shore to cook and eat their victuals. While eating two inward bound ships were passing up; the prisoner desired the manjie to put him on board one of the two ships. The men were then on shore, and four of the men, witnesses, Mectoo, Joide and Lall Mahomed were bringing a sail on board, and when witness went on board he saw Tonoo seated before the mast with his hand on his mouth. Witness asked the manjie what caused Tonoo to be seated as he was, and the manjie on board and some of the men informed witness that the prisoner had struck Tonoo in consequence of his having refused to board the vessel as ordered by the prisoner. Mataubdee Dhauro then took hold of Tonoo and took him inside the cabin. He said nothing until evening. While at Gunza Creek, Kedgee, when the prisoner went on shore, Tonoo asked witness to prepare a chillum for him and witness desired Mataubdee to prepare the chillum which he gave Tonoo and Tonoo after smoking it, went to sleep, and so did the rest of the crew. After some time Tonoo called out I am dying, then Choto Mataubdee brought Tonoo on deck where he laid down, after which Choto Mataubdee said Tonoo is dead. Witness and the other boatmen called Sheesteehur, a Hindoo daree, and desired him to call Tonoo and hear if he answered. Sheesteehur called, but got no answer. Witness, Gour, and the prisoner's khausama went on shore and at the bazar at Kedgee informed the manjie of Tonoo's death. The manjie and khausama then went to inform the prisoner of the death also. After some time the manjie desired witness and Gour to return to the boat and take care of the body. When the boat reached Diamond Harbour, the manjie, Gour and Juggoo went to inform Mr. Iverson of the death of Tonoo. Does not know if any of the men washed Tonoo's clothes.

Cross-examined by Mr. Dias, Tonoo did not crawl out of the cabin to the deck. Mataubdee alone brought him out. Mataubdee held Tonoo under the arms in bringing him out. Mataubdee went down to bring Tonoo up. Does not know whose house it was that the manjee was in at the bazar. Did not see a woman in it. It was a bazar house. The door of the house was shut when witness first arrived there. Called to the manjee. There was no light in the house then. Tunnoo was not ill previous to the day of the beating. Did not vomit his dinner the day of the beating.

Bara Mataubdee, deposed. When Tonoo died witness was standing by the rudder of the boat. Tonoo was then forward before the mast. Cannot say if any of the men assisted Tonoo or not; the boatmen were by the body. Witness did not see any body give Tunnoo a chillum of tobacco. Witness saw the prisoner give Tonoo some blows and kicks. The blows and kicks hit Tonoo on the face and stomach. Tonoo after the beating remained in the cabin of the boat. None of the boatmen gave Tonoo either water or tobacco, on the day of the beating. Deceased spoke nothing till the evening when he said "I am dying." When Tonoo said he was dying, chotta Mataubdee went into the cabin and lifted Tonoo up, and brought him on deck and seated him there. Tonoo died an hour after he was brought on deck. Tonoo died sitting; he rolled down before he died. I was forward in the boat when he died. He was not sick that day, nor was he sick previous to that day. Tonoo fell after the beating, and was not flogged after he fell. Tonoo was a tall man and taller than witness. Did not see the manjee wash the bloody clothes. Gour, Nujoo and the khansama went to inform the prisoner of Tunnoo's death. It was then about 10 or 11 p. m. When the prisoner was put on board the English ship, a gentleman came down into the boat and examined the body of the deceased. The prisoner and the doctor examined the body.

Chota Mataubdee recalled, said, I filled a chillum and gave it to Tonoo who smoked it. Witness got fire in the boat.

The Prosecution closed after the reading of the whole of the Foudary deposition.

The Judge asked if the defendant had prepared an answer, or would give it vice voce: Mr. Dias begged to be allowed half an hour's time, within which he said he would be prepared with a written answer. The request was granted and Mr. Dias filed an answer to the following effect.

That the prisoner left Mr. Iveson at half past 4 p. m., of the 10th June last with instructions to proceed on board an inward bound ship, and to remain on board in charge of the cargo. The prisoner proceeded in Cabel Manjee's boat and anchored for the night at a place called Rungafulla. At 3 a. m., on the following morning he proceeded on till noon to a place called Gorramarrah where the boat again anchored. The whole of the crew went on shore to cook their victuals, and while the men were on shore the boat sail was washed overboard, as the sea was making a clean breach over the deck. Some of the men then came towards the boat and carried the sail on shore to dry. Two inward bound ships were observed by prisoner coming up, and at that time Juggoo darree and the deceased came on board. Juggoo darree went aft, and Fenoo remained on deck. Prisoner desired him to call the men on board and pull toward the two ships. He took no notice of the prisoner's order though prisoner repeated it often. Much delay having occurred, and symptoms of fever having been felt by the prisoner, prisoner went on deck and supporting himself by the mast desired the deceased to call the men as quick as possible. The deceased replied he would neither receive nor obey any orders from serjeants and that he would not put the prisoner on any vessel but the one at Kedgerree. Prisoner got irritated and gave the deceased one or two back handed thumps, after which the prisoner's fever continuing to become severer, and there being a hot sun, prisoner went into the cabin. He had not been there 10 ten minutes when the manjee came into the cabin and on being requested by prisoner to pull along side of the two ships also refused to obey his, the prisoner's orders. The boat then proceeded on and reached Kedgerree about evening, contrary to the prisoner's orders. The manjee pulled into Gunzarah Creek, and being very unwell and twenty-seven hours without food, the prisoner went on shore, accompanied by two of the men, to the House of Mr. Hutchinson, to procure refreshment, and to request him to semaphore prisoner's illness, and for relief. When prisoner left the boat, he ordered his bed not to be moved, thinking he would have been able to return to the boat that night. Mr. Hutchinson directed prisoner to the house of Mr. Paul a publican, where prisoner's fever obliged him to take up his night's lodgings. At 3 p. m. of the following morning one of Mr. Paul's servant announced the manjee. The prisoner on meeting him was told that a dandee had died on board. It was then dark and as the prisoner still continued ill, he desired the manjee to put the boat back, and that at dawn of day the prisoner would be able, go on board. Early in the morning the prisoner went on board and after proceeding on a little below Kedgerree boarded the Abercrombie Robinson. He found a surgeon, Mr. Stoke, on board, and told him of the death of the man on the boat. The Surgeon and the Pilot, Mr. Harris, both came into the boat, and several military gentlemen, passengers of the ship, were witnesses to the examination of the body by Dr. Stoke, who declared the subject to have died of apoplexy brought on by indigestion. Doctor Stoke also gave a certificate to the above effect, which the prisoner filed in the examination held by the magistrate.

The prisoner was also informed by Mr. Superintendent Iveson, at the Magistrate's, that he Court, Iveson, had the body examined at Diamond Harbour by the Surgeon of the ship "George the Fourth," who also pronounced the man to have died of apoplexy.

The defence also contained some minor points. The judge observed that Mr. Kiernander had mentioned nothing in defence of his having told Dr. Stoke that he had flogged the man.

Mr. Dias replied that if the judge wished it Mr. Dias would insert it, but if allowed to entertain an objection he would rather not bring that on the defence, as it would necessarily lead to further evidence.

Alfred Harris, first mate of the H. C. Marine, deposed. That on or about the 11th or 12th of June last, either a little before or after 7 a. m., a Custom House officer joined the Abercrombie Robinson, on which vessel witness was in charge. The ship was lying at anchor a little below Kedgerree. The Custom House boat came along side with Mr. Kiernander on board to join the ship as Custom House officer. Immediately on boarding, the vessel, Mr. Kiernander informed witness, that there was the body of a man who had died on board the boat, and wished the Doctor to examine the body. The Doctor went into the boat; and witness followed him, and witness saw a body lying on one side of the boat. The Doctor was, when witness went on the boat, feeling the body about the chest and the pit of the stomach, and witness asked the Doctor as to the cause of the man's death. The Doctor replied that the man had died of apoplexy, and witness also felt the body, and saw no marks whatever upon it. The only thing perceptible on the body was froth and a very slight quantity of blood on the mouth. Witness then asked the Doctor if the blood and froth were symptoms of apoplexy, and the Doctor replied in the affirmative. Witness then enquired of the boatman, if the deceased had been previously sick, and their reply was in the negative. Witness further asked if the deceased at the time of his death made any noise from his throat, and the men replied "yes." The boat men after the enquiries proceeded up the river, Mr. Kiernander remaining on board. None of the crew gave the least hint of the deceased having been beaten by the prisoner, nor did Mr. Kiernander tell witness any thing regarding it. Saw no blood on the boat, besides what witness has already said. The deceased was of middle age. Is not aware of Mr. Kiernander's conversation with the Doctor, but he may have gone into detail. The crew had every opportunity of making their statements regarding the subject of this trial as they remained long by the ship's side. They ought to have done so to witness. The boat went on shore and returned a second time to the ship. Witness saw the manjoe on board the ship. Cannot recollect the Doctor's name. Does not know the Doctor's hand writing.

Cross examined by Mr. Dias.—Saw the Doctor deliver a paper to the prisoner after the examination of the body, but does not know the nature of it. The paper produced bears resemblance to the paper delivered by the Doctor to the prisoner. Witness heard the Doctor say, that he would give the prisoner a certificate.

John Beatson employed in the Subordinate branch of the Medical Department.—On the afternoon of either the 12th or 13th June last, while witness was on a visit at Mr. Iveson's at Diamond Harbour, the manjoe of the boat, who had taken Mr. Kiernander down to Kedgerree, came to Mr. Iveson's, and made a report, that one of his crew, during his absence, had died of cholera on board. Mr. Iveson asked witness to examine the body which witness immediately did carefully; but only an external examination. On witness's return, witness told Mr. Iveson, that it was witness's opinion that the man had died of apoplexy, and not of cholera. There was not the least mark of violence about any part of the body. There was a slight bleeding from the nose and mouth, which is always the case in all sudden deaths, particularly apoplexy. Did not enter into an internal examination, as it did not appear necessary, as witness was quite satisfied that the man had died of apoplexy. The vessels of the head and neck bore the general appearance of apoplexy: saw nothing remarkable about the eyes. Was present sitting at the table when Mr. Iveson received the manjoe's report. There were one or two men of the crew with the manjoe. Can recognize the manjoe of the boat at once, but not the other men. Witness remained at Diamond Harbour till the 14th of that month, and the report of the manjoe had made was never contradicted. The men were never checked, and during the time witness was at Diamond Harbour, the manjoe and the men had the fullest opportunity to make any report they pleased.

Mr. Dias said he would call no more witnesses, but requested permission of the Court to be allowed to make some remarks on the evidence adduced on the prosecution.

Judge.—I think you have a right to address the Court.

Mr. Dias opened his address by stating to the assembly, that they should be careful of the sense in which they comprehended the crime of the manslaughter with which the prisoner at the bar stood charged, as that was a crime divided into three separate degrees by the most learned lawyers at home such as justifiable homicide, homicide by misadventure, homicide by self-defence. Under the last head the prisoner could not stand charged, but the assessors had to consider which of the two former heads were applicable to the prisoner's situation at the bar. In Mr. Dias's opinion there was evidence enough to overrule the second head of manslaughter, and it struck him forcibly, that the charge alleged against the prisoner, as attempted on the prosecution, could not, if proved, amount to more than justifiable homicide. That crime Mr. Dias said was thus interpreted by the Law. "And that there must be no malice coloured under pretence of necessity." In the prisoner's case there was no evidence to prove either malice or a pretence for necessity. Mr. Kiernander had never seen the deceased before this unfortunate occurrence, and could not therefore have any difference with him; it was under the extreme necessity of enforcing his orders that without previous provocation he was led, under the influence of the moment, to strike three back handed slaps on his face. The case here assumed a justifiable act, as it is stated in the I Hawk. P. C. 75, "and an officer who kills one that resists him in the execution of his office, may justify the fact without losing his life for it."

The Court here remarked, that in the case of the prisoner at the bar it was not resistance but disobedience. Mr. Dias replied, that he quoted the authority under the impression, that if an officer is justified in killing a man for a resistance, it would be a fair inference that an officer should be justified in merely punishing an underling for disobedience of orders; for, said Mr. Dias, Mr. Kiernander was held liable for giving due effect to the orders of his immediate superintendent as had been proved in the prosecution by the evidence of Iveson, that the boat and the crew of it were placed under the immediate orders of the prisoner at the bar. Mr. Dias therefore begged of the assessors to bear that circumstance particularly in mind, as it was undoubtedly a justification for the three slaps. Mr. Dias then informed the Court, that the establishment of a preventive service necessarily prevented the smuggling and mal-practices of the boat-men and the villagers at the several stations down the river, and the Court should not wonder if the prosecution were a conspiracy originating with the boat-men and the smugglers, as the continued disobedience which was evinced towards Kiernander's orders, made Mr. Dias suspicious that the orders were not promptly attended to, to give time to some smuggling that was then carrying on at Kedgerree. Mr. Dias then went into the evidence of Cabel manjoe and the two Mataubdees. Cabel Manjoe, said Mr. Dias, this day deposed upon oath that he had no fire on board from noon to 10 p. m. of that evening, and Burra Mataubdee told us to-day, that he had prepared a chillum for the deceased and procured the fire in the boat. Cabel manjoe said, that he saw the prisoner strike deceased, but that it afterwards appeared that the boat was under way, and that he was steering by an English rudder which he could not do standing; and his being an eye witness of the assault is disapproved, as if he was working the rudder the roof of the boat would have prevented his observing the assault on the deck. Mr. Dias went on to say, there was not a tittle of evidence as to the symptoms the deceased showed at the moment of death, though it was not to be denied that a man had died on board that night. Cabel manjoe said, that the death was reported to him at Kedgerree Bazar: another witness states that the Cabel manjoe heard the report from inside of a basar house, which circumstance should justify the Court to set aside Cabel manjoe's evidence in toto.

The Judge here informed Mr. Dias, that there was sufficient before the Court to make it deprive the prosecution of Cabel manjoe's evidence as true, as beyond those Mr. Dias had pointed out, numerous discrepancies were already too glaring to be overlooked. Then, said Mr. Dias, the next witness, Mataubdee, stated that he heard the deceased say "I am dying," but goes on to say that he went and slept after hearing those words. The witness then suddenly awoke and desired Sheesteebur, another witness to see what the deceased was about, and Sheesteebur after having gone to the deceased said, "Tonoo is dead," so that Neethce Mataubdee and Sheesteebur were eye witnesses of the death of Tonoo, Mr. Dias then impressed on the minds of the jury, that they had a choice of rejecting the evidence on the prosecution as unworthy of belief, and attributing the cause of Tonoo's death to sudden apoplexy only, as was borne out by the evidence of no less than three medical men and informed the assessors that he was of opinion, that if this case went against the prisoner at the bar, it would be the means of encouraging the lowest class of natives at the stations below, to be constantly impeaching the conduct of the preventative service. He then reminded the jury that it was proverbial that the natives would not hesitate at a conspiracy or a perjury, as the records of the Zillah Court daily exhibited a mass of perjury so great as it would be hard to describe. Mr. Dias had practised better than two years in all the courts in the Zillah, and in several of the cases in which he was entertained, he had discovered that if a native had ever so good a cause or ever so good evidence in support of his cause, he would feel dissatisfied if he was not provided with at least two purchased evidences. Mr. Dias would therefore ask the court to place the evidence on the prosecution (save that of Mr. Iveson and Surgeon Fadda) in contraposition with the evidence adduced on the defence. He would ask the assessors if men in honorable employment and British subjects were to be disbelieved and a preference given to the very lowest caste of natives. Mr. Dias could not suppose that the court would be so disposed, he would therefore conclude that the prisoner at the bar had from the 19th of June last up to the present day been made an associate of better than a thousand felons, convicted of the worst of atrocities. Mr. Kiernaander, previous to that period, had been a respectable member of society, and he now depended on the verdict of the court for his restoration into Society and into the bosom of an anxious family. If the verdict of the court went to criminate the prisoner at the bar, it would at once hurl him into poverty and disgrace; but Mr. Dias hoped very sincerely, and to him it did not appear possible, that a court comprised of British subjects would return any other verdict than that of full and honorable acquittal, which Mr. Dias anxiously expected, not only from the gross discrepancies of the native witnesses, but the respectability of the British witnesses, and the evidence adduced on the defence. Mr. Dias then left the prisoner at the bar to the mercy of the Judge and to the due consideration of the gentlemen assessors.

After Mr. Dias's address, the Judge and the assessors retired into an adjoining room, and after a lapse of half an hour they again returned to the bench and the following verdict was proclaimed by the Judge. "The court having taken the evidence into consideration and the defence, are of opinion, that the blows given by the prisoner at the bar, are proved not to have been the cause of Tonoo's death. That the examination of his body proved that Tonoo died of apoplexy. The prisoner is, therefore, fully acquitted and ordered to be discharged. The verdict seemed to give general satisfaction, as during Mr. Dias' address the court room was crowded to excess with spectators both natives and Christians. The sessions were adjourned at 6 p.m., and will, we believe, be soon resumed as no less than three commitments for murder remain yet to be tried. Begat Hukura, July 18.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CALCUTTA.

CHOLERA.—The ravages of cholera, since the setting of the rains, have considerably abated, but many still daily fall victims to this baneful malady.

THE CROPS.—Accounts of the indigo crop remain unchanged. The grain crops have considerably improved since the setting in of the rains, and an average quantity of grain is now expected to be the out-turn of the season.

WRECK IN THE BAY.—The wreck of a large vessel, of about six hundred tons, was met by the Mary Anne Webb and Elizabeth on their passage to Calcutta, in latitude 17° 41' N., longitude 94° 23' east.

NARRATORY.—The following is an extract of a letter from Mr. MacGowan, a passenger on board of the schooner Suan, which was run away with by her commander from Madras roads recently:—

"Moulmein, 24th May, 1837.—I wrote you from Madras mentioning I intended coming to Moulmein in the schooner Suen of whose running away you have no doubt heard, and I don't know whether to say fortunately or unfortunately, I was on board. Instead of coming direct to Moulmein as I expected when I left Madras, we went to Car Nicobar, and there the worthy Captain of the said schooner thought proper to embezzle the cargo and take himself off, and as I had no alternative I brought the vessel over and delivered her to the owner in Rangoon."

RE-SALE OF OPIUM.—A positive sale of opium took place at the Exchange Rooms on the 25th of June according to advertisement, Mr. Parker attending on the part of the Board to receive the Deposit of defaulters up to the last moment. There were 54 lots of Patna opium on the list in the morning, but by payments made and security given in the room, the quantity was reduced to 23 lots of which the purchase prices at the June sale were—for 2 lots 1335 rs. for 11 lots 1456, and for 10 lots 1570; the first lot was knocked down at 1415 rs., after which the price immediately fell to 1400. The extremes were 1385 and 1416, and the average rs. 1399-9 per chest. Many of the trade were in attendance upon the look-out for a bargain expecting the prices to go lower.

AN ALLIGATOR CAPTURED.—A larger alligator, of the snub-nosed species, was taken to the kitchen of the Magistrate of Hoogly. It was twelve feet from the snout to the tip of the tail, and five and a half feet round the body. It was alive, and was caught at Tripany, a few miles above Hoogly, a celebrated bathing place for the natives. It was killed and skinned a few days subsequently, when the arm of an adult female, with some ornaments on, was found in the brute's maw. Three women had been missed from the Tripany bathing place during the fortnight preceding the capture of the alligator.

LIGHTNING.—At 6 p.m., during the violent thunder and lightning, the brig Sir William Wallace, upon the patent slip, was struck by the electric fluid. It first struck the head of the main topmast; in its course it shivered the mast to pieces and the mast about two-third down to the deck. After playing about that part of the mast, near the deck it cut out several small pieces glanced off to the starboard pump, knocking the casing over it to pieces and throwing the top ashore to a distance of about 60 feet. In descending into the pump, part of the electric fluid burst out of its side splitting the beam at the after part of the mast nearly in two, and tearing off the casing from the under side of the deck, ran in between the timbers and came out in an opening covered with copper, which it tore off and exploded. The other portion that went through the pump, passed out of the bottom plank which was worked Bombay fashion, with a rabbit which it separated in so trifling a degree as scarcely to be perceptible, although it shattered the sheathing board for about 2 feet and tore a piece out of the copper about five by eight inches; here it again exploded. During the shock smoke came out from the vessel and the hull trembled and the whole of the ground about the ship, appeared convulsed. The house close to the ship had the verandah separated from the main building, under which were Mr. Beauchamp, Captain Tingate and Mr. Reeves. The latter was knocked down and the two first had great difficulty in standing upon their legs, but fortunately all came off unhurt. Several trees at Seehpore, it appears, have also been blasted by lightning.

MILITARY ORPHAN SCHOOL.—The Revd. M. Ruspini has been unanimously elected to the Deputy Governorship of the Kishlerpore Military Orphan School and has accepted the situation.

Two of the vacancies in the Military Orphan Management have been filled up by the election of Captain J. Thomson, Engineers, and the election of Captain R. C. Macgregor.

THE ALIEN LAW.—Lord Auckland has received information of a very important decision of the Privy Council. On deciding on the appeal from the decision of the judges, in the Martine case, the Privy Council has laid it down, that the Alien Law does not apply to India.

THE BLACK ACT.—Intelligence has been received by Lord Auckland, on the subject of the Black Act, and its legality has received the sanction of the Company's Counsel, and the law officers of the Crown.

INSOLVENT COURT.—SATURDAY JUNE 24.—There was much business in the Insolvent Court to day. Francis Lewis Barber, some time secretary to the Hoogly River Insurance Company, was opposed by the Advocate-General on behalf of the Bank of Bengal. In his examination the insolvent stated, that he had drawn two accommodation bills, as secretary to the Insurance Company, for the sums of rs. 708, and 874, which were endorsed by one Stapleton, and discounted by the Bank. Stapleton was paying his addresses to the insolvent's daughter, and on the Bank demanding payment, had stated himself to be a minor. The Advocate-General submitted that the insolvent must have been aware of Stapleton's circumstances, and that his conduct in putting forth a man of straw as the endorser of the bills, was such as the court ought to make an example of.

Mr. Leith, for the insolvent, took two grounds: first there was no evidence before the court that Stapleton was a minor; secondly, if such were the fact, there was nothing to show the insolvent knew it. The court under the circumstances, thought there was misconduct in the transaction, but not sufficient to stay the insolvent's discharge.

The Advocate-General and Mr. Leith shewed cause against an order nisi obtained by Mr. Clarke in a former day to allow the assignees of David Clarke in England to prove for about six lakhs in the Estate of Messrs. Fergusson and Co.

Mr. Clarke begged the Court would postpone the case till next Court day; he had received the document upon which he had founded his application from the assignees in England, without sufficient information and was not prepared for the grounds upon which the Advocate-General and Mr. Leith resisted his application.

The Court postponed the case on the Advocate-General not objecting.

Mr. Justice Malkin pronounced his decision in a case of much importance to military men. The application was for an attachment against an insolvent officer for the non-payment to his assignees of one-third of his pay and allowances. The officer alleges that he cannot comply with the order of the court as the paymaster has already deducted, and is deducting, one half of his pay, for decrees of the Military Court of Requests, though the debts for which the decrees are made are on the insolvent's schedule. The judgment is that the decrees have no effect after the insolvency, and the stoppages are illegal.

C. St. L. Kearnan, was declared entitled to the benefits of the act.

CHARGE OF MALPRACTICES.—In consequence of a representation made by the Commissioner of the district the conduct of the Judge of the station of Hooghly, Government, in concert with the Sadder, have appointed a judicial officer to proceed to the spot and hear and investigate there, all complaint which may be made against the functionary in question.

PLAGUE.—No accounts have been received during the week contradictory of the statement of the suppression of the plague, and its ravages if not wholly checked, seem to be scarcely perceptible.

MONSIEUR DUPUIS' BALL.—Monsr. Dupuis had costume went off with a great deal of spirit on the night of the 3rd inst., and reflects great credit on that gentleman. It opened with a grand promenade of all the pupils (about one hundred) in different fancy costumes. The most prominent were, a couple of nautch girls and two young ladies in Neapolitan dresses. There was a sprinkling of young Turks, Greeks, brigands, penseints and nondescripts. Among the adults; there were five in character, a richly dressed Persian, a magnificent corsair and a Tancréd, also a couple of baboos who spoke broken English remarkably well. The stewards were attentive, and bestirred themselves in procuring partners for bashful young men. In short the whole affair was very well got up. There were about 800 present, and the party broke up at 2 a. m.

NEW ROAD.—A well made pukka road from Kishnagar to the river Hooghly is now nearly complete. It has been constructed at the expense of Government and is about six miles in length.

BABOO KRISHNA MOHUN BANERJEE.—On the 24th of June Baboo Krishna Mohun Banerjee was ordained at the chapel of the Bishop's College by the Lord Bishop of Calcutta. The Baboo is well known as having been a member of a high caste Bramhin family. He received his education at the Hindoo College, and was in the first instance engaged as a teacher of Mr. Hare's school. While here, he started the Enquirer which he conducted for a number of years with great ability. He subsequently became a convert to Christianity of which he has ever since been a staunch and devoted follower.

BABOO ROPILOL MULLICK.—On the 1st instant that very wealthy individual Baboo Ropillo Mullick breathed his last. It is said he has left behind him nearly one crore of rupees. Besides his four sons who will get fifteen lakhs each, his widow, daughter and gooroo will be the chief participants of his kingly fortune. Five hundred rupees were scattered at the river aside from religious motives, and it is rumoured that a lack of rupees has been set aside for the shroud expenses.

BENGAL BANK.—The Bank of Bengal on the 6th inst. declared a dividend for the past half year at the rate of seventeen per cent. per annum. The profits of the half year yield fourteen per cent of this rate, and the other three per cent. arise from sums recovered in the doubtful debts' account.

UNION BANK.—The Union Bank nett profits and funds applicable to the dividend of 30th June, exceed 14 per cent, which was shared out to the hungry but fortunate proprietors. The Purse has brought out new Company rupee notes for the Union Bank.

In consequence of the Marwarree merchants at the abortive opium sale last week, having observed a large collection of vehicles at the Union Bank on the day the proprietors met to share their fourteen per cent. profits, those wise men of the West took it into their noddles that there must be something wrong in the state of things, and rumours of a probable run on the Bank were rife among the bazar sages for a day or two. The Courier shewed by extracts from the Bank books, to which, as a proprietor, the Editor had access, that nothing had occurred to disturb the even tenor of the Bank's prosperous course.

THE KING OF OUDE.—The King of Oude died on the 8th instant. Minute guns were fired from the Fort in consequence on the 15th instant.

The Society is greatly in want of assistance, and has not been very successful, though its labours have been unremitting.

SPECIMENS OF THE MANUFACTURES OF SINDE.—A box of specimens of the manufactures of Sind received from Captain Burnes, have been transferred to the Chamber of Commerce. They are of a coarse but strong and close texture, and some of the longees and soosees exhibit a good deal of taste in the blinding of their colours.

THE PEECE.—The scarcity of the copper coin still keeps up its price in the market, and murmurings and curses are every day liberally bestowed by the poor upon the Government, which either cannot or will not remedy the evil by which they are afflicted. The loss of five pice in each rupee to a poor man who gets but three or four rupees per mensem, is a very severe affliction, however slightly the deduction may be felt by those who receive as many thousands; and who, though callous to the sufferings of the needy, would, we opine, be tolerably loud in their complaints and petitions for redress, if they were mulcted in the same ratio, with respect to salary, as the poor laborer is. Surely the Government might have waited a while, and provided itself better to meet the exigencies of the people, concomitant on the changing of the coin of the realm, before they adopted that measure; and not have necessitated itself to adopt the subterfuge of making men take, by compulsion, at sixteen annas per the rupee, the identical coin the Government a short time since purchased from them at about seventeen annas per rupee—which in the market is valued at about eighteen annas—and which the Government will, perhaps, again shortly render illegal and buy up at the latter rate. It is well that it is only the meek natives of India who are thus treated.

Week after week we have reported the unmitigated sufferings of the poor, consequent on this scarcity of copper money in the market; and yet no efforts seem to be made to ameliorate the state of affairs. Really the conduct of Government, respecting the coin, is much to blame. Unable to coin at the Calcutta Mint, a sufficient quantity of copper to meet the exigencies of the people, they yet, to save themselves a paltry expense, abolished the Madras Mint establishment, and called in, at a rate profitable to themselves, the old coin, unmindful of the injurious effects this proceeding might have on the populace. When the scarcity of pice became seriously felt in all quarters—when private individuals coalesced to check the extortions of the pice-holders, and did the duty of the Government, by relieving the burthen imposed on the public of Calcutta and its vicinity;—when these philanthropic individuals petitioned Government to defray the expense of the establishment they were obliged to maintain, what was the reply they received to their reasonable request? Why, a sneering intimation that the Government would not grant their petition, and would, when they thought the state of affairs required their interference, adopt measures fully adequate to remove the grievances complained of. What have they done?—what efficacious measures have they adopted to amend matters? Why, they have removed their prohibition to let the Madras Mint be employed, and have sanctioned the coining there of copper, and thereby, no doubt, the denizens of the benighted Presidency have been much benefited. In Calcutta, they have established shops in several parts of the town, where they vend, at a rate which yields them a considerable profit, circular bits of old copper, covered over with verdigrise, and which, despite the Government ordinance, will not pass current in any other place besides the said shops and Government establishments, as they have by abrasion scarcely any impression left on them, are totally denuded of all distinguishing marks. The people are mulcted more than one anna in consequence; but no new piece comes forth from the Mint to supply the place of the defaced ones; at the Government change shops, which coin, as we have before said, yields the Government a rich harvest, as it was very lately bought up at about seventeen annas per rupee. Honorable Sirs, who have the guidance of the affairs of this Government, we call upon you to redeem your pledge—to forego your pre-ent unfair and thimble-rig proceedings respecting the currency, and to resort, at the present crisis, to those energetic and efficacious measures, which you promised you would adopt when the state of affairs required your interference. The loss and tribulation produced by your at least seeming inertness, which all poorer classes are now subjected to, strongly call for your interference,—redem, therefore, your pledge, but in fairness, as a preliminary measure, call in your old defaced copper at the same rate as you issued it—sixteen annas for the rupee.

NATIVE EDUCATION.—A pathshala has been established at No. 31, Sham-bazar, since the 1st of last month, under the auspices of Raja Kalkrishna, an auxiliary to the Hindoo Benevolent Institution, whose instruction is given in the Bengalee language, from eleven to four every day, Sundays excepted.

BAI YOUNG TANK CASE.—This case has after all been given in favor of the Magistrate of the Twenty-four-Pergunnahs by the Sudder. One of their reasons is, that Mr. Pattle did not in the course of the proceedings held by Mr. Patton urge the plea of being a British subject, and that, therefore, Mr. Patton was justified in punishing Mr. Pattle by fine; but even setting that aside, they consider all Magistrates fully empowered to punish delinquents for offering open resistance to the execution and enforcement of their processes. Another ground assumed by the Sudder, is that of Mr. Baiwell's remission of the fine on Mr. Pattle should be annulled, in as much as Mr. Pattle at first filed a petition of appeal before Mr. Commissioner Pigou, and then of a sudden attempted to obtain a certiorari to remove the proceedings before the Supreme Court, failing in which, Mr. Pattle renewed his appeal after the lapse of the usual term of appeals (one month), and that therefore his application should have been set aside.

MR. KIERNANDER.—Mr. Kiernander, the tide-waiter, who was confined on a charge of manslaughter for causing the death of a boatman, has been fully acquitted and set at liberty.

Luckily for the owner, the fellow was caught the day following, with the whole of the property in his possession in the Hooghly Zillah.

A dacoity has lately been perpetrated at the dwelling house of a man of the name of Bhudder in Rampoor in the pergunnah of Bhoorsoot. FATAL ACCIDENT.—One of the midshipmen belonging to the Reliance, while bathing under the bows of that vessel on the night of the 10th instant, suddenly disappeared. The unfortunate young man must have fallen a victim to the numerous sharks now in the river opposite to Calcutta.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENTS.—A native of the name of Joy Kissen Sett, drowned himself in a state of insanity about a week ago, in a tank in his own garden at Taulah. The deceased was an interesting young man, and belonged to a very respectable family. He was educated in the Hindu College; but the distressed state of the affairs of his family, had obliged him to accept of the situation of a writer in one of the Govt. offices on a small salary, which he continued to hold till a few months ago, when he was discharged, on account of the loss of his intellect.

MURDERS.—On the 24th instant, three Africans, two men and a woman, the two former named Sealee Nobin and Sealee Ismail, and the latter Nurgez, were brought to the Police Hospital with dreadful wounds on their persons. The following is the substance of the particulars which have reached us regarding the individuals. Nurgez was the wife or the concubine of Ismail, who had left her destitute of the means of subsistence some five or six months ago, a circumstance which obliged her to form a connexion with Sealee Nobin, as a matter of necessity for her support. On the 23d instant, Ismail returned to Nurgez, and finding Nobin with her, at once flew into a rage, and struck him a severe blow with a table knife in his belly. He then inflicted several blows with the knife on Nurgez, and last of all, he run it into his own body a little below the chest. Nurgez and Nobin have expired of the wounds they received, and the Coroner's inquest held over their bodies, has returned a verdict of wilful murder against Ismail alias Ibrahim, who continues in an almost hopeless state.

A European named Brooks, who lives some where about Chowringhee, was on the evening of the 26th instant, in a quarrel, wounded near the heart with a table knife, by one Mrs. Howe, alias Miss Kearney. EXTORTION PUNISHED.—Mr. McCulloch, of the conservancy department of the Police, brought up three of the moordasfurashas, employed in killing pariah dogs about the streets of Calcutta, stating that on the 23d instant, the prisoners were detected in creating a nuisance in Rada Bazar and Old China Bazar, by exposing rotten dogs, to the great annoyance of the passengers and the shop-keepers, and extorting money from the latter.

The Magistrate sentenced the prisoners, who, admitted the charge, each to pay a fine of ten rupees or to be imprisoned in the House of Correction for two months—and to be dismissed the service.

MOFUSSIL.

MOORADABAD.—A disease—the yellow jaundice—prevails in this town and the surrounding country, and is of a very fatal character. The numbers who have already perished from it were ascertained, by a census which the Magistrate ordered, to amount to 1800, in the city alone, within a period of three months. Quarantine regulations, as in force at Agra, have been established here for the exclusion of plague. Earthquakes have continued to occur for several months, the intermission between them being three days now, and not, as formerly, one day.

MOTTRA.—On the 11th ultimo, a body of invalids took their departure from the station, and amongst the number, the old Subadar-Major of 10th Cavalry, Mier Sulabut Ali. He was a fine, gallant old soldier, of more than 52 years' service, and a great favourite with the European officers. His portrait, an excellent likeness, drawn by Mr. Melville of Kurnaul,—is hung up in the Regimental Mess-room,—a compliment seldom paid to our native fellow soldier, and with which the old gentleman was highly gratified.

NEEMUCH.—The rains appear to have set in at this station, but very lightly, a few light showers only having fallen. No apprehensions whatever are entertained of the plague; indeed there are no marks of its existence in the station, or the country round.

JUGGURNAUTH.—In consequence of the unprecedented drought that has lately been experienced, a very great scarcity of rice prevails at Juggurnauth, and hundreds of persons are therefore famished.

CUTTACK.—The famine at Cuttack still continues to the same frightful extent as noticed before. It has caused thefts and gang robberies to increase in number every day; and want of water had been so great, that in certain places in the Mofussil, it sold at six kulsies for the rupee.

MERUT.—The Committee for inspecting the Pay Master's accounts, continues to sit. The defalcation amounts to Rs. 80,000, and has been created solely by the bobos attached to the office. No blame attaches to Lord Gordon, beyond a too great confidence in these people.

DEYRA DHON.—In consequence of numerous applications to Government for extensive tracts of land in Deyra Dhon from enterprising gentlemen anxious to establish themselves there, it is reported that the branch of the Revenue Survey, at present employed in the Delhi district, under Captain Brown, will be ordered to proceed to the Dhon, and prepare a Survey of that valuable tract of country.

DELHI.—A small theatre has been erected by a spirited individual of the station, and it will open for the amusement of the public in a short time with two very favorite pieces.

A prisoner in attempting to escape from his gang, which was working on the road near the Taj, was observed by a chapprasee, who pursued, overtook, and meeting with resistance in capturing him, struck him with his sword. The blow divided the femoral artery and the man expired.

The rains still keep away and the country is consequently much parched, and the usual effects of a protracted rainy season are beginning to manifest themselves. This want of rain extends over all the country as far as Mirzapore, where but a few shower have fallen.

The College examination was attended by a number of visitors, Civil and military, who witnessed with much interest the progress of the students in the English language, particularly of the two senior classes, who in addition to a very considerable knowledge of that language, displayed a very respectable proficiency in the elements of general education.

Shoolceeman Shukoo, brother of the King of Delhi, has withdrawn from Agra, to escape the tyranny—as he calls it, of the Company's Courts. Notwithstanding his handsome pension of rupees 6,000 per mensem, he was deeply embarrassed, and was constantly sued by his creditors, a proceeding which naturally inspired his royal mind with disgust. He has selected Gwalior for his temporary residence.

Mr. Gordon, of the Agra Bank, is about to proceed to Calcutta, to push the proposal submitted to Government, to sanction the issue of bank-notes by that institution. The views of Lord Auckland are, it is said, favourable as regards the general principle, of granting to the country a more extensive paper currency than it at present enjoys, and are somewhat opposed to those entertained by Sir C. Metcalfe.

Cawnpore.—A squadron of the 5th Light Cavalry proceeded to Lucknow on the 11th instant, and a squadron of the 7th were under orders to move.

A native saddler recently met his death in the following unfortunate manner. He was employed by Mr. Cornish the coach maker, who kicked him in the side for some fault, from which the man died: on examination of the body it appeared, that his liver was burst by the blow. Mr. C., who immediately gave himself up, was sentenced by the Magistrate to eight months' imprisonment and a fine of 100 rupees.

The weather has been very sultry and oppressive, with high winds and dry typhons. The thermometer at day-light has been at 90.

Two or three courts-martial are sitting as a matter of course in such weather.

A sweepstakes came off on the 16th inst., for 5 gold-mohurs—dist. round the course. Mr. Adam's grey Arab, Mr. Ximenes' black mare, and Mr. Fitzgerald's black mare. The grey took the lead and kept it with ease—no time. About 100 gold-mohurs changed owners on the occasion.

SHAHJAHANPOOR.—The Nuwab, Buhadoor Khan, has been committed for trial before the Sessions' Court at Bareilly, for his part in the late murderous riots at Shahjahanpore. The Magistrate, Mr. Bullen, and Mr. Barron, have been summoned as witnesses in the case. The principal Mussulmans are leaving no means unattempted to extricate themselves from the awkward situation they are in, and among others have sent a vakeel to Sir Charles Metcalfe, who will of course decline to receive him.

The new Kotwal,—a Hindoo—has had notice of assassination duly served on him, which will probably be carried into effect some fine night.

SAHARUNPOOR.—This city has suffered considerably from a late conflagration, which consumed the houses of the poorer inhabitants, who are consequently in much distress.

SAHARUNPOOR.—On the 7th instant, two officers, Captain G. S.—the, of the Cavalry, and Ensign R.—b—n, whose literary warfare has lately been before the public, met with their seconds, from their several places of residence, at the central point of Saharunpoor, for the purpose of an appeal to the ultima ratio. The magistrate, however, was apprised of the circumstance,—interfered and bound them down to keep the peace. The parties have since made friends.

LOODEWANAH.—A son of Sooja-ool-Mouk has just died. Dr. Faulkener passed lately through Loodecuanah on his way to Lahore.

BAREILLY.—An attempt to assassinate the principal Hindoo inhabitant of this city, Buswant Roy, has just been made. The intended victim of Mussulman fanaticism was proceeding on his elephant, with his usual number of attendants, through one of the streets of the town, when he was shot at by a Mussulman zealot, with a blunderbuss. He fortunately escaped, but the servant behind him was wounded. His attendants immediately proceeded to seize the ruffian, who killed one and wounded another, and it was not until his hands were severed from his arms by sword blows, that he was over-mastered. In this state a sheet was thrown over him until the Police arrived, and when they came and the sheet was removed, it was found that the unfortunate wretch had bled to death.

BHOLPOOR.—Shoolceeman Shukoo has reached this city, en route to Gwalior. So solicitous is the Raja to acquire a character for peace and regularity with the British Government, that it was with the utmost impatience he witnessed the temporary sojourn of his royal guest, whose ill-managed followers, he justly feared, would come into collision with his own people.

NATIVE STATES.

PESHAWAR.—The news from this is common and uninteresting. The only item worth a glance is the sack of a village on the Utuk, by Khooshal Singh, and the massacre of every human being it contained. It is said that even the tombs and mosques were injured, if not partially pulled down.

It is said that several of the Sudars in Dost Mahomed's force at Durh Khybur, yielding to the temptations of advance, had determined on going off to Runjeet Sing. On hearing of their intentions, the son of Dost Mahomed gave expression to some "round oaths": very high words passed amongst these noble chiefs, but some wise people managed to reconcile matters and to obtain their pardon. Active preparations for war are being made, and there can be little doubt but that some of these days, there will be a really grand fight.

MUNROOPORE.—A serious rise in the price of corn has taken place here, in consequence of some of the principal dealers in that article having made heavy purchases under the impression that famine must follow the present singular season. The Brahmins, the usual bidders of ill, have predicted a grievous one for the next rubber harvest.

Grain has attained a distressingly high price in consequence of the unprecedented drought of the season. As a relief to the poor, the Rajah has allowed them to cut wood in his game preserves for sale.

SONDHOOR.—The epidemic in this town, pronounced by the most intelligent hukeems in it to be the plague, has, it is computed, caused the death of as many as 200,000 people, and certainly not less than 16,000. It has now almost totally disappeared and is entirely extinct in Marwar.

OWAYOR.—The Mamrjee has resigned his appointment as principal adviser to the Raja in consequence of a misunderstanding which lately took place between them, and is about to leave the place. He is now a detenu, by the Maharajah's orders until he shall give, what is perhaps not very easy, an account of his stewardship.

Mama Goormsh Rao mentioned some circumstances regarding one Tarah, attached to Maharajah Junkoo Rao's zenana, to Major Sutherland, on which account the Maharajah discharged him:—he went to his own quarters and collected his followers. Upon hearing of this, the Maharajah sent for him under pretence of making up the quarrel. When he presented himself in compliance with the request he received: he was, by the Maharajah's orders, arrested and placed in confinement. Owing to disturbances at Gwahar the dak has been stopped for twelve days.

NUWABPOOR.—The Nuwab of this State has banished robbery from his territories, and taught his subjects the rare knowledge of prizing honour and virtue more than golden store. This interesting object he has accomplished by stripping his subjects and leaving them nothing to be robbed of.

NUBUND.—Payindur Khan has boned twenty camels from the followers of Runjeet Sing's army, and is carrying on his depredations, and committing ravages on all sides: it is supposed that the Maharajah will send a large force to give the "offending villain" a sound drubbing!

OF DL.—Nussur-ood Dowlah, the uncle of the deceased monarch, a man of about seventy years of age, has been proclaimed King by the British Government. Some disturbances succeeded the decease of the late King, of which, we believe, the following is a correct account:—

At about 11 o'clock at night, the Resident, Col. Low, having received the announcement of the King's death, proceeded to the Palace. He was accompanied by his aids, Captain Patton and Mr. Shakespeare, and a few personal attendants. About 3 o'clock in the morning, the Begum, accompanied by her son, and about 2,000 people, came down towards the grand gate of the Palace in solemn procession, with lights, guards, &c. Col. Low immediately directed Captain Patton to make a stand at the great gate; that officer accordingly proceeded to the gate, and succeeded for some time in excluding the party of the Begum. Elephants, however, were called into requisition, and after about half an hour the gate, by the assistance of these brutes, was pushed down, falling inwards, with a crash, and nearly killing Captain Patton, and his few attendants. The mob of the Begum then rushed in and Captain Patton, endeavouring to make good his post, by resistance and expostulation, was at length knocked down, and severely beaten with the butt ends of muskets. The palankeen of the Begum and her son then crossed, the quadrangale, accompanied by the attendant mob, and proceeded towards the great hall of audience, and succeeded in making good their entry— notwithstanding the attempt made by the small party within to shut the door against them. Col. Low did all they could in the way of representation and command, to induce these misguided people to retire; both he and Mr. Shakespeare, who was with him, were hustled about in the most disrespectful manner, and on their persisting in the attempt to prevent the object of the Begum and her son, they were abused, and every demonstration of ill feeling short of actual violence, was exhibited by the party who now had possession of the Palace. The Begum was accompanied by a vakoel, who under the circumstance of the Resident being in the Palace, was supposed to enter into a negotiation with him. Col. Low, and Mr. Shakespeare, however, finding the people determined, and seeing the ceremony of the coronation of the boy going on, succeeded in pushing their way down, to the great gate; and the troops to whom messages had been dispatched, at length made their appearance. The tables were then turned, and the Resident was relieved from the situation of extreme peril and embarrassment. An order was immediately sent to the Begum and the Prince, to break up the ceremonial and depart. An evasive answer was returned; and it now being manifest that the whole population was crowding round the Palace, in a very dangerous state of excitement an order was sent by the Resident to the Begum's party to quit the palace in one quarter of an hour, or the troops would be ordered to fire. The order was disregarded, and at the expiration of the time given, the troops opened on the mob, who instantly dispersed.

ULWAR.—It is said that the Ulwar Rajah is desirous of introducing the English mode of Government into his territories; and several discharged Court officials, have already set out from Delhi for Ulwar, to offer their services to the Maharajah.

LABOUR.—At the meeting of the Council an account was received from the authorities residing near the Attock describing the destruction of the bridge, from the rapid rise of the waters, and its reconstruction by the boat people; a hint was given as to the propriety of rewarding the labourers, to which a favourable answer was given.

Dhucna Nath represented that General Ventura had written to him, that if the Maharajah would consent he would advance and surround Jullalabad with six regiments. He was told that an answer would be given after the rains.

The chair bearer of the Maharajah, having lately returned from Peshawar, stated that Rajah Dhyap Sing and Now Nehal Sing were encamped at Baruk, and that the Son of Dost Mahomed had, on the approach of the Maharajah's forces, left a thousand men, horse and foot, at the Aile Masjid and had himself gone to Dhukul Lalpore from want of pay and provisions many of these men had left their posts and proceeded to their homes. The country of Peshawar, from the said effects of war, had become a desert, but matters appeared likely to mend and the prospect, become more cheering after the arrival of the Maharajah's Army.

There was a dispute between Judawhur Sing and Ujun Sing, the Son of Hurree Sing, for the command of their father's troops, which was settled by Koonwur Now Nehal Sing's telling them that the disputed point would be settled by the Maharajah.

Futteh Khan, Punjar Walla, and Payindah Khan, Durband Walla, having joined their forces, amounting to 20,000 horse and foot, had ravaged the country of the Yusoozias on both sides of the Attock, situated within the boundaries of the vast domains of the late Hurree Sing; they had destroyed and burnt several villages.

WAR IN SEHORE.—A letter received from Sehore, dated the 4th instant, contains the following:—The Nuwab and the Begum encountered each other about ten days ago; the conflict was smartly contested, but the Begum's guns and well mounted cavalry gave her an advantage over the Nuwab who has no guns nor cavalry. About two hundred men were killed and wounded on either side. The Nuwab made a sally on the Begum's troops, which had got into a suburb to plunder; a few were killed and the rest were driven back a mile beyond their trenches by the Nuwab's men. The Nuwab has about 2000 men in the fort of Ashla, and the Begum a like number besieging it: her best gunners (two Portuguese men) were killed in the sally; the fire of the guns is now therefore wholly ineffective. In the mean time the rains will be falling and must drive the Begum's troops back to Bhopal, or drown them in the muddy fields they occupy, unless despair drive them to an escalade.

MEYWAR.—An extensive zameendar of this district has refused to pay his quota of revenue to the Blount-poor Rajah—a proceeding in which he is countenanced by the Rajah of Ulwar. A force is now in readiness to start from Blountpoor to enforce payment, which will probably lead to a miniature war between these two States, until the Company's officers interfere.

MADRAS.

TRIVERTER.—A most foolish fracas has recently taken place at Madras. It would appear that the fashionables there had determined to establish Re-unions, and a list of lady patronesses was prepared and circulated, when Mr. A. D. Campbell, of the Civil Service, Acting Judge of the Sudder, discovered the name of Mrs. Norton, the Advocate-General's wife, placed above Mrs. Campbell's. He remonstrated and desired, unless Mrs. Campbell walked up the list, and Mrs. Norton down, that the former's name should be withdrawn altogether. The Advocate-General replied, that he had nothing to do with the formation of the list; but as Mrs. Norton had hitherto received precedence before the wives of Judges of the Sudder, he saw no sufficient reason to acquiesce in any change, in order to gratify Mr. Acting Judge Campbell. It is said that Mr. Campbell claims the precedence in consequence of some old letter in the time of Sir John Anstruther, in which, on Committees with the Judges of the Sudder and Supreme Court, the Advocate-General was directed to sit under them.

THE MINT.—Orders have been issued for the immediate preparation of the Mint for the execution of copper coinage, and no delay will be incurred in carrying these orders into effect.

COTTON.—The first arrivals of cotton from the southward this season have made their appearance. Two or three dhonies came in on the 27th ultimo, laden with cotton the produce of Tinnevely.

GRANT TO THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The Madras Government have obtained the sanction of the Supreme Government for the grant of an annual sum to the Madras Horticultural Society.

DOCTOR O'CONNOR.—The Governor General in Council has recognized Doctor O'Connor as the Head of the Roman Catholic Church at Madras; and has also placed under his spiritual controul the Catholic soldiery stationed at the Mount. This last decision has been accelerated, if not caused, by the contumacious treatment experienced some months ago by the Rev. Mr. Stephens, consequent upon the burial of a Catholic soldier.

THE AMHERST AND CONWAY.—The Company's sloop of war Amherst, Captain Sawyer, arrived at Madras on the 25th ultimo, from Trincomallee and lauded a d-tachment of the 23d Bombay N. I. consisting of Captain Leddel, 1 subaltern and about 100 rank and file.

H. M. Ship Conway, sailed from Madras on the night of the 16th ultimo, and arrived at Trincomallee on the morning of the 18th, which is probably the quickest passage ever known in the S. W. Moonsoon.

ACTS OF THE BENIGHTED.—The American ship Star, which suffered so materially in the November gale as to put it beyond the power of the agents to effect the necessary repairs to her even on bottomry—was sold and purchased under the impression that she would be entitled to a Company's pass, undergoing repairs to a certain extent. When, however, the purchase was completed, it was with difficulty that a pass could be obtained at this presidency, to allow the vessel to proceed to Coringa; and then only under certain restrictions, which were that she should be broken up on her arrival there; and the Collector of Rajamundry was written to, to see this stipulation carried into effect. The purchasers thinking themselves handsly dealt by, appealed to the Supreme Government. The result was a reply from Mr. Secretary Princep, that the Star would be entitled to a pass, after she had undergone repairs to the extent of two-thirds of what she had been sold for. This letter was forwarded to Madras, with a reiteration of the request that this Government would authorize a pass to be granted, but it still persisted in abiding by its first decision. In consequence, the Agent for the owners in Calcutta, submitted a second application to the supreme Government, which produced a Minute in Council to the effect, that the Collector of Rajamundry was authorised to grant a pass to the vessel after the completion of the repairs referred to; and the said Minute was ordered to be read in the Council of Fort St. George. The repairs were consequently proceeded with; but the vessel has been since sold, and is now French property.

CHOLERA.—Cholera has appeared, though to no great extent, in H. M.'s 63d regiment. Two companies, in which the few cases occurred, have been detached, and are encamped in the neighbourhood of St. Thome.

SUPPLY OF ICE.—Arrangements have been entered into with the American speculators in the shipment of ice and the Committee of the Madras Club, to obtain an early supply of that luxury; and the conditions are the consumption of a stipulated quantity and the construction of an ice-house—both which preliminaries the Club is said to have ratified.

THE LATE ACCIDENT ON THE BEACH.—The last act of Lord Elphinstone, before quitting Madras for Bangalore, was to address an official letter from the Council Board to the Superintendent of Police, desiring to know whether a Coroner's Inquest had been held on the body of the unfortunate sufferer, in the late fatal accident in the surf,—if so, to state whether any evidence had been elicited which attached culpability or remissness to the Beach Establishment; and in the event of no inquest having been held then to report the cause of the omission.

CORONER'S INQUEST.—The Coroner of Madras has still abundant occupation; and, what with the oppressive heat of the weather, the distance he has to travel over, the difficulty of assembling juries, and the tedium caused by the raw materials of which they are composed, his office is assuredly no sinecure.

On the 14th ultimo, as Mr. Gleig, of the Civil Service, was landing with his family from the Aurora when the surf was comparatively as smooth as a mill-pond, on the boat approaching the outer surf the crew, as usual, demanded a buoy, which Mr. Gleig most peremptorily refused, and for which he was as nearly as possible precipitated into the sea with Mrs. Gleig, two infants and three servant maids. The boatmen no sooner passed the outer surf than they brought the broad side of the boat to the wave, and Mr. Gleig says that nothing but the extreme lowness of the surf saved them from upsetting. The affair is under investigation.

MR. CHAS. WM. BLUNT, Barrister, has been appointed Common Assignee, in succession to Mr. Savage, who has resigned the office. Mr. Blunt was sworn in on the 16th ultimo.

THE DELINQUENT BOATMEN.—The boatmen who were confined for wilfully upsetting Col. Passmore, Capt. and Mrs. Dunbar, and others in the surf and robbing them, have been tried and acquitted for want of evidence.

BOMBAY.

THE IMAM OF MUSCAT'S FRIGATE.—A frigate of thirty-two guns, belonging to H. H. the Imam of Muscat, from Zanzibar 7th June, arrived on Saturday morning, having Capt. Cogan and the officers and crew of the Prince Regent yacht as passengers.

THE BERENICE.—The Berenice went into dock on the 6th instant. It is rumoured that great differences of opinion exist as to the extent of repairs required as to her boilers, and as to the time within which they may be accomplished. The Engineer sent out in the ship from Glasgow, pledges himself to put her in complete repair in eight days; two months are marked out by the opposite party as necessary.

DESTRUCTION OF COCONUT TREES.—It is said that in consequence of the destruction of a great number of coconut trees by the late gale, the Augria state has been deprived of an annual revenue of 25,000 rs. nearly.

RESTORATION OF ALLOWANCES TO THE SHASTREE FAMILY.—It was stated some months ago, that positive instructions had been sent to Baroda to restore to the sons of the late Gungaher Shastree Putvurduhu their former allowance. It is now said that H. H. the Guicowar having refused to pay the amount due to the Shastree's family within the specified period, and intimated a wish to appeal to the authorities in England on the subject, the sum is to be given from the Kattiawar tribute, and that a part of it has already been paid.

QUARTER-MASTER GENERALSHIP.—It is bruited that Quarter Master Generalship of the Army, has been offered to and declined by Col. Lodwick.

MR. WAGHORN.—Mr. Ashburner, Mr. Waghorn, and Mr. Higginson left Malta in the same steamer for England, on the 4th April, the May packet may therefore bring some intelligence of the reception, or probable reception, of the application from hence for a chartered bank. Mr. Waghorn has purchased the Lady Emily, a vessel of 150 tons, formerly a Government yacht, with excellent accommodations for passengers, for the purpose of employing her as a packet between Alexandria and Marseilles.

The paddle shaft to the Hugh Lindsay which she lost in the late gale that was experienced at Bombay, has been fished up.

SHIPWRECKS.—On the 15th ultimo, Bombay was visited by a severe hurricane, which committed fearful havoc. The following is an imperfect list of the damage sustained by the shipping which is estimated at above twenty-five lakhs:—Hastings, Company's receiving ship, driven from her moorings upon the pier head, bilged, must be docked, 5 feet water in hold. Aurora, floating chapel, ditto lost on the rocks. Northumberland driven up in the bayon, bilged and broken back, supposed total loss. Great Harwood, on the rocks under flag staff, bilged, and supposed total loss. Edinburgh, (1,500 tons,) on shore off Fort George, with 3,000 bales of cotton. Hopes of getting her off on being lightened if the weather continues moderate. Mary Dugdale, with 2000 bales of cotton for China, on shore. Cargo may be saved, but the ship expected to break up next tide. Richard Walker, with 1000 bales of cotton and wool, on shore, a total wreck. The goods may be landed damaged. Rapid, on shore at Musjeed Bundur; may get off. Julia, ditto ditto. Hugh Lindsay's bowsprit and larboard paddle carried away by the Berenice, which struck thrice, but is now at anchor under Butcher's Island. Briton, with 3000 bales of cotton for Liverpool, totally lost in Colaba: three lives lost and most of the cargo floating on shore. Ranger, on shore, a total wreck. Hind, a total wreck. Corsair still afloat, but greatly damaged. John Stamp, on shore, with 1800 bales of cotton. It is supposed will be got off by unloading. Company's brig Tiptoe, dismasted.

ROBBERY AT CHEWBY.—On the night of the 10th ultimo the house of a merchant named Bucha Baisette was burglariously broken open, and property to the amount of about 2500 rupees taken away. His wife was severely wounded and many other people in the house were cruelly beaten. The depredators are supposed to have been about 60 or 70 in number. To evade their being recognized they had coloured their bodies in various ways.

HIS HIGHNESS THE GUICOWAR.—On the 6th ultimo, the Resident of Baroda, with his assistants, Messrs. Mallot and Courtney and the Karbharies of the residency, waited on his Highness the Guicowar in a durbar, which was attended by his Karbharee Venceram and other Durukhdars. The Resident had a private interview with His Highness for about two hours, the object of which was believed to communicate to His Highness the final decision of our Government on the subject of several important matters on which differences have some time since existed between it and the Baroda durbar. The Resident is said to have clearly intimated to Sanyjee Rao that it was the wish of the Company's Government that His Highness should dismiss Venceram from his administration, for it was owing to his advice that the present differences had arisen; and further, that should His Highness not comply with the requisition, the British Government would confine Venceram by virtue of the treaty. The orders now communicated by the Resident are very strong, and should the Guicowar not attend to them, it is said they are to be strictly enforced: that the Kattiawar, the Rewa Kanta, and the Myhee Kanta, tributes are to be withheld; and that satisfaction is to be demanded for several injuries which have been received from him.

COLONEL OVANS.—Colonel Ovans is appointed acting Resident at Sattara in supercession to Colonel Lodwick.

COURT MARTIAL.—The court-martial, on Lieut. Robertson, 10th regiment N. I., held at Belgaum, for having interfered, contrary to the express orders of the Government, in the affairs of the Sawwut Warce state; 1st, in confining Wittal Rao Baba Row Maneskur, a karkoon, on the occasion of the expulsion of Ram Raw Bhandaree, under orders from the British authority;

2nd, in having placed in confinement Dhondoo Vishnoo Apte, Vakeel of the British Government; 3rd, in having unceremoniously entered the palace of the chieftain and demanded an interview with him while he was engaged at his devotion. On the two first charges Lieut. R. being found guilty, and on the 3d, not guilty, he was sentenced to lose one step in his regiment, and to be severely reprimanded by the Commander-in-Chief.

CEYLON.

The Honorable Company's ship Amherst, bound from Mangalore to Bombay with detachments of H. M. 6th Regt. and 23d Bombay Native Infantry on board, has arrived at Trincomalee. She could not make Bombay and has with difficulty been enabled to reach Trincomalee, having on board 140 men who have been obliged to live upon roasted gram for some days. The Columbia, also bound for Bombay with 300 troops on board, parted company from the Amherst, and has not since been heard of.

BURMAH.

A letter has been received from Col. Burney, dated 1st May. All was quiet at the capital, and the new government on the whole, appear well disposed towards us though intoxicated with its easy and unforeseen success over its rivals in the state. Some alarm appears to have existed at Ava that the English and Taliens had joined and were overrunning the southern part of the country. The new king has put a few of the late ministers to death in a most cruel manner. One, it seems, was sawn in two perpendicularly; and others were crucified and embowelled. The Men-thaghee that was, is yet alive in prison.

The old King is under restraint. The heir apparent has, it seems, a great deal of outward respect shown him by the Court,—contrary to his solemn promises. It may be considered, however, as something wonderful that he has abided so well by his promise and spared so many lives.

He has seized treasure to a very considerable amount from the late ministry.

Moulmein Chronicles to the 24th ultimo, intimate, that Lieut. Smith of the 13th N. I., the officer who was deputed at the close of April last, to join Col. Burney in order to afford him the means, if necessary, of communicating with his Government, returned on the 16th instant, having executed the duty entrusted to him with skill and promptitude. He left Rangoon on the 3d May and arrived at Ava on the 24th of the same month, having met with no obstacle or interruption in his trip beyond the expression of some insolence and impertinence on the part of the new king's troops stationed at the place where Lieut. Brevor was prepared to make fight, when opposed on his passage up with the Resident's relief escort. The arrival of Lieutenant Smith is represented as having had a good effect, inasmuch as it has shewn to the Court of Ava, that the British Government require the communication with its representative to be kept free and open, and that on any suspicion of foul play towards him, the petty local British authorities round Ava, are on the qui vive, and ready to do their utmost either to assist him or to resent any outrages offered him. The country still continues very much disturbed.

SINGAPORE.

Singapore journals to the 10th of June mention, that the Dutch Commissioners, appointed to co-operate with the English authorities in the future suppression of piracy in the Straits, had arrived at Singapore; and that the Singapore Government were endeavouring to discourage our naval Commanders in the Straits, from exerting themselves to capture the pirates, by obliging them to transmit all the pirates they capture to Calcutta, on their own responsibility, defraying the expences of their conveyance as well as that of witnesses necessary for their conviction!

PENANG.

A wreck.—The commander of the brigantine Genoviva, when about twelve leagues to the westward of Pulo Bias, fell in with a vessel apparently water logged, having two lower masts standing. She was in sight for one hour, and as the sea occasionally took her, the hull was clearly discerned to be that of a square rigged vessel.

THE EX-KING OF KEDAH—A very numerous meeting of the European and native community assembled on the 30th of May, at the Library, to take into consideration the letter addressed to the principal merchants of the settlement by the ex-Rajah of Keda, and to adopt measures for representing his grievances to the Supreme authority in India, and ultimately to His Majesty in Council. After the expression by several individuals, of their indignation at the unjust treatment His Majesty had received at the hands of the British Government, the following resolutions were proposed and adopted:—

1st. That this meeting deeply sympathizes with his highness Sultan Abdul Tejjulin Halim Shah, and consider that the circumstances of his case should be represented by a respectful petition of the community of this Island to the Supreme Government and to His Majesty in Council,

2nd. That a Committee of the following gentlemen be requested to frame the petition:—Messrs. W. Anderson, Caunter, and Brown; and by desire of the meeting, Mr. Stua. was selected to be one of the members.

CHINA.

Canton papers to the 22d have been received, from which the following has been extracted. The foreigners were still threatened with expulsion, but had been indulged with twenty days, in addition to the period prescribed for their departure, to settle their affairs on their representing to the Viceroy that they could not depart until they recovered from the Hong Merchants the debts due to them: and the Hong Merchants, who had anticipated the severe displeasure of the Viceroy for not succeeding in expelling the foreigners, were agreeably surprized to experience a kind reception from him at an interview they had with him on the subject; at which, however, he informed them, that he would not receive from them any further communication respecting foreigners, except the announcement of their departure from the celestial empire. The gunner of the ship John Bannerman, who had been left on board when that vessel was deserted by her crew, has arrived at Macao in a Chinese boat, and states that on the weather moderating, a number of Chinese went off to the wreck of that vessel, and plundered her of her freight of specie to a large amount. The robbers threatened the life of the gunner but were induced to spare it and conveying him to Alacrao for a reward of twenty dollars. A new Club, called the Junior's Club, has been established in Canton. A chop has been sent through the Hong Merchants to the Viceroy, from the general body of creditors, requesting a settlement of the debts of the Hing-tae Hong. An edict has been issued in the province of Fokien, against the receiving or paying dollars with the "old head" (Carolous IV.) at a premium upon syce silver. The editors of the Canton Free Press and Register, were squabbling with each other, and certainly in point of temper, he of the Free Press had much the advantage over his antagonist.

REVIEW OF THE CALCUTTA MARKET.

(From the Bengal Hurkaru Price Current, July 31.)

INDIGO—The weather during the last week has continued very favorable for the planters—the rains have been light and the rivers still continue low.

Accounts received from England of 1st May are very unfavorable, and there must be heavy losses upon last season's shipments, but the low prices are attributed entirely to the state of the Money Market.

RAW SILK—Nothing doing whatever. Prices in London quoted 8 to 11-6 in the end of April.

The following are the Stocks and Deliveries, viz:—

MONGHYR.

A FORMIDABLE SWEEP OF THE BESOM OF RESUMPTION.

Purgunah Furkeeah is probably the largest of all the purgunahs in the districts, comprehended in the province of Behar, measuring no less than from 800 to 1,000 square miles of country. According to this estimate, it will be found, that it contains upwards of 5,60,000 beegahs of land. A scientific survey is being carried on under Lieut. Egerton, and the Hon. E. Drummond has been especially appointed by Government, to effect the resumption of all tracts of country not included in the decennial settlements. The result, we hope, will hereafter be made known to the public, either by sanction and order of Government or by those who are as much interested in it as the state can be. At present the resumption proceedings seem to have the sign-board of hali me langere affixed to them, with what view it is not easy to conjecture. If they are conducted with a due regard to the rights of the Zameendars: why should there be any mystery in this department of the measures of Government? Are Government conscious of sanctioning their local officers to prosecute investigations with unfair leaning on their side? If not, why not permit the public to satisfy itself that Government may be relied upon for the equity of its measures? Here is one of the largest purgunahs in Behar under process of resumption without the world knowing whether there was any such tract of country in India, or that it had been made the seat of investigations of a nature which cannot fail to prove interesting to every one possessing rights in Mofussil landed property and nearly as much to the body of the public. Here, when the resumption proceedings will have been brought to a close, a very large amount of revenue will be derivable by Government, from the cutfeer or lands held in excess of the husband or rubbah of the Zameendars books at the time of the perpetual settlement, and this almost elandestinely, unless we believe that the inhabitants of purgunah Furkeeah alone, and the frequenters of the resumption courts constitute the public of India.

The lands brought under the new resumption settlement, comprise both such as have been recovered by the Zameendars from unprofitable wastes, and such as remain to this day uncultivated. The former is held in excess of the lands included in the decennial settlement, and the latter by being presumed to be so, because allowed to remain unproductive. According to the information, we hear many villages or mouzas of the former description of lands have been resumed, and the Government settlement thereon concluded. As it might have been naturally expected, the occupants of these lands have used every means in their power of arresting the measures of Government, but their murmurs have not reached further than the resumption kutcheries and the immediate seat of operations of the Mofussil authorities. The Zameendars of Furkeeah complain of heavy assessment, represent that mouzas included in the permanent settlement, but which have been swallowed up by the rivers, and lost their ancient names, and by fresh alluvion recovered from the waters, to which new names have been given by the people of the place where these occur, have been brought on the resumption books, and taken possession of by Government. How far these statements can be relied on, must have been duly considered by the resumption officers. This, however, is certain, that most of the lands resumed by them after local and other investigations worth paying for, have been engaged for by the Zameendars.

The disproportion of cultivated and waste lands resumed by Government is very great, the respective extents of which cannot be accurately stated by us without being admitted into the penetralia of the public (?) records, or bringing under requisition the no less inscrutable, unattainable and often incomprehensible putware papers of the Zameendars themselves. But this we can vouch for, that when the whole of the new bundabust shall have been concluded, Furkeeah alone will have contributed by the besom of resumption some 30 or 40,000 rupees clear profit to the State.

It is certainly painful to see an immense tract of country lying unproductive, and useful to none but tigers and wild buffaloes. It does not appear that the rivers Ganges and Gunduck, on the north banks of which it is situated, deposit any additional coat of soil on it by the annual inundations or baha, as the natives term it; though we can scarcely imagine, from our own knowledge of the former river, how that can be, for it seldom fails, sooner or later, to elevate low lands over which it flows periodically, producing the most luxuriant soil that can be possibly conceived. We know little of the Gunduck more than this, that though its water is regarded as unwholesome, the annual overflowing of its banks render the cultivations thereon remarkably productive.

The purgunah Furkeeah is situated nearly opposite to Monghyr, and the waste or weeran lands extend from within four or five miles of the shore of the Ganges to about fourteen or fifteen miles in the interior; some parts of which are exceedingly fruitful, being overrun with high coarse grass, but in some places there are groups (for they are too small to be called forests) of sissoo trees which of course yield good timber.

That many detached spots in this wilderness had at some distant period been the sites of villages none will deny, that have examined the seekur or artificially elevated places. It was once the seat or hold of a band of marauders, headed by a dosad who had been dignified by his numerous clans by the title of Rajah, and carried on his depredations with impunity to the no small loss and vexation of the surrounding Zameendars and their ryots, till the father of Baxarnee Sing, late Zameedar of Bhaufkur, overpowered him, and dispersed his trainbands, a number of whom, with their chief, he without ceremony put to the sword. This wild tract is watered by the rivers Tiljaagah and Bahgmutee, which run through it in their progress from the mountains and discharge themselves into the Ganges at a little distance below Bhagulpore; but before it reaches its waters, is joined in its course by the river Koosee. This advantageous position of the tract of country we are speaking of, would to some appear as the cause of its being formed by accumulations of deposits from the abovementioned rivers, but how comes it then, that these annual deposits of soil have ceased altogether leaving the lower portions of it still so very shallow as to be unfit for purposes of cultivation, as the waters do not (so it is stated by some) disappear from them till so late in the year as December and January, when the rubee crops are in great state of forwardness in other places? If the abovementioned rivers have contributed to throw up this portion of the country, we should opine, that they will also aid its further elevation, and ultimately form some of the finest arable land in the district.

From all we have ascertained, there can scarcely be a doubt, that the resumption by Government much exceeds 200,000 beegahs of land, including such as are utterly waste and such as now pay revenue. How far such an extensive acquisition of lands by Government operates to the disadvantage of the Zameendars we are not able to decide! if we turn a deaf ear to the cries of the latter, but there can be no question that the resumption officers have faithfully acquitted themselves to Government, for nothing can be more satisfactory than the facts we have brought to light, that the result of their exertions have already added much to the public-revenues, which will be proportionably augmented in the progress of the settlement, especially at the expiration of the leases that have been granted for the new Muhals, when higher rates of jumah will no doubt be demandable and agreed to by the farmers.

It does not, however, appear quite so satisfactory to us, that the resumption authorities have been able to proceed in their investigation on the strength of documentary evidence. Have they been able to satisfy themselves that the cultivated portions of the resumed lands, were really encroachments of the Zemindars on those that were not included in the permanent settlement? Where could they have obtained the information corroborative of that assumption? Surely the Zemindaree putwaree papers could not have been the correctest guides to it? We do not beg the question here, for it is notorious that the putwaree papers are not trust-worthy, even in questions of common disputed property. Why should they in this instance be deemed respectable enough to warrant their being made the basis of investigations involving such important results both to the State and the Zemindars? The quinquennial records being compiled from the zumeendar's papers, could not be regarded as much more respectable than the putwaree papers. As to local enquires, we should hold them very cheap indeed, although supported by the asseverations of informants. At any rate, we should like to see how these resumption investigations have been conducted; for as yet we have only the assertions of the Zemindars to afford us a clue to them, and these are by far not favorable to the measures adopted by Government and we will decide on the merits of a case on ex parte evidence?

We could have stated the boundaries of the pergunnah Furkeeah, and the comparative features of the nature of the soil and other capabilities of this and the adjacent pergunnahs, at least of Chye and Bullia; but we are ignorant of the encroachments of Government on the latter ones; but this we know, that the uncultivated portions of them are not considered as possessing those advantageous capacities for the speedy acquisition of revenue which have been met with in the wastes of Furkeeah; shall we suppose, that therefore that purgunnah has been first pounced upon?

We learn from some of the Zemindars who have had their portions of the grasp of the resumptions, that the rates at which the resumed lands have been assessed are very exorbitant in some if not many instances, 12 annas in the rupee have been exacted without consideration of the circumstance of lands being every third year unavoidably allowed to remain fallow, and in most cases two or three years in order to their acquiring capabilities of yielding remunerating crops. This is certainly a measure that must needs operate much to the disadvantage of the sufferers, and we cannot regard it as equitable, but on the contrary oppressive in the extreme. We asked them, "why do you then agree to the assessment? why not let others engage for them who are disposed to encounter risks in the long run?" The reply was, "for a very powerful reason, namely, that as we are said to have encroached on the taufeer lands, we conclude Government or the Government farmers seconded by authority, will encroach on our bona fide lands, and then to whom should we apply for redress? Better keep off the marks and save the residue, than come in too close contact with the feelers of umeens, sugaweels, tuhseeldars, or all genus omnes, who under the pretence of discharging their duty faithfully to Government, but in reality to lead us to procure their forbearance, will positively do more harm and create a worse description of vexation than we have been subject to already." We have not yet had such an insight into the recorded public proceedings of the resumption courts, copies of which we presume are available to parties concerned in them, to furnish a more minute statement of the routine form or mode in which the resumptions have been conducted. We would recommend it to all holders of landed property to apply regularly (lea zahitah) to the resuming authorities for copies of the English correspondence during the process of the bundabust or process of resumption, that might be passing between them and Government, in order that they might be in possession of the nature of the instructions of the higher powers, and the opinions returned by the local officers, and by all means such as might pass between the Commissioners and Government. It will be of no use to obtain copies of these after the die is cast, i. e., after the bundabusts have been agreed to and concluded. There is a notion prevailing among the superstitious natives, that it is necessary to disconcert the progress of the incantations of witchcraft by raising a hue and cry about it, otherwise when the internal agency has been successfully terminated, the fate of the person or persons intended to be possessed or destroyed will have been effectual decided beyond the possibility of escape. If it is but made public betimes, an effectual interruption procured, the charm is disturbed, and the reputations can no longer be prosecuted or persevered in successfully. This fact, we think, well worthy the remembrance of those over whose heads the eagles of resumption are hovering. The unobserved pounce may be checked by the cry, "ah! I see you!" Time may be given for reconsideration of the matter; and, in many cases, we doubt not a favorite act may be entirely discomposed and thwarted.—Harkara, August 8.

JOINT MAGISTRATE'S COURT, 22ND JULY, 1837.

Case of torturing and death by the Jemadar and Burkundazes of a Police Thannah.

In consequence of a robbery having been committed in the house of a person named Kishoonpaul, a Bengallee, at a place called Chukacee, in the circle of thannah Mullepore, investigations were directed to be made, and means used for the apprehension of the offenders. The Jemadar of the thannah, accompanied by burkundazes and a train of subsidiary followers furnished by the Zemindars, proceeded to a place called Gola, and among other measures resorted to for the discovery of the robbers and recovery of the property stolen, caused a number of persons, men and women, to be brought to him, and among them, an old woman of the name of Moonghua, and a young one named Billia, on whom, by his orders, a series of cruelties were inflicted, the like of which has but rarely been brought to the notice of the public. Not that they are of rare occurrence, for there is scarcely a police thannah in the whole country, we may almost venture to say, where such similar acts are not committed by the darogas and their subordinates. They are but seldom brought to the notice of the local Authorities, either by the parties injured thereby, through dread of the vengeance of the police people, or by the unconcerned spectators of their sufferings, since the loss of time and the expenses they would thereby incur would be thrown away on account of those with whom they are not in any way connected. One or two cases, however, within our certain knowledge, and that occurring very recently too, in a neighbouring district, had been regularly brought into court, and the mohurrir and jemadar of the thannah were punished, though we regret to say, very inadequately. It was proved that these worthies had endeavoured to obtain information that might enable them to trace the robbers in a case of theft, by dint of torturing the woman in the most inhuman and brutal manner. In addition to beating and the application of various other forms of cruelty, the miserable victim of their barbarity was reduced to a state of perfect nudity in the presence of many spectators; and, to make their horrid brutality a neplus ultra, bruised chillies were forced into a certain part of her body, which delicacy forbids our mentioning, thus furnishing a refinement in the diabolical catalogue of tortures, which it is impossible to excel. In the case we are now reporting, this last means of torment was not resorted to, though threats were held out that it would, and the followers of the jamadar were ordered (so the deponents allege) to keep the chillies in readiness, but death came to the relief of the hapless woman! The case before the court this day, was brought on at the suit of Mohun, a relative of the poor tortured woman, whose son and other relatives were named as the supposed perpetrators of the robbery. The jamadar of the thannah, who was deputed to make the necessary sooruthal, or inquest, and furnish the usual kifouet or report, failing to apprehend those persons, had the deceased, with several other women and men brought to him on the 2d of May last, in the neighbourhood of the police pharea. Here, in the presence of his followers and other spectators, he first held out threats to the poor woman to discover the thieves, failing in which mild mode of procedure, he ordered them to be bound with cords and tortured with an instrument well known at all the thannahs. This was shewn to the court. It consisted of two pieces of bamboo, each a foot and a half long, split downwards from the top to the knot at the bottom, and a narrow piece taken out from the middle lengthwise to form an aperture for the introduction of the member intended to undergo pain, which was effected by their being drawn down to cause both the ends of the other part of the bamboos to meet. Along with torturing, with the above described machine, the women were inhumanly beaten with fists, and then kicked without ceremony. This resource of a petty tyrant also failed. The Jamadar had their hands tied behind their back, and while they were lying along on the ground, their slender cloths were snatched away from them and their shame exposed to the brutal state of a stupid and wicked rabble; but while the followers of the jamadar were preparing to consummate the nameless deed Moonghia, the old woman, fainting away from the effects of the excessive sufferings she had undergone, breathed heavily, gasped, and died! Hereupon the Jemadar cried out, "she has fainted away from the effects of the heat." The other woman being young, stood out the brunt of all these sufferings, and escaped only with her life. All this occurred in the evening of the second day of their coerced attendance on the behalf of the Jemadar. Alarmed at length by the serious turn the affair had taken, he used his diligence to get the body of Moonghia transported in a kind of bier or kuttoles, nearly 2 days's journey, to Monghyr, for the purpose of being inspected by the magistrate. But this was not done before the morning of the next day, and in the interim, he took the precaution to get up a sooruthal or inquest on the body, and thereby discovered, no doubt much to his satisfaction, that there could be no doubt of the woman's having killed herself outright by swallowing opium, preferring death to being compelled to disclose that the individuals suspected of the robbery, and who were so closely related to her, were really the thieves. On the corpse reaching Monghyr, in a very decomposed state, it was inspected by the civil surgeon and his report was filed, but it being in the English language, and not read in court (to our knowledge) we are not able to mention the purport of it.

The following is the defence of Buratulee Jamadar: he went to make tudarook at gola in consequence of a robbery committed in the house of Kishoonpaul, where he investigated the matter. He did send for Moonghia, but did not treat her ill. While he was conducting the investigations it commenced raining. He broke up the party and went out to Mouza Teonghura. The woman, Moonghia, must have swallowed opium during his absence at the place, and died. Prays that justice conformably to the celebrated equity of Nowsherwan might be measured to him in this case, wherein he was opposed by incorrigible budmashes (vagabonds) who had manufactured evidence to procure his ruin. When he went to make the Tudarook, he was accompanied by Mookund and Jymungal Sing, burkundazes. He had reasons to suspect Diwua, Doolma, Chundooa, Parshad, and others whose names he did not remember. He conducted the Tudarook near the muth (pagoda of Muhudeb), to which place he sent for Moonghia for the purpose of asking her about her son, and son-in-law, who had absconded. Asked her to tell him who the thieves were. She remained with him about two or three hours and then went away. She came to the muth three hours afterwards a second time, in consequence of his sending for her. Does not now remember at what time of the day. When she came, it began to rain very hard which dispersed the assembly, and prevented his ascertaining what she knew of the affair. Did not put Moonghia in charge of any person, but she of her own accord took shelter in the house of Karee Munda, and he betook himself to that of Debes Munda, and remained there 3 or 4 hours. No further investigations were made at that time, and no burkundazes were placed over the woman. He went again in the morning and sent for all of them by Thamroo, and questioned Moonghia again about her son and son-in-law. She said that they were gone to bathe; and again that they had gone to Mouzah Teonghura. At this time the woman remained only one hour with him, after which he gave her leave to go and eat. He then went away to Teonghura taking Jymungal Sing, burkundaz, Roodchund and others with him. When he returned from that place, he saw her under a jake tree, in a very weak condition and in a state of insensibility. and oppressed by a hiccup. The jake tree was at the distance of a beegah from her house. She was lying speechless under it. In the evening she expired. Could not send the body to Monghyr that evening, as he could not procure people enough to hold a sooruthal; but forwarded it the next morning. The deceased was 60 years of age. It is not customary to chullan old woman dying in the course of nature. It having been discovered that she had died by eating opium, he considered it his duty to send her body to be examined by the Magistrate, otherwise he would not have done it. If he did not chullan her some suspicion might have rested on him. He supposed he would be suspected of having brought about her death, in consequence of hearing the prosecutor say that Moonghia had died from the effects of the beating and other ill-treatment she had received. When he was proceeding to hold the inquest on the corpse, he heard the prosecutor exclaim that she had lost her life by beating, torturing, &c. by his orders. The object of the prosecutor in wishing to bring him to a scrape was to cloak himself and the other budmashes from the result of the present investigations. They are wicked people and very zabur dust in those parts, and bear inveterate animosity against him, owing to his having, in another instance, sent them to be tried in a case of theft, in which they were concerned. He did not imagine that the body of Moonghia would suffer any injury by decomposition before it reached Monghyr, and any marks it might have had of violence thereby obliterated. Could not say when a corpse would reach Monghyr by being pushed on night and day without stopping.

The other defendants exculpated themselves in the same manner. The witness for the defence had seen no beating, had heard that the woman had died by swallowing opium, but knew that prosecutor and the accused persons were all budmashes. The case has been postponed for further inquiry.—Hurkaru. August 15.

THE LAND REVENUE.

We have now before us a statement of demands, collections, and balances of Land Revenue of the settled and unsettled Districts of the Bengal Presidency from February to April 1837, of the results of which we shall submit some account to our readers with such remarks as those results may suggest. The entire statement is not adapted to newspaper publication, and an abstract of its contents, with occasional specific references, will supersede the necessity of such a course.

Omitting fractions and references to partial corrections stated to be necessary, the above table presents an accurate general view of the land revenue of the Bengal Presidency during the last quarter of 1836-37; and, as far as the mere amount of collections is concerned, the result compared with that of former years may justly be pronounced satisfactory. The aggregate net balance of 1833-34 has been reduced nearly three lacs, and that of 1834-35, or 1835-36, fully three lacs and a half. In this point of view the most unfavorable aspect is presented by the province of Orissa, where the net balance has increased from twelve lacs to more than nineteen and a half—an effect ascribed to the calamities of season, from which, judging by this test, no part of the province appears to have been exempt, except a portion of the Midnapoor district under the management of the agent to the Governor-General at Hazareebagh under Regulation X111 of 1833. The largest portion of Midnapoor, Puttapor attached to Midnapoor, Hijlee, and the three divisions of Cuttack, all exhibit a considerable increase in the amount of the net balance at the end of the quarter under consideration.

In the provinces of Bengal the encroachment of the net balance in the district of Moorshedabad is particularly worthy of note on two grounds, first, because of the amount of balance which exceeds three lacs; and second in connection with the amount, because of the fact that the collector has only fiscal duties to discharge. It also deserves to be particularly noted in the districts of Buggoorah, Sylhet, Bogree, &c. attached to Midnapoor, and another portion of Midnapoor under the agent to the Governor-General at Hazareebagh, because, although the amounts respectively are small, yet the increase during the last four years with very slight fluctuations has been progressive, so that in Buggoorah the amount was in April last three times what it was in April 1833-34; in Sylhet, it has also been doubled; in Bogree, &c. it has been more than quadrupled; and in the portion of Midnapoor referred to it has been more than quadrupled. It is only in the case of Sylhet that we are aware of any reason that can be assigned for the progressive increase. The multiplicity and intermixture of minute tenures render the affairs of that district very peculiar and difficult of management. Considerable reductions have taken place in Hoogly, Burdwan, Mymensingh, and in the 24-Pergunnahs, although the balances are still large, the reductions have also been considerable in Rungpoor, in Tipperah, and especially in Nuddea.

In the province of Behar, the increase of net balance is principally found in the districts of Patna and Tirhoot; in the former chiefly owing to the transfer of six Pergunnahs from the Behar district. In the latter district the collector is both magistrate and opium agent, and has been so for several years; but this fact will not account for the increased balance, because in the three preceding years there was a small, but progressive, diminution. We suspect that we must look for the real cause in the circumstances and condition of the people.

In the Burmese Provinces the only item deserving of special notice is the progressive encroachment of the net balance in the last quarters of the four past years in Lower Assam, so that it is now nearly double what it was in April 1833-34. A steady and progressive encroachment as in this and in the Bengal districts previously cited, however slow the progress, and however small the comparative amount, should receive prompt and searching attention from those who have the welfare of the country in charge, because it tends to show that there is some permanent cause in operation affecting the resources of the country, and the revenue of Government.—Englishman, August 14.

ASIATIC SOCIETY.

To the Right Hon. GEORGE, LORD AUCKLAND,
&c. &c. &c.

Governor-General of India in Council.

MY LORD,—I have been requested by the Asiatic Society to become the organ of a respectful representation to your Lordship in Council on a topic of great importance to the interests of the Society, which was made the subject of a Resolution passed at a general meeting held on the 7th instant.

I have now, accordingly, the honor to submit a copy of that Resolution, and with every deference and respect to solicit for the prayer of it, the most favorable consideration to your Lordship's Government.

The Asiatic Society has been in existence for more than half a century. Founded by the illustrious Sir William Jones, with the concurrence and support of the no less illustrious Warren Hastings, it has uniformly enjoyed the countenance and protection of the high officers placed at the head of the Indian administration, many of whom have joined in its objects with more than the formal interest of nominal patrons, and have contributed individually to its records of literature, or to its collection of antiquities and of curious natural productions.

It would be quite superfluous to enumerate, in addressing the Society's official patron, the many eminent men whose names have adorned and still adorn its list of members, or to recall the services they have severally rendered to science and to literature; but it is by no means to these alone that the Institution owes its efficiency, its stability, and its reputation. Without the co-operation of the many, the talents and abstract studies of the few would have been comparatively ineffectual; and the learned world in many cases would have been deprived of the chief benefit of their studies and knowledge but for the combination which is so necessary to effect undertakings of magnitude and expence, and for the stimulus which emulation, and publicity, and a common interest never fail to excite.

Since its foundation the Asiatic Society has expended more than three lakhs of rupees upon the prosecution and publication of its Researches in the languages, the philosophy, the history, the geography, physical, and statistical of India; and there is no branch of useful knowledge connected with this country that has not received illustration through the judicious employment of its fund.

On one or two occasions the Society has received handsome donations from individuals, but it has never yet solicited or received public aid from the Government of the country. In venturing therefore to propose a measure for which there was no precedent in its history, the Committee of papers, with whom the suggestion originated, deemed it incumbent on them to shew the Society at large the grounds upon which they rested their recommendation. and the substance of the arguments they then used I am now requested by the Society to lay before your Lordship in Council.

It is not from a declining Society that an appeal is made, to save it from impending ruin or to enable it to support its expences on the same scale of efficiency as heretofore. On the contrary, the Society never had a more flourishing list of contributing Members, nor was it ever more actively engaged on the multiplied objects of its attention. Indeed it would be difficult to mention any department in which its duties have not materially increased within the last few years.

By the transfer of the Oriental publications from the Education Committee a very important and responsible task has been thrown upon the Society, which it is most anxious to perform with diligence and satisfaction to the increasing body of Oriental scholars in Europe, who have expressed a common feeling and interest in its efficiency and permanency.

By the transfer of the Oriental manuscripts and printed volumes from the College of Fort William the Society's library has been doubled, and the charge and responsibility of its management proportionately increased. The Society cannot be insensible of the obligation of making known its contents, of encouraging and providing accommodation for copyists, and of guarding property of increasing value. Thus the extension of the library has been attended with consequences which are felt in various matters of detail that cannot well be described.

Literary publications have also sought the Society's auspices in greater numbers of late than heretofore; and the government has paid it the compliment of seeking its advice and of following its suggestions in respect to many literary undertakings for which the public patronage had been solicited.

The government of France has condescended to employ the Society as the medium for procuring additions to the superb Oriental library of the French nation, and many distinguished Orientalists of the Continent have solicited the same favor.

From all these sources the responsibility, the substantive existence of the Society, has derived strength and lustre; but every enlargement of its connections and every new field of its operations cannot but call for some additional expenditure or point out some desideratum which the Society's means are unable to provide; and this must be always more prominently felt where, from all the officers of the institution affording their services gratuitously, there is a reluctance in imposing new duties or expecting an increased devotion of their limited leisure.

But it is particularly in the physical branch of its labours—a vast field comprehending, according to the emphatic expression of Sir William Jones, "whatever is produced by nature within the geographical limits of Asia," that the Asiatic Society feels itself most backward and deficient of means.

The rapid strides that have been made in physical inquiry throughout the world in the present age, have been compassed only by national efforts. By these have the schools of Paris been raised to the perfection of which they now boast, and her museums stored with most instructive and precious collections.

By the combinations of the wealthy, aided by a popular government in England now beginning to rival her. A national museum is indeed throughout Europe become an essential engine of education, instructive alike to the uninformed who admire the wonders of nature through the eye alone, and to the refined student who seeks in these repositories what it would be quite out of his power to procure with his own means.

The Asiatic Society, or it may be allowable to say the metropolis of British India, has had the germs of a national museum as it were planted in its bosom. As at Paris a new era was opened in the history of its great museum, the Jardin des Plantes, through the discoveries of extinct and wondrous animal forms exhumed from the rocks on which the town was built, and which required all the adjuncts of comparative anatomy for their investigation even by the master-hand of the great Cuvier; so in Calcutta, through the munificence of a few individuals and the development of fossil deposits in various part of India hitherto unsuspected of the basis of a grand collection; and we have been driven to seek recent specimens to elucidate them. Our desire has been warmly seconded by all who have enjoyed the opportunity of contributing; from China, from New South Wales, from the Cape, and from every quarter of the Honorable Company's possessions, specimens of natural history, of mineralogy, and geology, have flowed in faster than they could be accommodated, and the too little attention they have received has alone prevented similar presentations from being much more numerous; for it is but reasonable to suppose that of the stores continually dispatched to England or the Continent, the Society would have received a larger share, had it done proper honor to what it has received.

In May 1835, the Society resolved to try the experiment of appointing salaried officers to the charge of its museum. For two years economy in other departments has enabled it to maintain this system, and the good effects of the measure are visible to all who visit the rooms. Yet not being able to purchase more than a small portion of the time of a competent naturalist, the benefit has been comparatively limited, and now at the very commencement of the experiment the state of the Society's funds will compel it to withhold further support from its incipient museum unless some fresh source of income be provided.

These then, are the motives that have persuaded the Society of the propriety of an appeal to the Ruling Power:—not to contribute to the ordinary wants and engagements of the institution, but to convert that institution into a public and national concern, by entrusting it with the foundation and superintendence of what has yet to be formed for the instruction of our native fellow subjects, as much as for the furtherance of science,—a public depository of the products of nature in India and the surrounding countries properly preserved, properly arranged, and properly applied.

To effect such an object it is indispensable that the services of a professional naturalist of high attainments should be engaged, and that he should have at his command the means of working effectually, and devoting his whole time to the employment.

What, it may be asked, will be the return to Government if the State undertake to supply such an officer? To this question more than one satisfactory answer may readily be given.

The Honorable Company have in Leadenhall Street a very valuable museum supported at considerable expense. To that museum, ours would be a powerful auxiliary. Duplicates of every sort here collected might be set apart for England. Again, the local Government, has scientific expeditions continually employed in exploring the country. Geographical, geodesical, and statistical information is continually under collection without any office of record, or officer of analysis, to whom it can be appropriately referred for digestion. Efforts are continually misemployed for want of proper direction, and opportunities are lost for want of proper instructions that may be ever regretted by the scientific world. Again, the means of education in the natural sciences would be improved or rather created by the formation of a museum, the superintendent of which would always be able to devote a portion of his time to demonstrations and lectures, either expected as a part of his duty, or yielding a means of partial reimbursement.

But the Society feels that it is almost unbecoming to suppose that the Government of a great country would ask for reasons to support the present application; for the encouragement given to botanical pursuits by the maintenance of two public gardens at considerable charge and some placed at the disposal of the Agriculture and Horticultural societies and to similar institutions, are so many evidences that the Government have only to be convinced that the object is one of essential public benefit, or calculated to promote scientific discovery, when the inclination to provide the necessary support will not be wanting. The expenditure that has been bestowed upon the theoretical admeasurement of the earth's surface, for the elaborate determination of which the Honorable Company's Government has been justly held up to the admiration of the world, is an instance particularly in point. The Society has ever felt that the public grants to those and numerous other objects of a similar nature, have been boons to itself, so far as they have promoted the researches contemplated, in its original foundation; and if on this occasion it fails to impress upon Government the claims of other branches of science and literature, all of which require and will benefit by the establishment of a public museum, the Society will attribute it rather to the weakness of the appeal made on its behalf than to the real weakness of its cause.

I have only in conclusion to explain, that although the Society in the accompanying resolution has ventured to name a specific sum which would probably be sufficient for the objects which it has in view, yet the members would leave it entirely to the superior judgment of your Lordship in Council to determine what sum it would be expedient to devote from the public finances towards the general furtherance of the Society's objects; should it indeed appear to you that the application which I have been requested to lay before Government, is based on sound and reasonable arguments, and that it merits the consideration and support which I have ventured, as much from my own feelings as from my duty to the Society, to urge in its favor.

I have the honor to be &c.

(Signed) EDWARD RYAN.

Calcutta, 15th July, 1837.

President

To the Honorable Sir E. RYAN, Knight,

President of the Asiatic Society.

Honorable Sir,—The representation submitted by you on behalf of the Asiatic Society of Calcutta has been considered by the Right Honorable the Governor-General of India in Council with the attention due to the importance of the objects for which the assistance of Government is solicited, and to the character of the Society and of those who have united in the resolution to make this appeal.

2. The Right Honorable the Governor-General of India in Council fully admits that the public of Europe and of Asia have incurred a heavy debt of gratitude to the Society for the persevering and successful efforts it has made for more than half a century to develop the literary resources of Asia, and to ascertain and collect objects of scientific and antiquarian interest.

His Lordship in Council feels also, that although the publication of these results through the Researches of the Society and in other works of wide circulation, has contributed largely to the advancement of general science, and has given to the labours of its members all the utility that such diffusion could impart, still without a museum and library in which the products of art and nature, and especially coins and other interesting remains of antiquity, might be collected for the personal examination of the more curious one important means of deriving benefit from those labours must still be wanting.

3. His Lordship in Council is further sensible that the expense of establishing such a museum, with its necessary adjuncts, cannot be expected in this country to be met by voluntary contributions from the limited number of persons who take an interest in such pursuits; and therefore, although the Society has already done much towards preparing the ground for such an establishment, that it cannot be maintained in the creditable and useful condition necessary for the attainment of the objects desired, unless aided liberally by the Government, in like manner as similar institutions in Europe are supported from the public treasury.

4. But although his Lordship in Council acknowledges all these claims on the liberality of Government, he yet feels precluded from giving his immediate sanction to the specific annual grant solicited by the Asiatic Society in this instance, without previous reference to the Honorable the Court of Directors, to whom, however, it is his intention, in forwarding your representation, to submit a strong recommendation in its favor.

5. There are many circumstances which induce the Governor-General in Council to consider that the proposition submitted on this occasion is peculiarly one to be decided by the home authorities, rather than by the Local Government. In the first place, the Honorable Court of Directors are themselves at considerable expense in keeping up a museum and library at the India

House, and through his Lordship in Council concurs with you in thinking that such institutions in Europe, however perfect, do not supersede the necessity of providing similar institutions in India likewise,—with reference especially to the spirit of literary inquiry and scientific research which it is desired to excite and encourage amongst the native youth of India; still the fact that the Honorable Court have a separate institution of their own, points to the propriety of making them the judges of its sufficiency or the contrary for Indian purposes; moreover, were the Government of India to sanction a specific annual grant for a museum and library in Calcutta under the management of your Society, such a grant would reasonably be made a precedent for similar applications from learned societies at other presidencies, and his Lordship in Council is not prepared to decide, without a reference to England, upon the relative claims of such societies with reference to the circumstances of the institutions themselves, and of the presidencies and places where they may be established.

6. His Lordship in Council feels convinced that the Society may rely with confidence on the liberal disposition of the Honorable Court and on its desire to promote and encouraging objects of public utility especially such as have a tendency to advance knowledge and to extend the spirit of research, now peculiar to European nations, to the population of the countries under their Government: his Lordship in Council has therefore the less hesitation in referring the Asiatic Society's present representation to the decision of the home authorities.

I have the honor to be, &c.

J. S. Stopford, Esq.	John Bell, Esq.

Visitor. -

Mr. D. McDougall.

The proceedings of last Meeting were read and confirmed.

The following gentlemen, proposed at last meeting, were elected members of the Society.

Lieut. William Munro.	W. Kerr Ewart, Esq.
William Haworth, Esq.	J. B. Higginson, Esq.
Dr. Duncan, Stewart.	John Jenkins, Esq.
James G. Quhou, Esq.	G. F. McClintock, Esq.
Baboo Hurrymohun Sen.	William Griffith, Esq.
Captain H. Kirke.	R. Thomas, Esq.

The following gentlemen were proposed, viz:—

F. P. Buller, Esq., C. S., and P. Barron, Esq., Shahajenpore, proposed by the Secretary, and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

F. T. Fergusson, Esq., and L. Roussac, Esq., proposed by the Secretary, and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

E. Preston, Esq., proposed by G. F. Speed, Esq., and seconded by W. Storm, Esq.

Thomas Maddock, Esq., C. S., proposed by Dr. Wallich, and seconded by Dr. Huffleagle.

James Church, Esq., proposed by E. Harding, Esq., and seconded by C. K. Robison, Esq.

Owen John Elias, Esq., proposed by H. Walters, Esq., and seconded by the Secretary.

The president opened the business of the day, by submitting a series of propositions, with a view to preserve order and regularity in the proceedings which are liable to much interruption from motions being introduced at every stage—viz.—

1st. That all motions shall be brought forward at the monthly meetings, before the reading of fresh papers and letters commences, clearly written out, and signed by the mover, or party deputed to bring forward such motion, the Secretary to record all propositions in a book to be kept for this purpose.

2d.—Motions of which notice has been given at a previous meeting, shall have precedence of all others, and in order to guard against confusion, the Secretary will number the propositions in his register.

3d. Motions brought forward after the time alluded to in the 1st proposition, shall not be attended to; but they may be handed over to the Secretary who will note them, as "new motions without notice;" to be brought up at the next General Meeting, in common with others, which may be then submitted.

Proposed by Alexander Colvin, Esq., and resolved unanimously, that the above series of propositions be added to the standing rules of the Society.

The Secretary informed the meeting that he had formally notified to the several members, their nominations to the standing committees appointed at the last general meeting, who had all accepted office, save Mr. C. R. Prinsep, who objected to sit on a committee, while an exception existed to the prejudice of the cattle of New Holland. In consequence of Mr. Prinsep's objection, the Secretary had submitted data in opposition to the opinion which gave rise to the offensive clause, and the President have submitted that with reference to the minutes, he thought the exception ought to be removed, and it was.

Resolved, that the clause in question be rescinded. This resolution being passed, adds the name of Mr. C. Prinsep to the cattle committee.

Dr. Jackson, was quite willing to give his best aid to the coffee and tobacco committee, but felt that he would be more at home, on the subject of cattle, and requested that his name might be transferred from one to the other, which will be done.

The President had much pleasure in submitting copy of a despatch from the Hon'ble the Court of Directors to Government, bearing date the 22d March 1837, in reference to the Society's report upon experiments made at Agra, forwarded in a letter from the Secretary to Mr. Secretary Bushby, under date the 26th September 1835 for transmission to the Hon'ble Court, accompanied by samples of cotton twist, and cloth.

The Court of Directors express much satisfaction at the exertions of the Society, and although their views were cramped, by reason of the limited space, which marked their operations, the Court are pleased to augur favorably of them as indicating successful results, from a more extended application, to a variety of soil and climate. The letter goes minutely into an analysis of the samples of produce sent home by the society, shewing the prices assumed by Messrs. Wills and Earle generally to range a shade below those adopted in England, by brokers, upon whose reports, the Court's remarks are framed and as some discussion arose as to dates of valuation, it was agreed to hand over the letter to the standing Cotton Committee, to compare dates, for the satisfaction of the Society, as the subject was one of the first importance.

The motion of Mr. Bell, made at last meeting, having for its object, the speedy introduction of the Otahite sugar-cane, on an extensive scale, in Bengal, had been, in pursuance of a resolution then passed, submitted to the standing sugar committee, and was now brought forward, under a favorable report re-modelled, in some respects, to meet exigencies, but the same generally in substance.

Proposed by Dr. Wallich, seconded by the Resident, and unanimously resolved. That the report of the Committee, (with a few verbal amendments, suggested at the meeting,) be adopted.

Note. The report and resolution, being too long for insertion here, will appear in separate form, for the information of the public.

Read a letter from F. Macnaghten, Esq., Government Agent, to the Secretary, dated 7th August, rendering two accounts current of the funds of the Society to the Government Agency Office, brought down to the 30th April 1837, showing the amount of fixed assets at that time, to be sicca rupees 15,500. Since which the Secretary had invested 1,500 rupees more, the sum now in Company's paper, being 17,000 company's rupees.

Mr. Robison, submitted two gold medals, of different thickness the one to cost about 230 rupees the other at 150, but some Members thought that a medal more worthy of the society, ought to be had, by commissioning a new die, from England, and it was agreed to refer the question to the medal committee, recommending for the present, that one of those now presented be adopted to meet the engagements of the society, with successful competitors.

Mr. Robison, presented samples of silk, the produce of Mr. Mutti's silature in the Dekhan. The silk is of very superior quality produced from the worm bred in the full grown mulberry tree, and was sold by Mr. Mutti to natives at 16 rupees per seer, being 2 rupees more than the best China silk was then selling for. This price Mr. Mutti calculates to leave him 11 rupees profit per seer, since he can under tree cultivation, produce this silk for 5 rupees per seer. The proud position, in which Mr. Mutti now finds himself, after the most patient, uncompromising zeal, by which he has most completely refuted the authority of Dr. Lush, who was obstinately opposed to Mr. Mutti's conviction, cannot but be most gratifying to himself, and most encouraging to others, who prefer plain practice to abstract theory.

Read a letter from Dr. J. McClelland, dated 20th July, presenting to the Society, 3 copies of a Catalogue of "objects in natural history," collected by him in Assam.

Mr. Cracroft, presented to the society, 2 folio volumes containing a splendid collection of dried specimens of plants and shrubs, gathered by him in Van Dieman's Land, in the best possible preservation.

Read a letter from Dr. A. Campbell, dated Nipal Residency, 25th July, forwarding 34 specimens of the Agricultural productions of the Valley of Nipal, together with 8 others of the field productions of the plains of Sarun and Tirhoot. Suggests the transmission of some of these specimens to the Agricultural Committee of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain, for the purpose of ascertaining, the relative value in commerce of some and for the introduction in England, or the more suitable countries of Europe, of others.

Resolved. That the Secretary do adopt Dr. Campbell's suggestions, reserving some of each kind for comparison in Calcutta and that a portion of each be handed over to Dr. Wallich for experiment in the Society's Nursery.

From George Leyburn, Esq., dated Nunnore, Shahabad, 7th July, presenting a quantity of cotton and seed the produce of Egyptian seed supplied by this Society in May 1836, and sown at the commencement of the rains in July.

From F. Harris, dated 27th July, presenting some cotton the produce of Egyptian seed received from the Society in May 1836, and planted in the Sounderbuns.

(Mem. These samples were directed to be made over to the Committee for report.)

N. B. Parties growing cotton, are particularly requested to send some entire pods, and to state the number of pods in each bush, on an average.

From Major Syers, Secy. to the Cuttuck Society, presenting some cotton and tobacco, adverted to in his letter of the 22nd ultimo, and noticed in last month's proceedings.

• Mem. referred to the Cotton Committee.

From Captain Jenkins, dated Assam 30th July, to the address of the Secretary, promising to send down for the inspection of the Committee, a maund of the Area silk and samples of the cloth and thread manufactured from it, requesting further information on certain points in Mr. Gouger's letter which he does not exactly understand, (referred to the silk Committee.)

From Dr. Wallich to the Secretary, dated 18th July, 1837, giving cover to a letter to his address, from A. Aiken, acting Secretary to the Society of Arts, London, dated 27th February last, on the subject of several specimens of Assam silk, sent to the Society by Captain Jenkins through Dr. Wallich, for examination.

(Referred to the silk Committee.)

From Major C. C. Smyth, Bareilly, dated 10th July, forwarding samples of brown nankin and white bourbon cotton grown in his garden.

(Referred to the cotton Committee.)

From Dr. Huffleagle, dated 23d July, presenting to the Society some seeds of the grape and apple from the fruit brought out in the ice, accompanied by a healthy plant of each which Dr. H. had raised and submitted as samples of what may be effected, if every member would apply himself to some experiment however trifling. The Secretary had previously received several seedling vines from the same gentlemen, from the same source, which have been planted out and are now doing well.

Resolved.—That Dr. Huffleagle is entitled to the special thanks of the Society for his interesting experiment.

From F. Farnell, Esq., Secy. to the Branch Society of Beerbloom, reporting favorably of the Upland Georgia and Sea Island cotton, also of the American maize and coffee plants, which are doing well. Requests a supply of oats for trial.

From W. Moore, Esq., deputy post master, dated 4th August, desiring information as to the Society's views, in regard to the accumulation of returned packets by the Secretary, now in the General Post Office. These packets contain returns of prices of grain in Persia forwarded by the several district Magistrates, but although superscribed "services," have postage marked upon them.

The Secretary was directed to write again to Dr. Stewart, on the subject of an appeal to Government, as his first letter remained unanswered up to this date. Until the question was decided the letters might be allowed to remain at the General Post Office.

From W. Liddell, Esq., Secretary to the Madras Society (without date), stating in reply to the Secretary's query regarding the missing share of the plough purchased from Captain D'Almeida, that it was forwarded in a complete state from Madras.

From E. Stirling, Esq., to the Secy., dated July 24th, drawing attention to an approved plough now in use at Bombay, and as one of their ploughs has been long promised to this Society, Mr. Stirling's communication was referred to the commerce of implements of husbandry and machinery.

From Mr. Laidlay, Secretary to the Branch Society of Moorshedabad, stating that the different seeds furnished by this Society have (with the exception of the Canada maize) proved excellent.

Presents a green mangoe plucked from a tree, bearing two crops a year, and offering to send down some slips from the tree.

From Mr. Boaz, a specimen of "South American" cotton (query what kind and from what source derived?) said to be grown in Mr. Peuney's garden, Circular Road.

From Mr. G. Pratt, dated 9th Aug., offering (with reference to a query proposed by Capt. Jenkins, in last month's proceedings,) some information on the subject of stick and shell lac, and presenting to the Society, 10 different specimens of the same.

(Referred to the Committee for oil seeds.)

From Lieut. Brodie, dated Assam, 13th July, stating that he has not succeeded with the tobacco and cotton seeds forwarded by the Society and requesting fresh supplies.

From Dr. Wallich, dated 8th August, enclosing a letter from Monsieur Bedier, Governor of Chandernagore, which contains an extract from one of the Bourbon authorities, stating that the order which had been given for the sugar cane, by His Excellency Monsieur Bedier, has not been forgotten. The same authority promises to forward the cane for this Society, on his return from a distant part of the Island.

Resolved.—That the special thanks of the Society be offered to the Governor of Chandernagore for the warm interest he takes in the interest of this Institution.

The same letter from Dr. Wallich, gives cover to one from Lt. Kirke, adverting to some experiments he proposed making in the Doon, but Lt. Kirke's communication is private, and not addressed to the Society for publication.

The Proceedings of the Agricultural Committee were read and confirmed. The Committee reported favorably on the sugar cane, &c. in the nursery, and settled the matter of exhibition, which is to take place on Tuesday morning next, at 6 o'clock, proposing as Judges, Messrs. Craicraft and Stirling; Dewan Ramcomul Sen and Baboo Radhakant Deb. The Committee further proposed, that Dewan Ramcomul Sen and Baboo Radhakant Deb, be solicited to make up a Catalogue of the native kitchen vegetables with their properties and uses.

The following propositions, will be brought forward at next meeting.

Proposed by Mr. Storms, seconded by Mr. Robinson, that premiums be given for the importation of the best cow and merino, or Saxony ewe.

Proposed by Dr. Jackson, seconded by Mr. Bell, that an abstract of all a premiums be offered for a certain cultivation of carrots, for feeding cattle.

Proposed by H. Walters, Esq., seconded by Mr. Bell, that an abstract of all premiums, offered by the Society, be printed in Hindee, and Bengalee, for distribution among the natives.

The thanks of the Society, were ordered to be offered for all the above communications and presentations.

SUGAR.

Premiums to be awarded by the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, to encourage the importation of Otaheite sugar cane, and its cultivation in Bengal.

Report of the Sugar Committee, on the motion brought forward by Mr. Bell at the July General Meeting of the Society, with a view to encourage the importation of Otaheite sugar cane, for distribution throughout India.

In accordance with the Resolution passed on the 12th July, a meeting was convened at the Society's office, Town Hall, on Wednesday morning the 31st August, when Alexander Colvin, Esq., was unanimously elected chairman of the standing Sugar Committee.

The Secretary informed the Committee that Mr. N. Alexander, who was prevented from attending by being on the Grand Jury, had called upon him to explain his intention to have opposed Mr. Bell's suggestions, on the grounds of experiments made by Messrs. Henley and Blake, the results of which Mr. Alexander said were unfavorable to the encouragement of the Otaheite, in preference to indigenous and China cane, that were thought to yield more saccharine matter, than the Otaheite kind, while they did not exhaust the soil in the same ratio.

The Committee after giving their best consideration to the objections offered by Mr. Alexander, do not think them based on sufficiently accurate data, to warrant their adoption, as many circumstances might have combined to lead the parties making such experiments to arrive at wrong conclusions and have therefore agreed to the following report.

REPORT.

Your Committee cannot allow the opportunity which presents itself at the commencement of their labors to pass without an expression of regret that so little has yet been effected in the way of introducing a superior cane throughout India, but they cannot withhold their humble tribute of praise, which is due to the persevering zeal of Major Sleeman, who from a small supply of Otaheite cane, brought by him from the Mauritius in 1827, has now raised a nursery at Jabulpore which feeds the surrounding district.

To the exertions of Col. Colvin the Upper Provinces are likewise indebted for the introduction of this superior product, and the society of Lucknow boasts of an extensive nursery of the same description of cane.

The comparatively slow progress of its introduction into the Lower Provinces may fairly be imputed to circumstances over which the society has no controul, since its attention to the importance of the measure may be traced in its report upon experiments carried on at Acra Farm, and the distribution of cane produced there is evidence of the anxiety felt to give it a fair trial.

The average weight of middling sized Otaheite cane grown at Acra was 9lbs. each, while that of the common dessee cane was 11lb. each.

The experiments further showed that excellent ratoons* were produced from the stools of the first year's plant, and this is a very important point to be kept in view, when placed in juxtaposition with the stunted indigenous canes which require a new rotation crop every year at an immense waste of labor and irrigation, and it is a singular coincidence, that the same prejudice existed, not very many years ago in the West Indies, against the introduction of the Otaheite cane in the slave islands, under a similar impression as that entertained by Messrs. Henley and Blake, of its watery qualities, until from actual experiments made on a large scale by one or two public spirited individuals, the spell was broken, and now nothing save the "Otaheite" waves triumphant in every island.*

That such will be the case a few years hence in India your Committee entertain very sanguine hopes, and under this conviction, and with a view to bring about this consummation as early as possible, they would recommend the adoption of Mr. Bell's suggestions in the amended form now submitted.

Proposed 1st.—That one rupee be offered for every full grown Otaheite cane, or for every eight feet of cut cane that may be imported by sea from the Mauritius, or other place beyond the continent of India, within the next eight months from this date, and that it be optional with the society to limit or extend their purchase to or beyond 1,000 canes, the money for such canes to be paid under a certificate of the Agricultural Committee, as to their vegetating powers on examination immediately after arrival at the Honourable Company's Botanical Garden.

Proposed 2nd.—That in addition to the premium of one rupee for each cane, the gold medal be awarded to any individual who shall first import as above two stunted full grown full length Otaheite canes, or a quantity of cut packed cane equal to 1,600 running feet, within the period notified in the 1st proposition.

Proposed 3rd.—That in addition to the premium of one rupee for each cane, the silver medal be awarded to any individual who shall import as above the second two hundred whole canes or cut canes (packed) equal to 1,600 running feet, within the period above described.

* Norx. For examples of success in India, see. Trans. vol. 3rd, pages 42 (56 para. 4) 57, 72 para. 1, 2, 3, Proposed 4th.—That a premium of two thousand rupees and the gold medal be awarded to any cultivator who can exhibit, on or before the 1st Jan'y. 1839, fifty regularly planted Bengal beegahs of Otaheite sugar cane, in the best condition and most advanced state of cultivation, and of at least six months' standing, in any part of Bengal each plant to be four feet apart, and laid in holes 18 inches deep, after the West India plan of cultivation, on condition that the first year's produce be offered to the Society for purchase, and on condition that the cultivator allow the stoles to remain, the rattoons produced from such stoles being offered for sale to the Society, at a price not exceeding two pice per full grown ratoon, or, in the event of the above not being claimed, the sum of one thousand rupees with the silver medal be awarded for any quantity of cultivation not less than 25 beegahs, on the same terms or conditions as above, preference being given to the largest extent of cultivation.

Proposed 5th.—That it shall be incumbent on the competition to transmit at their own expense, not less than twenty of their best canes to the Secretary, accompanied by a certificate under the signature of the nearest authority, on honor that the cultivation is so many beegahs; and the decision of the Sugar Committee will be received by the Society, in evidence of the successful candidate.

Your Committee have been induced to confine competition to Bengal, as it is considered that the Otaheite cane has through the several channels already adverted to, been firmly established in the Upper Provinces including Goruckpore.

In conclusion, advertng to a letter read at the last General Meeting of this Society, to the address of Mr. Willis, your Committee, while they regret that any feeling like jealousy should exist on the part of the Mauritius planters, to which is attributed the difficulty of obtaining supplies from thence, do not regard this feeling with the slightest apprehension as to the ultimate successful introduction of the Otaheite cane, and they are disposed rather to attribute the difficulty to some other cause; for it would be fully in the Mauritius planters to exhibit any dread of competition from India, by simply denying us a few plant canes, when he is aware, or at least he may now learn from this report, that we are independent of foreign supplies, but, hold out those premiums only to induce an early consummation of what must in a few years take place, without further assistance from without.

Lastly.—Your Committee desire to recommend that their propositions, based on the suggestions of the Secretary, be adopted without any more delay, as notice cannot be longer protracted with any fair prospect of obtaining plants in season and within the period prescribed, and that the Secretary be requested to annex to the series of resolutions, a memo, pointing out the mode of packing, &c., which has been on actual trial found best.

THE NEW MEDICAL COLLEGE.

We were yesterday gratified by another visit to the laboratory of the new Medical College, having heard a hint that something new and beautiful was to be exhibited.

It is indeed a matter of great pride and triumph to Professor O'Shaughnessy, that with all the disadvantages India holds out in the means of getting up apparatus, and in a climate that is enough to damp any ardour (but his!) he should, as far as we can ascertain, have far outstripped his European competitors in the power and efficiency of his galvanic combinations. His discovery, that the membrane of Daniel might be advantageously replaced by leather, has given him the means of increasing his plates from the limits of a mere bladder to the dimensions of a large hide, or in fact (by uniting sheets of leather) to any size! while the durability of this material renders it safe from the accidents of fracture and decay, to which the former substance was so liable, and maintains its effects constant for a long time.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy, has now arranged an entirely new battery in eight large wooden troughs, containing each four copper and three zinc plates about 3½ feet by 2½ feet. The wires conducting from this train to the discharging troughs of mercury, wherein a steel file was placed perpendicularly, when brought in contact with the latter, ignited and fused the steel with a magnificent scintillation, consuming it like a candle. Arches of thick wire of silver, copper, iron and platina were ignited in their entire length, and the various other effects already witnessed were shown on a magnified scale. The mixed gas given out by the decomposition of water amounted to seventy cubic inches per minute, and being transmitted through a safety cylinder of oil to a blowpipe jet, poured forth with a velocity, sufficient to keep alight a candle of chalk like that applied to the oxyhydrogen microscope, burning with the brightness of a small star. We have no doubt that with a larger battery the application to microscopic illumination might be most effectively and economically made, or even on a grander scale to light-houses and night telegraphs; but is it not incumbent on the society at large to aid by subscription in meeting the expense of these grand experiments? We know that the first subscription raised by the frequenters of the Government House Saloon, has long since been exhausted, and we must not forget that improvements in such inventions outstep calculation, so that an apparatus to-day thought complete will be superseded and set aside to-morrow. The step has been necessary; and the money well laid out; but "many more, many more," destruction of vases and plates and cylinders must take place before the maximum of effect and of benefit is elicited. Calcutta, as a community of professing savans, delighting in experiment and revelling in scientific assemblies, should be eager to share in the merit of such discoveries, and to do honor to the individual, through whose inductive talent and research they have been enabled to taste of such a mental feast.—*Cal. MEDICAL AND PHYSICAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Calcutta held at the Asiatic Society's Apartments, the 5th August 1837.

Letters from the following Gentlemen were read :

1.—From D. Ross, Esq., stating that he begged to present to the Society a specimen of oil from the Deodard-tree. This oil is in high repute amongst the natives as an external application for rheumatism. It is employed by Veterinary Surgeons for the cure of bursæ and other sores. The oil is dark colored and thick, possessing rather an agreeable odour.

2d.—From the same gentleman, enclosing an extract from a letter of Dr. Trail, Professor of Medical Jurisprudence in Edinburgh. The purport of Dr. Trail's communication was to express his grief for the death of the late Mr. Twining, and his admiration for the talents and eminent worth of that distinguished individual.

3rd.—From Mr. Mackinnon of Tirhoot, stating that he begged to forward for the Museum of the College some urinary calculi which he had extracted, and a specimen of exostosis of the tibia from a leg which he had removed by amputation. The calculi and the diseased bone presented very beautiful examples of morbid structure. Two of the calculi were removed from the same individual. Dr. Mackinnon states that in one of the operations, finding some difficulty in getting into the groove of the staff he withdrew the latter altogether and cut directly into the bladder. The manœuvre proved quite successful. The patients who formed the subjects of these operations had all recovered.

4th.—From R. Baillie, Esq., Madras establishment, forwarding the history of a case of congenital malformation.

5th.—From F. Brett, Esq., containing an account drawn up by the patient himself, of a case of deafness and a description of some improvements in a coustic instrument invented by the sufferer.

The patient states that his deafness succeeded to a cynanche maligna which he caught whilst serving at the siege at Bhutpore. He made trial of several descriptions of ear trumpet, some of which afforded him considerable relief, but none were effective for all voices, those of females were most readily heard. Loud voices, he says, were not always so readily heard as lower ones, indeed raising the speaker's voice above the natural pitch generally rendered the sound indistinct in all the instruments which he employed. In many cases the ear trumpets were altogether inefficient. From these causes the writer was induced to make numerous alterations and improvements on the apparatus he used; these consisted chiefly in adapting a number of perforated plates placed parallel to and at a short distance from each other in a zigzag direction in the mouth piece of the instrument; the holes in the plates were exceedingly small; these plates were varied in number and situation so as to suit voices of different characters and timbre. Some alterations too were effected in the ear pieces; the best are made of bell-metal, which is incomparably better than silver or horn, but the writer states that he believes ivory would be superior to all other materials. The ear pieces have all pin head apertures. This gentleman insists much upon the advantage of applying the mouth-piece to the corner of the speaker's mouth instead of directly in front. All his mouth pieces are contrived to accomplish that object. He states that the instruments when applied under the chin, or between the neck and throat, or even upon the chest of the speaker, rendered the voice more distinct than when it issues from the centre of the lips. In some of the instruments a few of the plates are perforated. The mouth and ear pieces are separated by a long thin hookah snake.

The paper was accompanied by the instruments which were exhibited to the Meeting.

Mr. Brett remarks upon the care that it would appear from its history that the pathological changes in Mr. * * * *s ear are probably closure of the eustachean tube and deposition of organized lymph in the tympanum, perhaps also in the cochlea and semi-circular canals. He says that the object of these instruments is the concentration and direction of the vibrations of sound. The effect of applying the instrument to the corner of the mouth is evidently to prevent the vibrations of the air by respiration being mixed and confounded with those of the voice. The zigzag plates have perhaps the effect of a micrometer of sound, and thereby serve as a substitute for the cochlea and semi-circular canals, whose structure these instruments somewhat resemble, and the circumstance of the acuteness and pitch of the voice being increased or diminished in the exact ratio with the number of these zigzag plates, whilst it corroborates the supposed physiological use of these mysterious parts of the organ of hearing, shews morbid diseases to have taken place in the structure and function of some of these parts.

Mr. Oxley's case of injury of the head, presented at a former meeting, was then read and discussed. A middle aged man, a Hindoo, was struck on the head by the fall of a tree. He was rendered senseless by the blow, and when brought to the hospital, lay perfectly tranquil, like a person asleep; body warm, respiration natural, pupils contracted, pulse 72 and regular; a large wound was observed on the back of his head, and the skull in that situation was found to be fractured and depressed. The trephine was applied, the depressed bone elevated, and pieces of broken bone to the extent of two square inches, removed. The dura mater was uninjured. The man began to speak shortly after the operation and showed more consciousness. He gradually returned to his senses, the wound began to heal and he appeared to be doing well. He was attacked with slight symptoms of phrenitis, but they were relieved by leeches, purgatives and salivation. Indeed he appeared to be recovering fast when he was seized with diarrhoea, which carried him off. On dissection several ounces of serum were found to be effused under the arachnoid and the ventricles were filled with a similar fluid. There was some also at the base of the cerebellum; the substance of the brain was unusually firm. Mr. Oxley remarks, that this case is interesting because, after the accident, the respiration was natural, pulse regular, and pupils contracted, with perfect insensibility in opposition to the usual description of the state of such a patient by most authors, especially by Mr. Abernethy. There was effectual compression both by bone and blood, the removal of which caused the pulse to rise, and yet there was no disturbance of the respiratory function, no stertorous breathing and the pupils were not dilated, shewing that the signs laid down by Mr. Abernethy cannot be considered as invariably correct.

It was curious also to observe the appearances of the brain when the patient had made no complaint of uneasiness in that organ for many days previous to his death.

STEAM COMMUNICATION.

The Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund publish for the information of the subscribers to the Fund and to the Petitioners, the following letters from Captain Grindlay and Major Head, with their reply to the latter gentleman:—

The committee refrain from offering any remarks on the letter from Capt. Grindlay; but they have much satisfaction in directing attention to the unanimous resolution of the provincial committee at home, whereby they pledge themselves, collectively and individually, by all means in their power, to support any motion that may be moved in Parliament, provided such motion is intended to advance a comprehensive communication with the various parts of the Indian empire.

It would appear that Lord William Bentinck has stated that he could not find a proper opportunity for presenting the petition till the 6th June. The committee are quite satisfied, that this delay has not occurred without good reason. They are confident that the cause is in good hands; and they believe that, backed by the strong expressions of public opinion, which they anticipate will arise when the question is discussed in Parliament, the comprehensive scheme has nothing to fear. At this distance they can of course afford no immediate aid; but they desire to repeat the expression of their entire concurrence in the present views of the provincial committee, and their determination to afford that committee all the aid in their power, should a continuance of exertion at home be necessary.

It will also be gratifying to the subscribers to learn that Mr. Tait had arrived, and had already commenced to take an interest in the home proceedings, as also that he, together with Mr. James McKillop, had joined the London Provisional Committee as honorary members.

By order of the Committee,

CHAS. B. GREENLAW,

Secretary.

London, 1st May, 1837.

T. C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.

Secretary to the Bengal Steam Committee.

Sir,—I embrace the opportunity afforded by the recurrence of the first of the month to keep you advised of the progress of opinion and events here as to the establishment of Steam Communication with India.

Before proceeding to the detail of any actual business transactions, I must observe that a considerable portion of any time (as you will probably be aware) is continually occupied in endeavouring to direct in the desired channel the various under currents of public opinion and private interest. These minor movements from their multiplicity and complexity do not admit of being detailed or even enumerated. I am persuaded, however, that their utility is not small, and that though one of them by itself might appear trivial, their united force will be found eminently serviceable in assisting to achieve the great object of our labors. I pass on to the relation of the latest and most important occurrences of a public nature which have taken place in connection with the subject.

On the 28th of last month (April) the committee of the London Association for establishing Steam Communication between England and India, held a meeting at which our home committee were invited to attend. After reading communications from India, the chairman of the association, Major Head, expressed himself desirous of supporting Mr. Mullin's motion in Parliament for a select committee on Steam Navigation with India. In this, however, the majority did not concur, and it was thought more advisable to wait the development of the intentions of Government which would be called forth on the presentation of the petitions, and if these were not satisfactory it would then be the proper reason for the Steam Navigation Company to urge such further means as might be demanded by the wants of the English and Indian communities.

Among the topics adverted to, was one of some interest introduced by Mr. Larpent of our committee. He stated that he had heard that in consequence of the establishment of French steam boats between Marseilles and Alexandria, the East India Company and the post office authorities were about to make arrangements for the transmission of letters by that route three times every month in addition to the existing monthly communication by the Malta packet. Mr. Larpent also made an avowal very gratifying, and in my judgment very just, and well warranted, in declaring his perfect conviction that both Sir James Carnac and Mr. Loch were cordially desirous of giving every facility to promote the fulfilment of the fair expectations of those who take an interest in the question.

You will probably have heard of Mr. Waghorn's having proceeded to England. He was present at the meeting, and stated that he had just proposed to the chairman of the East India Company a new plan of communication, namely, for the Hugh Lindsay to run constantly between Suez and Mocha, the Atlanta and Berenice between Mocha and Bombay. From what I have heard I think this arrangement not unlikely to be adopted.

I believe I have mentioned the most important points in the proceedings of the meeting; which will at least be sufficient to shew that the question is not sleeping.

Mr. Turton has arrived and has become a member of our committee. I accompanied him to the house of Lord Wm. Bentinck, with whom we had an interview of considerable length. His lordship took a very comprehensive view of the progress and present state of the question. He stated that however favorably disposed he might be, towards the London Steam Navigation Association; he regarded the French plan of communication above referred to as certain to destroy all possibility of pecuniary advantage from the European part of the project, and he admitted that he saw insurmountable objections to His Majesty's Government given up by the Mediterranean establishment. His lordship expressed great anxiety to expedite proceedings, but declared that he could not find a proper opportunity for presenting the petitions before the 6th June. He appeared to place the most entire reliance on Sir John Hobhouse, who has declared himself anxious for the presentation of the petition to take place, believing that this movement would strengthen him in his position and facilitate his negotiations.

There can be no doubt whatever, that the presentation of the petitions or any other indication of public interest would have these effects. I have again and again on these grounds urged the importance of popular demonstration. I still hope that I may be successful in obtaining that which I am sure would do good. The feeling expressed by the President of the Board of Control would seem irreconcilable with the continuance of any distaste for a public meeting in the metropolis, and I am most anxious as I always have been, to see one.

Such is the state of our prospects at home, and I think on the whole it may be regarded as a satisfactory one. It seems certain that we shall get a communication to some extent; and when we have made a beginning we must lend the whole force of our efforts to render it perfect. I own that things proceed more leisurely than I think justified by the importance of the object; but I am a single person, and if unable to inspire others with as much ardour as I feel, I can only submit. Whatever I can do singly shall be done. Whatever exertions of mine can be useful in aiding or carrying out the proceedings of others in the common cause, shall be cheerfully and vigorously contributed.

The return of Mr. Lynch, of the Indian Navy, to Bagdad, it is understood, is for the purpose of keeping up a communication by way of Beyrout and the Persian Gulph. There is, however, no ground for alarm from this circumstance. Whatever political or commercial objects may be contemplated, it never can be intended to establish this route for the Red Sea as the highway between England and India. The practicability and certainty of the one and the problematical character of the other, place them out of the pale of comparison. Whatever is done for the benefit of India must and will be done by the Red Sea.

I have the honor to be,

Sir, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) R. M. GRINDLAY.

To C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.,

Secy. Committee, New Bengal Steam Fund.

East India Steam Navigation office, 6, Crosby Square,
May 1, 1837.

SIR,—On the 1st ultimo, I had the honor of addressing you in reference to your communication of 26th December, since doing so the Provisional Committee have had before them the several documents submitted from the New Bengal Steam Committee. I am requested to reply thereto in the name of the London Association, and at the same time to report to you the proceedings of this Committee since I had the honor of last addressing you. The communications made to you at different periods by this Committee since the 20th August, (referred to by you) will have explained most of the points remarked on in your letter and will have satisfied your Committee, the steps taken in London in the first instance that were such as were necessary to forward and promote the object in view. This measure (however wrongly or by whatever party it has been urged) has been prevented from progressing on the plea of expence. This Committee gave in a plan by which Steam Communication with India might be established to create a saving to Government by performing the Mediterranean Packet duty for a less sum than is now expended on the Mediterranean Government Packets. Again, the moderate demand of compensation asked of the East India Company could not be objected to, considering the important duties to be performed for them. For the first time the project of Steam Communication with India obtained such support as at length to receive the serious attention of H. M. Government and promises of assistance. Although not yet finally accomplished it is so far advanced as to be pretty certain at least to India; and Steam Communication beyond Point de Galle as well as to Bombay is now listened to without the advocates of the measure being looked on as enthusiasts or the scheme being condemned as involving ruinous expence; with this enlargement of public views the plans of this association have been gradually developed and the proceedings of the committee on Friday last, a copy of which is annexed, will shew that little difference exists between the London and Calcutta Committees as to the most efficient and comprehensive plan of Steam Communication due to the vast interests involved in this undertaking.

It is a source of regret with many members of this Committee, that the Calcutta communication was not of a more compromising character, and that more was not left to your delegates in London. The opponents to Steam Navigation avail themselves of the expression contained in the 3rd para. and they make no allowance for the present position of the question, nor do they seek any information on the subject, but thus weaken the exertions making by the association to obtain Steam Communication with all the presidencies of India. No exertion will, however, be wanting to bring the measure to as early and favorable a termination as possible, and with this view the Committee will not relax in their labors.

The gentlemen associated with me on this occasion, feel sensible of the expression of approbation for their exertions conveyed in your letter. As regards the acknowledgment made to myself, I return my most sincere thanks to you and to your Committee, and feel gratified in having been permitted in any way to forward so interesting and useful a project, doomed as this is to benefit so many millions of the human race by opening the way to improvement.

I have, &c.

(Signed) C. F. HEAD, Chairman.

London P. C.

No. 6, Crosby Square, 28th April, 1837.

TO THE SECRETARY OF THE STEAM COMMITTEE, Calcutta.

Present.

Major Head, Chairman .	— Fletcher, Esq.
James Bonar, Esq.	— Larpent, Esq.
Capt. Locke, H. C. S.	Mr. Waghorn.
Capt. Grindlay,	George Denny, Esq.
Capt. Thornton, R. N.	Capt. Probyn, H. C. S.
Capt. Nairne, H. C. S.	John Woolley, Esq.
John Hutt, Esq.	Capt. Barber, H. C. S.
G. Palmer, Jr., Esq.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

* The following is the paragraph alluded to.—C. B. G.

"With these sentiments, this committee regret they cannot concur in the plan laid down by your committee, as it would assuredly be incomplete and therefore inefficient; they consider no plan can be efficient which does not embrace the whole communication from England to Calcutta, thereby including every part of India, dropping the mails and passengers in its progress, whether at Gibraltar, Malta, Alexandria, Bombay (from Socotra) Galle, Madras and so on to Calcutta, proceeding the whole way with the utmost despatch."

The chairman stated to the Committee, that in compliance with the resolutions of the last meeting of the Committee, he had written to Mr. McKillop, and also to Mr. Turton, the views of this Committee in respect to the present position of the Steam question. That the most desirable method of proceeding appeared to be by means of a Committee of the House of Commons to investigate the claims of all India to regular Steam Communication, and of all India to participate in benefits derivable from this measure, also to determine in connection with various documents and details received recently from India, and on behalf of the commercial interests of this country, the best mode for establishing the sought for object, on a permanent and satisfactory footing, as most likely to develop the great advantages expected from its adoption. The co-operation of the gentlemen nominated to attend to the proceedings of the Calcutta Steam petition was requested. It was further reported that Mr. McKillop and Mr. Turton attended at the office of the Committee since the above communication has been made, and being satisfied that the desire of the association was to obtain for all the presidencies in India the benefits of Steam Communication direct with England, those gentlemen had become honorary members of this committee, with the desire to promote their views. Those gentlemen were prevented from attending the committee on the present occasion, but Mr. Fletcher, Mr. Larpent and Capt. Grindlay, who were acting with them, were at the table. The chairman proceeded briefly to detail various and strong arguments from Calcutta, as contained in the communication received from the Bengal Steam Committee, and in so doing pointed out the necessity for one responsible agency between England and India.

The difficulty and expence of overland communication in India, caused from defect in climate and in roads, and the great advantages that India must derive by connecting this Steam Navigation with internal navigation by means of Iron Steamers. The Chairman next read a communication just received from the Bombay Steam Committee, detailing in strong terms the desire felt at that presidency for Steam Communication by way of the Red Sea, and encouraging the committee to proceed in their endeavours to promote a cause, on the successful issue of which all India stand anxiously expectant. It was also reported that accounts from Madras had been received detailing favorable views entertained in that Presidency of the present project, and the desire that prevailed to co-operate with this Committee, at the same time pointing out the desire of Madras in common with the other Presidencies, to obtain a direct communication with England. Those remarks from Madras were in reference to answers about to be sent to letters received from this Committee.

The Chairman stated, that on urging His Majesty's Government to adopt some certain mode of communication with India, there was sufficient cause in the irregularity attending the transmission of the last mails from this country. The Sept. mail had not reached Bombay on the 19th January, and it is believed the mail of that month and the three following months will have reached India by the same conveyance. Various statements, as to the intention of Government and the East India Company in respect to this measure were now talked of, but no definite arrangements had yet been come to. The business part of the year had far advanced; and it was thought extremely desirable that all parties interested, and who advocated this measure, should consult as to the most desirable mode of proceeding.

The Chairman stated, this was the object of the present meeting. Mr. Larpent stated that he as chairman and Mr. Hastie as deputy chairman of the East India and China Association, both took interest in this measure and had at different times sought for information in reference thereto. Mr. Hastie had in the House of Commons recently learnt from one of the Members of the India Board that His Majesty's Government was proceeding in it, and was anxious to have it adjusted. He (Mr. Larpent) had recently made enquiries of the Secretary of the East India Company, and he found there was correspondence pending between His Majesty's Government and the East India Company in reference to the same subject.

He believed the importance and necessity of it was now fully felt in all quarters. He considered that much credit was due to the gentlemen of this committee whose exertions had greatly advanced the cause.

Mr. Larpent considered that in the present stage of the question, it would be advisable to await the result of the Government announcement to be made in the House of Commons, when Lord William Bentinck brings forward his motions on the 6th June, and to be guided by it. At this moment Mr. Waghorn was introduced, who stated that he had seen various official persons in reference to this measure, and amongst others he had just seen and conversed with the chairman of the India House, who thought favorably of a plan for carrying on the India Mails by the French Steam Packets between Marseilles and Egypt, and of connecting this with India communication. There was no satisfactory explanation as to the mode proposed to navigate the Red Sea. Mr. Waghorn was understood to say that Mails by the French Packets were to be conveyed to Alexandria 2 or 3 times a month, to be forwarded to Mocha, and the East India Company were to navigate the New Steam Vessels between Bombay and Mocha. This explanation was not satisfactory, and Mr. Waghorn in strong terms expressed his hopes that this association will still urge the measure forward, and his belief that nothing would be done without it. He illustrated this by several strong facts. His duty he considered was to improve the now existing communication, but it was for this committee to have it done completely. Some further conversation took place as to the necessity of perseverance and the duty of this Committee to watch the interests of their subscribers and of the Indian public, and to obtain not only a Steam communication with India, but with all the presidencies of India, and with Ceylon. The visitors then withdrew, when the Committee after some discussion adopted unanimously the following resolutions:—

"It was resolved, that Mr. Ashburner, who is deputed from India to attend to the progress of the Steam Question, should be invited to become an honorary member of this Committee.

"That from the intense interest existing in India and all parts of our Eastern possessions, relative to the subject of Steam Communication with those countries, it becomes a paramount duty with this association not to relax in their efforts towards establishing this important undertaking, and with this view this Committee pledge themselves collectively and individually, by all means in their power, to support any motion that may be moved in Parliament, provided such motion is intended to advance a comprehensive communication with the various parts of the Indian empire."

"That the gentlemen appointed as delegates from the various presidencies of India, be requested to co-operate with the association in their endeavours to establish Steam communication with India, on a basis worthy of so important an undertaking."

"That the East India and China Association in London be requested to give their support to any motion that may be made in Parliament for the purpose of securing a permanent and comprehensive Steam Communication with all parts of India."

"That this committee desire to express their sense of the important services rendered by Mr. Waghorn to the cause of Steam Navigation to India generally, and their obligations for his valuable information conveyed to this committee this day and on other occasions, that Mr. Waghorn be invited to become an honorary member of this Committee."

I have, &c.

To MAJOR HEAD, Chairman, Provisional Committee, &c. &c. &c.

SIR,—I have the honor by direction of the Committee of the New Bengal Steam Fund, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated 1st May last, with its enclosure, and to lose no time in repeating the entire concurrence of this committee in your present views.

It affords this committee great satisfaction to find, that Messrs. Jas. McKillop and Turton have become associated with you as honorary Members of your committee, and they anticipate much benefit to the general cause of all India from this union.

That Messrs. Jas. McKillop and Turton have become associated with you as honorary Members of your committee, and they anticipate much benefit to the general cause of all India from this union.

My last letter dated 28th ult., will have put your Committee in possession of the readiness of this Committee to sanction any grant out of the New Bengal Steam Fund in aid of your views which the Home Committee may see fitting to make.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obdt. servt.

C. B. GREENLAW, Secretary.

Town Hall, Calcutta, the 31st July, 1837.

[Hurkaru, August 21,

The Steam Meeting, as we noticed on Saturday, was very fully attended. There could not have been less than four hundred persons present. On the motion of Mr. Pattle, seconded by Mr. Parker, Sir Edward Ryan took the chair, and read the requisition of the Committee calling the Meeting.

He then desired the Secretary to read the report which was as follows:—

REPORT.

Of the Committee of the new Bengal Steam Fund to the Subscribers to the Fund, and to the Petition, at the eighth half-yearly general meeting convened under the 10th Regulation of the original meeting of the Subscribers to the Fund held on the 22d day of June, 1833.

On the occasion of the last meeting of the subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund, and to the petition, held on the 18th February, the Committee stated that the cause of Steam Communication between England and India had at length assumed that position at home which must in a short time lead to its establishment.

They are now happy to be able to say that they still continue to feel satisfied that such will be the case, and they see little reason to fear that the communication will not at once be extended to all the ports of India.

The Committee have, as usual, communicated to the subscribers through the medium of the newspapers the progress of affairs at home, as they became known to them through letters received from Captain Grindlay and Major Head; but it will be convenient on thus meeting the subscribers to notice the several incidents that have occurred.

In April last, the Committee received letters from Captain Grindlay and Major Head, up to the beginning of February. On that occasion they communicated to the subscribers that Captain Grindlay would appear by the communications received from him to have followed the directions given to him with great energy so far as directing public attention to the general question was concerned, but they expressed their regret that they found reason to be much dissatisfied with the tenor of his advocacy, so much so that they considered it to be most inexpedient that the interests of the subscribers should any longer be placed in his hands, and they at the same time published their unanimous resolution in which they requested him to close accounts with the Home Committee. Nor have the subsequent communications, received from Captain Grindlay, at all tended to alter the sentiments of the Committee on his behalf.

Under date 23d June, the Committee published communications from Captain Grindlay and Major Head up to the 14th March.

The letters of Major Head intimated that Lord William Bentinck was in direct communication with him with reference to the simultaneous establishment of the communication direct to all the principal ports of India, and Captain Grindlay reported that the Lords of the Treasury and the President of the Board of Control were of opinion that no plan would be worthy of adoption that did not provide for such direct communication with the principal ports; yet, notwithstanding, he knew, as is clear from his letter of the 1st May, that there was opposition at work against the principle thus laid down by the Lords of the Treasury and President of the Board of Control, and fully adopted by Major Head and his Committee, he does not appear to have taken any steps whatever from that date up to the 1st May to support the Principle, or to assist in the proceedings evidently going on under the auspices of Lord William Bentinck, although under date the 1st April, the letter of the Committee in reply to Major Head's proposition, in which letter that principle is laid down as a "sine qua non" for the concurrence of this Committee, was published in the Times news paper; and indeed the annexed sketch of a proposed petition, embodying Captain Grindlay's views, and forwarded officially by him under date 7th January for the information of the Committee, sufficiently evinces that no decided support of the views of the subscribers to the New Bengal Steam Fund and to the petition to the House of Commons could be expected from him.

The committee, however, are happy in being able to state, as just noticed, that Major Head's Committee had, prior to the receipt of the Committee's reply, consequent on communications with Lord William Bentinck, prepared a petition to the House of Commons, praying, "that no measures will receive the sanction of your Hon'ble House that do not ensure a regular, expeditious and monthly communication between the different Ports of India and England," and they have obtained a further petition to be prepared by certain Merchants, Bankers, Traders and others, in the city of London, referring to the Resolutions of the Select Committee of the House of Commons, and "praying that the house will adopt measures for establishing a regular monthly Steam Communication by way of the Red Sea between the principal ports of India and England."

On this radical change in the views of the London Provisional Committee, viz. from proposing the immediate establishment of the communication to Bombay alone, and its subsequent extension to the other ports of India, as circumstances might enable them to do so, to at once establishing it on the plan originally proposed by this Committee, they desire to direct the attention of the subscribers to that part of their last report in which they gave their reasons why they could not concur in the original proposition of Major Head's Committee. Among these reasons are the following:

18. "But as the proceedings of the Committee, and indeed of all India, are based on these resolutions, it would obviously have been impossible for the Committee to concur in Major Head's scheme, without abandoning the strong ground they have taken, and possibly placing themselves in opposition to the proceedings in progress at home by their own agents acting under their directions.

19. "Again Major Head's scheme was framed in entire ignorance that any movement was in progress here, and of course in ignorance that that movement was based on the resolutions and before its projectors could be aware of this, they had brought their scheme to the notice of the authorities at home.

20. When, however, they become aware of the great importance of this ground, especially if the country generally should respond to the appeal, nothing can be more probable than they will abandon their present scheme and take their stand also on the resolutions. If then the Committee consistently could have and had concurred in Major Head's plan, the reply to the expression of such concurrence might have been an announcement of the abandonment of the plan."

The Committee leave the subscribers to judge in how far they were right in the above view taken by them on the occasion referred to. They have, however, the further satisfaction of knowing that their reply to Major Head must be considered as strengthening the views entertained by his Committee when they received the reply.

Major Head, in a letter dated 3d April, from himself individually, after explaining the grounds on which he originally proposed to commence with Bombay alone in the first instance, and those on which his views and those of the Committee have progressively been altered, says.

"Having received this communication from your Committee, I wrote this day to Lord William Bentinck to request an interview. I will make known your views to His Lordship, and I do so the more readily, as similar sentiments were expressed by this Committee, and are embodied in a petition ready to present with that from Calcutta; also petitions from the Merchants of London and from the Merchants connected with Ceylon to the same effect."

The latest communications received were dated 1st May, and were published in the Calcutta papers of the 4th instant.

In making these communications know to the subscribers, the Committee refrained from any remark on that of Captain Grindlay, and they still desire to leave it to the judgment of the subscribers at large; Major Head's letter, however, is a source of much satisfaction to the Committee.

It appears that on the receipt of the Committee's reply, he called a Meeting of his Committee and invited the attendance of the Members of our Home Committee and that of Captain Grindlay.—Mr. Turton and Mr. James McKillop having previously become Honorary Members of Major Head's Committee,—these two gentlemen were however unable to attend the meeting; but Messrs. Larpent and Fletcher and Captain Grindlay did so: Major Head addressed the meeting and noticed the reply of the Calcutta Committee in these words.

"The chairman proceeded briefly to detail various and strong arguments from Calcutta as contained in the communication received from the New Bengal Steam Committee, and in so doing pointed out the necessity for one responsible agency between England and India."

"The difficulty and expense of overland communication in India caused from defect of climate and in roads, and the great advantages that India must derive by connecting this Steam Navigation with internal navigation by means of iron steamers."

And the visitors having withdrawn, the provisional Committee unanimously came to the following resolutions:—

"That from the intense interest existing in India and all parts of our Eastern possessions, relative to the subject of Steam Communications with those countries, it becomes a paramount duty with this association not to relax in their efforts towards establishing this important undertaking, and with this view this Committee pledge themselves collectively and individually by all means in their power to support any motion that may be moved in Parliament provided such motion is intended to advance a comprehensive communication with the various ports of the Indian Empire."

"That the gentlemen appointed as delegates from the various presidencies of India be requested to co-operate with the association in their endeavours to establish Steam communication with India on a basis worthy of so important an undertaking."

"That the East India and China Association in London, be requested to give their support to any motion that may be made in Parliament for the purpose of securing a permanent and comprehensive Steam Communication with all parts of India."

The Committee now beg to refer the subscribers to the proceedings had by them in relation to those communicated by Major Head.

On the first intimation from that gentlemen of the intention of his Committee to petition the House of Commons not to sanction any measure that does not ensure a regular, expeditions and monthly communication between the different ports of India and this country, the Committee lost no time in expressing their entire concurrence in this view, and in pledging themselves to afford the provisional Committee all the assistance in their power in their endeavours to establish a perfect Steam communication between England and the principal ports of India, and they opened a credit with the house of Sir Charles Cockerell, Bart., and Co. for £1,000, in favor of the Home Committee, intimating to that Committee that they would readily sanction any grant which the Home Committee might see fitting to make in aid of the views of the provisional Committee while those views continued to have the concurrence of Lord William Bentinck and the other members of the Home Committee.

On receipt of the letter from Major Head, dated 1st May, conveying the resolutions above noticed and the intimation that Messrs. James McKillop and Turton had joined his Committee as Honorary Members, the Calcutta Committee expressed the great satisfaction they felt at this latter proceeding, anticipating as the Committee do, much benefit to the cause from the union of the only two Indian Members of the Home Committee with that of Major Head under the views now advocated by him.

The Committee would now observe, that the petitions were to be presented on the 6th June last. They trust, that the result will have been a resolution for the immediate establishment of the communication to all the three Presidencies. But should it for any cause not be so, they will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that the plan originally proposed by them will have received consideration, and that at all events it had at one time the concurrence of His Majesty's Government. Further, should it have been resolved to establish the communication to Bombay alone in the first instance, this Committee stand pledged to the Home Committee as follows, under date 1st May last.

"Should it have had that fair consideration and the determination should have been come to establish the communication to Bombay alone, whether permanently or with the intention of eventually extending it then we would request that on our part every legitimate means may be used to obtain the extension at the earliest possible period. On hearing, that such a determination has been come to, we shall lose no time in endeavouring to strengthen your hands by obtaining still further expressions of the public desire in India; and we shall continue our utmost exertions until our endeavours are crowned with success or are rendered utterly hopeless."

The Committee appeal to their constituents for a concurrence in the arrangements they have made in support of Major Head's present views, and they appeal for concurrence in the above pledge.

They consider a strong and united expression of desire for the immediate establishment of the perfect communication and of determination to continue to press it till accomplished will be of the utmost use, if unfortunately the hopes and wishes of all India, with little exception, should be frustrated by the partial Communication being alone established.

Accompanying is a statement of the funds, shewing a balance of Co's. Rs. 51,448-1-10 exclusive of interest due, amounting to Co's. Rs. 546-2-2, making in round numbers Co's. Rs. 52,000, subject to a credit of £1,000 on the house of Sir Charles Cockerell, Bart., and Co. in favor of the home Committee; who it is understood have furnished to Captain Grindlay £700 out of the £1,000 originally remitted to them, thus having £1,300 at their disposal.

By order of the Committee,

CHARLES B. GREENLAW, Secretary.

Town Hall Calcutta, August 16, 1837.

Mr. Greenlaw then stated that he had that morning received letters from Captain Grindlay dated 1st June, and a copy of a letter addressed to Lord Melbourne by Dr. Lardner, and a small work on Egypt, by Mr. Waghorn. In noticing these, Mr. Greenlaw observed that the Committee had on more than one occasion informed the subscribers that they had arranged under a distinct agency from that of Captain Grindlay for the further advocacy of the extension of the communication to the principle Ports of India; and they were indebted to that agency for obtaining the kind and powerful interference of Dr. Lardner in their favor. It was not for him to take up the time of the meeting in remarking on the ability displayed in the letter. Mr. Waghorn's work was written with a view to impress on H. M. Government the absolute importance of rendering English interests in Egypt paramount; it was not written avowedly in support of the Steam Communication, and although it only bears incidentally on it, yet it did so in a very important way, and it appeared to him that the work was most creditable to Mr. Waghorn, and exceeded any thing he had ever before given to the public.

Mr. Greenlaw then read Captain Grindley's letter as follows :—

To C. B. GREENLAW, Esq.,

Secretary to the Calcutta Steam Committee.

Sir,—I trust I may commence my usual monthly communication by an expression of well-founded confidence that our cause is prospering although this confidence is grounded more upon the progress which the question had previously made than upon any new movements occurring during the last month. Our position is, however, at least as good as it was, and I am inclined to hope that he has even gained something in point of strength.

You are already well acquainted with the opinion which I entertained from the first in favor of a succession of public meetings commencing in the metropolis and spread throughout the country for the purpose of supporting the petition from India, by others embodying the same prayer from the people of England. I have never seen the slightest reason to abandon my original conviction of the advantages to be drawn from this course, and I have never ceased to lament the impediments which have been opposed to its adoption. A Meeting of our home committee took place on the 16th ultimo, at which Lord William Bentinck and Mr. Taitton attended; and I availed myself of the opportunity to submit the memorandum, No. 32. Its purpose, you will perceive, was to urge once more the importance of convening a public meeting in London, and to suggest that Lord W. Bentinck should be requested to use his influence to remove the scruples of Sir John Hobhouse.

This was a necessary preliminary to such a movement, incalculable as I believe the advantages to be derived from a public meeting would be, if the veto of Sir John could be withdrawn. It is quite clear no benefit could be reasonably expected from any measure, however judicious in other respects, if adopted in defiance of an authority on whom so much depends. Lord William expressed himself anxious to have some definite information as to the state and prospects of the East India Steam Navigation Company before communicating with Sir John Hobhouse on the subject at all. I was in consequence deputed to propose to Major Head, the Chairman of the Company, that our committee should attend theirs at its next meeting, that by free conference and interchange of opinion each body might acquire a perfect knowledge of the views of the other, and by making arrangements for acting in concert, be enabled to act with greatly increased effect.

This overture appears to be demanded by the interests of the common object which we have in view.

It was our endeavour to act in the spirit of the received adage that "unity is strength." In reply to my proposal, I was informed by Major Head, that he was printing some documents which he thought would furnish all the information required by Lord William, and that in his judgement a meeting of the committees was unnecessary. I renewed the application some days afterwards, and received from Major Head a reply of which I enclose a copy (No. 34). We were thus thrown altogether upon the printed documents, which, however, on their arrival, appeared too vague and general to answer Lord William's purpose, or to enable him to state any thing specific to Sir John Hobhouse. We are, in fact, for any practical purpose, no better informed of the views of the Steam Company than we were before. But I hear that it is the intention of that body before the presentation of our petition, to address a letter to Sir John Hobhouse, containing something more tangible, and that a copy will be furnished to Lord William.

This is the present position of affairs. My own opinion is that the communication will be established by the joint provision of the King's Government and the East India Company, and that the line will be occasionally shortened by overland communications to and from Marseilles.

I see nothing discouraging in our prospects, my impressions are decidedly of a contrary character. I believe, however, that we should have had a much better chance of an extended plan, had we been backed as we might have been by the expressed opinion of a numerous body of London Merchants, re-echoed from every place of commercial consequence in the Kingdom. Lord William is fully sensible of the assistance which might have been derived from this course, but believes it now too late. This is lamentable. I shall never cease to regret the rejection of my proposal in the month of October. (No. 7) till we have the extended line in full operation.

Mr. Waghorn has not been idle during his sojourn in this country. In a tour to Liverpool and Manchester, he procured some hasty petitions. That from the former place has been presented by Lord Sandon, but this proceeding having taken place without reference to any general plan, a large portion of the effect which might have been produced, is necessarily lost. Mr. Waghorn appears to feel and regret this. These isolated movements are of very little value, system and perseverance being absolutely essential to success.

I am endeavouring to keep up attention to this subject by the continued circulation of my pamphlets and notices; so that in the event of any discussion arising in Parliament, or a reference of the question to a committee, there may be some general information afloat calculated to lead to a sound and liberal conclusion. My habits of life afford me many opportunities of effecting the same object privately, and inclination no less than duty lead me to be ever on the alert to improve them. Under all circumstances, whether encouraging or depressing, I shall continue to labour to promote the views of those who have honored me by commanding my services, and I trust the success to which all our hopes are directed is not far distant. I do not, indeed, despair of being able in my next monthly letter to communicate the final settlement of the question. I wish I could speak as confidently with regard to the completeness of the communication; but we must hope for the best, and if the comprehensive plan be not adopted in the first instance, it must at all events soon follow.

Since writing the above, I have received a pamphlet by Dr. Lardner, recommending

- 1st. The regular establishment of Steam Navigation with India.
- 2nd. The route by the Red Sea.

3rd. The comprehensive plan admitting to its full advantages not only Bombay, but Calcutta, Madras and Ceylon.

The time will not admit of any observations and none will be necessary, as I enclose a copy for your information. I trust that this publication will do us service, emanating as it does, from a well known member of the scientific world, taking up the right side of the question and maintaining the principle in its full extent.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient Servant,

R. M. GRINDLAY.

London, 1st June, 1837.

Mr. Greenlaw then said, that the Meeting might like to hear an extract from a private letter of Captain Grindlay's, which he read to the following effect.

"We are now within a few days of the crisis; Lord William Bentinck's motion stands for Tuesday the 6th instant, and we have at present no reason to apprehend a postponement. Of the general result, I entertain no apprehensions; as I have seen the progress of the negotiation, and I know that the moving powers are at length fairly and sincerely pledged to the measure; my only doubt is regarding the extent to which that measure will at first be carried. I see no reason, however, to believe that either of the authorities entertain any narrow views on the subject. In the first instance, the communication will be opened by the Steamers now attached to the Bombay Presidency, but it by no means follows, that the communication will continue to Bombay direct: on the contrary, I have reason to believe, that the Supreme Government will be empowered to make such arrangements as may be deemed most effectual with the means at their disposal, which will forthwith be increased by the addition of other steamers to be purchased and built here. Therefore I think you will be satisfied that in a reasonable period you will have a full and comprehensive system established by the joint authorities, who evidently are resolved not to surrender this important machinery to other hands."

Mr. Henry Torrens then rose for the purpose of moving the first resolution. He referred to the vague and indefinite character of Captain Grindlay's communications, which appeared to him to partake more of the character of diplomacy than of the straightforward reports of an agent to his employers. He contrasted this conduct with that of Major Head, Captain Barber and the other gentlemen who had acted with them. These gentlemen had now advocated a plan at home which, if brought to bear, would be felt beneficially throughout the whole of India, instead of confining the greater part of the advantages derivable from a Steam Communication with England to one single spot. He regretted that any party in England should have thought that Steam Communication could not successfully be brought direct to all the ports of India, that it could alone be taken to Bombay; and he considered that the warmest thanks of the people of India were due to Major Head, and Captain Barber, for their present exertions, and endeavours to do away with this delusion, as was evidenced in the proposed petition to the House of Commons, in their resolution to support no plan that did not provided for such extended communication, and in their call on the India and China Association to pursue the same course. He therefore most cordially proposed the thanks of the meeting to those gentlemen in the terms of the following resolution, which he then read.

Resolved 1st.—That this meeting entirely approves of the course of proceedings had by the Committee in regard to Major Head's Committee at Home, and that the thanks of the Meeting be given to Major Head, Captain Barber and the other Members of the London Provisional Committee for their continued unabated exertions in promoting the establishment of the desired communication; and specially for their having united with the Bengal petitioners in praying for the immediate establishment of the communication to the principal Ports of India, and that the Chairman be requested to convey the thanks of the meeting direct to Captain Barber as well as to Major Head.

Mr. Greenlaw wished to propose, with the consent of the mover and seconder of the motion, a small addition. The motion proposed a vote of thanks to Major Head, Capt. Barber and the other members of the London provisional Committee. The acts of Major Head in this matter were all public and his communications had been made known in the Indian papers, the Indian public are therefore fully apprized of the just claims he has to their thanks; but Capt. Barber's exertions were more private, and were not so well known. They were only generally known by report, but those who were in communication with Capt. Barber on the subject knew that his zeal, exertions, and devotion to the cause could not be surpassed. As evidence of his zeal, Mr. Greenlaw held up a large parcel of letters, and said that these letters, thirty-three in number, had been written by Capt. Barber from August to May, to him alone, independent of equal numbers doubtless to many other parties here as well as at the other Presidencies. Of those to Mr. Greenlaw he said, three had been written on the same day, one at the breakfast table, one when Capt. Barber had gone to the city, and one on his return home. This was abundant evidence of his zeal; and that his zeal had been well directed, or at all events in the way calculated to merit the approbation of the meeting; all that Mr. Greenlaw could say was that, if the meeting could have read the letters of Capt. Barber as he had read them, if they could know the anxiety he felt for the completion of the whole measures as he knew it, he would be contented to stand by the side of Capt. Barber and share their approbation with him. He thought it right to say thus much before he called on so large and so respectable a meeting to sanction the addition which, with the consent of his friends who had moved and seconded the Resolutions, he desired to make to it—it was

"and that the chairman be requested to convey the thanks of the Meeting direct to Capt. Barber as well as to Major Head."

Messrs. Torrens and Stocqueler having consented to the addition being made, the motion was passed unanimously.

Mr. Pattle then addressed the meeting, stating that on him had been conferred the honor of moving the next resolution. He said, all present must gladly perceive that the public anxiety for the success of the important question of Steam Navigation had hourly increased. Not only was the present meeting more numerous attended by Europeans than on any former occasion, but it could boast of a most highly respectable and numerous accession of native gentlemen. It was surely very gratifying, Mr. Pattle observed, to perceive mixed with them on this interesting occasion, such numbers of the most respectable native inhabitants of this city, brought there by their just appreciation of the valuable advantage derivable to their country and to themselves, by the accomplishment of the great object in progress, and watching the proceedings with an anxiety which unquestionably manifested the deep interest thus excited in their minds. The fact of such a concourse of respectable native gentlemen having attended this meeting wherever made public in our own country, could not fail to have weight and to establish a general conviction, that the natives are not only not indifferent to such important public matters, but that this particular question has their warm support and wishes for its success.

Mr. Pattle assured the meeting that he was fully persuaded they needed no inducement to make them strenuously persevere in every measure promising the establishment of Steam Navigation to all the presidencies of India. That success must crown such endeavours he trusted was not doubted by any person present. If unremitting perseverance had conquered all difficulties, and brought to pass such events as Catholic Emancipation and Parliamentary Reform, who could (Mr. Pattle asked) for an instant believe that whatever might be the opposition offered to the success of the important object for which they were that day assembled it could fail to be vanquished by the energy, talent, and influence with which it would be successfully maintained and supported. All India must and will be prepared to aid incessantly the advancement of this measure, and Mr. Pattle expressed himself confident that those who heard him would concur with him in opinion that it was highly expedient by a strong declaration on the part of the meeting to persevere in petitioning until the establishment of Steam Communication direct to all the parts of India was obtained. Gentlemen, said Mr. Pattle, in conclusion, persevere, agitate, agitate, and believe nothing has been done until all your desire has been accomplished: let your endeavours be worthy of the great cause you have undertaken and the unquestionable high desert of both cannot fail to obtain for you success.

Mr. Pattle then moved the second resolution which was seconded by Col. Becher and passed unanimously.

Resolved 2ndly.—That this Meeting entirely concurs with the Committee in considering a strong and united expression of the public sentiments in relation to Steam Communication with England particularly expedient at the present moment; and therefore hereby declare their unabated desire for the immediate establishment of the Steam Communication direct to the principal Ports of India, and their determination to pursue by all legitimate means such extension at the earliest possible period in the event of their just expectations of its immediate establishment being frustrated.

Mr. William Prinsep, in bringing forward the next resolution, claimed the indulgence of the meeting, being quite unused to appear before the public as a speaker at a public assembly; but seeing his friends in the civil and military services stepping freely forward in support of this great and stirring question, it would ill become Calcutta as a trading city, that none of her merchants should stand forward to support with their voice a measure of so much importance, and in which he believed that all would acknowledge the mercantile class had ever supported with zeal and ardor equal to that of any other of her inhabitants. He regretted deeply that it had not fallen to some other person more competent than himself to bring forward the resolution he would propose, and the more particularly after the eloquent manner in which they had already been addressed. He would not, however, shrink from the task since he felt the warmest interest in the success which at last began to appear within their reach, and without further pressing upon their time and attention, would at once submit the following resolution which, after being briefly seconded by Mr. Earl, was unanimously agreed to.

Resolved 3rdly.—That in furtherance of the above resolution the Committee be instructed to continue to watch the proceedings at Home, and in the event of the communication being established to Bombay alone, whether permanently or with a view to its future extension, to take such steps as may appear necessary to them—until a public general meeting of the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood can be duly convened, to consider what further measures may then be necessary.

Mr. Spier proposed the fourth resolution and said, that the resolution which he had to propose bore reference to the exertions which Lord Wm. Bentinck has made and is now making to promote Steam Communication between the two countries. It is well known his lordship never listened to any narrow and limited mode of accomplishing what is in truth a general object. He contemplates not merely the direct effects of a more rapid intercourse, but the no less certain, although indirect results, the accelerated improvement of India, which must take place by the closer approximation of an ignorant and enlightened people. This could never be accomplished by a mere line of communication with Bombay, but only by extending it to all the principal ports of India. From many, if not all, of these ports, lesser channels of Steam Communication will be formed, which will carry civilization, knowledge, and commercial prosperity to the interior and most remote provinces. Already we see one of these successfully established, as if by anticipation, from Calcutta to Allahabad, which is only waiting to be rendered still more effective by being joined with the large and main trunk of Steam Communication from England which we have now every hope of soon seeing accomplished. This subordinate channel we also owe to the noble Lord, lately at the head of this Government, and he was therefore sure, the Meeting would heartily concur with him in the resolution, which he then proposed and which, being seconded by Mr. Montefiore Joseph, was passed unanimously.

Resolved 4thly.—That this Meeting have learnt with the utmost satisfaction that the parting pledge of Lord William Bentinck to the people of India was to the following effect.

“I cannot command the opportunity of forwarding its future success, but if within my reach you may depend upon my most earnest efforts to promote its progress and to obtain for India an advantage so great in all its direct and indirect consequences, that in my opinion it would be cheaply bought at any price”—is in course of redemption, and they trust that his endeavors will be crowned with success.

That in the present stage of proceedings at home no further expression of their sense of His Lordship's proceedings is called for at the time, but the Meeting are not unmindful of what they owe to His Lordship's exertions.

Mr. H. M. Parker would have been well pleased if it had not devolved upon him to move the next resolution, since it conveyed censure and might wound the feelings of an individual; still he could not hesitate in performing this duty, because he sincerely believed that the censure was well deserved. An approval of the measures adopted by the Committee in removing Captain Grindlay from his agency, was the object of the resolution. Mr. Parker confessed for his own part that he could scarcely look upon it as a removal from the agency of the Bengal Steam Committee, since an agent, in the true acceptance of the word, Captain Grindlay cannot be said to have proved himself. It was absolutely impossible to discover from Captain Grindlay's letters to Bengal what measure of Steam Communication he advocated; and from all that can be gathered from his correspondence, he might precisely as well be the agent for Bombay or for Penang, or for any other port in the eastern seas, as for Calcutta. He reminded Mr. Parker of the old school-boy riddle of what went round the house and round the house and never entered the house; for he talked of the scheme, and the great scheme, and the advantageous scheme, and the scheme of Indian Steam navigation exactly as any man would talk on the subject who knew nothing beyond the general bearings, who knew no difference between steamers running to Bombay only or to Bombay, Madras and Calcutta,—who was, in short, an indifferent speculator, and not a paid agent of a public who wishes and views on the subject had been long, and warmly, and repeatedly manifested. Look even at the petition to Parliament, a copy of which has been laid before the meeting this day, and which Mr. Parker believed might be called Captain Grindlay's petition. It communicates to the House of Commons three startling facts of which that illustrious body will of course, until the petition be placed before them, remain profoundly ignorant. One is that commerce generally is greatly promoted by accelerating the communications between two countries having great dealings into each other; a second that India takes a great quantity of British manufactured goods and returns a great quantity of raw material; and the third, that the route of the Red Sea is the preferable one for Steam Communication. But where is there one sentence, one word, one allusion in that petition to the great object of the Calcutta association, to that scheme of Steam intercourse which has been very properly termed the comprehensive, and which would include direct communication with Bombay, Madras and Calcutta? Why, a Bombay agent and a Bombay committee might have placed precisely such a petition before the Commons House of Parliament, without even risking for a moment that exclusive communication which has been generally advocated on that side of India. And now, even at the twelfth hour, we receive a letter from Captain Grindlay (by a route which, if the transmittal of letters be the only object in view is perhaps the best) sending copies of Dr. Lardner's pamphlet, in perusing which our agent appears for the first time to have made the interesting discovery that the scheme of direct Steam Communication to all three presidencies is a very good scheme indeed. The Committee may say they relinquished Captain Grindlay as an agent, but from all we have read of his doings, even in his own letters, he appears to have relinquished them as a Committee. He hoisted a vague and misty banner with no decided blazonry and no speaking motto, when his flag ought to have been foremost in the battle, glittering with a device those who run might read, and in construing which there could be no mistake—"Steam Communication direct with the three great Ports, with the three capital cities of British India." This should have been the legend or colour nailed to the mast. Has Capt. Grindlay done this? Has he exerted himself to make manifest, to spread, to render popular in all quarters the views of those by whom he was employed? There can be but one answer to such a question! He who is not for us is against us, and in such a case the course to be pursued is very clear. Mr. Parker, therefore, begged to propose the following resolution.

Resolved 5thly.—That the appointment of Captain Grindlay as Agent to the Calcutta Committee having emanated directly from the Committee, it is competent to the Committee to remove him from such Agency without reference to the subscribers, but this meeting concurring with the Committee in opinion that the tenor of the advocacy of Captain Grindlay has not been in consonance with the petition and memorials of the inhabitants of Calcutta and its neighbourhood, consider that the Committee have acted with sound discretion in removing him from their Agency.

Mr. Stocqueler seconded the motion.

Captain T. J. Taylor, (Madras Army) said, that as a Member of a Sister Presidency whose interests were linked with those of Bengal, and as a Member of the Committee which drafted the last memorial to the Court of Directors and Board of Control and the Petition to Parliament, he was glad of the opportunity afforded him of seconding the above resolution. He well knew the nature of the instructions sent to Captain Grindlay and no doubt whatever remained in his mind, no doubt could rest with any man who read Captain Grindlay's letters, that that gentleman had failed in the duty confided to him. Indeed it seemed to him (Captain T.) that the successive letters of Captain Grindlay were each a greater shuffle than the last, that instead of enforcing the general, the comprehensive plan, Captain Grindlay indulged in vague generalities, full of nothings, as if his only object was to blink the merits of the general question, and to blind the Calcutta community as to the real intent of his exertions. To him (Captain T.) it was perfectly clear that Captain Grindlay had supported the exclusive interests of those with whom he was connected by old ties of association, and familiar intercourse, of those with whom he had served his whole Indian career, and had neglected the general interests of those, by whom he was specially paid for support. Under such circumstances, Captain T. did not see how the Committee could have acted otherwise than they did in sending Captain Grindlay to the right about in the most cavalier way possible; and he trusted that this energetic and judicious measure of the Committee would receive the unqualified approbation of the meeting.

Captain Birch said, that he rose to notice briefly an expression which, if he was not mistaken, fell from Captain Taylor, in seconding the motion now about to be put; because he was sure that that gentleman by no means intended to be understood to mean what nevertheless the actual words to which he alluded must be taken to convey. He must presume that Captain Taylor's words will be correctly reported in the newspapers, and therefore, as a Member of the Committee, he felt desirous that they should not go forth without some explanation. If he was not mistaken, the expression used was this, that Captain Taylor himself approved, and called upon this meeting to join him in approving, the Act of the Committee, "in having turned Captain Grindlay to the right-about in the most cavalier manner." Now, though he was quite satisfied that Captain Taylor meant to approve of the act of the Committee as one which circumstances fully justified, yet he thought it right to mention that the decision of the Committee was by no means hastily formed, and that he for one, certainly did not agree to that decision till he became painfully convinced of its necessity. The subject underwent deliberate investigation in the Committee; and his only object in saying these few words, was, to remove the possibility of any impression getting abroad unfavorable to the Committee, feeling quite sure that Captain Taylor had not the least intention of giving rise to such an impression.

Mr. R. S. Thomson drew the attention of the meeting to another circumstance regarding Captain Grindlay, which he thought ought not to be overlooked; it was evident he was not guided by the same independent principles as Major Head and Captain Barber, but had made use of our funds to promote a selfish purpose, as the advertisement of his private Agency so insiduously introduced at the end of his pamphlet clearly indicated: had Captain Grindlay been as arduous in advancing the comprehensive plan, which he was bound to do, as he seemed to be in endeavouring to secure notoriety and publicity to his Agency scheme, he would have stood in a better position with us than he does now.

Mr. Greenlaw stated, that it was scarcely possible any matter could have had fairer or fuller deliberation. As soon as practicable after the arrival of the mail, which brought four months' despatches, the Committee met and the whole were read over. There was then a feeling favorable towards Capt. Grindlay, as his letters shewed he had been moving with energy; some little remark was made touching a passage in the pamphlet incidentally noticed. A further meeting was therefore agreed on for the purpose of considering the matter fully. At that meeting it was well discussed; and the feeling was unanimously opposed to Capt. Grindlay's conduct, but it was still thought proper to give the matter yet further consideration; and the four copies of the pamphlet were directed to be circulated among the Committee with a note by him, the Secretary. This was done and every member of the Committee kept the pamphlet as long as he considered it necessary to do so to enable him to become master of its contents. Then another meeting was called at which every member of the Committee attended except one, and there was but one feeling on the subject, which again had considerable discussion; the only question being the most delicate way in which they could communicate to Capt. Grindlay that they no longer required his services.

Captain Taylor, explained that in using the word "cavalier" he did not mean to imply the slightest censure on the Committee, or that their conduct had been hasty or not well considered: Very far from it. Capt. T. entirely approved of their proceedings. He merely meant that they had summarily dismissed Captain Grindlay, and that he thought Captain G. very richly deserved it. The Resolution was then put from the Chair and passed unanimously.

Mr. Greenlaw then said, that he had received a letter from a party calling herself the widow of the late Captain Forth, claiming remuneration, as she considered that he had died consequent on a disease caught while in command of the Forbes, and that there was an unadjusted claim due to him. Mr. Greenlaw observed that she was mistaken, the unadjusted matter being whether or not the Committee should call on him for payment of the amount at issue. The Chairman interposed, and observed, that whatever the contents of the letter might be, it would be better that it should be referred to the Committee, and if they thought necessary it might be submitted to some future meeting of the subscribers.

Mr. Willis drew attention to Dr. Lardner's letter to Lord Melbourne and thought that publicity ought to be given to its contents.

The Chairman entirely concurred with Mr. Willis in considering it important that the utmost publicity should be given to Dr. Lardner's pamphlet, that it should be republished in this country, and generally distributed. He considered the statements, figures and facts, to be wholly unanswerable; and he should like to see any of those who advocated the more restricted communication attempt to meet them. Their publication here could not fail to confirm all in the paramount importance of the whole measure, and prepare the public mind for future exertion if it should be necessary.

In the conflict of parties at home, which was drawing to a crisis just at the very period when our petition was about to be presented, it is more than likely that India may, with its interests, be forgotten, and our petition amidst the struggle may excite little or no attention. The more necessary, therefore, is a demonstration at this time and at this place which may reach the next session of Parliament, (if unsuccessful now) when the subject may be again brought forward under more auspicious circumstances; and with a continued proof that the people of India will never allow the cause they have so deeply at heart to sleep or slumber. The distribution of Dr. Lardner's letter throughout India, therefore, would help, with the stimulus of this meeting, to keep all the friends of the measure on the alert and ready to start forward with one voice and mind, if occasion should be given for another petition. He could not but express his gratification at presiding over so large an assemblage, the largest he had witnessed, except that which originated these proceedings. The number of the natives who had attended was also a source of much satisfaction. It shewed that they really did desire to see the communication established.

The Chairman then adverted to the vote of censure passed on Captain Grindlay, and said, that he was sure they would now agree with him in passing a vote of unqualified approbation. Mr. Greenlaw had informed them that Captain Barber had written him thirty-three letters since August, that three of them were written on the same day, one at his breakfast table, another in the city, and the third on his return home, and he had asked and obtained a direct expression of the thanks of the meeting to Captain Barber, in which he entirely concurred. But while they thus justly appreciated the exertions of Captain Barber, how much more would they appreciate those of Mr. Greenlaw, if they knew how many letters he had written even on that day on the subject of this meeting. He had had several occasions to bear testimony to Mr. Greenlaw's exertions in the cause, and had before said that the public were much indebted to him; and he declared his opinion to be that if ever Steam Communication should be established on the general plan to all the ports of India, it would be owing mainly to him. They ought not to separate without a vote of thanks to Mr. Greenlaw; and he hoped that the time was not far distant, when, all their hopes and wishes in this matter being accomplished, they might be enabled to give him some more substantial mark of their approbation; but although he thus particularized Mr. Greenlaw, it would not be just to overlook the merits of the Committee. They had from the beginning to the present moment sedulously watched every opportunity of promoting the cause entrusted to them, and they were indeed well entitled to the best thanks, not only of the subscribers, but of the whole Indian public. The chairman's proposition was received with acclamation.

The above is but a very imperfect sketch of what fell from the Honorable Chairman; gathered from the recollection of bystanders, without the advantage of correction by the speaker, it must be taken as a mere outline of what was in itself an eloquent and impressive address.

The Chairman now declared, that the objects of the meeting were accomplished and it might be adjourned, —but Mr. Pattle rose and begged the meeting would allow him to trespass on their patience a little longer. You have, gentlemen, he said, responded with a highly creditable warmth of feeling to the eloquent appeal made to you by our learned Chairman, and although he could not hope (Mr. Pattle observed) to give to any representation he could make, the same persuasive and convincing language, yet he was sure to find in the generosity of their dispositions and the virtue of the proposition he had to submit an ample and certain advocacy. This was not an occasion, Mr. Pattle declared, which could allow of this meeting closing with a mere formal vote of thanks to the Chairman. He has told you, gentleman, (Mr. Pattle continued) how deeply indebted you are to Mr. Greenlaw and the members of the Steam Committee, but it must be well known, that from the first moment the Steam Question was agitated, to the present hour, the learned Chairman's support of it has been incessant, that it has had all the interest and influence he could bestow. In one word, that it had been impossible to surpass either the zeal, energy, or incessant interest he has manifested for its success. Mr. Pattle concluded by proposing a vote of thanks to the chairman, expressive of the gratitude of the meeting for the very essential services he had rendered. This proposition was received with enthusiasm and carried by acclamation, after which the meeting dissolved..

APPENDIX A.

SKETCH OF PETITION.

By Capt. Grindlay referred to in the above Report.

To the Honorable the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled.

The humble Petition of the Merchants and Traders, Proprietors of East India Stock of the City of London and persons connected with and interested in Indian Affairs.

SUEWETH,—That the Commerce between Great Britain and the King's dominions in India is of great extent and has been long increasing, that the people of India have been for some time past large consumers of goods, the produce of the manufactures of this country, and that while such consumption affords stimulus and employment to the industry of this kingdom, India possesses the means of affording an extensive supply of the raw material most in demand for the use of British manufactures.

* That it is an established principle that regular and frequent means of correspondence are essential to the operations of commerce, and that rapidity of communication is especially adapted to aid and extend them. That under this belief, the legislature has within the last half century effected extraordinary improvements in the means of domestic and foreign communication, by the establishment of mail coaches, the employment of Steam Packets and other similar measures. That nothing would so greatly tend to the development of the Agricultural resources of India, and the preservation and extension of the desire of that country for the manufactures of England, as the establishment by or under the sanction of Government of a regular system of Steam Communication between the two countries.

That in the opinion of your petitioners, the route by the Red Sea is the preferable and indeed the only practically one, and that they believe the voyage thereby may be performed throughout the year.

That in the month of July 1834, a Committee of your Honorable House, after a minute investigation of the subject, recommended the immediate adoption of measures for the regular establishment of Steam Communication by that route. That your petitioners have anxiously waited in expectation of that recommendation being acted upon, but that as yet no attempt has been made by Government to carry it into effect. That your petitioners would especially solicit the attention of your honorable house to the opinion of the Committee above referred to, that the expense of the Communication might be greatly diminished, an opinion which later information and more accurate calculations than were then submitted to the Committee have shewn to be accurate.

That the number of letters passing between Great Britain and India amounts to annually, and that a moderate passage with the profits to be derived from passengers and the conveyance of light packages might be fairly expected to defray immediately the greater portion of the charge and ultimately the whole of it.

That the Communication desired by your petitioners would not only be beneficial to the commerce with India, but also to that with China and the Islands of the Indian ocean.

That the wishes of the Mercantile Community in India are directed as strongly as those of your petitioners to the attainment of this great and influential improvement, and that its concession would tend to unite the two countries to each other and to give vigour and stability to the British dominion.

Your petitioners therefore pray that your Honorable House will be pleased to adopt such measures as may be necessary for carrying into effect the recommendation of the Committee of your Honorable House in 1834, and establishing with the least possible delay an authorized line of Steam Communication with India by the Red Sea.

And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

UNION BANK MEETING.

At a Special Meeting of Proprietors of the Union Bank, held on Monday the 14th August, J. W. McLeod, Esq., in the chair.

It was moved by T. Holroyd, Esq., the Chairman of the Directors, seconded by Colonel Battin, and passed unanimously.

That this meeting hereby confirms the following resolution as passed at the Special Meeting of Proprietors on the 14th July, 1837, Vide list.

“ Resolution 5th. That it be referred to the Directors, assisted by a committee composed of the following members, Messrs. Theodore Dickens and James

Young, to take the necessary steps to obtain a Charter or Act of Incorporation from Government for the following purposes :—

1st. To enable the Bank to sue and be sued by its Secretary, to take conveyances and hold all property in his name.

2d. To limit the responsibility of the Bank to the amount of its paid up capital.

3d. That it be an instruction to the Directors and the Committee to offer as a condition for obtaining a Charter, that the amount of notes of the Bank, payable on demand, shall not exceed two-thirds of the Capital.”

After which the Meeting broke up.—Hurkaru, August 14.

OPIUM TRADE MEETING.

The Opium Trade Meeting at the Board this morning was almost as crowded as an Opium sale. Upwards of sixty persons were in the room, when Mr. Parker opened the proceedings, and the number soon increased to more than double, including a large proportion of natives.

Mr. Parker commenced by reading the Resolution of Government, which had been laid before a previous meeting, and having briefly stated the course of the negotiation, and the assistance given to it by a committee of three gentlemen, Mr. Charles Lyall, Mr. Braine and Mr. DeSouza, he suggested that the Meeting should appoint a Chairman and proceed to business. Mr. Braine immediately proposed Mr. Lindsay, which nomination was opposed by Mr. Cockerell, on the ground that Mr. Lindsay represented China interests only and must therefore be assumed to have a bias inimical to the Straits merchants: he (Mr. Cockerell) would prefer somebody unconnected with either, and would therefore propose Mr. N. Alexander. On a show of hands, however, the first nomination was carried.

The Chairman (Mr. Lindsay) called upon Mr. Braine to read the Committee's report. In this document it was observed, that the three first sales of the season having averaged nearly the same price, which price was about 200 rupees higher than the fourth sale, they considered the most fair plan of distributing the bonus on Opium now in the godowns was to reduce them all to one price. That, for various reasons specified, it was quite impossible to ascertain what Opium was unsold in China at any particular date—that the forfeiture of uncleared Opium here and a re-sale of it would involve a greater sacrifice to Government than the highest bonus which had been asked for—that two schemes had been under their consideration, one providing for a bonus of 30 lakhs altogether, the other for a bonus of 40 lakhs—that of the Opium of this season actually shipped for China, it might be assumed that about 5000 chests would remain unsold when the news of these proceedings should arrive, on which the proposed refund would be about 250 rupees per chest—assuming a distribution of 30 lakhs, and that a bonus be given of 300 rupees per chest on all Opium remaining in the godowns, of the first three sales, and 100 rupees per chest on what remained of the fourth sale; on the June Opium, however, it had afterwards been determined to recommend a bonus of 150 rupees. And with respect to the Straits, it having been ascertained that no Opium remained there unsold on the 1st of June, they conceived that all shipments to the Straits before the 1st of May might fairly be excepted from compensation, and that subsequent shipments to the Straits and also all re-shipments to China should be put on the same footing as direct shipments to China from Calcutta.

Mr. Parker then read a letter from Mr. Secretary Prinsep, in reply to the Merchants' petition; and holding the Resolution of Government in his hand, and also a proposed letter to the Court of Directors on the subject, observed that he did not consider himself at liberty to read these, but would state the tenor of the former as far as concerned the petitioners. He wished it to be understood that Government recognized no right in them to indulgence of any kind, and had treated the question purely as one affecting the interest of the revenue. That, believing it to be expedient in that point of view to make concessions to get the remaining opium of the season cleared off, and that the cheapest way to effect this was by a remission of price rather than by forced re-sales, the Governor-General in Council had resolved to remit a sum equal to about 15 per cent. upon the Opium in store on the 1st of August, and would have preferred to divide it rateably among the different sales; but as the Merchants wished to have an unequal rate, namely, 300 rupees per chest on the three first sales and 150 on the fourth, these rates would be admitted, subject to the condition that all Opium of the February sale must be cleared in cash by the 15th September, all Opium of March by the 15th October, and all of June by the 1st of December. That Government did not recognize any claims to compensation for losses on shipments made, the result of speculations being no concern of Government; but as those who might have Opium on hand in China would be injured by the present measures, Government was disposed to grant a further sum of 10 lakhs for distribution among persons so situated. However this not being quite consistent with the principle laid down above, Government wished the distribution to be made by a graduated scale, giving the largest proportion to the most recent exporters, as these were likely to be the holders most affected by the bonus on future shipments.

The Chairman said that it appeared from what had fallen from Mr. Parker, that of the two questions before the meeting, the bonus of 18 or 19 lakhs, and the compensation to port shippers, the first was definitely settled by the resolution of Government; the second was the only one now open for discussion. The Committee had prepared a scheme which should be produced. It would however be proper to determine first how the votes should be taken; he presumed that no person ought to vote who was not bona fide interested in the trade. Hereupon a little discussion ensued, in which Mr. Cockerell, Mr. Parker and one or two other gentlemen took part, and it was ruled by the Chairman, in concurrence with Mr. Parker, that the right of voting should not be limited to those who had signed the petition, but that all persons interested in the trade as principals or agents might give their opinions.

Mr. Braine then read the Committee's plan, which commenced by showing impracticability of distinguishing what Opium was sold and what unsold in China, and assigned that reason, and also the wishes of the principal shippers who had been consulted upon the question, for suggesting that an equal sum per chest should be given upon all Opium shipped to China before the 1st of August, which sum they conceived the ten lakhs would warrant them in fixing at 150 rupees per chest; and that the same amount should be refunded on all Opium shipped to the Straits after the 1st of May, and also on all Opium reshipped from the Straits to China.

Three Resolutions to this effect having been read by Mr. Braine, and the Chairman having suggested that they should be put separately, Mr. Cockerell said he thought this a hasty mode of proceeding—that the Petition had never been sent to him for signature; that he knew nothing of these resolutions and required time to consider their effect. Mr. Braine observed that the petition having been drawn up by himself, it was necessary for him to explain, that his reason for not sending it to Mr. Cockerell was, that he considered it useless to do so, Mr. C. having declared it was absurd to ask Government to indemnify people for bad speculations. The following Resolutions were then proposed and carried by large majorities:

Moved by James Stewart, Esq., and seconded by Rustumjee Cowasjee, Esq.

1st Resolution.—That as it is admitted to be impracticable to ascertain what Opium shipped to China may be actually on hand, it be proposed to Government to award 150 rupees per chest to all shipments of the January, February and March sales from 1st January to 31st July.

Moved by Mr. Lackersteen and seconded by Mr. McDonald.

2nd Resolution.—That as Government state most distinctly they cannot allow any return to parties who are known to have actually sold their Opium, and as it is known that none remained on hand in the Straits on 1st June; it be proposed to give all the shippers of January, February and March sales to the Straits 150 rupees per chest on all shipments since 1st May, thus putting all those who may have Opium on hand on the same footing as the shippers to China.

Moved by Mr. Cragg and seconded by Mr. Mackay.

3rd Resolution.—That as it is possible some of the Opium shipped to the Straits may have been trans-shipped from those places for China, it be proposed that any Opium which it may be proved to the satisfaction of the Board has been so trans-shipped prior to the arrival of dispatches now to be sent, be placed on the same footing as the shipments direct from Calcutta to China, that is, to receive 150 rupees per chest on the January, February, and March sales.

That the Government be recommended to receive rupees 25,000 to meet said claims.

Protest applicable to the three first Resolutions. Moved by W. Fergusson, seconded by Mr. Cockerell.

"That as it is proposed to give 150 rupees per chest on all Opium shipped to China from the 1st January, to the 31st July, whether sold or not, it is fair and equitable to give the same bonus to what has been shipped to other parts, though sold like a portion of what has been sent to China.

This amendment was moved immediately after the 1st Resolution, but not pressed to a division, Mr. Cockerell observing that of course it would have little support at the present meeting. A suggestion from the Chair was therefore adopted, that it should be signed as a Protest, and Mr. Parker promised to send it up to Government with the resolutions.

Moved by Mr. Charles Lyall and seconded by Mr. Dow—and carried nem. con.

4th Resolution.—That in case the sum of 10 lakhs allotted by Government, after reserving a sufficiency to meet the claims referred to in the 3d Resolution, be not adequate to refund of 150 per chest for January, February and March sales, a rateable deduction be made from all.

Mr. Parker here observed that no notice had been taken of the graduated scheme recommended by Government; upon which the following Resolution was moved by Rustumjee Cowasjee, Esq., seconded by Mr. Lyall, and carried nem. con.

5th Resolution.—That in consequence of the above resolutions having been carried, it is deemed unnecessary to entertain the graduated scheme.

At the suggestion of Mr. Parker, the following was moved by Rustumjee Cowasjee, Esq., and seconded by Mr. James Stewart, and carried.

6th Resolution.—That instead of refunds on account of past shipments being made in money, they shall be given in transferable certificates, which shall be received by the Board in payment for the Opium still uncleared from the godowns, according to the amount shewn in each certificate. In the event of a certificate not being brought into the Board in payment for Opium by the 30th November next, the Board will discharge the sum specified in such certificate on presentation.

Amendment moved by Mr. Dearie and seconded by Mr. Manuk—and negatived.—

"That such purchasers who have no Opium now to clear, be paid the amount of the refund that may be due to them in cash."

Moved by Mr. Braine, and seconded by Baboo Dwarkanauth Tagore.—

7th Resolution.—That the return upon Opium actually shipped be, in all cases made to the shipper under guarantee to settle with the parties beneficially interested.—Nem. con.

Moved by Mr. James Stewart, and seconded by Rustumjee Cowasjee, Esq.—And carried unanimously.

8th Resolution.—That the thanks of this Meeting are due to the Government for their liberal consideration of the existing state of the Opium market.

Thanks were then voted to the Chairman, and the Meeting broke up.—Calcutta Courier, August 16.

In consequence of a notice in the Exchange Gazette in these words "A meeting of those parties, interested in the opium Trade, who dissented from the resolutions as proposed at the meeting held this-day, at the Office of the Board of Customs, Salt, and Opium, is requested at the Chamber of Commerce, to-morrow, the 17th instant, at 10 o'clock A. M. precisely. Calcutta. 16th of August 1837." Several mercantile gentlemen attended; but, as became very soon obvious, with totally different views and opinions; and an attempt was made to "burke" the meeting altogether.

It was contended, in the first place, that it was irregular to call any meeting at the Chamber of Commerce, otherwise than through the Secretary under the sanction of the committee, or at the requisition of a certain number of Members and more especially a meeting, at which persons not Members might, under the terms of the notice, attended; and secondly, that a meeting so summoned was calculated to convey an impression to the Government that the Chamber of Commerce, as a body, were opposed to the resolutions passed at the Board of Customs, Salt and Opium.

These objections were met, and we think satisfactorily, by shewing that there was no rule to prevent meetings at the Chamber of Commerce, which were connected with objects of even partial interest, and that in practice, as in the case of the committee of Bonded Ware-house Association, such meetings did take place and were open to persons not Members of the Chambers.

That the locality of the Chamber of Commerce was selected as more generally convenient, and that it was an over-strained interpretation to confound the mere abode with the occupant, the stable with the horse; and that virtually there was no difference between a meeting of the dissentients there or at any private house.

That in the meetings held for framing and carrying on the negotiations on the opium relief-petition, the Dissentients were neither invited nor did they intrude themselves; and consequently they were not prepared for the interruption of parties in the opposite interest, nor expected they should take any part in the present proceeding, although there was not the slightest objection to their being spectators of what might pass, the utmost publicity being acceptable to the Dissentients.

After a long and animated discussion, at which, as we have before had occasion to observe in all Calcutta meetings, the talkers outnumbered the hearers in the proportion of 10 to 1, the rival parties seemed to adopt something in the shape of a compromise. At least each followed its own objects.

The Dissentients, Mr. Cockerell in the chair, passed the following resolution, proposed by Mr. N. Alexander and seconded by Mr. Martin.

"That the following Committee be appointed to draw up a dissent to the proposition submitted to the opium meeting of yesterday; and that the Committee be instructed to draw up a protest against the partial and unjust division of the "bonus" given by Government; and to request that the same be equally apportioned among all shippers from Calcutta.

Mr. Fergusson,
Mr. Apar,

Mr. Harding,
Mr. Alexander,
Mr. Muller.

The gentlemen, whose interests were more closely connected with China, and comparatively indifferent to the Singapore and Java trade, signed the following requisition to call a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce.

THE OPIUM PROTEST.

2d Resolution.—"That as Government state most distinctly they cannot allow any return to parties who are known to have actually sold their opium, and as it is known that none remained on hand in the Straits on 1st June, it be proposed to give all the shippers of January, February, and March sales to the Straits 150 rupees per chest on all shipments since 1st May, thus putting all those who may have opium on hand on the same footing as the shippers to China."

The portion of this resolution which excludes opium shipped to any other place except China, previous to the first of May, is founded on the production of a Singapore Chronicle of the 1st June, which states that on that date, no opium existed in that market, unsold.

The undersigned dissent from the correctness of this conclusion for the following reasons:

1st. Because Singapore is not the only opium market beside China.

2d. Because Singapore is a Depot from whence opium is distributed over the whole Eastern Archipelago, 3d. Because Penang, Malacca and Java, more important markets for this consumption of the Drug, have been excluded from all consideration.

4th. Because the same description of evidence on which that part of the resolution which excludes the straits is founded, can be assumed with reference to a considerable portion of the Bengal opium in China.

The resolution to which the undersigned allude is as follows:

"That as it is admitted to be impracticable to ascertain what opium shipped to China may actually be on hand, it be proposed to Government to award 150 rupees per chest to all shipments of the January, February, and March sales, from 1st January to 31st July.

The undersigned dissent from the correctness of this conclusion for the following reasons.

Because, by the last advices, from Canton a portion of the opium proposed to be included in this resolution has been sold as per Canton Price Current.

Because, by the last advices, an active trade was carrying on in the yellow Sea, and accounts of positive sales and returns of specie to Canton have been received in Calcutta.

Because, before the advices of the present measures of Government can reach Canton, a further portion of opium must be beyond the reach of competition, and therefore on the principle laid down by these resolutions as little entitled to benefit by the boon from Government as the opium assumed to have been disposed of in the Straits,

The undersigned do not, however, rest their dissent to the partial distribution of the funds on these grounds alone.

They believe that the principle on which Government are disposed to afford relief to the shippers of opium since 1st January 1837, has no relation whatever to the outcome of the speculation, that they care not whether the buyer closes his accounts with a loss or a gain; all the Government profess to look to is, the revenue arising from opium, which they think will be prospectively benefited by a certain concession of money.

Government have accordingly fixed two definite sums, to be disposed of in about the proportion of one-third on the opium already shipped and two-thirds on that which remains uncleared.

It appears, therefore, to the undersigned, that the intention of Government can only be fairly carried into effect, by confining the question of appropriation to Calcutta, alone, and including every chest of the present year's opium in the measure of relief.

The undersigned consider the scale and partial distribution as wrong in principle as turning a question of revenue into one of commercial relief, and opposed to the views and intentions of Government, who can only avoid the commercial question by declining altogether to consider the profit and loss of sales of opium in foreign countries.

The undersigned beg respectfully to submit that Government dealing with the question as connected with revenue of the country alone, should without reference to time or place direct that the sum to be appropriated to opium already shipped, should be divided rateably amongst the parties who cleared it out, and that the remaining sum be appropriated as recommended by the Board of Salt and Opium.

THE BLACK ACT.

7, King's Bench walk, Temple, May 31, 1837.

Dear Sir,—I beg to acquaint you for the information of the committee, that I arrived in London on the 4th of April, having left Bombay on the 4th of December, as my letter from Malta will have previously informed you. I put myself in immediate communication with the parties to whom I was referred here, at least when I quitted Calcutta, and as soon as the new elections in the directions had taken place, with the India House. Unfortunately neither your letter of the 22nd November 1836, (since received in duplicate) nor the memorial or petition had then arrived, and I was therefore unable to do more than to see the chairman and deputy-chairman, and endeavor to pave the way with them for future operations. I have found very attention at the Board of Control from Sir John Hobhouse and Mr. Gordon, with both of whom I was previously acquainted, and Mr. Vernon Smith as well as at the India House; and both these and at the India House, they at once acceded to my request to delay the settlement of the dispatch to Bengal in reply to theirs, upon the subject of the Act, until the memorial should be before them. It arrived on the 10th, and I received it on the 14th instant. I have since been busily employed upon, and have had it copied and circulated with some observations of my own, which I had previously prepared to meet some of the objections which I encountered in conversation upon it. From Mr. Larpent, Mr. Crawford, Mr. Hasle, and the members of the East India and China Association, individually, I have received every assurance of active co-operation, but as a body collectively, they seem to think it beyond their province. I think not, as I am aware is the opinion of my constituents in India; but I have thought it better in the outset, not to combat this feeling strongly, until it become necessary and proper to endeavour to enlist the public feeling generally in our cause. I have sought to avoid the excitement of any hostile feeling until the India House and Board of Control shall have declared themselves. If they shall be hostile I must then seek to strengthen our cause by every possible means, and to knock down opposition as far as in my power by combating the objections of all parties. The chief one which I have encountered, is the idea that we seek exclusive privileges. The memorial and petition are well calculated to disarm and injure this, and will give increased weight to the observations which I had previously circulated amongst a few, and am now circulating more widely with the memorial. There is, as of course we were prepared for, a strong desire at the India House and the Board of Control, to support (as they term it) Lord Auckland. I am using every argument and exertion in my power to satisfy them, that it is not his measure, and that it is not the principle of equality of rights that we combat, and which we would rather support, but the operation of the act which is directly opposed to the equality which it professes to promote. Both Sir James Carnac (the chairman,) and Sir John Hobhouse have promised me every consideration before the despatch is finally settled; but they will indisputably act together and I have not much expectation of succeeding with them—though they both have the reputation of fair men in all matters of general importance. There is, however, so strong a desire always to uphold the India Government, that I think we shall fail except perhaps in some modification which, as far as I can gather, the Directors, themselves propose to make. I shall endeavor to learn the nature of it if possible. Lord William Bentinck, I regret to say, is directly opposed to us; but I can get nothing of reason from him, or any one indeed, except the objection to make a distinction between Native and European. I have not met from Sir John Hobhouse and Sir James Carnac, down to the lowest person with whom I have conversed, one single attempt at refutation of our argument, and I do verily believe that in their minds they admit the justice of our case, but they will not, I fear, act upon these feelings. The memorial will be before the court, officially next Wednesday, and they have promised there shall be no delay. Until I know their decision, I cannot determine on the most prudent course to pursue as to the petition, and unfortunately the session, though it will be late, is now much advanced. The petition, however, shall be presented this session, and I shall get whoever presents them to give notice of motion or resolution declaratory of the disapprobation of Parliament either for this or the next session, as may be most expedient. If the next I intend to employ the interval in engaging as far as possible all ranks with us. Unfortunately the apathy of the public on Indian matters is not yet removed. I will do all I can to arouse them from it. I hope to have a powerful coadjutor in Mr. Albany Fonblanque and the Examiner. It is amongst the earliest acquaintances of my childhood, and I am in hopes, feels with us. Sir Alexander Johnson has taken a very kind interest in our cause. Ferguson must of course vote with the ministers, if at all, but he is with us; all our old Indian friends are staunch with us, and will assist in any way they can, amongst others, Hogg and Bagshaw, on opposite sides of the house. The act is not yet returned to the House of Commons. I shall send a duplicate of this by Mr. Waghorn's despatch of the 5th proximo, from Marseilles, lest, as I think not unlikely, any accident should befall the Bayreuth despatch, by which this will go.

I am, my dear Sir, very faithfully yours,

Thos. E. M. Turton.

T. Dickens, Esq., Calcutta.

P. S.—My address in London is in the Temple (as I have dated this) where I have for the present taken chambers.

Austin Friars, London, April 28, 1837.

Sir,—I have the honor to acknowledge your letters, dated 14th and 22nd November, addressed to me as chairman of the East India and China Association, the first requesting by the authority of the committee of the inhabitants of Calcutta and the interior of India, who have signed petitions against Act No. XI. of 1836, and for whom you act as secretary, the aid and co-operation of our Association in obtaining the object of the petitioners and entering also into an explanation of the case, the evils which the said Act is, in the opinion of the committee, is likely to entail upon the English inhabitants, and the measures which they wish to adopt in concert with Mr. Turton to avert them. The second letter encloses 2nd of a set of bills for £600 on Sir Charles Cockerell and Co. to my order, which is accepted, and at its maturity shall be held by me as directed—viz. £500 to be paid to Mr. Turton on account of his services as agent of the petitioners, and £100 less the expenses incurred by the Association, at the disposal of that gentleman for charges to be incurred by him.

The two statements alluded to in the letter of the 14th November have not reached me, but I presume they will do so when the original letter arrives. I shall take the earliest opportunity of laying these letters before the Association from whom I have no doubt they will receive that attention, which the importance of the case and the high respectability of yourself and the members of the committee demand, and I shall hereafter report their determination thereon.

I have had the pleasure of an interview with Mr. Turton, and when the memorials arrive, we shall communicate further. In the meantime I beg to assure you, and through you the committee, that should the nature of the East India and China Association preclude their entering into this matter, as a body, which I think probable, I shall in the absence of any other person being authorized by the committee, under such contingency, receive and distribute the funds agreeably to the instructions I may receive, and give individually my best assistance towards obtaining for the petitioners in the first instance the fullest and most impartial enquiry into the nature and extent of the grievances, of which they complain; and lastly, the adoption of such remedial measures as the result of the enquiry may entitle them to claim.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your obedient servt.

G. G. DE H. LARPENT.

T. DICKENS, Esq., Calcutta.

SUPREME COURT.

JULY 28, 1837.

Gopal, cooper, and Warris, coolie, were tried for stealing a bag of corks from the premises of Wm. Turner, Esq., on the 1st May last. Prisoners pleaded not guilty.

Attaram, first witness, deposed, that he saw the second defendant taking away a bag of cork, when his master was out, followed and brought him back, and on his master's return communicated it to his master, by whose order he sent them to the police office.

Cross-examined by Warris, cooper.—Never permitted any goods to pass without the prisoner's orders.

Narrain Sing deposed.—Defendant is the durwan of Mr. Turner. Assaram, the last witness, put the second defendant, in this deponent's charge on the day that deponent went to the Police Office. Mr. Turner was then absent from home. It is now 6 months since deponent has returned to his service after an absence of 10 months on leave. Gopal was employed during his absence.

Mr. Wm. Turner, deposed.—Deponent is a merchant and agent, has no partners: the two last witness were his servants. It is now about one year or thereabouts that the prisoner Gopal first entered his service. On deponent's return he saw the coolie in custody and the cooper at work in the godown. After hearing of this theft, deponent sent both the prisoners into custody. The coolie is a perfect stranger to the deponent. All the property in the godown is this deponent's property. One bag of corks was pointed out to this defendant, as being the property stolen by the prisoner. The corks were not removed from deponent's premises through the door from which the property always passes to and fro from deponent's premises, but through a private door. Deponent never gave any orders for the removal of any corks that day. Deponent purchased 3,000 gross of corks, but when he went to count them, there were found to be only 2,346 gross.

Warris, cooper, in his defence stated, that after his first arrest he was released and then again taken up by the prosecutor. During this period he often went and consulted the police jemadar. Prisoner has never acted dishonestly towards his employer and only obeyed his orders. Prisoners put the corks, by the order of prosecutor's sircar, publicly on this coolie. Prisoner has evidence to show, that the prosecutor conspired with the second prisoner before bailing him to criminate him. The second defendant said, that he is a coolie and being called to take up a load, it being his employer's, he did it. One of the prosecutor's durwans followed him and stopped and arrested him whilst he was going with the load in the direction he was ordered.

Mahomet Syne, Jemadar of the Police, deposed, that he heard Mr. Turner accuse Warris of this theft.

The judge addressed the jury, stating that there is a distinction as to the degree of crime of theft committed by a servant, and another person, therefore, if they are guilty the second prisoner can only be found guilty on the second count. After this he detailed the evidence on the case and left the case in the hands of the jury.

The jury found the first prisoner guilty on the first count of stealing the property of his master, and the second prisoner not guilty.

The judge after admonishing the second prisoner to be more circumspect in his conduct told him he would be released when the Grand Jury would be discharged, and deferred the sentence of the first prisoner for the present.

Debnarain Roy and Roopchand, were charged with burglariously entering on the 1st of July, the house of Sheebchunder Patter and stealing several articles therefrom.

Prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Sheebchunder Patter, the prosecutor, deposed.—He resides in Hauthkhala and farms the market of Raja Roy Kisson at that Khala, and advances money to tashmen who have shops in that market. Deponent's house is a mud plastered hut tiled over. Deponent missed the property on the morning at about 8 o'clock. The night previous he had retired to rest at midnight. The theft was committed on the night of the 20th of Assar last. Deponent slept on the shrine of his household gods that night, and his family in the hut where the theft was committed. When deponent entered the hut he perceived a breach under the foundation of his hut about one cubit in diameter. Four or five women were sleeping that night in the hut. The foundation being of brick cemented with clay, the noise made in their removal did not wake the inmates. On discovering the breach in the hut, deponent examined his property and found the lock of a trunk in the hut broken open, and all the articles in it abstracted, (Here deponent detailed the articles stolen.) After the theft, deponent found 2 dallies in the house of the prisoner Debnarain Roy; they were taken out of that prisoner's house by Frankistopal, who arrested the prisoner, and sent deponent information. Deponent then gave information to the thana, brought some police peons and arrested the prisoner at an arrack shop. The dallies were made over to the charge of the thandar of the division : afterwards deponent went by the Police orders by the information of the 1st prisoners, and with some Police peons and searched the 2nd prisoner's house, where he found 3 more dallies which were taken in charge by the thanadar. Roopchund seeing this, ran away, but he was stopped by a chowkeedar and brought back. Prisoner denied all knowledge of the theft, and claimed the clothes as his own at the Police. Roopchund at first denied the house where the clothes were found to be his, but afterwards owned it to be his. After this they searched the house of one Lallchund which adjoins Roopchund's house, and found there 3 coverlets of his and made them over to the Police peons.

The property was all this deponent's property. Lallchund then, in Roopchund's presence, said, these clothes were thrown by Roopchund into his hut, and Roopchund denied it. On Monday the 21st Assar, these discoveries were made. None of the jewellery has been found. This witness was then remanded, cannot say what is the length of each dallie, they vary from 8 to 9 cubits.

Prampal. This witness said that he was a neighbour and partner of the last witness : hearing of the theft in his house he made enquiries and found 2 dallies in Debnarain's house, not answering to the clothes. Debnarain can afford to wear the description of the dallies, stolen from the prosecutors house. He gave the information of the theft. The reason why he suspected Debnarain was because he was in the habit of smuggling salt. The rest of this witness's evidence was confirmatory of what the other witness deposed.

Maunchee Ponrah, the naib thanadar, deposed to searching the houses of the prisoners, finding the goods and arresting the prisoners, and taking charge of the stolen property found in their houses. He further added that the prisoners found other persons taking away the goods and challenged them when they left the goods there.

Lallchund deposed to the prisoner Roopchund having the goods in his hut. This witness admitted that he was once before suspected for harboring bad people and had had his house searched twice.

Here Mr. McCan produced the box with the articles in them, and the prosecutor identified them to be his property.

The prisoner said that he was smoking in the night when some persons passing by with some clothes they threw them into his hut when he challenged them. The other said he was forcibly taken into custody and charged with stealing his own clothes. They both said they had no other witnesses than God Almighty.

The judge here charged the jury, detailing the particulars of the evidence in this case, and defining that burglary by night was a capital offence. He added, that it is further requisite to ascertain, whether the articles exceeded in value sa. rupees 50, beyond which it constituted the higher offence, and thus left the case in their hands. The jury wished to know if a person be found guilty of stealing a portion of stolen property does the law consider him guilty of stealing the whole.

The Judge said that if the property has not been stolen at different times, and if there are no grounds to suppose that it was committed by different persons at different times, then, if several persons committed a robbery jointly, each person is guilty of stealing the whole. But it is generally more a matter of fact, the conclusion of which must be adduced by the Jury themselves from the evidence before them, as the finding in such cases must greatly depend on the nature of each case.

The Jury after retirement of two hours, brought in a verdict of stealing in a house, articles valued under 50 rupees.

The judge then sentenced them to 7 years' transportation each. - Hurkaru, August 1.

JULY, 29, 1837.

(Before Sir B. Mulkin, Knt.)

Edward Chinnery, was tried for committing a larceny, on the 28th June, by stealing the property of W. W. Robinson.

Counsel for the prisoner, Longueville Clarke, Esq., Attorney, G. E. Hudson.

P. Leal, sworn. Deponent is an Assistant to Mr. William Wood Robinson, a merchant, who sells miscellaneous goods. Defendant remembers sending, on the 28th June last, out of the shop, to Mrs. Captain Henderson, 2 seers of green tea and two seers of wax candles by a coolie, hired for the occasion and known to the establishment. The coolie returned with a voucher signed H. B. H. Deponent could recognize the voucher if he were to see it. Deponent has heard Mrs. Henderson is the wife of Captain Henderson.

Cross examined by Mr. Clark. Deponent does not know the Christian name of Mrs. Henderson. Deponent does not know the prisoner, but recollects sending twice some goods to a person named E. Chinnery. Deponent said he was the only Assistant then in the shop. Prisoner's Counsel remarked, that deponent was not now in the shop but in Court. Prosecutor has other assistants but deponent has charge of the shop.

Kadur, coolie, sworn. Deponent earns his livelihood by carrying burdens, and has occasionally taken loads from Mr. W. W. Robinson's. Recollects being ordered to take a parcel about one month ago, from Mr. Robinson's to one Mrs. Henderson at Park-street. Deponent met the prisoner in the way and showed him the receipt to enquire the residence of Mrs. Henderson. After the prisoner had read the receipt and asked deponent if he had brought the goods from Mr. Robinson's shop : on deponent replying "yes," prisoner took deponent to a female friend's house in a lane and told him to sit down. Shortly afterwards the prisoner came out and took the goods from the deponent's basket. Deponent asked for a receipt and refused to part with the goods ; as otherwise Mr. Robinson would hold deponent responsible for the goods. The prisoner hesitated a little and then signed the receipt and gave it to the defendant, and on deponent's demanding his hire, prisoner desired the deponent to tell Mr. Robinson to charge it in his bill against him.

Cross-examined. The prisoner when the deponent overtook him was in a palkee. Deponent did not see the prisoner sign the receipt. The prisoner took the receipt into the house, signed it, and returned it to the deponent. This was not in Park Street but in the burying ground lane. Deponent was going towards Park Street when the prisoner took deponent to the other house. Deponent subsequently pointed out the house where the prisoner took these goods from him to Mr. Robinson and a Police constable. Deponent has seen the prisoner before at Isserchunder's wine shop in China Bazar. Never took any parcels to the prisoner before Mr. Robinson.

Perry, the constable, sworn. Recollects the last witness pointing out a house to the deponent, where he said he had delivered some goods from Mr. W. W. Robinson.

One Mrs. Smith then resided there, and not Mrs. Henderson. Deponent does not know Mrs. Henderson. The next day deponent called at the prisoner's and had a conversation about her. Mr. Clark objected to this conversation being taken here in evidence. He quoted Chitty, saying, that where a written declaration of the prisoner has been taken before a magistrate oral evidence is inadmissible, and he likewise objected to the examination being read on the ground of their being taken on oath.

The Judge over-ruled this objection, and the deponent's examination continued. When this conversation occurred between this deponent and the prisoner, the prisoner was in deponent's custody; no other constable was then with the deponent only some chokeydars and thanadar. The conversation was in English. Mr. Clark said, this strengthens his argument, as the prisoner was then in custody, and it forms a part of deponent's declaration at the Police and that would be the better evidence.

Witness's examination continued. When the prisoner saw deponent at his door he said, "come in. I know what you want me for; do not be afraid." After deponent had got prisoner in custody he asked him how he came to be so very foolish; prisoner replied, "I do not know, but suppose it must have been at the instigation of the devil." Deponent asked him what he had done with the tea and candles; prisoner replied, "I have given the tea to Mr. T. Hampton for sale, and the candles to my mother;" adding, "I think it would be better for him to return the goods." Prisoner took deponent to Mr. Hampton, desiring deponent not to mention who he was. On arriving at Mr. Hampton's house the prisoner asked for the tea. Mr. Hampton replied, "how can I give it? I have sold the tea and paid you two rupees in part payment." The prisoner replied, never mind, give me what remains unsold, and we will settle the account afterwards." Mr. Hampton then gave back a seers of tea and deponent took charge of it. Prisoner then went to his mother and asked for the candles and she denied having taken them; after this deponent took prisoner to the Police.

Cross-examined. Deponent did not think this act of the prisoner to be a foolish freak; he went to arrest him by Mr. McFarlan's orders. The questions deponent put to the prisoner were quite voluntarily and before the prisoner had confessed any thing to him.

D. McFarlan, sworn. Deponent took the prisoner's examination, and the depositions of the witness before prisoner in his hearing; prisoner read the deposition and then signed it. There was a lady at the Police, but deponent does not recollect her name: not thinking her statement necessary to the case she was not examined. There were no threats or inducements held out to the prisoner to make the statement he made regarding this matter.

Mr. R. Habberley, identified the examination of the prisoner and produced the forged receipt signed H. B. H.

The examination was then read date the 7th July 1837, and the prisoner said, "I am guilty of the crime and I am sorry for it." After this the receipt was read.

G. W. Bright, deposed. He is a partner of the firm of Messrs. W. W. Robinson and Co. Captain Henderson is a customer of theirs. The initials of his Christian name are H. B., but what they stand for deponent cannot say. Deponent was Mr. Wood's partner when this transaction occurred.

Captain H. B. Henderson, deposed. He resides in Theatre road. Deponent deals with Mr. W. W. Robinson. Heard on his return from office that there was a mistake regarding an order of his. Deponent's name is Henry Berkley. Deponent's coolie went with the orders and deponent heard that Mr. Robinson desired the man sent to go, and he would send the goods by a coolie of his own. Deponent has not heard of any other officer of the same name as this deponent in Calcutta.

Mr. Clark said, that on the authority of the case of King against Jackson, there is no cause for the case to go before a jury. After this Mr. Clark read this case. He then argued, that as there is an absolute parting of the goods by Mr. Robinson to the coolie, and by the coolie to the prisoner, although it may amount to a fraud yet it does not constitute a felony. The Judge said, he has another case which he will mention afterwards, and it bears nearer to this case quoted by Mr. Clark. He then over-ruled the objection.

The prisoner declined saying any thing in his defence and called Mr. Paul to prove his character, who gave him a very good reputation.

The Judge then addressed the Jury, stating that although the theft was small, yet as there is no absence of fraud it does not amount by law to a joke, whatever the prisoner may think of it. He then said that in the case he alluded to and promised to quote in reply to the case quoted by Mr. Clark, it is stated that fraudulently obtaining a parcel from a carrier is a fraud; for a carrier is only bound to give it to the person to whom it was directed. If the admissions of the prisoner and the evidence be admitted, there is no doubt but that he is guilty of the crime laid to his charge. After this he left the case with the Jury.

The Jury found the prisoner guilty of the crime laid to his charge, but they recommended him to the mercy of the Court, because of his youth and because they imagined that when he committed the crime he did it under the impression that he was committing a frolic and not a larceny.

The Judge, after this sentence had been recorded, desired the prisoner to stand down for the present, and after he has considered how for he can attend to the Jury's recommendation he will pass a sentence on him.

Gobardhun and Gourbux Sing, for larceny, committed on the property of G. W. Anderson.

Gousy deposed.—He is the khansama of Mr. G. W. Anderson, the Law Commissioner. Does not know Mr. Anderson's name in full, but knows the prisoners; they were Mr. Anderson's servants—Gungadeen was door-keeper and Gourbux a watchman. Deponent paid the servant's wages. On 14th April deponent brought 400 rupees, from the Union Bank on a cheque signed by Rustomjee, who gave deponent a cheque on Rustomjee for the 400 rupees. This money was drawn to pay 250 rupees to the servants as wages, and 150 rupees for the household expenses disbursed by this deponent. 200 rupees of the wages had been paid and the rest was locked up by the deponent. The prisoners had received their wages. Here deponent described the articles which were locked up with the money by this deponent. Deponent on returning to his duty next morning found the trunk broken open and the box in which the money was, together with the books, were abstracted from the trunk. The same evening the box and the books were found in an adjoining compound and part of the property was recovered about one month and a half afterwards, when the prisoners were arrested at the Police office.

Gorah Sing, deposed.—He is a peon in the employ of Sir J. P. Grant and knows the prisoners. Heard the 2 prisoners once disputing on the cross roads near Bavunbustee about 45 days ago. Gungadeen said to deponent, that Gourbux had Mr. Anderson's property by him.

Gourbux said he got it from Gungadeen's mistress. There was another person at the time at a short distance called Buldeo. Deponent had them taken up and brought before Sir J. P. Grant, who sent them to the Police office. Deponent, when Gungadeen spoke to him, perceived a bag in his hand, and snatched it out of his hands: the purse contained a pair of earrings and a gilt watch chain. Deponent delivered the purse and its contents to the thanadar of the Chowringhee division.

Chirchund missur, thanadar of Chowringhee thanna, deposed, that he had received a bag with a pair of gold earrings and a gold gilt chain, from the Police Magistrate, who took it from Gorah Sing and gave it to the prisoner. Deponent recollects going with Gousv. khansama, to the house of Mr. Dashwood to search the hut of Mr. Dashwood's durwan. Deponent found in the trunk of Beharry Tewary, Mr. Dashwood's durwan, a penknife; deponent took the penknife and the trunks of Gungadeen and Gourbux, whose trunk was with Mr. Bietzick's durwan, to the Police office both locked. Beharry Tewary pointed out the trunks to the deponent. If deponent were to see the trunks he could identify them. On the trunks being opened, in Gungadeen's chest a red cloth bag was found—nothing in Gourbux's trunk.

Beharry Tewaree, deposed.—He is Captain Dashwood's door-keeper. Recollects that about 45 or 60 days ago, last witness came to search witness's room. The prisoner Gungadeen, after his release on bail from the Police, came and put up with deponent. The penknife deponent borrowed from Gungadeen to cut vegetables.

Here Mr. J. J. McCann produced the goods mentioned in the bag and they were identified by Jherchund Missur, to be the property he received from the police from the hands of Gorah Sing. Gorah Sing identified them to be the same he received from Gungadeen, and Gousy identified them to be the property he had locked in the trunk on the night previous to the discovery of the robbery. The penknife was likewise produced and identified to be the same that Jherchund found in Beharry Tewary's trunk; it was likewise identified to be a portion of the property stolen from the trunk on the night of the robbery.

M. Crow, deposed. He is Interpreter to Mr. McMahon, the Magistrate. Deponent was present when the 3 first witnesses were examined. Deponent examined the deposition and said, that they were taken some days previous to their being explained and signed. The date in the deposition, 16th May, corresponds with the day on which they were taken, and not the day on which they were signed.

The prisoner, Gourbux, in his defence, said, that the statement of the informer was false, as he was arrested at the Custom House, where he was employed. Gorah Sing wanted Gourbux to lend him 20 rupees, and because he refused to accommodate him, he has laid this false information against him. Gungadeen said, in his defence, that Gourbux entrusted him with 86 rupees, and next day Gourbux came and demanded the money, saying that he had now a favorable opportunity of sending it home, and after he had received the money he left the bag and the knife with him. This prisoner called on R. D. Mangles, Esq., who gave him a very good character, saying that he was in his service for three months, about 15 months ago. Gourbux called a witness, who said he knew nothing about the prisoner.

None of the witnesses could tell what Mr. Anderson's Christian name was.

Here the Judge addressed the Jury, stating that there was a difficulty in finding the prisoners guilty on the last count of the indictment, as there was no proof to show what Mr. Anderson's Christian name was. The Judge found it in the indictment to be George William, but G. W. may stand for other names besides George William: besides this, a part of the property has been shown not to be the property of Mr. Anderson. The Judge added he asked every witness who he thought could inform him what Mr. Anderson's Christian name was, but he could not elicit it from any of them. He believed that the names mentioned in the indictment were correct, yet there is no proof of it given in this case. After this the Judge detailed the particulars of the evidence, remarking that only a small portion of the property had been found in the prisoner's possession, and that after a lapse of 6 months, after the theft; after this he alluded to the re-crimination of the prisoners of each other, and left the case to the discretion of the Jury.

The Jury after a short retirement, pronounced both the prisoners not guilty.

The Judge after admonishing the prisoners to be more circumspect in their future conduct, discharged them.

Radahmoun Roy, was tried for burglariously entering the dwelling house of Kishno Mony, and stealing several articles, belonging to Torabaly therefrom.

Kishno Mony, deposed, that she gains her livelihood by her labor and lives by herself in a brick-built lower-roomed house, in Coburdangah. Recollects being robbed on the 9th of Bysak last. Deponent was sleeping that night on the roof of her house; the house has 3 doors. Before going to rest, deponent secured all these doors. Deponent went to rest at midnight. The watchmen called on deponent about 3 o'clock A. M. On coming down deponent saw several Police peons, and Radahmoun in custody. Deponent knew him before; he used to visit a female who lived in the upper apartments of deponent's house, and Sheebo had several articles belonging to deponent, with which the prisoner was running away when Sheebo arrested him. Deponent after this perceived that the bolt of one of the doors had been forced open, through which she conjectures the prisoner must have made his entrance into the house. Sheebo then took the prisoner and the articles found on him to the Police Office.

Sheebo, peon, deposed. Deponent was going his rounds at about 3 o'clock, when he saw Radahmoun going with a bundle in his hand, and challenged him and asked him who he was. Radahmoun replied a "subject." Deponent asked him what he was carrying in the bundle, and prisoner replied some eatables. Deponent asked him from whence he procured these eatables at this late hour of the night, and wished to see them. The prisoner refused to show the contents, on the plea that the food would be contaminated, and offered to show it to deponent if he would follow him to his house. Deponent refused to comply with this request, and insisted on seeing the contents of the bundle on the spot; and when the prisoner saw the deponent determined to see the contents of the bundle, and previous to letting the prisoner pass, the prisoner then attempted to throw the bundle into a drain close by, and deponent perceiving this snatched it out of his hands and felt its contents to be hard. Perceiving this, the deponent remarked, that eatables could not be so very hard, and took the prisoner to the Thana, where the Thanadar opened the bundle and found it contained jewellery, and asked the prisoner what he had to say to this bundle containing jewellery instead of eatables as he had stated; and how he became possessed of them. The prisoner then confessed. Here the Judge checked the witness and said, never mind what he confessed, state what he did. The deponent said, that in consequence of this confession, deponent went to the prosecutrix's house, who identified the articles to be her property. The rest of this witness's evidence, was but a corroboration of the evidence given by the last witness.

Mr. McCann produced the jewellery, and the prosecutrix identified the articles to be her property.

The prisoner in his defence said, that he was returning home from Kaly Ghaut, where he had gone to pay his devotions during the day. He was met by Sheebopoon, who asked him for a donation. This the prisoner refused to give, and then Sheebopoon thrust these goods into his hands, charged him with stealing them from Kisto Mony's house, where he had not been on that day, and took him into custody.

The Judge very briefly charged the Jury, dilating the particulars of this case, and the evidence given on it, and left the case in their hands.

The Jury said, that they wished to read the indictment in order to ascertain, if any of the counts of it charged the prisoner with stealing from a dwelling house, for they had their doubts as to whether he was guilty of burglary, or only stealing from a dwelling house.

The Judge replied, that burglary included stealing from a dwelling house, and as to the Jury's remarks of their not being evidence to satisfy them, that the prisoner broke open into the house, such crimes are not committed in open day and in presence of witnesses; but if the goods were found in the prisoner's possession and the bolt of the house broken open, the natural pre-emption is, that the prisoner is the person who committed the offence. However, if they thought the prisoner guilty they cast pass a general verdict, and the Judge would award the punishment at his discretion.

The Jury brought in a verdict of guilty.

Sentence of death was then recorded against the prisoner, and commuted to 14 years' transportation to the S. E. Coast of Martaban.

After this the Court adjourned to 11 o'clock, A. M. to-morrow morning.—Hurkurn, August 2.

JULY 31, 1837.

(Before Sir B. Malkin, Knt.)

Attaram, alias Roogoo, was tried for stealing a promissory note the property of Rada Nath Mittur.

Rada Nath Mittur, deposed.—He is a merchant and resides at Hautcola. His son, Benasur Mittur, has the charge of his cash. On the 9th April last, deponent received four bank-notes of 100 rupees each; and took a memorandum of their numbers. Produces a book and reads the numbers, which he had entered in it. The prosecutor stated, that after he had received these notes he put them as he believes in a box on his writing desk. Subsequently, deponent required the use of these four notes and searched for them fruitlessly. Amongst his papers in the box in which he imagines he had kept them, he found locked the key. Deponent some times leaves the key there. Deponent's bearers had ingress and egress to that room, and other servants go there when called. The prisoner Roogoo, was deponent's sirdar bearer. The deponent after missing his notes gave on the 17th May notice to the bank. After this, deponent saw one of these notes at the Police Office in the hands of Mr. J. J. McCann, and shortly after this he perceived the other three on the table of Mr. Robinson, the magistrate.

Prisoner had been off and on nearly twelve years in the deponent's service.

Benasur Mittur, deposed, and proved the numbers of the notes deponent gave, to corresponded with what the prosecutor stated.

In this stage of the proceedings, the jury intimated to the judge that they wished the witnesses for the prosecution to withdraw. The Judge said, that it was not usual for them to be ordered to do so; but if the jury requested it he would order them to withdraw: the jury said that they wished it, and the witnesses were ordered to withdraw.

Benasur Mittur's examination continued.—Deponent does not know where his father kept these notes, but he subsequently heard of their loss and that they were advertised. Afterwards deponent saw these notes at the Police Office; but previously deponent saw one of these notes in the hands of Shamchund at the house of Hurry Dass. Deponent knows the prisoner, he was a bearer of the prosecutor and carried his palkee: he was called Roogoo by his master, but his brethren called him occasionally Attaram.

Roogchund Seth, deposed. He is a writer in the Bank of Bengal. Deponent knows Nobinchund Dutt, he is a money changer and brought a note for change at the Bank; it was a note which was stated to have been lost. Deponent from a memorandum in his book read the number of the note which he said was for sacca rupees 100, and he received the change on the surety of one of the Podars of the Bank, who said that he knew Nobinchunder and stood guarantee for him. After this the note remained in deponent's charge till it was demanded by the Police authorities: it was then stamped, cancelled, and deponent took it to the Police Office to Mr. McFarlan, who desired him to deliver it to a gentleman there. The note was presented at the Bank on the 26th May, and 2 or 3 days after this, it was called for by the Police authorities.

Nobinchunder Dutt, a money changer, deposed. Deponent remembers that on the 26th of May last he took a Bank of Bengal Note for 100 sacca rupees, which he had received from Hurry Dass Dullall, No. 307, at 9 o'clock A. M. on that day, to the Bank, to have it changed. Hurry Dass received the change from deponent for the note 106-10. Hurry Dass stated that he was a broker when he brought the notes for change, and directed deponent to make the entry in the name of John Perry, Comitolah. Deponent on giving security to the Bank after the note had been stated to be stolen properly, received silver in change. If deponent were to see Hurry Dass he could recognize him. Afterwards Hurry Dass was called in Court and recognized by this deponent.

Hurry Dass, deposed. That he is under arrest in this business on suspicion, but added he is innocent. [The Judge in this stage of the proceedings warned Hurry Dass that he must be very cautious in his answers, and not to answer any question that may hereafter tend to criminate him.] Deponent is a milk man and recollects that on the 26th May last he took a Bengal Bank Note of sacca rupees 100 for change to the last witness and received in silver from him 106-10 company rupees. Deponent at first received 50 sacca rupees in a note and 53 company rupees but the person who had given the 100 sacca rupees note to be changed to this deponent, perceiving the note to be pasted, refused to take it and desired to have all in silver, and then he returned the sacca rupees 50 note to Nobinchund, and received 53 rupees more in silver. The person who gave deponent the note, told deponent to say that the note belonged to Mr. Perry, who resided at Cossitolah; and deponent told Nobinchunder so. Deponent did not state his profession at that time to Nobinchunder Dutt; there was no necessity for it, for Nobinchunder had long known him to be a milkman. Does not recollect stating to Nobinchunder that he was a broker. Deponent received this note from the prisoner at the bar who desired deponent to get this note changed, and left three more with this deponent of 100 sicca rupees each. On being asked how he came to receive four notes of so high a value, from a person from whose circumstances in life, deponent must have known that he could not have come honestly by them; deponent replied, that whilst deponent went to get the note which the prisoner gave him to be changed, prisoner during his absence left the other 3 notes there. Shortly after Nobinchunder gave the change to this deponent, Nobinchunder asked deponent how he came possession of them, and when deponent mentioned the whole transaction to Nobinchunder, and arrested this deponent and took him to the Police office, where he delivered all the notes the prisoner had left with him to the Police authorities. Deponent resides at Foudzary Dalakana where the prisoner was when deponent took the 50 rupees note to him, when he refused to take it.

Nobinchunder recalled. Never saw Hurry Dass before the transaction just mentioned. Gave him at first two notes of 25 rupees each, and not one of 50 rupees; if he had given one of 50 rupees he would have entered it in the day book; money changes in Calcutta do not enter the nos. of notes under 50 rupees.

Sham Dass, deposed. He is a Police man and recollects Hurry who was on the 6th of June under a rest. Went twice with deponent to have his house searched. Deponent on the first search found 100 compans's rupees and on the second search deponent found under a wooden platform 8 notes of 100 rupees each put between the mats, and the post of his hut. Hurry Dass mentioned nothing about the notes to this deponent; deponent himself found them on the second search; he afterwards brought them to the Police, and gave them to Mr. McCann.

Mr. J. J. McCann, produces the 3 notes, and the 100 rupees which he had received from Sham Dass, and one note from Ranchanl; deponent received the silver sealed, and has not counted it. The prosecutor was here recalled and read the nos. of the notes Mr. McCann produced in Court, and they corresponded with the nos. he had previously deposed to have lost. He identified them to be the notes he had lost by reference to his books. Deponent is unacquainted with Hurry Dass, the milkman.

Kunoye, deposed. He is a ticca bearer. Looks at Hurry Dass, and says he is deponent's landlord, and his name is Manneab; he has no cows. Recognizes the prisoner. Deponent saw the prisoner once at his landlord's house: it was on the evening previous to the landlord's being arrested.

Ghooma, Ticca bearer, deposed the same as the last witness.

The prisoner in his defence, said that the prosecutor desired him at the Police Office to call Roopchand Seth, and when he brought him to the Police Office Hurry Dass at the Police Office charged him with the theft, and he was taken into custody. He called the prosecutor to give him a character, and the prosecutor said that with the exception of this charge he had always found the prisoner to be a good and honest servant, and he never robbed him, even though he had many opportunities to do it before if he felt disposed to do so.

The Judge briefly charged the Jury, detailing the evidence taken in this case and commenting on it.

The Jury after a short consultation returned a verdict of not guilty.

The Judge said that although it is usual to discharge prisoners when the Grand Jury is discharged, yet on account of the good character the prosecutor has given him, the Judge thought there could be very little doubt that the witness Hurry Dass committed the crime and charged prisoner with it; he was therefore ordered to be released.

Shake Bandoo, stood charged with stealing from the house of Shake Rahim Ally several articles of jewelry.

Shake Rahim Ally, cloth merchant, deposed, that his shop is in Rada Bazar, but he resides in Chunan Gully. Deponent knows the prisoner who was his servant; he likewise attended on deponent's brother, Ameer Ally. Deponent pays the ground rent of the land on which the hut stands, but it is joint property. It is 2 months since the prisoner left deponent's service, absconded without the prosecutor's knowledge. The last time deponent saw him was on the evening of the 24th of May, at about 10 o'clock. Missing the prisoner on the morning of the 25th of May, prosecutor searched his house and found the staple of his trunk wrenched off; deponent then opened his trunk and found that the box which had been in it and contained his wife's jewels, had been stolen. The prosecutor detailed the property stolen. When the prosecutor missed the property, deponent went to search for him, and found and arrested him at Moorshedabad. After the prisoner was arrested he was taken to the boat in which he had proceeded to Moorshedabad: and the prisoner there pointed out part of the goods stolen to the deponent, suspended by a cloth from the roof of the boat. The prosecutor recognized the goods and delivered them into the custody of the Police Authorities at Moorshedabad, after which he saw the goods at the Police Office. Meer Wahed Ally accompanied the prosecutor to Moorshedabad. The prisoner at first denied all knowledge of theft, but when the prosecutor threatened to take him to the Thana, he said, "take your goods and let me go." It was after this conversation that he showed the goods in the boat. The last time deponent saw the goods previous to the theft, was the day previous to the theft. Prosecutor's wife kept the key of the trunk in which the goods were locked up.

Ameer Ally, prosecutor's brother, deposed, that the prisoner on the evening on which he committed this theft, gave deponent some decoction of subjee leaves for to drink, saying that it would cool him. About an hour after deponent had drunk this, he became stupified and recollects nothing of what occurred during that night. On waking at 8 o'clock a. m. next morning, deponent found his brother and his family weeping, and on enquiry learnt of the robbery and the abscondment of the prisoner.

Wahed Ally deposed.—That he accompanied the prosecutor in this case to Moorshedabad at his request. Deponent knew the prisoner at Patna, his native city; never saw him in Calcutta, during the period he was in the prosecutor's service. Deponent was present when the prisoner was taken into custody at Moorshedabad.

Mr. J. J. McCann, produced the jewels, which were identified by the prosecutor to be portion of the property which had been stolen from his house.

Prisoner said that his master beat him and he therefore absconded from his service: for this reason and because he had been on terms of intimacy with the prosecutor's wife, he through spite pursued him to Moorshedabad and had him arrested.

The Judge briefly addressed the jury, who, without retiring, found the prisoner guilty.

The Judge said, in consequence of the proof of his drugging the potation of Ameer Ally being very clear, he should have been transported for life; but he cannot, under existing circumstances, pass a less sentence than transportation for 14 years to Martaban.

The prisoner was then sentenced to 14 years' transportation.—Hurakru, August 3.

August 1. 1837.

(Before Sir B. Malkin, Knight)

Abbas Fuzil, and Meer Mulik, were tried for stealing ten bags of sugar, the property of James McKillop, Esq.

Sumbo Chunder, Sircar, deposed, that he is a sircar in the service of Messrs McKillop, Stewart and Co. Mr. Stewart is a partner of the firm. Deponent recollects sending 240 bags of sugar on the 18th of April in 3 bhurs to be shipped on board the ship Lord Wm. Bentinck, which was then lying in the Kidderpoor docks, and each bag contained by measurement about 200 cwt. each: deponent had weighed 90 of those bags. The bags were shipped at midday, the bhurs were lying at Police Ghaut, and they were dispatched two at 2 o'clock and the third at 3 o'clock p. m. There was a strong southerly breeze at the time and ebb tide. Deponent gave the names of the manjees and the chulundars at the Police Office. He does not now recollect their names. Deponent afterwards discovered the 3 boats lying at 5½ o'clock at Kuddum Tullah Ghaut. Deponent covered the bags and cautioned the manjees and the chulundars to be careful of the property. Deponent did not then count the bags. After covering the bags deponent went home. The day following when deponent returned to the office of his employers, he learnt of the loss of the ten bags of sugar. Mr. Low, an assistant of Messrs. McKillop, Stewart and Co., took deponent to the Police Office, and his deposition was then taken and reduced to writing. Deponent saw at the Police the chulundar and the manjees of one boat at the Police, and learnt that the men of the other 2 boats had absconded. If deponent were to see the ten bags of sugar he could identify them for they were marked G. C. X and Co. The sugar had been consigned to Messrs. McKillop, Stewart and Co. from the Upper Provinces. Many bags of sugar had been shipped previously, but deponent cannot state the exact quantity. Deponent subsequently heard that the sugar had been delivered by these boatmen at the Kidderpoor Dock, minus ten bags.

Hurroo Chunder Mokerjeea, sircar of the Prosecutors, deposed, that he counted 240 bags of sugar sent by his master to be shipped on board the Lord William Bentinck at Kidderpoor. He only weighed them once (reads a memorandum) and the gross weight of what he weighed was 448 cwts. 10 lbs. Deponent does not know any of the boatman; they were brought on the 20th April to Kidderpoor by the police peons.

Cossinath, deposed, that he was a manjee of a police watch boat, and his boat is stationed at Seebpore sand bank opposite the Fort; but it is employed at night to search from Chandpaul Ghaut on the north, to the point opposite Mr. Barwell's house on the south. Deponent recollects arresting the prisoners with ten bags of sugar. On the 19th April, at 4 o'clock in the morning, deponent was rowing up and down the river on the look out: deponent's boat met the prisoner's boat abreast of the Kuddumtullah Ghaut, and deponent challenged it, but received no reply. This excited deponent's suspicion, and he chased them. When they perceived this, two of the boatmen jumped over board and escaped; but deponent succeeded in capturing the boat with the three prisoners on it. Deponent then searched their boat and found ten bags stowed in her, and when these bags were examined by the deponent they were found to contain sugar. Deponent asked the prisoners how they became possessed of these bags, and they made no reply: Deponent then beat the alarm and the Police chowkey boat No. 4, came to his aid. Deponent then lashed the boat captured to the Police boats and brought them to Chandpaul Ghaut, and put the sugar on two carts and made the prisoner and the sugar over to the charge of the thannadar of that ghaut, from whence they were taken to the Police, where the sugar remained until one of the partners of the firm of Messrs. McKillop and Co. came to the Police office, and after leaving the outcovering of these bags at the Police office which had marks on them, he put the sugar in fresh gunny bags and took it away. After this one of the prisoners named Abbas was taken with the boat to the Kidderpoor ghaut under the custody of the Police peons.

Mr. J. J. McCun, Deputy Superintendent of the Police, deposed, that he recollects ten bags containing sugar being brought to the Police office; they were afterwards claimed by Messrs. McKillop and Co., who left the outer covering of the sugar for the purpose of identification at the Police office, and took the sugar away in other bags. The bags now produced in Court are bags in which the sugar was brought to the Police office. Deponent, from his situation at the Police office, knows the limits of the jurisdiction of the Calcutta Police, and believes the middle of the stream opposite Kuddumtollah ghaut to be within its jurisdiction.

Sumbo Chunder recalled, identified the bags to be the same which were consigned by them to be shipped on board the ship Lord Wm. Bentinck.

J. Stewart, one of the partners of the firm of McKillop, Stewart and Co., deposed, that the names of the partners of that firm are Jas. McKillop, Jas. Cullen, John Carrington Palmer and J. Stewart. Deponent remembers sending some sugar, which was consigned to them by Messrs. Gordon, Colly and Co. from Benares. The sugar was the joint property of Messrs. McKillop, Stewart and Co. and the consignees, and deponent recognized the bags which were taken to the police office, to be the same by the marks on them, which was G. C. X & Co. The bags produced at the Court are the same.

This closed the prosecutor's case.

The prisoners in their defence, said, that two persons came to them on the morning of the 19th, and hired their boat to ferry them across the river. The prisoners at first objected, on the plea that their boat was already hired to another person; but these two men said never mind, it will not take you a long time in taking us "a cross and coming back, and paid their pice before hand. Whilst the prisoners were crossing the river, their boat was challenged by a police search boat, and the two persons who had hired them to take them across, said to them to give no reply, and they therefore remained silent. The chowkey boat receiving no reply chased them, and these two men jumped overboard. After this the police chowkey boat overtook them, and perceiving the sugar on board their boat, took them and their boat into custody, and charged them with the theft for which they are now tried. As the prisoners derived their livelihood by the hire of their boat, they are not aware of having committed any crime by hiring their boat to ferry people across the river. They then called three witnesses, who merely proved that early on the morning of the day in which the prisoners were arrested, they recollect some persons coming to the Ghaut, where theirs and the prisoner's boats were moored, and requiring a boat for hire to be ferried across the river and the prisoners hearing them, hired their boat to them for 5 or 6 annas to ferry them across the river.

This closed the defence.

After this the Judge summed up the case, commenting on the evidence taken in it, and detailing it briefly to the jury, and after laying before them the legal bearings of the case he left it to their decision.

The jury after a short retirement returned a verdict of guilty against all the prisoners.

After this verdict was returned, the judge said to them as it is a point of law in England if a thief is arrested in a foreign country, he cannot be tried for it in England, although the owner of the goods might have entrusted them to him in England. Thus, as Calcutta is within the King's dominions and the Zillah 24-Pargunnahs in the Company's territories, it would be desirable for them to ascertain whether the place where they were detected by Cassinath was within the jurisdiction of this Court or of Zillah 24-Pargunnahs.

The jury without retiring said, that they believed the place where they had committed the theft to be within the jurisdiction of Calcutta.

The prisoners were sentenced as aiders and abettors of the principals, if not as principals themselves, to imprisonment for 12 calendar months, in the House of Correction with hard labour.

Copul Sing, alias Neeluh, was tried for stealing some property belonging to Komlakanth Dutt.

Prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Komlakanth Dutt. That he is the servant of Bolloram Doss, a merchant, residing at the village of Sonargong, in the Zillah of Dacca, and receives commission, and his profession is a broker. He receives commission on the business which he transacts for other persons. Deponent has a shop at Bunsatollah Lane. Goluk Podar is not a partner of deponent, but rents half the premises in which deponent's office is. Bolloram Doss pays 10 rupees a month for that portion of these premises which the deponent occupies as his office, and records a credit in his cash transactions with this deponent, for the occupation of that portion of the premises, for which he pays the rent. Occasionally deponent deposits in them the goods of other persons for sale on commission. Deponent remembers receiving some cloths in May, which his master had consigned to him for sale. Ten pieces of this cloth called hummums were once stolen. Deponent was sitting in the upper room of his office, and heard a servant of his, called Kalachand, call out that a person was running away with a bale of cloth from this deponent's godown. When this deponent heard this, he ran down stairs and observed the door of his godown had been forced open. When the deponent saw this, he, together with his servant, gave chase and came up with a person carrying a bundle of clothes on his head, who, when he perceived that he was pursued, threw the bale down and attempted to escape. Deponent ordered his servant to seize him and the servant obeyed the order. The morning previous to this theft, deponent had counted the bales in the godown and found them to be one bale short. This robbery happened on the 20th June last. The prisoner is the person who was seized. Deponent has a slight recollection of having seen the prisoner before occasionally in the Burra Bazar. When deponent came down after he heard the alarm of a person running away with a bale of cloth, and perceived the door of his godown to be forced open, he found one bale of cloth had been abstracted. The bale which the prisoner threw down when he was arrested, was the one which had been abstracted from deponent's godown.

Kalachand deposed.—That he is the servant of Peary Baboo, the brother of Komlakanth Dutt. He saw a person enter the prosecutor's shop and ran away with a bale of cloth. He gave the alarm and together with the prosecutor chased and at Bunsatollah Lane, arrested the prisoner, who threw down the bundle he had abstracted from the prosecutor's shop, and beat the deponent, who then called out to the passers by—stop thief, stop thief. Hearing this, several persons came to deponent and threw down the prisoner, and delivered him and the prisoner in custody to the Thanadar of the division, who took the prisoner and the bale to the Police Office, and delivered the bale to Mr. McCau at the Police Office. Deponent never quitted the prisoner till he saw him safe at the Police Office. The prisoner abstracted the bale of cloth from the prosecutor's shop at about 10 o'clock; he was arrested at midday and taken before the police magistrate at about 2 o'clock of the same day. The prisoner is the person whom the deponent saw running away with the bale of cloth.

Hurroo, another servant of the prosecutor's, corroborated the evidence of the last witness.

Kheddroo, Chowkeydar, deposed, that he is a Police peon, and he jointly with the 2 last witnesses arrested the prisoner on a charge of stealing a bale of cloth, which was then lying in the street. Deponent took the prisoner and the bale of cloth to the Police Office, in charge of Mr. McCau.

The prisoner wished to point out some discrepancies in the evidence of the 2 last witnesses, who he said had varied in their testimony at the Court house from their depositions at the Police Office.

Mr. J. J. McCau produced the bale, and the prosecutor said, he recognized it to be a bale abstracted from his shop, by the name of Rajh Chandroo Bhoohecah, which is written on it, who is the proprietor of this bale and is Bulloram's son-in-law.

The prisoner in this stage of the inquiry, asked the prosecutor whether he did not quarrel with him on the day of the Ruth jatra, and did not raise this charge maliciously against him on that account. Prosecutor replied, he had never before spoken a single word to the prisoner.

Kalachand recalled by the jury further deposed. That he saw the prisoner come and pick the lock of the godown with a picklock, and open the door of the ware room, enter it, and abstract the bale.

The prisoner in his defence said, that the prosecutor and his servants had maliciously conspired, and falsely charged him with this robbery. He said he wished the jury to observe the lock, and see if it could be picked with a nail, and if it was impossible for a person of his bodily strength to lift up and carry so far as stated a load so heavy as the bale produced in Court. He pointed at the discrepancies of time as given in the evidence in the time stated by the witnesses, which he said varied from 8 o'clock to 10 o'clock A. M.

The Judge said, that owing to the mistake in the indictment, which had stated the godown to be Komla Kanth's, the jury could not find the prisoner guilty of burglary but only larceny, if they believed the evidence.

The jury, without retiring, found the prisoner guilty of larceny.

And the Judge said to the prisoner, that it was solely owing to a mistake in the indictment, he was not found guilty of a burglary; but as he had been repeatedly convicted of minor offences at the Police Office, and is a notorious bad character, he could not but sentence him to the highest penalty the law inflicts on larceny. The prisoner was then sentenced to 7 years' imprisonment.

Burnoo was charged with assaulting an old woman called Gopee, and robbing from her person several articles of jewellery.

Prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Gnopee, the prosecutrix, deposed.—A fire occurred in her neighbourhood at College Square on a Sunday, behind the thana at the northern end of the Square. Deponent does not know the month, as the pupils of the College did not attend, she knew it was a Sunday. The wind was high, and deponent's daughter, Ranny, was in the house, and deponent became alarmed. Moodosoodun, her son-in-law, was not at home. Ranny said to the prosecutrix that she would run off with her two children, to prevent their suffering by the fire, and wrapped up in 2 sarrees her personal ornaments and a few rupees, and desired her to take charge of it. After she had thus spoken, Ranny threw the bundle before her, and ran off with one child in her arm, leading another by the hand. When Ranny threw the bundle before deponent, two of the ornaments and one rupee fell out, and Rajchunder Mistry, one of her neighbours, took them up and gave them to her. There were many persons present at the time when Ranny threw the bundle to her, and saw her throw it to her. After this, Burnoo, the prisoner, came up to the prosecutrix and asked her if she intended to stay where she was to be burnt, and before she could reply, pulled her by the arm into the compound, and perceiving the bundle under her arm said, what have you got under your arm old woman, and snatched it from her with a violent jerk, which threw the deponent on the ground, and by the time she could get up, he ran off with the bundle. Deponent knew the prisoner before; he used to work occasionally as bricklayer, and occasionally as a ship lascar, and lived in the neighbourhood. Deponent knew what the bundle he robbed her of contained, because she saw her daughter tie the jewels in the bundle before her, previous to her giving it to the prosecutrix. Here the deponent detailed a long list of gold and silver jewellery which this bundle contained, and valued them at about 89 rupees. None of the many spectators interfered or attempted to stop the prisoner, although the prosecutrix requested them to do so, on the plea that the prisoner was a good hand at fencing, and a wicked, powerful man, and if they were to interfere he would thrash them all round.

Rajchunder Ghose, a bricklayer, deposed, that he knew Gopee Ranny and likewise Moodosoodun. This witness corroborated the evidence of the last witness, and added, that when he saw the prisoner walk away with the bundle which he took from the prosecutrix, he desired him to return it: to which the prisoner replied, "Will you take care of it for her," and leisurely walked away with the bundle. Nobody attempted to stop him, for he is a quarrelsome man, and the people had enough to do to secure their huts from the fire, as there was a strong wind at the time. Deponent has no quarrel with the prisoner, and only once for one day engaged his services. Deponent cannot say whether Moodosoodun is a man of property; he certainly is not troubled with duns.

Narrain Sing, hurkaru of Baboo Madub Dutt, deposed, that on the day on which this theft is asserted to have been committed, he was sent to call the last witness, and perceived that the persons residing in that neighbourhood were alarmed because of a fire which was then raging at some distance to the southward of the prosecutrix's house: the wind was from an opposite direction. There was no immediate cause of alarm, except that as many fires had lately occurred in Calcutta, people generally become alarmed on the slightest appearance of a fire. The wind afterwards blew the fire away in a contrary direction. Deponent knows Moodosoodun; cannot say what his means are. Here this deponent relates the throwing of the bundle in the same manner as the two last witnesses; but cannot tell what the bundle contained; it was in a dhotee. The rest of this witness's evidence, with slight discrepancies, was a corroboration of the evidence given by the last witness. This deponent appealed to Mr. J. J. McCan to prove, that the prisoner is a riotous character and broke one Pian Baboo's head about 2 years since. Deponent knows him ever since that time. To a query by the prisoner, deponent says he is not a hired witness.

Ranny deposed, in confirmation to the evidence of the prosecutrix, regarding her leaving with her in two saries the jewels and 40 rupees at the time the fire occurred, on the day this theft is alleged to have been committed by the prisoner. Cross-examined.—If deponent's husband, whenever he could muster 3 or 4 rupees, always purchased some jewel for her, how came she to have 40 rupees by her. Deponent replied, they were kept by for the marriage ceremony of her eldest daughter, and the medical expenses of her mother, who was sick at the time.

Moodosoodun Ghose, bricklayer, deposed, that on the day on which the fire occurred in the neighbourhood he had heard of the robbery of his wife's jewels. Deponent earns from 6 to 8 rupees a month. Deponent did not state at the Police that he did not know how many rupees he had. Deponent knows the prisoner, who has occasionally worked under him, and never had any quarrel with him.

J. P. Namey deposed, that he is interpreter to Mr. O'Hanlon, the Magistrate. Deponent explained the written evidence of the last witness to him, before he signed it. Deponent in it stated, that he did not know what money he had at the time of the alleged robbery.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner in his defence stated, that he and his brother Alibux had formerly worked with Rajchunder, who is the paramour of the prosecutrix. The prisoner left the service of Rajchunder, but his brother stayed till he fell from a house; he was then taken home to be cured. After his cure, prisoner went with him to demand his brother's wages, which Rajchunder refused to pay. The prisoner then threatened to sue him for them in the Petty Court, and he in revenge, conniving with his immediate relatives, hatched this complaint against him. Prisoner called 6 witnesses. One of the prisoner's witnesses confirmed this statement of the prisoner.

Another proved, that after the day in which this fire had occurred and the robbery is stated to have been committed by the prisoner, he had occasionally for some days seen the prisoner at work at his occupation openly, without any sign of concealment, and no bold attempt to arrest or molest him. Two more witnesses were called but they proved nothing.

This closed the defence.

The Judge briefly summed up the case and said, that although the prisoner is charged with the crime of robbery, it does not appear that that violence which constitutes a robbery, was used by the prisoner in the commission. If the prosecutrix's witnesses are to be believed, it only constitutes simply stealing from the person. Here the Judge detailed the evidence, commenting on it, and the prisoner's defence showing it has been confirmed by his witnesses.

The Jury, without retiring, found the prisoner guilty of stealing.

The Judge postponed passing sentence.

True bills were found against Sheaburn and Hurrischunder Mallic, for the murder of Rada Bebee; Doorhull, Larceny; James Bemanda, Larceny; Chund dandee, Chumroo dande, and Quadie, robbing on the river. Hurkaru, August 4.

AUGUST 1, 1837.

(Before Sir B. Malkin, Knt.)

Mr. W. Cornelius having fainted away during the time he was sitting as a jurymen, he was allowed in future to be exempted from serving on the Petit jury on his affidavit of inability on account of bodily infirmity; a similar exemption had been some time previously granted of Mr. T. Payne on the same grounds.

W. Deale, who was acquitted by the grand jury of the charge of stealing 10 gallons of Rum on board the ship George the Fourth, lying off Diamond Harbour, about 6 weeks ago, the property of I Nicholson, the owner of the ship, was this day brought up and discharged.

Mr. P. Atkinson, on being called on the petit jury to-day, stated to Mr. H. Holroyd, the Clerk of the Crown, that he begged to remind him that he had presented to him a petition praying to be exempted from sitting on the petit jury. Mr. Holroyd replied that he had received the petition and had presented it to the judge, who had not as yet passed any order on it. In this stage of the conversation the Judge said to Mr. P. Atkinson that he had received and read his petition, and it appeared to him after its perusal, that the petitioner claims exemption on 2 pleas, first, that he had when in England sat on the grand jury and is not therefore amenable to the petit juries of this city; if amenable at all to be summoned as a jurymen, he can only be summoned to the grand juries. On this objection the judges said he would pass no order at present. Mr. Atkinson, who has served on the grand juries cannot but be aware of the legal proceedings of a British court of justice, and that he must present his petition for such exemption as he has stated, through the regular channel (as we understood the judge to say, on the 1st day of the next session) when his plea would be taken up by the judges of the court, and an order passed on it. With regard to the second plea of the petitioner, viz., of his laboring under bodily infirmity, the court stated they would pass their orders on it, when the petition itself would be taken up by the bench; yet it being one of a urgent nature, as it disqualifies him from acting as a petit juror, the judge would as a temporary order on it, until the petition itself was generally disposed of by the judges, permit the petitioner to be exempted from service on the petit jury during the present Session. After this Mr. Atkinson was allowed to retire, and another jurymen was called in his stead.

AUGUST 2, 1837.

Peerbux was tried for the murder of Oajagur Seek, on the 21st January 1837, by having thrown him off the ground and beat, kicked and strangled him.

The prisoner pleaded that his name is Culloo not Peerbux, and put in evidence to show that his name was Culloo and not Peerbux. The indictment was then ordered to be altered and the name Culloo substituted in lieu of that of Peerbux.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Ameer Sing deposed: that he is a milliner, and has a shop in the Burra Bazar. Oajagur Sing, the deceased, was this deponent's brother: he is dead and deponent saw his corpse on the 15th or 16th of Maugh last on a Saturday. During the last year of his life deponent was not on friendly terms with him. Deponent generally saw the deceased daily, notwithstanding their misunderstanding, for he lived in the same lane with this deponent. It was only the week previous to the discovery of his corpse that this deponent did not see him as usual. The corpse was discovered in a godown in Amrahtollah lane. Deponent recognized the corpse to be his brother's by the features. He had it conveyed under a tree and wished, and he then perceived the marks of a cord round about his neck, which led this deponent to conjecture that deceased had been strangled with a cord. The lane has two or three other names besides that of Amrahtollah. When deponent went to the godown where his brother's corpse was discovered, he perceived many gentlemen there, Dr. Bain amongst the rest. Deponent did state to Mr. McFarlan at the Police, that when he saw the corpse he saw no marks on the corpse by which he could conjecture the cause of its death. Deponent did not observe the mark about the neck till after he had washed the corpse.

R. H. Bain, Esq., Police Surgeon, deposed: that he on the 28th of January last, examined a corpse in a lane, the name of which was Tarrachand Dutt's lane. Deponent does not recognize the last witness nor knows a lane called Amrahtollah lane: deponent examined the corpse twice on the 28th and 29th January 1837. On the first examination the body was very black and far advanced towards decomposition, much swollen and offensive, after the corpse had been exposed to the night air. Deponent examined it again the next morning at the ghaut, but perceived no marks on it. Deponent did examine the throat; it was a little whiter on account of the pressure of the lower jaw on it. There was no appearance of strangulation about the neck when deponent first perceived the corpse, and the death appeared to have happened one week previously. The marks of violence on corpses in this country are obliterated in one week. Deponent could not conjecture the cause of its death. Mr. McCan was present on both the occasions.

J. J. McCan, deposed:—that he was present when a corpse stated by Ameer Sing to be his brother's, was examined in Tarrachand Dutt's lane, by Dr. Bain on the 28th January last.

D. McFarlan, the Chief Magistrate, deposed: that the prisoner made his depositions before him without any threat or inducement. The prisoner deposed 3 times, and the depositions were always read to him before he signed them, and he was always cautioned against saying any thing that may criminate him unless he pleased, for it might hereafter tend to his injury at his trial. The prisoner said his name was Peerbux when he signed the examination, and appeared to be perturbed. Deponent recognizes the depositions by his initials on them, and recognizes a paper and a piece of satin which he said were shown to the prisoner when he gave his depositions. Deponent recognizes them by a private mark on them. Ramtoonoo was likewise examined by this deponent, as he verily believes in this prisoner's presence, but deponent cannot swear to the fact. Recognizes and identifies Ramtoonoo's depositions. The prisoner did not appear to be intoxicated when he gave his depositions, and he never refused or objected to sign the depositions.

C. F. Leal, interpreter to Mr. C. K. Robison, the Magistrate, deposed.—That he does not recollect the time when the prisoner was examined by Mr. McFarlan, but deponent explained the 1st examination to him before he signed it, and he appeared to be sober and to understand it. Deponent likewise explained the deposition of Ramtoonoo to prisoner; he understood and signed it. Deponent does not recollect whether the prisoner was present when Ramtoonoo was examined.

W. H. Grant, deposed.—He is clerk to the chief magistrate. Deponent interpreted the 2d examination of the prisoner to him, and he was sober at the time and understood what he signed previous to signing it.

Deponent does not recollect when Ramtoonoo was examined.

Dharney Dhur, Sircar to Baboo Motee Lal Seal, deposed.—Motee Lal Seal had a sircar called Ramtoonoo Roy, who used to collect the rents for Motee Lal Seal. Ramtoonoo is dead. Deponent let out Motee Lal Seal's smaller house. Deponent wrote an agreement in the presence of Ramtoonoo and another servant of Baboo Motee Lal Seal, and another person wrote something in Persian purporting to be his name, and the other 2 became witnesses to it. If deponent were to see the person who signed the agreement he could recognize him. Points to the prisoner and says that is the person who signed the agreement. States that he could not identify him again at the Police Office. Deponent there said on this subject, that he believed the prisoner to be the man who signed the agreement, since which his memory has been refreshed, and he is certain that he was the person who signed the agreement in question.

In the examination of Peerbux taken before D McFarlan on the 11th February 1837, he stated he is a native of Patna; he is a cloth dyer, and his shop is in Amratollah lane, and his residence at Gorbagaun, where the corpse of the deceased Ojgur Sing was found. Prisoner did not know his name at the time. He was murdered by Hossain Bux. There were Hossainbux, Bubroo and Hunnoo in the godown. Motee Bhow and Currembux were outside. Bubroo kept watch at the shoppe door. Hossainbux and Hunnoo knocked him down and strangled him. Motee Bhow had advanced to Hunnoo and Bubroo 70 rupees on an understanding that she was to have a share in the property after they had killed and plundered Oajagur Seik. They inveigled Oajagur into the godown, and after killing him they went to the deceased's house and brought away 2 executors and other goods from the deceased's shop, and put the goods in one Fackeeah's shop. After this all the perpetrators congregated and assembled at Motee Bhow's house, and then ran away to Chinsurah, where they refused to give this deponent his share of the plunder. The piece of satin cloth produced at the place and which was found in Curreem's possession, is a part of the property the murderers plundered from the deceased Oajagur Seik. Deponent in his second examination, dated 13th February, further confessed that the day before the murder he hired the shop in which the corpse was found 8 days after the murder, and removed his dying pansa there in company of Ram Sing, a servant of Motee Lal Seal. Ramtoonoo was present when he signed the agreement.

Hossainbux, thannadar of Coolootoolah, deposed: that on information he received he went with an informer to Chinsurah, and then the informer for fear of a rescue and escape, as the prisoner had many desperate associates, inveigled the prisoner and Curreem into a liquor shop, and there had them arrested. The piece of satin now produced in Court was found in Curreem's house at Chinsurah. Curreem is in custody under a charge of a similar nature as the prisoner. Ramtoonoo's evidence was taken before the prisoner at the Police.

Ramtoonoo's deposition taken on the 13th February 1837, being read, it stated that he was a witness to an agreement the prisoner signed for the rent of the godown in which the corpse of the deceased was found, about 9 days previous to the discovery of the corpse. The agreement was written in Dhurneydhur's book, and it is the one which was produced at the Police Office.

Ram Sing, durwan to Baboo Motee Lal Seal, deposed, that about 8 or 9 days previous to the discovery of the murder of Oajagur Sing, deponent went with the prisoner to give possession of the godown to the prisoner who had hired it. Deponent when he gave his evidence at the Police, had his doubts as to the identity of the prisoner being the person who had hired the godown in question; but since that period he has refreshed his memory, and he is now certain that the prisoner was the person who had hired the godown in which the corpse was found.

Nursing, the durwan of another Baboo, who lived in the neighbourhood of the shop where the deceased's corpse was found, said he had seen a person very much like the prisoner in personal appearance, occupy the godown 10 or 15 days previous to the discovery of the corpse in it; and this deponent said that this is what he had sworn to in the Police Office.

D. McFarlane proved the depositions of Ameer Sing and the two last witnesses, were signed by them in his presence. After they had been explained to them, they were read. Ameer Sing in his deposition said, that he could not say what was the cause of his brother's death, and Ram Sing and Nur Sing's depositions showed that they could not recognize the prisoner as the person who had occupied the godown in question.

This closed the evidence for the prosecution.

The prisoner in his defence said he had left Calcutta long previous to the murder being committed, to endeavour to get service with Pertab Chund, who claimed the Raj of Burdwan; and if he had been implicated in a murder, he would not have staid in Chinsurah to be arrested. When he gave his examination at the Police, he had been intoxicated by the persons who had arrested him, and they urged him to make the confessions which he then did at the Police. He then called witnesses to prove an alibi in the case.

None of them, however, could tell where he was in March last, the month in which the murder was committed.

This closed the defence.

The Judge here briefly detailed the case, stating, that even the jury should be convinced that if he were a participator in this murder, they cannot find him guilty of a murder. The Judge remarked, that this case is singular, being the only one perhaps that ever came before them with so little of any evidence to prove his guilt, with the exception of his own voluntary confessions. He then stated that the statement he then made was made in a state of intoxication; and they must decide whether it is correct or not: the mere circumstance of the prisoner hiring the house is not in itself any satisfactory proof to fix the prisoner with the guilt. The Judge regreted that the Police had unnecessarily procrastinated the trial for two Sessions more than it was necessary for them to do, for as far as the evidences are concerned which were requisite to the investigation of the case, it was as complete in time for the February Sessions, as it is now; and this delay might be the means of enabling the other prisoners implicated in this murder to escape; and the deponents who were examined at the Police to amend their evidence; in one of which amendments made by Ameer Sing he is directly contradicted by Dr. Bain, who says that there were no marks on the neck of the kind this deponent has described. The confessions of the prisoner, if the Jury believe them to have been voluntarily and deliberately made, (and there is nothing in their nature to doubt them) there is no doubt thereby that if the prisoner was not a principal he at least was an accessory to the murder; for it appears by the confessions, that he was a passive spectator. Put the best construction on these confessions one possibly can, the hiring of the godown just the day before the murder, is a very suspicious circumstance; but it is not in itself conclusive, that the prisoner hired the godown with the intention of murdering the deceased: yet if the Jury believed that he did it for that purpose, it would only make him an accessory before the fact: it is not in itself fact conclusive of his being an accessory in the fact. The Judge then added, that if they believed these confessions, they must take them altogether or reject them altogether. With regard to the only portion of the property found, it has been in possession of Kurreem and not this prisoner. The Judge then quoted Lord Hall and Justice Fawcett's law on the criminal law, by which is laid down, that in order to make a man guilty of a felony he must be proved to have been an active participator in the crime; but if he was only a passive spectator and took no measures to prevent the commission of the crime, he is not a principal in the crime; and if the prisoner is not found guilty as a principal in the commission of this murder, then he is not guilty of murder and the jury cannot find him guilty on this indictment. If a person keeps watch to alarm the perpetrators of a murder whilst they are committing the crime, or if he stands forward to offer obstruction to any person attempting to prevent the murder, he in that case is a principal even though he might not have used actual violence in the perpetration of the crime, and there is nothing to show that the prisoner did any thing beyond being a passive spectator of the crime. The circumstance of the absconding from Calcutta shortly after the murder, is very suspicious; but the alarm of the consequence of even the slightest participation in this guilt, might be sufficient to induce the prisoner to run away from Calcutta. The Judge then left the Jury to decide whether they believed from the prisoner's confessions and the evidence taken in the case, that he was an actual participator in the murder, or whether he was only a passive spectator; telling them if they believed the former, they must then find him guilty on the present indictment, by which his life is affected; but if the latter, then they cannot but acquit the prisoner, who will, in that case, be tried on another indictment, the punishment of which, it found guilty, although it will not affect his life, will still be a very serious and a heavy sentence.

The Jury retired for a short time and brought in a verdict of guilty.

The Judge said it is usual in such cases to pass the sentence immediately on the prisoner; but by the statute of the law the judges have a discretionary latitude allowed them were they find cause for it, and the judge said in this case he thought there were grounds for postponing the sentence till he had consulted the other judges: not that he entertained the slightest doubt of the prisoner's guilt; but he did not wish to pass any sentence till he had made up his mind to carry it into execution; therefore, he postponed the sentence for the present. At the same time he told the prisoner that he had better not entertain any hopes of mercy, but make up his mind for the worst, and make his peace with his Maker.

E. Chinnery, who was convicted of Larceny on the 29th of July last, was brought up to-day to be sentenced. The judge said to the prisoner, that although the jury when they found him guilty of the larceny for which he was tried had recommended him to mercy on the supposition that the prisoner when he perpetrated the crime, had imagined that he was only committing a frolic; and as on account of his youth, the learned judge added, he was disposed to pay every regard to the recommendation of the jury, and not inclined to pass a severe sentence on the prisoner; for independent of the recommendation of the jury, his crime was not in itself one calling for a very severe punishment. Still it is not one that the judge can permit any person convicted of to escape unpunished; for if he were to do so, no shopkeeper's property would be safe. If the prisoner had committed the crime in a fit of intoxication, imagining it to be a frolic, and intended not to steal it as he has stated in his defence, why did he not when he became sober instantly return the articles with an apologizing letter either to Mr. Robinson or forward them to Captain Henderson, instead of disposing of them as he did. The judge regretted very much that there was no institution in this country similar to what existed in Britain and America, viz., of separate wards for the classification of prisoners of various grades, so as to keep apart the novices from the more hardened criminals; but that they are all in this country huddled together promiscuously; and thus the beginner in crime is brought in contact with all the contamination he may be liable to imbibe from the more practised felons. As the prisoner is a young man, who perhaps, as the judge hopes he does by this time, fully repents his—expressing it in its most palliating terms—foolish conduct, by which he has brought himself to this disgrace and with a view to enable him to keep clear of the contagion he has already alluded to in his speech and not to heap further disgrace on him by mixing him with the common felons in the jail, and likewise give him full leisure to reflect and amend his future conduct in life, so as effectually to efface the ignominy which this act of which he now stands convicted might attach to him—the Judge, under all the circumstances of the case, as above detailed, considered the most befitting punishment to inflict on the prisoner, was, that he be confined in solitary imprisonment for the space of three calendar months.

Joseph Bernado, who was indicted for stealing two bags of silver, valued at nearly 2,000 rupees, the property of a Persian merchant, from on board the ship Sir Edward Ryan, about 10 days ago, pleaded guilty of the charge.

The Judge warned the prisoner and told him, that if he pleaded guilty under the mistaken notion, that this circumstance would tend to mitigate his crime and his sentence, he was mistaken. After this admonition the prisoner persisted in pleading guilty. His statement was to this effect. That he is a native of the Lower Canadas and is a stranger in Calcutta. This is his first voyage to this port, and the ship from which he stole the silver was lying afloat in a dock, the name of which he does not know. She was afloat in the river close to the bank opposite to Calcutta. Prisoner has heard the place is called Howrah or Sulkea, or some such name, but he is not certain of the name of the place near which the ship was lying. The ship is styled the Sir Edward Ryan, and she was discharging cargo at the time when the prisoner, who was a seaman on board of her, stole these two bags of silver. This was the prisoner's own account of the theft. The prosecutor was then called and said, that the silver stolen was his property: it was not refined but gross silver in lumps. The value of the two bags might be about 2,000 rupees or thereabout. Prosecutor is a native of Sheraz, a city in Persia, and has come here for commercial purposes. He resides in Mogulpara in this city.

The Judge, after this confession of the prisoner, and the statement of the prosecutor were ended, told the prisoner and Mr. King, the jailor, that the prisoner may be remanded at present and he would afterwards consider what sentence to pass on him, and when he would come to a determination on that point he would have the prisoner called up again.

Doorbul was tried for stealing on the 12th. June 1837, several silver articles, Government Securities, &c. amounting in all to near 1,000 rupees, the property of Sunbath Dose, &c.

Sumbonath deposed, that the prisoner was a bearer in his service for nearly 3 months. On the morning of the 13th June last, whilst the prisoner was in this deponent's service, deponent missed his silver hooka bottom and other silver articles, a watch and Government papers, &c. &c.; they were the night previous locked in a box in the prosecutor's bed room.

In this stage of the proceedings the prisoner fainted away and fell, and Dr. Bain examined the prisoner and said that he had merely a fainting fit; and after he had drank a little water he could revive no doubt. Some water was then brought and given to him to drink, after which he revived and the trial proceeded.

The prosecutor then deposed, after the discovery of the theft, the prosecutor searched for the prisoner, but found that he had absconded; and about 8 days after this had occurred the prosecutor saw the prisoner at the Police office. Here the prosecutor details the property which he missed on the discovery of the theft. The bank-notes had been all cut, with the exception of one for 10 rupees, and the parts had been dispatched to deponent's Goomasta, and Moothoor Sircar, who resides in the interior provinces. The prosecutor's Sircar, Sumboo, keeps his books and entered the number of the notes, half of which were dispatched up the country. After the theft had been perpetrated the prosecutor wrote to Moothoor Sircar to return the $\frac{1}{2}$ notes which he had sent to him by dawk, because he could not in consequence of this theft, transmit to him the remaining halves of these notes, and Moothoor Sircar on receipt of this letter, returned those notes to him by dawk, and the prosecutor has them now in his possession. They were 10 notes of the Bank of Bengal of 50 rupees each. Subsequently, the prosecutor saw his property at the Police office, where he likewise observed the prisoner in custody.

Sumboo, sircar of the prosecutor, produced his books and proved that he had taken down the nos. of 10 Bank of Bengal notes, the halves of which his master dispatched to Moothur Sircar, his goomastah, on the 11th of June last. Here he read their nos. and said that their other halves had been stolen the next day.

Gungaram Boatman said, that he resides in the village of Oturparrah, in the zillah of Hooghly. On the day of the Oultah Ruth Jattrah, deponent observed the prisoner handling some silver articles in a bush behind deponent's hut. Deponent asked him what he was doing, and the prisoner rebuked him gruffly and said, "What is that to you," and asked this deponent to shew him the mainroad. Deponent then under pretence of pointing out the road to him, took him to the stand of Moonboob Khan, police peon, and stated to him what he had observed in the prisoner's conduct. Moonboob Khan then arrested the prisoner, and sent him to the darogah of Buddaputtee thanah, who, after he had examined the silver articles found on the prisoner, and not being satisfied by the prisoner's replies that he had come by them lawfully, forwarded him to the Magistrate's Kutchery at Hooghly, who afterwards sent the prisoner and this deponent to Calcutta.

Moonboob Khan deposed, in corroboration of the last witness's evidence, regarding his arresting the prisoner and taking him to the darogah, who forwarded him to Hooghly and his being eventually sent down in charge of Ram Roy, a police peon of the Hooghly Police Office, to Calcutta. Deponent did examine the silver articles found on the prisoner, and if they were produced before him he could recognize them again.

Ram Roy, police peon, of Zilla Hooghly, deposed to his bringing down the prisoner and several silver articles and notes, &c., in a box by the order of the Magistrate of the Zillah Hooghly, to the police office at Calcutta, where he delivered the prisoner and the articles, in conformity to the instructions he had received from the Magistrate, to Mr. J. J. McCann, the Deputy Superintendent of the Calcutta Police.

Mr. J. J. McCann produced these articles, and Moonboob recognized them to be the articles he had found on the prisoner, and Sumbonath on being recalled said, that they were articles which were stolen from his house on the night of the 12th June last. The stolen notes were here produced, and on examination their nos. corresponded with the nos. stated by the prosecutor's sircar Sumboo, and likewise with the duplicate notes which were returned to the prosecutor from the Mofussil.

C. K. Robinson, Magistrate of the Police Office, produced the examination of the prisoner, written by this deponent, who at the time he took it, warned him.

Doorbul's examination read.—He said that he is a stranger in Calcutta, and he did not know how to steal; another servant of the Baboo gave the articles to him. The rest of the examination was but confirmatory of the evidence of Gungaram and Moonboob, with this exception that he charged Moonboob with opening the box and taking 6 rupees from him after beating him. In his defence the prisoner further added, that he was ordered by a fellow servant to take these articles to the Baboo's house, at the village of Kuneeteah, where the Baboo would shortly after follow him; and whilst he was proceeding there he was arrested by Moonboob and sent to the thana, from whence he was taken to Hooghly, and afterwards forwarded to the Police at Calcutta. He denied that he ever contemplated stealing these articles found on him.

The Judge briefly charged the Jury, detailing the particulars of the evidence and desiring them to divest their minds from considering the half notes as property, for the prisoner could not in the state they were at the time he stole them, convert them into cash but independent of this, the watch and the other silver articles were in themselves of more value than 50 sa. rs., and if the Jury believed the evidence they could not but find him guilty. The Jury without retiring, found the prisoner guilty, and the prisoner was sentenced to 14 years' transportation to the S. E. Coast of Martaban. The Judge remarked, that from the increased number of cases of persons robbing their masters, which he was sorry to find had been brought before him this session, he could not pass a milder sentence on the prisoner; for he wished the severity of the punishment to act as a detriment to the repetition of a crime which he regretted to state, was greatly tending to the increase in his city.—*Hurk. —
AUGUST 3, 1837,

(Before Sir B. Malkin, Knt.)

Ram Saha Sing, was tried for burglariously entering the house of Goluk Chunder Mookerjee and Gobind Chunder Mookerjee, at Soobah Bazar, on the 4th of July last, and stealing therefrom several bank notes, and other sundry articles; and Luckymony, Moodoosoodoon Chunder, and Ramssoonder Pyne, with being participators in the above crime, by aiding and receiving portions of the said goods knowing them to be stolen property.

The prisoners all pleaded not guilty.

Goluk Chunder Mookerjee deposed,—that he is banian by profession, and resides at Soobah bazar. Prosecutor's son's name is Gobind Chunder Mookerjee, and he carries on his business separately. Prosecutor recollects that on the 4th of July, his house was broken open and he was robbed: prosecutor, early on the 5th July heard of the robbery from his servants. This information induced the prosecutor to search his house, and he then discovered that it had been entered through a hole in his wall, which hole some person must have made, during the night previous, from the compound of the empty house adjoining this wall. Prosecutor likewise found the padlock of his sitting room upstairs forced open, and one box of the 3 which were placed there during the previous night had been stolen; that box contained his papers and cash: he likewise missed various other articles, among which was a Bank of Bengal note the property of the prosecutor's son. (Here the deponent detailed the property which he missed from the room.) The box which had been abstracted from the room was subsequently found by the thanadar of the division, in one of the rooms of the adjoining house and brought to this prosecutor by him. The box, was open when brought to him, and it had been rifled of all that the robbers could possibly convert into money; but other papers, such as promissory notes, bills, vouchers, &c., which could not have been converted into cash without detection, were left in the box. Prosecutor afterwards saw some portion of the stolen property at the Police Office. All the other property with the exception of this note of 500 rs. belonged to the prosecutor. After this witness's deposition was over, the Judge felt himself unwell and retired for a short time.

Gobind Chunder Mookerjee deposed, that he is the son of the prosecutor; his business consists in lending money on security, and deponent's money transactions are separate from his father's. The Bank of Bengal note which was stolen from the prosecutor's house, was this deponent's property. He recollects the No. of the note; he had a memorandum of it in his books. The No. was 15,585, and it was a note for sa. rs. 500. Deponent had it advertised in the papers, and he subsequently received a letter from the Secretary of the Bank, informing him of the presentation of this note at the Bank. This note is in the charge of the Police authorities. E. J. Mence, constable, produced the notification of the bank. Deponent received it on the 8th July last from Mr. McCa. Deponent pasted the paper on the back. The writing on the back is in this deponent's hand writing. Deponent, when he received this notification from Mr. McCa, likewise received orders to trace back the Bank of Bengal note No. 15,585 for sicca rupees and by the information of a person named Bustomchurnker, deponent traced it to the prisoner Ram Saha, whom he eventually saw on the night of the 8th of July. He was sent, in the custody of a peon of the Police, by Mr. McCa, with a letter of instructions. On being questioned, Ram Saha said he got the notes from Moodoo and Ram Chund at Baboo Coomah's Bazar. Deponent accompanied the prisoner to a shop in that bazar, but not finding them there, was proceeding towards their house when the prisoner was pointed out by the prisoner Ramchund Pyne, as the partner of Moodoo, and the person from whom he had received the note in question. Ram Chund Pyne denied all knowledge of this note, and though he at first said his name was Moodoo, afterwards admitted it to be Ramchund Pyne. Deponent afterwards went to search for Moodoo; when he arrived there, the peon who accompanied him perceived the female prisoner and seized her as she was in the act of running away with a box which this deponent produced in Court. Deponent had the box opened and perceived in it a Bengallee letter and a Bank Note of 100 rs. Deponent then asked her from whence she got this box, and she said she got it from her son. She was in the act of throwing it into the well when the peon apprehended her. This deponent stated this on the information of the peon, for it was too dark for him to perceive what she was about. On further search deponent found a private door of the inner apartments open and the prisoner Moodoo Soodoon, it appears, had escaped from the door. Deponent found a key there. The prisoner Moodoo Soodoon afterwards voluntarily delivered himself up to the Police. Deponent subsequently went again to search the house, and saw a large backed trunk, and by Mr. McCa's orders he had it removed to the Police, where its contents were examined, and the prosecutor who was present at the Police when this trunk was searched recognized a small brass cup, now produced by the deponent in the Court, to be a portion of the property stolen from his house by its having A B marked on it. This witness wished to depose to something further relating this enquiry, but the Judge told him that the witnesses to that transaction would prove that fact, this deponent was only to answer the questions that the Judge may put to him. This deponent further deposed, that by inquiries at the bazar and by inspection of the 2 last male prisoner's books and papers, it appeared that they were the persons who occupied the shop which Ram Saha pointed out to him.

Badoo Churn Kur, deposed, that he knew the prisoner Ram Saha. The prisoner brought a Bengal bank note of sicca-rupees 500, and put it into the hands of this deponent, in the name Nubboo Komar Law deponent's gomastah. Sadoo Churn Law took that note to the shop of Lall Mohon, a money changer in the bazar, and had it changed. Sadoo Churn brought from Lall Mohon's shop 3 notes of 100 rs. each, 2 of 50 rupees each; and after deducting the brokerage, the balance in silver, and gave the money to Ram Saha, who on that occasion accommodated him with a loan of 100 rupees; those 100 rupees deponent has paid at the Police office. Deponent does not know the Nos. of these notes, they were written by the deponent's sircar Nubboo in the day book. Nubboo is not in Court because he has not received a subpoena. Ram Saha endorsed the note in deponent's presence.

Sadoo Churn Law deposed. He is the servant of the last witness, and recollects the deponent came to his master's shop on the 23d Assaur, with a note of 500 rupees, soliciting change for it; and deponent, after Ram Saha had endorsed the note, took the note to the shop of Lall Mohon, money changer, and had the note changed. Deponent received 5 Bank of Bengal notes to the amount of 400 rupees and the balance in silver. This deponent gave the notes and money to his master who gave the notes to Ram Saha and kept 100 Company's rupees as a loan from Ram Saha. Deponent does not recollect the nos. of any of the notes; they were entered in a book kept by Nubboo sircar.

Ragoonath Day, deposed. He is the nephew of Lall Mohon Podaf and assists him in his business, and knows Sadoo Churn. Deponent recollects that Sadoo Churn gave him, on the 23d Assaur last, a note and deponent gave the change from his uncle's shop at the Burrah Bazar and gave Sadoo 400 rupees in notes and 100 Company's rs. in cash. The gomastah, Puddoo Lochun, made entries of the notes Sadoo Churn gave of 500 rupees, and likewise of the notes he received in exchange. This man is not in Court to-day because he is sick. The entries were made in this deponent's presence, but deponent did not compare these entries. The note of 500 sicca rupees had an endorsement on it when it was given to this deponent to be changed. The gomastah resides at Joorah Sanko, a considerable distance from the Court house: he is affected with sore eyes.

Sadoo Churn recalled. Deponent saw the entries of the nos. of the notes made by Nubboo Coomar; but deponent did not compare them. Nubboo lives at Joorah Sanko, a considerable distance from this place.

Bustom Churn recalled. The notes were put into deponent's hands; deponent read the nos. of the notes and Nubboo Coomar the entries he had made and found them to be correct. After this the deponent read the entries of the notes. That of 500 sicca rupees, was a Bank of Bengal Note No. 15,585, corresponding with the No. stolen from the prosecutor's house. Deponent likewise read the nos. of the 5 notes given in exchange.

Ruggoonath Day, recalled. One of these notes, of 50 rupees, which was given in exchange for the 500 rupees note, was subsequently brought back to the deponent's uncle's shop and exchanged for cash.

Lokacanth Day deposed. He is a money changer, and Ram Chund Pyne is likewise a money changer, and exchanges pice for rupees. Deponent recollects one day Ram Chund Pyne accompanied by a boy came to deponent's shop and brought 3 notes, 2 of 100 rupees each and one of 50 rupees, to be changed for silver. Deponent gave him the money in exchange for these notes he had received from him. Deponent's brother made the entries of these notes, and deponent compared them—(here this deponent read these entries and they corresponded with the nos. Lall Mohon had paid to Ram Saha when he changed the 500 rupees note for him.)

R. Habberly deposed, that he has the 500 rupees note in his custody; he received it from Roopchand Seth, a sircar of the Bank of Bengal.

Bustomchurn recalled. Deponent pointed out the endorsement of Ram Saha on the note, and read it: he said that he had formerly known Ram Saha and can recognize his signature. Ram Saha was the superintendent of a bazar belonging to a rich baboo.

Goluk Chunder Mokerjee, recalled, recognizes the key and the brass cup and the letter to be portions of the property stolen from his house. Deponent knows the cup because there is A B marked on it. This closed the prosecution.

The prisoner Ram Saha, in his defence, said, that one day as he was going to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut Bustomchurn met him and asked him for the loan of 100 rs. This prisoner replied that he had to receive 100 rs. from Moodooosoodoon; as soon as Moodoo would pay him he would accommodate him with the loan. After this prisoner went to Moodoo's shop and demanded from him the payment of the 100 rs. he owed to him. Moodoo desired the prisoner to wait a short time till his partner Ramchand Pyne returned from the Bank of Bengal where he had gone for some cash. This prisoner waited there, until Ramchand Pyne returned: Moodoo then took from Ramchand Pyne a Bengal Bank Note of 500 rs, and desired him to get it exchanged and pay himself the 100 rs. and return him the balance of the note after he had got it exchanged. This prisoner then went to Bustomchurn's shop and got the note changed, and after lending the 100 rs. to Bustomchurn gave the balance to Moodooosoodoon, who shortly afterwards came to this prisoner and brought him one of the notes of 50 rupees, and requested him to get it changed and pay himself the balance due to him, on account of the interest of the loan which he had just paid, and requested to have his bond returned to him. The prisoner then went to Lall Mohon's shop, had the note changed, and after deducting the amount of the interest paid him the balance. Next day, whilst he was going to the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, a Police peon informed him that Mr. McCaa wished to see him at the Police office; and when this prisoner heard this he went to the Police.

Moodooosoodoon, and the female prisoner, who are mother and son, in their defence said, that they are not worth 50 rupees, were never worth that sum in their lives, and if Ram Saha had received a note from any of them, he, as a man of business, would have taken their endorsement on the note. On the contrary they said, that Ram Saha called on them and requested change for the note of 100 rupees. They said they had not so much cash by them in the house, and advised Ram Saha to go and get the note changed elsewhere; but he endorsed the note and left it with them, saying that he required the money urgently during the night, and begged of them to oblige him by procuring the silver for him. Moodooosoodoon then took the note and as he was eating his victuals, he desired his mother to go out and bring the silver, and whilst she was going there she was arrested with the note in her hand by the Police authorities.

Ramchand Pyne was not put on his defence.

Ram Saha called five witnesses, and Moodooosoodoon and his mother five witnesses.

Poorloo, Ram Saha's witness, deposed.—That he is a confectioner, and knows Ram Saha: he was a servant of Baboo Obeychurn, employed in transcribing some papers for the baboo. Ram Saha and Moodooosoodoon were once standing together, and Moodooosoodoon put a green piece of paper into Ram Saha's hand; it was on the 25th of Sraobon (a date not yet arrived) about a month ago. What the nature of this paper was deponent cannot say for he did not examine it.

Gunga Deen, a prisoner in the jail, who was lately acquitted on a charge of felony, deposed, that one evening whilst deponent was in the jail, deponent went before the light and got some parched rice, he then overheard the prisoner Ram Saha say to the prisoner Moodooosoodoon, "why do you not acknowledge candidly that you gave me the note of 500 rupees, for which we are committed, and Moodoo replied, "Do not fear I will acknowledge it in Court, there is nothing to fear: the note was a genuine one and I got it honestly."

No other witnesses of Ram Saha answered to their subpoena.

A witness of Moodooosoodoon and his mother said, he knows Ram Saha and Moodooosoodoon. One day in the month of Assaur, Ram Saha called on Moodoo and requested him to go and get a note of 100 Rs. changed for him. The rest of this witness's depositions corresponds with the statement given by Moodooosoodoon and his mother regarding this transaction.

This closed the defence.

The Judge said, that as all that could possibly be proved from the evidence in this case against Ramchand Pyne is, that he had received a portion of the produce of the stolen property, but as there is no proof of any stolen property being found on them, he therefore may hereafter be tried on another charge; but certainly he could not be brought in guilty on the present charge, and thus is the reason the Judge did not put him on his defence. The female prisoner likewise stands in this predicament, with the single exception of a piece of paper of no value, and a key being found on her: this induced the Judge to make the distinction between her and Ramchand Pyne, and put her on her defence. With regard to Moodooosoodoon, he is in the same position as the female prisoner, no property being proved to have been in his possession unless the jury believes the unsupported recrimination of the principal prisoner; and unless the jury believed the suspicious evidence of Guzadeen, he cannot be found guilty of the present charge, though they may be indicted on another charge of sharing in the profits of stolen property knowing it to be stolen. Ram Saha is the only person against whom there is any direct evidence of any stolen property being found on him, and even in his case there is no direct evidence that the house was burglariously entered in the night; for although there is a probability that the house was so entered and robbed, yet as the robbery was not discovered till late in the morning, it is not impossible that the robbery might have been committed in the day time; and even if the jury found him guilty of this crime, it would be in itself a very high felony, though he hopes not so very heinous a crime as that with which the first count of the indictment charges him. One more favorable circumstance is, that there is no proof to show Ram Saha or Moodosoodoon might not have received this note of 500 Sa. Rs. from some other person; and Ram Saha not refusing to endorse the note is another favorable construction for him, as it showed that he did not seek to conceal his having changed this note. And there is still another favorable circumstance in his favor, that if the other prisoner were not concerned in the theft, what inducement could Ram Saha have to give her a share of the plunder, and his having so openly gone to get the note changed and his going voluntarily at once and surrendering himself to the police, might make the jury perhaps imagine that he might have received the note as he described, from another person, to have it changed, without any knowledge of its being stolen property on his part. There was another suspicious circumstance against the female prisoner, that is if it were proved by the evidence of the peon, who Mr. Meenie, the constable, deposed had informed him that the old woman was endeavouring to shun and escape them, and attempting to throw a note of a hundred rupees into a well. A key or a small brass cup are not articles in themselves of that intrinsic value to lead to the supposition, that the three last prisoners could not honestly come by them, unless the circumstance of the letters found in their house to the address of the prosecutor may make them imagine that these 2 articles are part of the property stolen from the prosecutor's house; otherwise the articles are common enough in the bazar. But a note of 100 Rs., perhaps, it may be inferred that persons in the circumstances of the 3 last prisoners could not honestly become possessed of. Whatever may be their verdict, the Judge in conclusion said that they could only find the 1st prisoner guilty, if they convicted any of them, and him only on the second count of the evidence before them, viz., of stealing in a dwelling house property above the value of Sa. Rs. 50. After this the Judge left the case in the hands of the Jury.

The Jury retired, and after half an hour, gave a verdict of not guilty against all the 4 prisoners.

The Judge said that he entirely concurred with the finding of the Jury, for they could not come to any other decision on the present indictment; but he remarked to the prisoners, that their conduct, as proved in the evidence in this case, was not totally free from all suspicion and he advised them to be more cautious and circumspect in their conduct, otherwise they may not escape so easily a second time.

Gopal, cooper, who was found guilty of stealing some coals from the godown of Mr. W. Turner, was sentenced to the House of Correction for one year.

Respecting James Bernado, who pleaded guilty on the 2d instant, of stealing two bags of silver from the ship Sir Edward Ryan, on the 12th instant, valued at nearly 2,000 rupees, the property of a Persian merchant, the judge said that if the indictment against this prisoner had been framed for the greater offence to which he has pleaded guilty, and if the judge chose to pass the heaviest sentence the law admitted of in his country, he would have been transported for life; but still the theft was great and on mature consideration he could not pass a lighter sentence than of 2 years' imprisonment in the House of Correction with hard labor.

Burao, who was found guilty on the 2d count of his indictment for stealing several articles of jewellery from the person of Gopee Raur, the judge, after commenting on the enormity of the offence he had committed said, he regretted to say that he could not inflict a lesser sentence than of 14 years' transportation to the S. E. Coast of Martaban.

AUGUST 4, 1837.

(Before Sir B. Malkin, Knt.)

Hurrischunder and Shewhurn were tried for having cut with a knife the throat of a female named Radha Bebee on the 9th February 1837, thereby causing her death and then plundering her property from her house at Churuckdangah in the city of Calcutta.

The prisoners pleaded not guilty.

Ram Kuniah Doss deposed, — that he and his brother Kistoochunder Doss are the joint proprietors of a house in Churuckdangah; it was occupied by a female named Radha Munnee Dosses in the month of January last. Deponent always heard her called Radha Munnee and never Radha only. She hired the house of this deponent on the 20th day of Pous last. She had lived in that house formerly. Previous to this last occupation of it by her the house was rented by one Sumbboo Baboo who lived in it with her for 3½ months. The former compact to rent the house was contracted on the 21st of Bhadoo last. On the first occasion Sumbboo gave the agreement for the hire of the house, on the latter occasion Radha Munnee hired it in her own name. During the last occupation of it by Radha Munnee this deponent kept a cow in the house, and a servant of his tended it.

Halee Ram deposed, that he is the servant of the last deponent. His master has a house in Churuckdangah which was occupied in Pous last by a female named Bebee Radha Munnee. His master kept a cow there during the occupation, and deponent used to go and tend it by his master's orders. Radha Munnee is dead. Deponent heard of her demise the day succeeding the night in which it had occurred. Deponent went early to give the cow her food, and called out at the door to the doorkeeper to open the door, and one of the deceased's servants, when they heard his voice, opened the door, and the two prisoners who were likewise the servants of the deceased, were there sleeping at the time. The deponent conjectures as the deceased had only 3 servants, viz. the one who opened the door, and these 2 prisoners, that the 2 sleeping were the 2 prisoners at the bar; but he cannot say to a certainty, because they were sleeping with their faces covered, and the deponent did not uncover their faces. In what capacity the 2 prisoners were employed, deponent cannot tell: all that he knows is that they lived in the deceased's house and were in her service. Hurrischunder was generally seen to enter the deceased's house before mid-day. Deponent only went to the house in the day time to feed the cow. Deponent never slept there. Deponent on that day after feeding the cow returned home as usual. Deponent did not see any other persons in the house except the person who opened the door and the 2 men who were sleeping at that time. It was on that very day deponent heard of the death of Bebee Radha Munnee.

Zuhoroddeen, Naib of the Churuckdangah thana, deposed, that deponent knows the house of Kam Kunial Doss and his brother at Churuckdangah; it was occupied in the month of Magh last by a female named Radha Bebee. She has died since that period. Deponent was first informed of her demise by the prisoner Hurrishunder. On Thursday the 20th of the month of Magh last, Hurrishunder came to the Churuckdangah thana at about the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. with some provisions in his hands, and said to this deponent that he used to take his meals at the house of Radha Bebee; but that he had discontinued doing so on the day previous. He added, that he had gone on that day to see her as usual, and when he had arrived at her house, although he demanded entrance, nobody came to the door to open it, and the door was locked on the outside, which was a suspicious circumstance; he therefore requested deponent to go with to her house and open it. Deponent asked Hurrishunder how many persons lived in the house; he replied 4, besides Radha Bebee. Deponent then desired him to go back to the house and demand entrance, and if nobody answered to the call, then to call the neighbours; and as he lived in the house, if he suspected any harm, to call the neighbours and open the door in their presence. After this advice had been given to Hurrishunder, he went away, and shortly afterwards he came half running and much agitated to the thana and said, that when he had arrived a second time at the house he had found the door open and on going in he found the house empty, and in the room where Radha Bebee usually slept he had discovered her body lying on the bed bathed in blood with the throat cut. When deponent heard this information, he hastily accompanied Hurrishunder to the house of the deceased, and on entering and searching it he discovered her lifeless corpse lying on the bed. On a further search deponent discovered a sheathed sword and a blunt scythe in another room; but there were no marks of blood on either of them. Deponent subsequently went back to the house and took the sword and scythe and gave them to the thanada, who delivered them to Mr. J. J. McCann at the Police office.

Hurrishunder said, that his suspicion had been excited, because when he came to the door he perceived it was locked with a padlock on the outside, a very unusual circumstance, therefore he went to the thana and gave the alarm. The body was subsequently examined by Dr. Bain. Deponent did not see the prisoner Hurrishunder when he returned the first time from the thana to the house. He found him there afterwards.

Sheerout Ollah, peon of the Churuckdangah thana, deposed, that he knew the house in which Radha Bebee lived at Churuckdangah. Deponent recollects having heard of her death. The night previous to the day on which he heard of her deceased, deponent passed before her door four times as usual on his rounds. Deponent called on four occasions to the durwan, who replied on the two first occasions; but on the third, although repeatedly called he obtained no reply. On the fourth occasion the durwan replied as usual. There are an inner and an outer compound to the house, and the house is in the inner compound; therefore, even if there had been any singing in the house deponent could not have heard it on account of the distance. The next day at about the hour of seven o'clock in the morning, as deponent passed by the house in his way to the thana, he perceived a durwan putting a padlock on the gate and Sheochurn standing behind him. Deponent had no conversation with either of them at that time. Deponent knows the prisoner Hurrishunder, he used to pass through the lane where Radha Bebee lived; but he never saw either him or any Mogul go into that house. Whilst the deceased occupied that house, deponent once saw her walking on the terrace of her house as he was passing through the lane. Deponent heard from the naib of the thana that her name was Radha Bebee. Deponent saw her corpse at about two o'clock, p. m. on Thursday the 28th March last. From the appearance of the corpse, the deceased must have met her death the night previous.

Re-examined by the Surg. When deponent perceived the two men locking the gate at seven o'clock, on the morning of the day, on which deponent heard of Radha Bebee's demise, deponent asked them why they were locking the door on the outside, and they replied that Radha Bebee had gone out to a Baboo's house and they intended, after they had locked up the door, to go to her. The man who was locking up the gate had a black blanket with something hid under his arm.

R. H. Bain, Police Surgeon, deposed. He saw at Churuckdangah, on the 10th February last, the corpse of a female who he heard was named Radha Bebee. Deponent saw a very extensive wound measuring 8 inches in length in the neck, which had discovered the wind-pipe and the gullet and the other arteries. There was a considerable quantity of coagulated blood by the body. There were the marks of a bloody hand on the deceased's thighs, and the fingers of the deceased were stained with blood. Deponent assigns her death to these wounds, as they were of a nature calculated to cause death instantaneously.

Gulam Hossain, says he is a driver of a hired Pal-keegurree, and the stand of his vehicle is at Ghurran-hutta near Churuckdangah. Deponent recognizes both the prisoners at the bar. Deponent recollects the prisoners hiring the carriage: it was hired by the prisoner Hurrishunder. The deponent saw the two prisoners get into the vehicle, and after he got upon the box to drive two more mounted, but deponent did not see them. When deponent came from his house to the stand he found them there. The deponent did not see any thing in their possession, and they hired the vehicle at about eight o'clock, A. M. Deponent was examined regarding the affair at the Police office; and it occurred about a month or a month and half before this examination. Deponent does not recollect whether they hired the vehicle on the festival of the Bussunth Puhcamee. The prisoners alighted on the public road or Balliaghata. Deponent has pointed out the place where they alighted to the police authorities.

Soopul Sing deposed.—Is a door keeper to Mea Ger-gah Hossain, and was in his employ 6 months previously. His master resides at Putthurgutta, in the city of Calcutta. Deponent knows the prisoner Shewburn, and remembers that he came one evening at 6 o'clock p. m., and woke deponent, and after sitting with him on a churpoy and smoking a chillum with him, he requested permission to sleep there that night. Deponent observed a black blanket under his arm, and 8 or 10 gold choories or female native armlets in the blanket. When deponent saw this he asked him from whence he had obtained them, and he replied that Sumboo Baboo had made him a present of them. He slept there that night, and next morning he went away early at gunfire. Sumboo Baboo is the son of Madub Baboo, in whose service Shewburn was at the time. Shewburn had come down as a servant with Sumboo Baboo from Chuprah; but whether he was employed in the service of the female Sumboo Baboo had brought down with him from Chuprah or in the Baboo's personal service, deponent did not know. Shewburn never was advised by this deponent. In the course of conversation the prisoner said, Sumboo Baboo had directed him to quit Calcutta, in company with some men who were returning to Chuprah.

Ramdeen, Jemader of the Police Town Guard, deposed, that he had orders from the police to arrest Shewhurn. Deponent went across the river to Sulkea, and proceeded towards Chuprah. After deponent had made seven stages, deponent arrested Shewhurn, at the village of Chutteeah near Hazariebag. The prisoner was sitting at the time on the banks of a stream after drinking water. Deponent finding his countenance to correspond with the description furnished to this deponent at the time he proceeded on the search for the prisoner, deponent asked him what his name was, and he replied Shewhurn. Deponent then arrested him and searched his person, and found on him one blanket and in it a bag, in which were ten gold female bangles and 22 rupees. Deponent then took him in custody to the village thana, and had him there searched, when 60 rupees more were discovered in his possession. Deponent wrapped the property up in the blanket, and sealed it with a piece of wax of a seal, and brought the prisoner and the articles found on him, to the Police Office at Calcutta, and delivered him and the articles over to Mr. McCan, the Deputy Superintendent of Police. On the night on which the prisoner was arrested, deponent took his departure with an intention to return to Calcutta at 12 o'clock, and deponent, on the road, asked the prisoner from whence he got these articles, and the prisoner replied, that Hurrishchunder Mitter gave them to him. On another occasion on being asked what direction the other two persons who had absconded with him had taken, he replied they had proceeded towards Sylhet. Beyond this he communicated nothing, adding that he would speak fuller before the magistrates at the Police Office. Deponent never, when he arrested the prisoner, said to him that Sumboo Baboo had desired the prisoner not to mention his name; in fact the prisoner had never spoken to Sumboo Baboo on the subject.

Mr. J. J. McCan produced the 10 choories and the 89 rs. in Court and deposed that he received them, sealed, from the last witness at the police office; they were opened by the Grand Jury, he further produced the sword which was found in the deceased's house.

Rajhchunder Bonerjea deposed.—He earns his livelihood. He was lately employed as a gomasta in the Opium Department at Chuprah. Sumboochunder Bonerjea was the Shristadar there. Deponent left Chuprah last Assauree with Sumboo, and arrived here in Mrahoun. A female of the name of Radha Beebee, came down with us; prior to this, she was for three years under the deponent's protection. She came down as the mistress of Sumboo Baboo. Deponent knew her ornaments, she had a variety of ornaments. Deponent does not know whether Sumboo Baboo gave her any ornaments. Deponent had some made up for her. She had some old golden ornaments melted down in Calcutta, and new bangles made in Calcutta by a goldsmith named Soorooop. If deponent were to see them he could recognize them. Looks at the choorees Mr. McCan had produced, and says these resemble those which she had made for her in Calcutta. The deceased's property and valuables were chiefly in jewels; she had not much ready money by her. Sumboo is a kinsman of the deponent.

Soorooop, silver and gold Smith, deposed.—That he made for the last deponent 10 gold choorees from the melting of some old ornaments. Looks at the choorees produced in the Court, and says that they resemble those he had made. Deponent cannot positively say whether these are them; if these were not bent as they are, deponent could better recognize them. Those the deponent made weighed 12 rs. 2 annas and 6 pie. Those in the Court were weighed by a police jemader; deponent has not brought his weights with him into Court.

Ram Pertab Sing deposed, he knows Rajah Chunder Bonerjea. Deponent was for 3 years in his service. Radha Beebee was for some time under Rajchunder Bonerjea's protection. Sumboo Chunder was likewise at Chuprah. Rajchunder and Sumboo Baboo and Radha Beebee, come down together to Calcutta. She lived here in a house at Churuckdangah; deponent was her durwan for 3 months. Rajchunder Baboo used to visit her, and Sumboo Baboo occasionally. After two months, deponent quitted his house, and after ten days deponent came for some business to Sumboo Baboo, who offered to give him shortly an employment in his native country. After this conversation, deponent went and got his wages from his former employer, and went and lived in the house of Radha Beebee at Churuckdanga. She had three other persons viz. the two prisoners who used to sing and play before her on musical instruments, and a durwan named Keeneah Roy, all living in the house. They slept there at night. Deponent on his 2d sojourn at the deceased's house, remained there 28 days from the 14th Pous last. On the 10th of Maugh, on a Sunday, Hurrishchunder Mitter took 8 rs from the deceased and gave to this deponent, and discharged him and desired him to seek other quarters. Deponent saw Hurrishchunder only once at Chuprah when deponent quitted the deceased's house the second time. The deceased and the two prisoners, and the Rajpoot durwan, Banniah Raj, remained in the house. Deponent had seen choorees like those produced in Court 5 on each of the deceased hands, deponent cannot say if these are them. Those on the deceased's hands were made by Soorooop, goldsmith, by the order of Rajchunder Baboo. The deceased, besides her jewels and furniture, was not a married woman. Shewhurn came to Calcutta with Obeychurn Baboo from Chuprah, together with Sumboo Baboo and others; but subsequently quitted his service on account of indisposition.

Rajchunder Bonerjea, recalled.—Deponent had seen Hurrishchunder Mitter at Chuprah, and had likewise seen him occasionally at Radha Beebee's house in Calcutta; but deponent cannot say whether he lived there or not. Deponent cannot say what was his profession in Calcutta, or how he obtained his livelihood here.

D. McFarlan Chief Magistrate, deposed.—That he took the examination of the prisoner Shewhurn. Deponent cannot say without looking at the papers whether the examinations were more than one; but on looking over the examinations says, that they were taken three times. Deponent warned the prisoner not to say any thing that may criminate him and explained the depositions to him; and Mr. Grant likewise explained them to him. The man was perfectly sober and sensible at the time he made these statements, and no threats nor inducements were held out to him to make the statement he did at each time. Looks at these examinations and says they are the same. Mr. Grant confirmed this statement of Mr. McFarlan.

Shewhurn's examination read, 28th July, 1837.—This prisoner was apprehended by Ram Deen at Akwalla Gully. 10 gold choorees which were found on him, were given to him by Hurrishchunder, the servant of Sumboo Baboo, the son of Madab Baboo. They were the ornaments of Radha Beebee, the deceased. The rupees were given to this prisoner by Sumboo Baboo. Radha Beebee was one night singing and drinking in Company with Hurrishchunder, and a Mogul merchant and Sumboo were applauding and joining in the chorus. They during that night cut her throat. What induced them to commit this rash act this prisoner cannot conjecture. When it was late in the night, this prisoner retired to sleep. The Baboo and the Mogul went out early in the morning. When the prisoner awoke next morning, Hurrischunder said to him, that Rhada Beebe had cut her own throat: the other servants doubted this statement. When Hurrischunder went out the other servants of Rhada Beebe consulted, and gave intimation to Holem Roy, the servant of the landlord. When Hurrischunder returned in company with the Mogul Merchant, this prisoner informed him that he had informed the landlord's servant of the murder. On hearing this the Mogul abused them for what they had done, and questioned them why they had acted so very foolishly; for he would have cut the corpse of the deceased into pieces, and put her into a box and cast the box into the river. Afterwards Hurrischunder took this prisoner in a kirachy to Sumboo Baboo's house, where Hurrischunder gave him the 10 choories and Sumboo Baboo the 82 rupees, and told him to go to his house for three months, and live on the products of these rupees and the ornaments. After this the prisoner went to Sheo Sing, the servant of Gorgeb. Beramohun and Dhumereah got the same propositions from Sumboo Baboo. Gour Mohun is Sumboo Baboo's brother-in-law. On the day this prisoner got the rupees from Sumboo Baboo, he came in a buggy with a boy and he spoke to Gour Baboo's sister who took charge of this prisoner. Dhumereah was Rhada's durwan and Bugamohun was her servant. Hurrischunder also kept Rhada Beebe's keys, and after her death he took possession of her property. Rhada Beebe lived in Hullahporah, in Churuckdangah, near the opium godown. The man in whose palkeegaree Hurrischunder took this prisoner and the other servants to Gour Baboo's house at Entally, was named Golan Hossain. Rhada Beebe was a married woman; she had lent Sumboo Baboo 5,000 rupees in Calcutta, and held his acceptance of 10,000 rupees. When she came down to Calcutta she brought her property with her. She wanted the money she had lent to Sumboo Baboo from him, and wished to return to her native country. Sumboo Baboo wished to dissuade her from doing so. This prisoner cannot say whether the 82 rupees Sumboo Baboo gave him were his money, or the plunder of Rhada Beebe's property, nor can deponent say what could have induced them to murder her. Prisoner was asleep when the Mogul and Sumboo Baboo returned home, and when the murder was committed. Hurrischunder, when he took the prisoner and the other servants of Rhada Beebe to Gour Baboo's house, took three knives with him. Deponent on the night which he spent at Sheo Sing's house, consulted him about this affair. He advised him to fly from Calcutta to his native country, and he was proceeding there when he was arrested and brought back. He is innocent of this murder.

Koongh Napit and Juggernath Roy, door-keepers of Gour Mohon Baboo, deposed.—That in the months of Maugh, during the Sursuttee Poojah, Gour baboo had for one month gone to his talook, and there was no female left in Gour Baboo's house. Deponents never saw either of the two prisoners come to Gour Baboo's house in Maugh last; if any body had come they would have seen him.

Sumboo Chunder Baboo, deposed, that Rhada Beebe came down from Chuprah with him in Shrabon last. She was under his protection for two months, and resided in Churuckdangah. After he discharged her from her service, he made her a present of 100 rupees. During the time the deceased was in this deponent's possession he paid her servants; after he discharged her he never visited her nor knew any thing about her private affairs. He has heard of her being murdered in her house at Churuckdangah. The sword this deponent had seen in the deceased's house; it belonged to her: it is usual for up-country women to keep at least one weapon in their house. Deponent knows the prisoners; he has seen Hurrischunder at Rhada Beebe's house, but in what capacity deponent cannot say. Shewhurn was a servant of Baboo Obeychurn, and came down with him from Chuprah. Deponent never owed Rhada Beebe any money, and had never borrowed any from her: in fact deponent did not know whether she had any to lend. Hurrischunder and Sumboo never came to this deponent's house the day after the murder; nor did this deponent give him any money, and neither he nor his brother-in-law, Gour Baboo, ever made either Shewhurn or Hurrischunder swear by touching their feet, that they would be secret and faithful and depart without any communication on this subject as speedily as possible to their native country. Deponent never had any cause of quarrel or ill-will towards either the deceased or any of the two prisoners.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner Shewhurn, made a defence similar to his statement, wishing to throw the blame on Sumboo Baboo and Hurrischunder, who he said had, whilst next morning washing the knife, communicated the intelligence of the commission of this murder to him and that a Puthan proposed to cut up the corpse and burn it either with salt or else put it in a box and throw it into the river; and then take all the servants to the Baboo's house who would reward them all if they kept the matter secret and went out of the way; but if they went about talking of this affair they would be brought to trouble. After this they were taken to the Baboo where Shewhurn received 82 rs. and ten choories and was sworn to secrecy and to leave Calcutta speedily. They were kept there in the day and desired in the night to leave Calcutta. From the Baboo's house the deponent went and passed the night with Soopul Sing, and by his advice quitted Calcutta and was proceeding to Chuprah when he was arrested and brought back to Calcutta in custody.

Hurrischunder, in his defence, said, he left the charge Shewhurn, brought against him, to the jury to appreciate: he has certificates of his services as a writer by him. The murdered woman was a beggarly woman till she was taken under the protection of Rajchunder. In conclusion he said, he had witnesses to show that he was at the house of Beejee Bhyee on the night of the murder and not in Rhada Beebe's house.

The prisoner Shewhurn called 3 witness whose evidence elicited nothing in his favor.

The second prisoner called witnesses to prove an alibi. The first witness merely said that the prisoner Hurrischunder was at his house during the month of Maugh and occasionally slept there. He further said that Beejee Bai had deposed at the police office, and in the presence of the Churuckdangah thanader, that he had slept the night of the murder at her house. He had failed to subpoena her because she was indisposed. The Judge said this second hand evidence of the thanader cannot be taken, and asked the prisoner why he did not subpoena Beejee Bye.

This closed the defence.

The Judge here summed up and stated, that with the exception of the statement of Shewhurn, the other prisoner which cannot be received, there perhaps never was a case sent up to a Jury of this kind with less evidence. In fact, the Judge added, that but for some circumstances which transpired in the case he would not have put him on his defence. (Here the Judge detailed the evidence of the hired coachman and the Naib thanader, regarding him in this transaction, and commented on it.) With regard to the prisoner Shewhurn, independent of the statement given by him, it is one of very great suspicion. It is proved that he was an inmate of the house during the night of the murder. It is proved that he was seen with a person who gave a false account of the deceased being out, when she was actually lying murdered in the house; and knowing of this fact, not denying this false statement, and although the blanket was first seen in possession of the man locking up the door, yet subsequently the property of the deceased was seen in his possession by Soobul Sing on the same evening; and he was subsequently arrested with them in his possession at a village 7 days' journey from Calcutta, whither he had, by his own statement fled shortly after the murder. Yet all this evidence is but circumstantial, and by his own statement, he is merely guilty of having participated in the plunder of the deceased's property, and to have concealed the murder after it had been committed and come to his knowledge; and if this statement is to be believed, he cannot be guilty by it of the indictment for which he is tried. He does not even appear to have been a passive aider or abettor in it by his statement. Here the Judge read this prisoner's confessions and the evidence in the case regarding him, and after commenting on it, left the case to the discretion of the Jury.

The Jury, after a short retirement of about a quarter of an hour, returned and gave in their verdict of Not Guilty respecting both the prisoners.

After this verdict had been given, the Judge said that the prisoner Murri-chunder may be released, but the prisoner Shewhurn must be detained in custody, until it can be ascertained whether there could be an indictment framed against him for the crime of which he undoubtedly is guilty, of having the deceased's property by him.

The case of the Mogul Lady Abbassée Khanum, will come on for trial this-morning at 11 o'clock.

The Jury in the case of Shewhurn for Larceny, have been locked up since 1 p. m. A difference of opinion exists between them, 10 for "guilty" and 2 for not "guilty." Both parties, the "yes" and the "nos," are, it appears, determined to "die at their posts." Long fasting will decide the strength of their resolutions, and their stomachs.—Hurkaru, August 9.

Gopaul Sing was tried for stealing on the 21st of February last, from the house of Gopaul Missur. Prisoner pleaded "Not Guilty."

The Judge remarked to the Jury, that this prisoner had already been convicted of a burglary, and the same evidence will be sufficient to convict him in this case. He had already been sentenced to 14 years' transportation to the S. E. Coast of Martaban in that case.

The Jury without retiring, found the prisoner guilty.

After this verdict was recorded, the prisoner was remanded.

Gopee was indicted for stealing a promissory note of 50 Rs., the property of midshipman James Rennie, I. N., from Mr. J. Spence's Hotel, on the 12th day of June last.

Mr. Leith conducted the prisoner's case.

James Rennie, the prosecutor, deposed. He is a midshipman in the Indian Navy. Deponent received his pay in June last, from a sircar named Issurchunder Dutt, at Spence's Hotel, Hasting's Place. The money paid to this deponent included the pay of the crew of the Hatgrass, in addition to the prosecutor's salary. The money was mostly in Bank of Bengal notes. Deponent gave his pay to his brother, John Rennie, who is an Assistant in the office of Messrs. Lyall, Matheson and Co., to take care of it for him. Deponent's brother put the notes in his writing desk at Spence's Hotel, where he resides, in deponent's presence. Deponent took no memorandum of these notes; but Issurchunder, the sircar who paid them to him, kept a memorandum of all of them. Deponent believes he has that memorandum by him; still, deponent did not count the notes when he confided them into his brother's care. When the sircar brought deponent these notes he only took the amount of his salary and returned the others to Issurchunder. Deponent believes the amount of the notes to have been about 300 rs. Deponent is the Commander of the Pilot vessel Huttrass.

The evidence not being satisfactory, the Jury, without retiring, found the prisoner not guilty. The Prisoner wanted to go home immediately, but the Judge refused the application, and told him that he did not think he would have to remain much longer in custody.

Before Sir B. Malkin, Knt.

Chaund-Chunoo and Kader, boatmen, were tried for an assault committed by them on the 26th of July last, on the person of a female named Muloottee, and for stealing from her person 38 rupees the property of a person named Sheke Shaili Khooshee.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Shaili Khooshee, deposed, that he lives in the village of Pachla, in the zillah of Hoogly. Deponent got into a ferry boat at the village of Sanerah, and the boat was put too at Kidderpore, and deponent and others landed to smoke; and three boatmen, who perceived that this deponent was a Mussulman, whilst the rowers of the boat in which he had come to Kidderpore were Hindoos, invited this deponent to come into their boat and smoke a chillum. Deponent and Muloottee accepted of their invitation, and went on board their boat. Whilst smoking in their boat, the prisoner asked this deponent what was his destination. Deponent replied that he wished to go to the Chandney Choke or Nilmony Holdar's lane. When they heard this they proffered to take him to Chandpal ghaut, where he wished to be landed; and whilst proceeding to the Chandpal ghaut, deponent said that he was hungry, and added, that he had some fish by him, and expressed a wish to purchase some rice and offered the boatmen some pice to get some; but they declined taking the money, and said that they would purchase the rice and when deponent would pay them their hire for taking deponent to Chandpal ghaut, he could pay them the price of the rice at that time. When deponent went in the prisoners' boat, he had 30 rupees in his possession and Muloottee had 8 rupees by her. Deponent towards the evening wished to take a nap, and gave the 30 rupees which he had tied in a cloth to Muloottee, to take care of it for him, and then retired to sleep, and Muloottee shortly afterwards also retired to rest, and desired the boatmen to wake them when they arrived at Chandpal ghaut. There were 3 boatmen in the boat besides this deponent and Muloottee: Kadeer was the boatman and the other two rowers. Deponent's sight is dim with age, therefore he could not recognize the three men again. Deponent woke at midnight and asked Kadeer to fill a chillum, who replied there was no fire in the boat. Deponent then said get it from one of the adjoining boats. Kadeer replied there were no boats near them. This alarmed this deponent, who remarked, there used to be always many boats at Chandpal ghaut, how came it that there are none there; and deponent got up alarmed and asked Mulootee to see where the boat was. Mulootee got up and looked, and said that they were in a marshy place, overgrown with high grass, reeds and flags. Deponent then asked the boatmen where they were, and they said that they were at Seebpore, and added that the tide had ebbed whilst they were asleep, and the boat had stranded there. Deponent then remarked, how could they account for bringing the boat safe to Seebpore, which was beyond Chandpal ghaut, and not to that ghaut. They then asked this deponent in whose power they were. Deponent and the woman then replied in fear, in their power. The men then demanded of them how many rupees they had. Deponent asked them why they enquired; and they then took up this deponent in their hands and made a faint as if they were going to throw him into the river, and thus they frightened him, and he said that Mulootee had 30 rupees of his and 8 rupees of her own in her possession. This deponent then desired Mulootee to call a Police search boat; and she replied, that if there were any boats of that description in view, they would not have come to this distress. The men then tied this deponent in the boat and gagged Mulootee and took her on the shore, and threatened to cut her throat, unless she gave up the money to them. Deponent remarked from the boat how could she tell them where the money was whilst gagged. They then searched Mulootee's person, and took the 38 rupees from her. After this, deponent asked them when they would land him and Mulootee; they said next morning. Deponent then said, that if they would take him to Chandpal ghaut, he would give them a present, for he felt hungry. After this the tide flowed and the boat floated. Whilst the boat was floating, deponent was afraid to speak, but beckoned Mulootee to remain in the boat, and he would under pretence of getting a bazar, get 4 or 5 police peons and arrest these depredators. This he made her understand by signs. And this witness repeated these signs so very ludicrously in the Court, that it set the whole Court a laughing, in which the judge himself joined. The deponent then added, these prisoners were cunning enough not to land him at the Chandpal ghaut, but did so at another ghaut a little higher up. Deponent then landed and enquired of the passers in the street, where the thana was. This was before sun rise. They did not reply to this query; but they pointed to a gentleman on horse back and said, "there is the judge going, go and state to him what you have to say." Deponent then went and made his complaint to this gentleman, who sent him to the thana from whence he procured some chokeydars, and went to the place where he had left the boat. When deponent came there, he found Mulootee sitting on the ground with a bundle by her, and the boat gone. Deponent on enquiry learnt, that during his absence the boatmen had thrown the bundle on shore, landed Mulootee and pushed off with the boat. One of the men were arrested 12 days ago, at 12 o'clock. Mulootee pointed him out; and his apprehension led to the arrest of the others also.

Mulootee deposed, in addition to the statement given by the first witness, that she was awake when it became dark. When lights were lit, deponent asked how long it would take the boat to reach Chandpal Ghaut. They replied that the boat had passed Chandpal Ghaut, which they could not make, because of contrary wind and ebb-tide. Deponent then saw a ghaut, and asked the men what ghaut that was; and they replied Jackson's ghaut. Deponent then requested them to land her there. They said that it would not be advisable to comply with her request; for if they were to land them, there in the night, the Police people would take them up and confine them. After this deponent fell asleep. This deponent then, after describing the assault and robbery in the same terms as the first deponent, said, that after the boat had put to at Baboo's ghaut the day after the robbery, and whilst the old man was gone to the bazar, one of the prisoners threw her bundle on shore, and the other two took her by the arm and shoved her out of the boat,—they then shoved off their boat. Deponent then went to the Chandpal ghaut, and the thanadar put deponent into a boat and pursued the boat of the prisoners. Deponent failed to capture them then. Deponent was not present when the prisoners were arrested; but she saw them in custody at the thana. Deponent could not say whether the jungle in which she was assaulted and robbed during the night, was a part of the main shore, or whether it was an island. When the day began to dawn, the deponent could perceive that the boat was above the Fort, and nearly abreast of Chandpal ghaut, which was to the eastward of their boat.

E. Preston, Attorney at Law, deposed, that he is the proprietor of a chur in the middle of the river, nearly opposite the Fort; it has reeds and flags growing on it. The chur is a complete island. The flags nearly cover the whole island. A small portion of these flags is below Tolly's Nullah, and in the jurisdiction of Zillah 24-Pergunnahs; but the greater part of it is within the jurisdiction of Calcutta.

Shamoo, Naib of Chandpal ghaut thana, deposed, that he arrested Chaund and Chunoo in two different boats below Garden Reach, on the river. Chunoo dived into the river to escape the arrest, but failed in his attempt. Deponent pursued them in a hired boat, which had one steersman and two rowers. Deponent took two police peons from the thana, and one from the river police boat with him in the pursuit. In Chaund's boat there were two sircars. Chunoo was rowing his boat by himself, and the boat had its sails spread going downwards. Chaund, when he was arrested, said the boat was not his, but belonged to the two sircars in it. Chaund and Chunoo were arrested 10 days ago.

Saud deposed. He is a farmer and a boatman occasionally. Deponent was present when Chunoo and Chaund were arrested by the last witness. Deponent knew the prisoners previous to their arrest. Deponent had seen them 12 days ago at about the hour of 2 o'clock, p. m. at Kidderpore ghaut, when they came to deponent to borrow his cooking pot to cook their victuals. Deponent saw on that occasion these two persons (here this deponent pointed to Khoossee and Mulootee) in the prisoner's boat. After the prisoners had eaten their meals, they left the Kidderpore ghaut at 4 p. m. with Khoossee and Mulootee in their boat.

Ramdeen, Thanadar of Chandpal ghaut thana, deposed, that Mulootee came to the Chandpal ghaut thana 10 days ago, and complained that she and another man had been robbed by three men in their boat, during the past night. After this, the deponent said, that his naib had captured 10 days ago, Chaund and Chunoo; and that he himself the next day captured Kader in the village of Kobul, at about 12 o'clock. He had concealed himself in the reeds and bushes, and deponent saw him and took him into custody.

This ended the case for the prosecution.

The prisoners set forth an obviously fabricated defence, stating that, as they had offered the old man and Mulootee a free passage in their boat to Baboo's ghaut, from Kidderpore Ghaut, they being too poor to pay any hire to them, they had previously told them that they would not leave Kidderpore till the evening, and they accordingly did leave Kidderpore in the evening; but owing to the wind and tide being against them, they could not proceed, and were afraid to get entangled amongst the shipping in the night; therefore had the boat put too at Baloo ghaut, and told their passengers that they could not go any further that night, and that they had better proceed on shore, and leave their boat; but they replied, that they were strangers in Calcutta, and requested leave to stay that night in the boat. The prisoners permitted them next morning, at the dawning of the day, to land at Baboo's ghaut. They then called five witnesses to prove, that on the night this robbery is stated to have occurred, their boat was put to for the night at Baboo's ghaut, and those whose boats were there close to theirs, did not hear of any persons crying or complaining in or near their boat that night.

August 7, 1837.

Before Sir B. Malkin, Knight.

One of this witnesses proved, that their boat put too one night, 10 or 12 days ago, at Baboo's Ghaut, but by the evening they moved off towards the Fort 30 or 40 cubits. Witness retired to sleep in the evening. Early next morning deponent saw the boat sailing up the stream nearly opposite the Fort. Where their boat had remained during the night, deponent could not say. The other four gave much the same evidence with slight variations and discrepancies.

This closed the defence.

The Judge then charged the Jury detailing the particulars of the evidence taken in this case, and leaving them to determine, if they believed the prisoners committed this crime, whether the charge where it is stated to have been committed, was within the jurisdiction of Calcutta, or of zillah twenty-four Pargannahs. After thus summing up, the Judge left the case in the hands of the jury.

The jury, without retiring, found the three prisoners guilty.

The prisoners were then reminded and their sentence deferred till Monday next.

IN ABASSEE KHANUM'S CASE.

An affidavit was made by Agah Kurbullee Mahomed and other individuals, the purport of which was, that it is customary with Mahomedans of respectability that grown up females are not to be seen by any person except their husbands and near relatives, and if they are publicly seen by any another person, or if they are ever exposed to the public gaze, they are then considered to be disgraced, and their relatives and friends will not receive them into their houses or associate with them. Therefore, if the prisoner in this case, Abassee Khanum, be brought before the public gaze on her trial, and if she be acquitted, her friends, relatives and husband will, in consequence of her public exposure, be debarred from receiving her back after her release from the Court into their houses, or from associating with her.

Mondosondun Bomerjea was tried for larceny committed on Company's paper to the value of 2,500 rupees the property of Parbutty Chuud Mokerjea, and others, on the 5th June 1837.

Prisoner pleaded not guilty.

Gooroopersad Bose, deposed, that he was a sircar in the service of Parbutty churn Mokerjea, who died in the month of June 1834. Deceased left a widow and 2 grandsons his son's children. Deponent was employed in collecting monies due to the deceased. The names of the grand children were Kailaschunder and Hurroochunder. The deceased on the day of his demise left his house at 10 o'clock a.m. with a Government paper, which deponent saw in his possession. It was for 2,500 Sa. rupees of the 5 per cent loan. The deceased took it with him as he intended to get the interest of it paid to him. The deceased brought that paper from the house of Khistee Dhur. Deponent saw the paper and made an entry of it: it was No. 2475, deponent did not write the entry of the No. The paper was a renewed note. The original note was in the names of the deceased and Isserchunder Mokerjea. Cross-examined. Deponent was at the time in the deceased's service. The renewed note was in the name of the deceased. Deponent before the renewal of the paper, occasionally brought the interest of that paper. The deceased on his way back to his house was attacked with a sudden indisposition, and died at Churackdangah. The renewed note corresponded with the old paper, in number and amount. Deponent does not recollect the date of the renewal. When the deceased died, many persons gathered round him: one of these, Tarachund, is dead; another, Ramdhun, who was a tenant of the deceased, was likewise present. The deceased had fallen into a fit from a pain in his chest and was dead when deponent went to where he was. The deceased was taken from Churackdanga thana, the place where he died, and was burnt without being brought home. Deponent was not present at the time, and he does not know whether any of the neighbour's who gathered round the deceased are in Court or not, but Ramdhon is. After the loss of the note deponent had it advertised, and 2 years afterwards it was taken to the Treasury to have the interest on it paid. There it was stopped and sent to the Police, and a notice of its being found was forwarded to this deponent, who went there on receipt of this information and saw the lost note in Mr. Robinson's possession. Narrain Persad Doss had taken the note for presentation to the Treasury when it was stopped. When the relatives of the deceased took off his clothes, they could not find this note, and had it advertised. Deponent was not present at the time, and except from the accounts of those who were present, deponent cannot say whether the note was lost at the thana, or at the ghat where deceased was burnt. Interest is not invariably paid on the notes on the day on which they are presented; they are generally kept at the Treasury on the day on which they are presented for payment, and the interest is paid the next day. Deponent never knew an instance deviating from this rule. Deponent saw the interest of six months brought by Tarachand. Tarachand died in August last. He was alive and in Calcutta when the enquiry was instituted at the Police Office; but he was not examined there. Deponent gave a notice of the loss of the note at the Treasury, and has the bill of the Treasury for the expences incurred on that account by him. The note was renewed the day previously.

Some other depositions were taken of witnesses in this case, in which several discrepancies occurred.

The judge then recapitulated the evidence briefly, pointing out the discrepancies in them; and added there was no direct proof of when the note had been stolen, and although some of the numbers corresponded, yet others on the note differed, from what had been sworn to. This created a doubt as to the identity of this note being the note stolen from the person of the deceased, Parbutty-churn, either before his death or after it, and whether this prisoner came into the possession of it with a guilty knowledge of its being stolen property, or whether he had freely purchased it in the regular course, as he stated.

The jury after a short absence returned a verdict of not guilty.

Ramsoonder Day was tried for perjury, committed in the police office, on the 21st June, 1837, before D. McFarlan, Esq., Chief Magistrate of the Police Office, in order to prove a larceny against one Dupeynarain Sain.

The prisoner pleaded not guilty.

The prisoner's deposition at the police office, which was the basis of this charge, was read. It stated, that the prisoner was a sircar in the employ of Baboo Radamohun Doss, who resides at Simlah, and the prisoner resided near his house. Rada Mohun Doss was a money lender, and through the agency of the prisoner used to lend money on mortgages of landed property, jewellery, &c. That on the 12th May last, deponent had 200 rupees and 5 pice entrusted to him, by Radamohun Doss for similar purposes. Deponent, on the evening of that day, counted out these 200 rupees 5 pice, and put them into a box under his bed, in the presence of Dupeynarain, Collypersad Doss and Bulloy Doss, and about midnight he went to sleep: when he woke again the next morning at about sunrise, he missed the box and Dupeynarain, likewise; he therefore suspected that Dupeynarain had absconded with it during the night, and on enquiry he learnt, that Dupeynarain had fled to his native village of Ontalah in Zilla Hooghly. He therefore requested a purwanna from the police magistrate, to have him arrested and brought down to Calcutta, to answer his charge. This statement was denied by Radamohun Kissen, Collypersad Doss and Bolye Doss, to be correct, for he was never entrusted with the money, nor did they reside with him, nor was Dupeynarain ever in Calcutta before.

R. Hubberly, deposed, that he is a clerk in the police office, attached to the department of D. McFarlan, Esq., the Chief Magistrate. Deponent recollects a deposition being given by the prisoner in June last, before the chief magistrate, complaining against a person named Luckynath Sain. The complainant in that case, dressed as a sircar, and called himself Ramsoonder Doss. Deponent interpreted and explained to him his deposition, which he understood and signed Ramsoonder Day, sircar: and on being questioned, he said, that Ramsoonder sircar, and Ramsoonder have the same meaning. Deponent added, that the deposition now produced in Court, is the deposition he has alluded to in his evidence before this Court. The evidence was then read again before the jury.

The prisoner in his defence, denied that he ever went to the police office and instituted a suit against the prosecutor in the case. He declined questioning any of the witnesses of the prosecution, and alleged as his reason for this conduct, that he was not the person alluded to in this case. He denied all knowledge of that case, and of the prisoner, and declined saying any thing further in his defence, and called no witnesses.

This closed the case for the defence.

The Judge briefly summed up the case, detailed the particulars of the evidence, and commented on it expounding the law applicable to the case.

The Jury without retiring, returned a verdict of guilty. After this verdict had been recorded, Warris Coalie, Attaram, Goorbuz Sing, Ram Saha Sing, Luckymony Rar, Soonder, Ramdhan Pyne, Goopee and Gyasoollee, prisoners, against whom verdicts of not guilty had been pronounced, and whose bills were thrown out by the Grand Jury, on the charges preferred against them, were brought up and discharged.

August 8, 1837.

Shewhurn was charged with having stolen 10 gold choorees, the property of Radha Beebee, on the 8th of February 1837.

Prisoner pleaded not guilty.

After the evidence taken in this case had closed, the Judge briefly summed up the case, detailed the evidence, and commented on it, and particularised the nature of the indictment and then left the case in the hands of the jurymen.

The Jury after a retirement of from one o'clock P. M. to 5 o'clock P. M., returned and said, that in consequence of two of the Jurymen, Mr. W. Anderson and Rauchunder Paul being of an opinion in contradiction to that of the other ten Jurymen, and believing the prisoner not to be guilty, on the grounds that they think the two principal witnesses for the prosecution, Ramdeen Sing, the Police jemadar, and another, had perjured themselves, they therefore could not come to any conclusion.

The Judge said, he could give them no other advice than that they must form their verdict from the impression on their minds in the evidence of to-day, and dismiss all that they might have heard of the case on the former occasion and out of Court: he could not take a divided verdict, and, therefore, they must give an unanimous verdict of either guilty or not guilty.

The Jurymen consulted a little, and then retired again, and in so doing they said, that as each party were firm in their opinion, they could not come to any decision. When our reporter left the Court, the Jury had given no verdict in this case.

The three boatmen were brought up to-day. They were convicted of having assaulted and taken from the person of Mulootee, the sum of Co.'s rupees 38, the property of a person named Shake Gyasooddy. The prisoners after being informed of the enormity of their offence, and that there were no mitigating circumstances in favor of any of them, were under all the circumstances of the case, sentenced to 14 years' transportation to the S. E. Coast of Martaban.

Ramsoonder Day, who was yesterday found guilty of perjury in swearing at the Police office a false charge of theft against a person named Dubeynarin, an inhabitant of Hooghly, and which charge was investigated and found to be false before Mr. D. MacFarlane, the Chief Magistrate, was likewise brought up to day, and sentenced to 12 months' confinement in the house of correction, with hard labour.

August 9, 1837.

The Jury after being locked up all night, at half-past 10 o'clock to day gave a verdict in the case of King v. Showhurn, for larceny, of having stolen property in his possession, knowing it to be stolen, and recommended him to be tried for that offence. The Judge said, that as the Grand Jury had been discharged, the prisoner could not be tried in this term; all that he could do was to remand the prisoner to jail and send him before the Magistrates; if they think fit they can indict him for that offence; but if the Jury were of that opinion, they must find him not guilty on the present indictment. However that rested with them; all that he could do was to receive an unqualified and unanimous verdict of either guilty or not guilty.

The Jury after a short consultation returned a verdict of not guilty at half-past eleven o'clock.

Abassee Khanum was tried on the charge of murder on the verdict of the Coroner's Inquest, held on the 12th, 13th, 14th, and 17th day of July 1837, in having caused the death of one of her slave girls, named Ruheemun, between the 30th day of June and the 3d of July 1837, by having beaten her with a pestle on her hands, on her back with a cane, and other maltreatment, from the effects of which the said Ruheemun died on the 12th day of July 1837, — lays after the injury she had received from the prisoner's hands.

Counsel for the prisoner, Messrs. Pearson and C. R. Prinsep.

Attorney for the prisoner C. G. Strettell.

The prisoner was brought into Court ensconced in a sedan chair, and was not ordered out of it.

Belaul deposed. That he was a short time ago in the service of Mirza Mendey, who has a wife named Abassee Khanum. She was the person respecting whom this deponent was examined at the Coroner's Inquest. Deponent saw her to-day in a room in the Court house seated in a chair. Her son Mirza Kassim was there at the time, and an old woman named Khoran came there to see her. After deponent saw her he came out. She was seated in a common chair. Witness was remanded.

Mirza Kassim deposed. Deponent was present in the room when the last witness saw the prisoner in the Court House seated in a chair: Belaul and Khanumjee both saw her there in this deponent's presence. Abassee Khanum is now in a sedan chair in the Court room. She was in the Grand Jury Hall towards the east.

J. J. McCan, deposed. That a sedan chair was brought into Court said to contain the prisoner in this case in it. Deponent has never seen the prisoner therefore he cannot state on his own knowledge whether the prisoner was in that chair or not.

The interpreter of the Court asked the prisoner's husband in what language she conversed, and he replied in Hindoostanee. After this the charge was read and explained to her, she sitting all the time concealed inside the sedan chair. The person inside the chair replied to the name and pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Belaul, recalled, deposed. That he is a slave boy of Mirza Mendey, the husband of the prisoner, who resides in Amrahtollah lane, opposite the Greek Church, in the city of Calcutta; the prisoner Abassee Khanum is his wife. Deponent served in the Mirza's house, was in attendance on the prisoner. There were 2 female servants likewise employed in the female apartments to attend the children of the prisoner, and one cook woman and a waiting maid; and three slave boys, named Mahomed, Syed and Umbur, and Ruheemun, the deceased slave girl, were all the servants in the household of Mirza Mendey, who had access to the female apartments. Ruheemun was 11 years of age at the time of her death; she was 2 years old when the Mirza purchased her. She was employed in cleaning basins and in attending generally on Abassee Khanum. Deponent does not recollect the date of her death. Previous to her demise Ruheemun was dispatched by the prisoner to the house of a woman named Khanumjee, who resides at Colingah in Calcutta. Khanumjee was formerly in Abassee Khanum's service, but in consequence of the demise of one of her relatives, she quitted the prisoner's service. Ruheemun was sent in a hired palankeen escorted by Syed and one of the female attendants, and Syed received 5 Rs. with instructions to desire Khanumjee to administer medicines to Ruheemun who was sick. After this the deceased was taken to Khanumjee's, where she remained 4 days. Deponent did not hear any other instructions given at the time of her being taken to Khanumjee's besides what deponent has already stated in Court. Deponent voluntarily accompanied the deceased to Khanumjee's house at Colingah, and saw her arrive there. She was ill at the time when she was taken there. There was a preparation made for the Mirza to drink, composed of vinegar, sugar, &c. and deceased had stolen and drunk it. She was for this theft beaten on her hands, and her shoulder, and fell sick in consequence of the severity of that beating, and was taken to Khanumjee's to be cured. At the time the deceased was taken from the prisoner's house to Khanumjee's, there were wounds on her hands, one on her head, and one on her shoulder. The hands had been beaten with a pestle, and the wrists were swollen. The wound on the head was hid in consequence of the hair on the deceased's head. Deponent could distinctly perceive the wound on the shoulder was a slight wound. The drink above alluded to, called sheekeenjabeen, had been prepared for the Mirza to drink. Abassee Khanum, in consequence of the Mirza being engaged in writing late at night, said to this deponent, that the Mirza would not be able to drink it that night and she put it in a bottle and desired deponent to put it by softly in the room. Deponent did so, and early next morning, when he went to the children's room, he perceived the deceased drinking it, and scolded her, and desired her to go to the cook room and mind her business. After this the Mirza got up, washed his hands and face, and went out, and the prisoner got up went to the cook room, and then to attend an indispensable call. On her return from thence, whilst this deponent was taking away the cup out of which Ruheemun had drank the sheekeenjabeen and washing out the slops on the place, Ghoorun asked him what there was wet on the spot that he was washing. Deponent replied Ruheemun had drank the sheekeenjabeen and spilt a portion of it, and that he was wiping off the stains. Ghoorun on hearing this, called out to the prisoner, and informed her of the slave girl's having stolen and drank the sheekeenjabeen. When Abassee Khanum heard this, she asked the deponent what he had in the cup; he replied it was the cup in which the deceased had poured out the sheekeenjabeen and drank it. After Abassee heard this, she called the deceased and asked why she drank this sheekeenjabeen. She replied that she had felt qualmish and to alleviate the sensation she had drank the sheekeenjabeen. Abassee Khanum then asked Ruheemun, why she did not ask her for it, and why she drank it by stealth. Ruheemun replied, that if she had asked for it Abassee Khanum would not have given it to her; and Abassee Khanum replied when did the deceased ever ask her for any thing that she required and it had been refused to her? Ruheemun replied, that she did not consider all this at that time, and the pain deprived her of all this thought; that she had committed a fault and begged to be forgiven. After this Abassee Khanum gave Ruheemun a kick on the naval, and she fell flat with her back on the ground. Deponent cannot say whether it was in attempting to avoid the kick that Ruheemun fell, or whether from the severity of the kick. After this Abassee Khanum called for a cane to beat her with, but no body brought her one. A pestle was lying close by at that time, and Abassee Khanum took it up and punched the back of Ruheemun's hands twice with the end of this pestle, scolding her at the time and reprimanding her for not having previously asked her for the shekeen-jubeen and for stealing it.

The prisoner here, through her counsel, moved the court, that as she was seven months advanced in pregnancy and was suffering from the heat, that she be permitted to be carried out of the court in charge of a constable. This request was granted to her.

Belal's deposition continued.—The pestle was a brass pestle weighing about 2½ seers: deponent cannot describe the size of this pestle. The prisoner desired Ruheemun to put her hands on the floor of the room, and when she had done so, Abassee Khanum struck her hands with the thin end of the pestle. Deponent cannot say with what strength she had struck the deceased's hands. The two nurses, the one the waiting maid, and a female named Ghoorun, who resides at Chinsurah, but occasionally comes to the Mirzi's house, were in the room when the prisoner struck the deceased. Nothing further connected with this case occurred that day, to his deponent's knowledge. Ruheemun was not sent out of the house till four days after this transaction. Deponent does not know who attended during the washing of Abassee Khanum's face that day. The next day when Ruheemun was sweeping the house, she complained of a pain in her hands. Nothing worthy of notice happened between Abassee Khanum and the deceased on that day likewise. On the third day Ruheemun did neither sweep the house nor do any other work. When Abassee Khanum heard of this, she scolded her and said to her what, for a slight beating in her hands is she shamming that she can not work. Abassee Khanum then beat her with a cane, and forced her to sweep the house, and she then, holding the broom with both her hands, swept the house with difficulty. Abassee Khanum on that occasion struck the deceased a blow on the shoulder with the back of a chopper used in mincing meat; the blow was not aimed with great force but it drew blood. The beatings were in proportion to the strength of a woman; the strokes of the cane, were given on the head. When Abassee Khanum struck the deceased with the back of the chopper she taxed her with shamming and declining to work. On that day the deceased was incessantly restless, and lying down complained of fever. On the fourth day the deceased was desired by Abassee Khanum to bring the basin and ewer, with water to wash. The deceased attempted to lift them up, but being unable she intimated as much to her mistress, and offered to carry a smaller basin and ewer. She took these two vessels in two trips to her mistress; after this she took the tooth powder. When she attempted to lift up the ewer of water to pour on the prisoner's hands, she could not do it. Abassee Khanum when she saw this, gave deceased a kick and she fell backwards on the floor. The deceased got up again, and attempted to lift up the ewer once more but could not do it, and Abassee Khanum then struck her with a cane on the head. After this the deceased with difficulty took the neck of the ewer on one arm, and held the handle with the other, and poured some water on Abassee Khanum's hands, but not being able to hold it long, she put it down and failed to lift it up again. Abassee Khanum then took up a peice of wood about one cubit in length, which the children had brought to play with, and struck the deceased on the crown of the head. The stick was round, and about the thickness of a ruler. Nothing further worthy of notice occurred between the prisoner and the deceased on that day. The peice of wood was on a platform in the room, where the prisoner was at the time. Deponent did not see the deceased on the evening of that day. Deponent did not see the prisoner strike the deceased after the last beating. Deponent cannot say now many days after this the deceased remained in the house, but altogether she remained four days after the first beating. The day after the first beating Abassee Khanum ordered one of the female servants to apply some turnerick and chunam pounded and mixed in water to the deceased's arms. This is a common practice in such cases amongst the natives of this country. The blisters in the arms operated on the night of the day on which this application was made, and the swelling was abated. Deponent saw one application of this preparation put on the sores. When the deceased was taken to Khanumjee's, there was an application of some leaves and simples applied on the head of the deceased, and the hands had stains of turnerick on them. Deponent had been examined twice before the Coroner. Deponent's statements there were in substance what he has stated here. There were sores on the deceased. Deponent first perceived the sores on the back of the deceased's hands, on the morning after the day on which the summons was served. Deponent does not recollect that he had stated in his second examination before the Coroner, that he did not see the sores till three days after the 3d beating. The day after the first beating this deponent saw the female servant preparing the chunam, and when he went there in the evening, he saw this servant apply them on the deceased's hand. When the prisoner beat the deceased with the cane and the ruler, there were sores visible on the hands of the deceased. Deponent's statement before the Coroner was the same as what he has stated here. Deponent cannot answer for what has been written in English, because he cannot read nor write. When the deceased did her duty well, Abassee Khanum was kind to her; but when she neglected her duty, her treatment was otherwise. When the prisoner became sensible that the deceased was really ill, and not counterfeiting, she applied medicines to her, and eventually sent her to Khanumjee's, with 5 rupees to have her cured. The deceased remained 4 days at Khanumjee's. Deponent was not sent to bring the deceased from Khanumjee's house. Syed and Ghoorun, dye, were sent for that purpose, but deponent went there of his own accord. Ghoorun, dye, remained in the streets, and Syed took a palankeen to Khanumjee's house to bring the deceased. Deponent had arrived at Khanumjee's previously. After Syed had brought the palkee, he covered the palkee with a clothing, and put the deceased in it, and they were carrying her away. Syed at first desired the bearers to take the palkee to the prisoner's house; but Ghoorun, dye, said not to do so, but to take the palkee to some ghaut near the river, and that she would take the deceased in a boat to her house at Chinsurah, and endeavour to cure her. When the palkee had arrived opposite the office of the Superintendent of the Police office, deponent having previously ascertained from the crowd which he saw assembled there that that was the office of the Superintendent, desired the palkee to stop, and a gentleman having learned the particulars of the case from the deponent, ordered a peon to take the palkee to the police office, who took the palkee to the Police office before Mr. McCan, the deputy Superintendent, who sent deceased to the Native Hospital. The magistrate took the deceased's deposition at the Hospital. Deponent did not remain at the hospital with the deceased. She was taken to the Hospital at about midday. Deponent did not accompany the palkee to the native Hospital; he went in the evening with Mr. McCan, and subsequently when the magistrate went to take her deposition, he accompanied him. Deponent cannot say how long the deceased survived at the native Hospital, it may be one day or more. Saw the corpse of the deceased at the native Hospital, and he was present when Dr. Bain examined the corpse. When the deceased first came to the prisoner's residence she had the boss. Medicines were given to her after her arrival at the Mirza's house, and she was cured of that complaint, after which she generally enjoyed good health.

Cross-examined by Mr. Pearson.—Deponent has been stunted for 3 years of his necessities, such as shoes and clothes, by the prisoner's orders. She has a dislike to him, and therefore it cannot be expected that he can have any great affection for her. Deponent never said that he would be glad to see her hanged; what benefit would that be to this deponent? He certainly would not like to return to her house; but he has no absolute dislike to her. Whoever loves deponent deponent loves them, but those who do not like deponent he does not like them. He was always obedient in doing his duty whilst in the Mirza's house. For three years deponent was well treated by his mistress; it was after this period he was ill-treated. When deponent is well treated he is willing to do any thing in his power to oblige those who so treat him. Deponent went to give information against his mistress in this case, in the hopes that the exposure may be the means of giving publicity to this conduct of hers, and altering her conduct to her domestics. Deponent did not make the complaint at the police. The deceased had in his master's house herself asked him, whether he could take her out of this place and get her redress: this was when she was lying in the room where the water is kept. Deponent was then passing by her with some bread for his master. Deponent did not give intimation of this affair on the occasion when the deceased was first taken to Khanumjee's house because it had escaped his recollection and because the palkee had gone a few yards ahead, deponent afterwards over took the palkee. The Mirza's house is some distance from Khanumjee's house. Deponent and the servants who accompanied the palkee, returned by another road from that by which they went. Deponent was afraid to give information of this transaction to the police office, on the day the deceased was taken to Khanumjee's; but on the day in which she taken from Khanumjee's, in order to be carried to Chinsurah, deponent had overcome his fear. Deponent did not know at the time that he took the deceased to the police office, that she would die; had she been dead at the time he would have been afraid to take her there. Deponent does not understand maps and plans of houses. It was in a long room in which the Mohorum festival is celebrated, that the deceased was beaten by Abassee Khanum. Deponent attended both his master and his mistress. Deponent made his master's bed, and attended him at meals. For these last three years he had done no business for his mistress, that is the reason why she stunted him. Deponent did not intrude himself in the way to see what his mistress was doing, but in passing and repassing the apartments in prosecution of his duty, he saw as well as others what transpired under his observation, and stooped like others to see the transaction. Deponent did mention the fact of his being ordered to take the korabah of sheekengabeen before the Coroner. Deponent after being warned by Mr. Pearson, said that he is a stranger in this country and he is not very proficient in Hindoostanee, and does not know English, and he cannot be answerable for what they have written in English. He stated this before Mr. Volontzky, the Coroners interpreter. He merely answered the questions that were put to him, he was not bound to say any thing beyond that: if he is asked questions here which were not put to him on any other occasion, he must give answers which he did not then. Deponent did not know why these counsellors, should brow beat and puzzle him with their questions as he is not the prosecutor in this case, but a disinterested person, merely a witness. Deponent is aware that if he gives one statement of a transaction in one place and another statement of the same transaction in other place, he is not to be believed. Deponent never deposed before the Coroner that he had given the information to his mistress that the deceased had stolen the sheekengabeen. Syed was likewise present when his mistress beat the deceased. Deponent did say that he was prevented and Syed allowed to go into the female apartments. Syed was forbidden by his master at the Mohorum from going into the female apartments on account of some misconduct; but he was subsequently permitted to go there again after his master's family resided at Meer Ahmud's garden. Syed is even younger than this deponent, but he is not an eunuch like this deponent. The day that the deceased was first beaten, deponent saw the deceased take the ewer and the basin for his mistress to wash, but he did not stay to see her wash. Deponent did not state before the Coroner, that the deceased could not hold the basin and ewer on the very day she was beaten, and that her mistress kicked her on that day. Deponent's statement regarding the pestle is the same as before, viz., that she was not struck on the fingers but on the hands; but the blows were not struck with such force as to break the bones. The deceased was of short stature for her age. Deponent cannot say how high prisoner lifted up her leg when she kicked, nor does deponent know whether she was then far advanced in pregnancy. The women wear their clothes hanging loose over their bodies therefore deponent could not say whether she was pregnant or not. Deponent never before heard of it. How high a pregnant woman can kick deponent cannot say. When Abassee Khanum beat with the pestle the hands of the deceased, she was sitting on a stool in the room: that is not the room in which she generally resides, but she sits there occasionally. No male persons are allowed to go to the upper rooms, except during the Mohorum holidays. Deponent cannot say who brought the mortar and pestle and the chopper into that room. The cook-room is in the upper story. The spices and meats are cut up in deponent's mistress's presence and then his mistress gives directions respecting what dishes are to be made out of them. The practice is so very common that deponent cannot particularise any particular day on which this was done. The deceased was dispatched at 10 or 11 o'clock, A. M. on the 4th day after the first beating. Deponent cannot recollect verbatim all that he deposed at the Coroner's Court. The statement before the Coroner, is the most correct, for the matter was then quite fresh in his memory; the minute details he might not recollect now. Deponent cannot say whether the turmeric was applied once or twice, and deponent might have said that he did not see sores on the hands till the third day after the turmeric was first applied to them; if he has said otherwise in this Court, then the latter statement must be incorrect. Although deponent might have forgotten the minuter particulars of these occurrences, yet he has not forgotten the main facts connected with his transaction. The domestics when they worked well, got a belly full of doll and rice—"you may call that good if you like," (addressing Mr. Pearson,) but when they neglected their duty, they were starved in their food and were not very well treated. Deponent never knew the deceased to ask for any thing, so he cannot say whether she was ever refused or not. Mirza Mendey had a female slave named Khoosh Kuddum, and he gave her her freedom to enable her to go and get married. When this Khoosh Kuddum was brought to Mirza Mendey's house, deponent was at Lucknow. Deponent deposed before the Coroner that the deceased was subject to the boss; and she had the fever and ague, after she was cured of the boss. Meer Syed Abdool Summud cured the disease of the boss. She was sent there daily accompanied by two servants till she was cured. Deponent had stated before the Coroner that the blows with the pestle were not very violent, but slight, inasmuch so that his mistress believed the deceased was shamming, when she complained of pain in them.

Re-examined by the Judge.—If any variations have occurred in his depositions before the Coroner and here, the statement before the Coroner must be correct; as that was immediately after the transaction, therefore if he has stated before the Coroner that the sores on the hands were not visible till three days after the first application, that statement must be the most correct of the two.

Khanumjee, deposed.—That she was formerly in Abassee Khanum's service; she left the situation after 11 years' service in consequence of the loss of her grand daughter. Deponent saw Abassee to day in the Court House, at the same time that Belaul and Rossim were there. She is in Court now and was brought in a sedan chair to-day into the Court house. Abassee Khanum had a slave girl called Ruheemun, who was brought on a Sunday, at 4 o'clock, P. M., in a palkee to this deponent's house at Cotingah to be cured. Belaul and Syed accompanied the palkee. Deponent had left Abassee Khanum's service one month previous to this. Ruheemun had been five years with Abassee Khanum, previous to her death. When she first came to Abassee Khanum's house she had the boss, and she was never thoroughly cured of this complaint. She was attacked with it at intervals of 3 or 4 months up to the period of her death, and it was accompanied by a fever and ague. When Ruheemun was brought to the deponent's house to be cured, deponent was indisposed. Deponent received no money with her, she only received verbal instructions to procure a physician for her. The deceased when brought to this deponent's house, had sores on her hands one on her shoulder, and a sore on the back of her head. There were no sores on the crown of her head. Besides this, she had marks of a beating with a rattan on her back. She had a fever and purging on her at that time. The purging was very violent and frequent. Deponent gave her no medicines, but when the deceased complained of a pain in her arms deponent rubbed the marks with some spirits of turpentine, and she put some burnt gunny dipped in lampblack over the sores. Deponent put no turpentine oil on the sores. Deponent's sight is dim and the deceased was generally in a dark room. Deponent did not minutely examine her body to see if there were any other sores besides those she had described. The deceased had marks on her wrists as if they had been tied with a cord. When deponent passed her hands over the deceased's body, she saw no other sores than the three she has already mentioned: the sores on the hands covered the whole of the back of her hands. These sores were all running sores with the exception of the sore on the shoulder. The deceased was taken away from deponent's house on the night of the third day, during which period deponent rubbed the turpentine oil once and the lampblack composition twice. No doctor examined deceased at the deponent's house, and nothing besides what this deponent had stated was ever applied to the deceased's sores. These applications were not ordered by any physicians. Belaul and Syed took Ruheemun away from the deponent house; deponent subsequently saw the corpse. No doctor examined it in deponent's presence. Deponent has been examined once before the police magistrates and twice before the Coroner in this matter. The rope marks at the wrists appeared to be healing when deceased was brought to deponent's house. Deponent does not recollect whether she did mention the sores on the wrists at the police and before the Coroner. Afterwards says she is positive that she had stated this circumstance before them, and then again says she is not certain on this point.

Cross examined by Mr. C. R. Prinsep.—Deponent was eleven years in the prisoner's service and saw the deceased in the prisoner's house. The deceased was treated by Abassee Khanum just as well as her own children. She always had the same food and clothes as were given to the Mirza's own children. Belaul was present when this Ruheemun was brought into the Mirza's family. Belaul had a great dislike to the deceased, and was always complaining against her on every trifling occasions, to her mistress. The deceased was formerly taken daily for a month to Abdool Sum, und's, a native doctor, but she was never left there for any days. Deponent occasionally attended the deceased at Abassee Khanum's house. The deceased used to eat meat and greasy and parched food against the doctor's advice, and therefore relapsed. Belaul used to beat the deceased for dirtying the house when she was attacked with the dysentery. Abassee Khanum is and has been a very kind and gentle tempered mistress to all her servants. Belaul being a eunuch attended both on her master and mistress.

Anwerun, deposed.—That she is employed as an attendant on Mirza Mendy's children. The Mirza has three sons and two daughters. Deponent is employed to attend the youngest son. There is another nurse besides this deponent in the family similarly employed. Deponent recollects Ruheemun, the slave girl. About one month after this deponent had entered the prisoner's service, this girl was sent to Khanumjee's to get medicines administered to her because she had a fever. The sores were common itch sores. How these sores originated, deponent does not know,—she does know. Belaul had tied up the deceased's wrist with a rope and this caused the itch-sores. He did it because she had drank some sherbet; he likewise beat her and suspended her from the ground. Deponent told Belaul to desist from beating her and examined her hand after Belaul had left of beating her. In consequence of this tying up of the wrists, the back of the deceased's hands were swollen 3 inches, and this very likely caused a looseness of the bowels. Deponent and others therefore applied some turmeric and chunam to these sores, and sent her to Khanumjee's to be cured. Deponent was not present when Belaul's evidence was taken before the Coroner, but she had subsequently heard the purport of it. Deponent was examined on this subject before Mr. Robison, the Magistrate, and before the Coroner; but whether Belaul was examined first or this deponent, on these occasions, deponent does not recollect. Deponent had made this statement of Belaul's suspending and beating the deceased before the Magistrate and at the Coroner's, and she persisted in this, even after the Judge had warned her to be cautious in her evidence, for he had her depositions given on those occasions, before him. Deponent admitted that those depositions were explained and read to her before she signed them.

C. K. Robison, deposed, that he is a Magistrate of the Police Office, and he took the examination of this witness himself. The examination is in his hand writing and is a true statement of what she then stated.

Cross-examined by Mr. Pearson.—This paper is an examination. The person who gave it was not sworn. This deponent was not under any charge; she was examined because deponent had some suspicions against her. Deponent, as a Magistrate, is empowered to examine any witness against whom deponent has any suspicion; but not idle-suspicion. She was not warned as to what she said, because she was not charged. F a question whether this woman was imprisoned, deponent replied legally not; she was kept 2 or 3 days in custody, because she could not give bail. Syed and Khanumjee were both similarly called to give bail. Deponent stated, that being the servants of the prisoner, he suspected them, because after this witness was ordered to find bail, deponent heard that many of the domestics of the Mirza's household had fled. Deponent is a lawyer; he has his diploma as such. Deponent makes a distinction between a person being in custody and being imprisoned, because until there is a writ of commitment made, no person can be said to be imprisoned. Deponent cannot swear whether he took down every word; but he certainly did every thing stated by her that bore on the case. This woman never made any mention of any circumstances about Belaul's tying the deceased's hands at any time, and suspending and beating her. Deponent is not aware that the witnesses remained, because he ordered some of them to give bail.

The Judge here ordered her examination to be read.

Mr. Pearson objected on the ground, that a deposition being a statement given on oath by a witness, if his evidence afterwards varies, it may tend to throw discredit on his testimony; but an examination not being taken on an oath, and it being given by a person who is then charged with an offence, and in a perturbed state of mind, he submitted that it could not be read in a Court of Justice to throw discredit on that person's future evidence. He asked the Judge whether a counsel conducting the prosecution could have or would have had these evidence read.

The Judge replied that he had taken a note of Mr Pearson's objection; but he wished to read the paper to the woman through Mr. Smith, rather with an intention of refreshing her memory in order that the Jury may get a clear statement of facts from her; for her present evidence varies from the statement she gave before Mr. Robison. As a counsel for the prosecution, perhaps he should not have called this witness, whose evidence certainly has had a tendency to throw discredit on the evidence of the chief witness of the prosecution, Belaul.

Mr. Smith, the Interpreter of this Court, then read this examination to the woman, and her deposition continued.

Ameerun's deposition continued.—Deponent did state to the Magistrate and the Coroner, that Belaul had tied the deceased's wrists, suspended her and beat her. Deponent does not recollect when she was taken to the Police Office. She was detained there 8 or 9 days. During that interval, deponent had no communications with Abassee Khanum. Deponent was taken to the Coroner's 2 or 3 days after she was taken to the Police office. She there stated to Mr. Greenlaw, that Belaul had tied the deceased's wrists and suspended and beat her. Her mistress always treated Ruheemun very kindly; but Belaul used to maltreat her occasionally. Her mistress is very kind to all her household.

His Lordship said, that as she is a witness for the prosecution, if the prisoner's counsel wished to have her examination at the Police read, he may; it shows that this deponent did not make the statement in her evidence there.

Mr. Pearson said, it merely shows that it is not in the paper. He likewise asked whether there is any such name as Khaillie, as stated by Mr. Robison in his deposition to-day. Mr. Smith, the Interpreter, replied, Khaillie means a nursery maid.

Syed deposed, that he is a slave of Mirza Mendey. He has been interdicted the female apartments of his master's house for these 3 months. Deponent recollects a slave girl named Ruheemun. Deponent had not access to the female apartments of his master's household about the time he took deceased to Khanumjee's to be cured. Ruheemun was there 4 days. Deponent likewise brought her back. Deponent received orders from Belaul and a nurse to take the girl to Khanumjee's. Deponent was in the habit of accompanying his mistress's palkee whenever she went out, and deponent did not know who was in the palkee, till he had taken it to Khanumjee's. Belaul and the same nurse gave deponent orders to bring Ruheemun back. When deponent took Ruheemun to Khanumjee's, he received no directions as to what he was to say to Khanumjee, nor received any money to give her. Whilst deponent was bringing Ruheemun back to his master's house, he had some occasion to go ahead, and told them to bring the palkee to his master's house. He then went home and afterwards heard that the palkee had been taken by Belaul to the Police office.

Cross-examined by Mr. Pearson.—Deposed, that Abassee Khanum, was a very kind and gentle mistress to all her servants, particularly to the deceased girl; but that Belaul was always in bad terms with her, and ill-treated her; besides, that Ruheemun had the boss when she was brought to deponent's master's house, and was never thoroughly cured of it.

Gopaul, bearer, deposed, that he is a ticca bearer. Has seen Khanumjee before. The last witness came to this deponent's stand and hired his palkee for a female. Deponent then went apart, whilst the person for whom the palkee was hired, was brought out from Khanumjee's house and put into the palkee. Deponent was desired by Khanumjee and Syed to take the palkee to Mirza Mendey's house at Amratollah gully. When deponent arrived at Khanumjee's house, he saw Belaul there. When the palkee arrived in Mission Rice, opposite the office of the Superintendent of the Pole is Office, then Belaul asked of the passers by wherow the residence of the Superintendent of the police. Hearing this, Syed and the female attendant of the palkee ran away. Belaul took the palkee then to the office of the Superintendent of the Police, opened the door and showed him a sick girl. Capt. Birch, then sent a peon with the palkee, and ordered him to take the palkee to the Police office. There Mr. J. J. McCann saw the sick girl, and sent a peon with the palkee, and desired deponent to take the palkee and the sick person to the Native Hospital. Deponent then took the palkee to the hospital, left the sick person there, and came back to Mr. McCann, who paid him his hire.

Cross-examined by Mr. Prinsep.—When Belaul desired the deponent to take the palkee to the Police office, Syed and the female attendant ran away. Deponent cannot conjecture the reason which induced them to do so.

In this stage of the proceedings, Mr. C. F. Leal, the interpreter to Mr. C. K. Robison, the magistrate, who was sent for by the Judge, came into court and was examined. He deposed that he had explained the examination of Ameerun taken in this case before the magistrate. She understood it, and that this examination was read; and she stated, that Ruheemun was sent eight days previous to the date of this deposition to Khanumjee's, to be cured of a dysentery. There is another woman named Khaillie in the Mirza's house.

Mr. J. J. McMann, re-called by Mr. Prinsep, deposed, that he had met the Mirza the day after this sick girl was brought to the Police, at the Police Office. Deponent had gone to the Mirza's house with a warrant to arrest Abassee Khanum; but he did not find the Mirza at home. Deponent then came back to the Police Office, where he met the Mirza, who took this deponent to his house and delivered his wife up on the Police warrant.

Bunnon, deposed, that she knows Khanumjee, and lived in her house about two months ago. Deponent added, that she did not tell a lie. Deponent one day saw a sick girl brought to Khanumjee's house, by Belaul and Syed. Deponent did not know the sick girl, but she knew Belaul and Syed; that was the first time she had ever seen them at Khanumjee's house. Deponent was a slave girl in that house for two years; but it is 3 years since she has been emancipated.

R. H. Bain, deposed, that he is the Police Surgeon. Deponent examined the dead body of a girl named Ruheemun, on the 12th July, 1837. The body was pointed out to this deponent by Gopal bearer. The body was emaciated and had many sloughing ulcers on the head, body and extremities. Three ulcers were on the hand, two on the left fore arm, one on the left arm; the backs of both the hands were completely bare of all integuments; there was another ulcer on the left leg, one on the right hip, one on the shoulder. Deponent does not recollect which shoulder. There was a perfect tumor on the forehead; there were numbers of blue marks on the back and the arms. These were all the external injuries deponent observed on the body. The ulcers were sloughing ulcers of an irregular form, but rather circular. Of the three ulcers on the head, one was on the top of the head, one on the back and one on the left side. The one on the back of the head, was about an inch and half or an inch and three-quarters in circumference; the other two were smaller. The ulcer on the hip was about two inches in circumference; the one on the left was about the size of a six-pence. These were the most serious injuries on the surface of the corpse. The wound on the shoulder was a small one; the sloughing had ceased. Deponent opened the body. Deponent found all the organs healthy but pale and ensanguined. Deponent examined the spleen and conceived it to be perfectly healthy: there were no symptoms of its ever having been indurated. The spleen was then firm and not in a congested state. Deponent did not find any symptoms of its ever having been injured; the puffy tumor was then dark; the brain was healthy and ensanguined. Deponent conjectures the cause of the death of the deceased from the strength of the sloughing ulcers on the body. Deponent supposed that the ulcers on the hands were the principal cause of the death of the girl. The tumor no doubt had its effect on the general constitution of the deceased, as well as the other ulcers on the body. These ulcers and tumors would produce a considerable irritation and fever in the patient. None of the bones of the hands were broken. Sloughing ulcers similar to those he saw on the deceased, may arise from bruise or burning, or irritation; they could scarcely be caused by any moderate casual bruising of the hands. They are not likely to arise spontaneously without any external injury. These ulcers might have existed from five to seven days previous to the demise of the deceased. Deponent has heard the evidence of the boy Belaul. Bearing in mind the account, that deponent has given of the blows stated to have been given by Abasse Khanum without any violent force on the deceased, deponent does not think such blows could have caused such ulcers; there must have been some very unusual degree of severe irritation used to have caused those ulcers. Deponent did not, besides these sores and tumors thus noticed, observe any peculiar inherent disease on the child. The sores were of a nature in which, had skillful medical treatment been used from the commencement, they might have been cured. Any irritating application might have caused these sloughing sores. If turpentine oil had been rubbed or applied warm on the sores, it might irritate the

If the like were applied unslaked with the turmeric, it would irritate these sores; but otherwise it would depend on the quantity. Deponent did not observe, that any thing of an irritating nature had been applied to them. Deponent did not see any thing which he could conjecture to have caused this irritation.

Cross-examined by Mr. Pearson.—If the deceased was not of a sickly constitution, and properly treated from the first, she might have recovered. If on broken surface chunam had been applied, it might have caused the ulcers on the deceased. Deponent believes the spleen to be a desperate disease of itself; it may be a symptom of a debilitated constitution. Deponent did not separate the spleen from the body. Deponent understands that Mr. O'Brien, assistant at the Native Hospital, did. Mr. O'Brien is not allowed to open bodies, but he is not prevented from seeing them when opened. Deponent had opened many bodies at the General Hospital, where he was an apothecary for a long time. If a severe blow had been struck on the head, it might, instead of a pale, ensanguined appearance after death, have caused a derangement of the brains; but not invariable. It is very difficult to draw the line between the spleen, being a specific disease, or a sign of a completely broken up constitution.

P. O'Brien deposed, that the deceased, Ruheemun, was, on the 11th July, brought to the Hospital; she had a tumor on the forehead, an ulcer on the back of the head, one on the left shoulder, one on the left elbow, two on the back of each hand, one on the right hip, one on the left, three a little below the knee. The right hip and the left arm appeared to be bruised, and the integument in the tumor on the forehead appeared to be black and blue. There were besides these some slight bruises on the back; the ulcers were sloughing, but that on the back of the head had suppurated. No other ulcers were formed subsequent to the deceased's admittance into the Hospital. Deponent saw no ulcers on the crown of the head: he only saw one ulcer on the head. The deceased seemed to have had an enlarged spleen whilst living. She was brought to the hospital on the 11th, and died on the 12th of July. When brought to the hospital the wounds were not dressed, but the body smelt of turpentine. Deponent cannot say whether the turpentine had been applied to the wounds or the body in general. Deponent could not say how these ulcers had arisen, but considered that they had arisen from contusion; the ulcer on the back of the hands had been suppurating. There appeared to be no injury done to the integuments but about the slough. In the other wounds the slough had suppurated; therefore deponent could not judge what had caused them. Deponent supposed that the death was caused by the sloughing of these ulcers jointly. The wounds on the hands were most extensive. Deponent was not present when Dr. Bain examined the body; but deponent examined the body afterwards for the purpose of examining the spleen, which deponent found to be indurated and enlarged to double its natural size. It was taken out in deponent's presence by one of the apprentices at the hospital. Deponent examined it after it was taken out and cut it to ascertain its induration. There was no adhesion beyond its natural attachment. The spleen can be better judged by being separated from the body. Deponent saw nothing further, except that some intestinal worms had crept out of the body and were on the bed; but they could not have contributed to the deceased's death. Deponent conceived the sloughing was caused by the disease of the skin; it would not have taken place in an healthy subject. The disease of the spleen predisposes to that sloughing.

Cross-examined.—Deponent has for these last 3½ years, in which he has been attached to the Native Hospital, had great experience of native diseases.

Dr. Raleigh, deposed.—Deponent is a Surgeon in the Company's Service, and is 1st Assistant Surgeon in the General Hospital. Deponent is acquainted with the disease called the enlargement of the spleen, it is particularly common in Bengal, and is generally the result of repeated attacks of fever. From the accounts deponent has heard of the deceased's health, she might have been predisposed to it; but it is generally caused by fever and looseness of the bowels. In this state of the body on the slightest embrocation of the skin or abrasion of it, if the slightest friction of any irritating substance be applied to it, it will cause ulcers, tumors and gangrenes. Such abrasure, must in general occur by blistering or by any external injury. In a subject of the description now mentioned, an injury of the nature described by Belaul would produce these ulcers, but they certainly would not in an ordinary healthy subject. In such a subject, blows of the nature described would probably produce corresponding sores of the nature described to-day in evidence on such a subject. In the state this girl is said to have been in, even the scratch of a pin might produce these ulcers.

Dr. Martin, Superintendent of the Native Hospital, deposed, that he has held this situation for these 7 years and has been in the habit of seeing daily native cases. Deponent saw the deceased when she was in a dying state. The spleen is a disease that comes daily under deponent's knowledge; it is almost universally the result of the fevers of Bengal. When they are in this state, the lightest cutting with a knife, a blister or even leech-bite, may lead to sloughing ulcers, gangrenes and mortifications; whereas in a healthy state of body, these injuries would be perfectly harmless. Any application whatever, whether chemical or mechanical, may in such a state of body cause these ulcers. Slight blows, if they embrocate the skin, might, but it is not probably that this would, if the skin was not embrocated; but if hot applications of chunani or turpentine be applied, deponent would conceive that application more to be the cause of these ulcers than a slight beating on the hands.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner declined addressing the Judge in her defence, and left the case entirely into the hands of her legal advisers, who called one witness.

Hudgee Abdool Sumud, deposed.—He is a native doctor and knew the deceased girl, Ruheemun. He first saw her about 10 months ago. Mirza Ahmedally, the father-in-law of Mirza Ahmed, brought her to deponent's house; and she was accompanied by a slave and a bearer. Deponent has seen that slave boy in this court; the slave boy's name is Belaul. Belaul knew that deponent was a doctor. Deponent administered medicines 7 days to her, and she was indisposed with a fever and boss. The medicines were given in Belaul's presence, and the medicines were eaten by the patient in deponent's house. The deceased partially recovered. About 3 months after this cure, when deponent went to see Mirza Ahmedally, he informed this deponent that the deceased's fever had returned, and deponent then examined her and saw her so very ill with the spleen and fever, that he declined to administer to her, because she was in the second stage of the disease. Deponent has medicines to cure the disease in the first stage; in the second stage they are in that state that deponent may be able in some instance, after a tedious and protracted attendance, to cure the invalid; but when the patient has reached the third stage, deponent gives them up. The deceased was brought by Belaul on the first occasion.

This closed the case for the defence.

The Judge addressed the Jury, saying, that this case is unusual, because of the prisoner, from the religious habits of her caste and country, is precluded from
